Admission is $3.50 for students, senior citizens and children, and $6 for the general public.

■ forum

continued from page 1

Vanin.

Ray Elliot, an activist in the community, said the solution to the problems within the schools is to "stop planting the wrong kind of seeds."

Elliot advocates teaching students about the many races and ethnicities, but also teaching students that human beings share a "oneness."

Several UMass students attended the meeting, including Student Trustee Al Lizana and the Black Student Union President Shomwa Shamapande.

Shamapande said he was concerned with the outcome of the junior high student's claims. He said he would like to talk to some of the junior high students because he said he did not want this incident to dissuade other students from coming forward with similar claims.

The brother of the junior high girl told the crowd whatever his sister did, he would stand behind her. He said he was annoyed with members of the community and the media for jumping to conclusions about what his sister did.

"What's done is done. Whatever's happened, happened," he said. "I'm just sorry it took something like this to bring everybody together."

■ The Pub

continued from page 1

call The Pub's situation an injustice would be a bit harsh, but I do call the situation a bit unusual and I'm at a competitive disadvantage," said Jolly, who also manages Amherst establishments Rafters and Season's.

He told the department he would install two Honeywell "Enviracaire" commercial air cleaners to clean the air while patrons smoked and ensure clean air for the next day's restaurant customers.

The health department last night told Jolly they would announce a decision on the request at an October 13 meeting, after consulting the state Department of Health about the viability of Jolly's proposed air filtration system.

Health department members expressed concern at last night's meeting over the proposed filtration system's capacity to leave the air in The Pub free of tobacco–borne chemicals and particulates when The Pub re–opens in the morning as a smoke–free restaurant.

"For me, the issue is, at noon are the restaurant patrons going to be exposed to the effects of smoke," said Amherst Health Department member Dr. Samuel Gladstone.

Department member Rafael Lopez–Sanchez told Jolly he was unsure of whether a filtration system could eliminate all chemicals left in The Pub from smoking.

"We're not just talking about the smoke. We're talking about residues which will be left behind on the chairs, the fixtures and everything else," said Lopez–Sanchez.

The health department's ban on smoking is part of a broad effort to decrease smoking in Amherst and shield non– smokers from adverse health effects linked to passively inhaled or "second–hand" tobacco smoke.

Passive tobacco smoke has been linked to lung cancer, heart disease and the inflammation of certain respiratory disorders.

The Perfect Roommate.

Meet the roommate who'll stay up all night to help you write your papers, spell check and file your work, and provide video game excitement during a study break. The Apple Macintosh Computer–productive, user-friendly systems you can afford to buy or rent. Visit us today in our downtown Northampton location and discover the most productive colleagues on campus.

YES is the Answer
58 Main Street • Northampton • MA • 413-585-0107

YES COMPUTERS

KICK OFF THE SEASON WITH THESE GREAT VALUES AT...
LIQUORS 44
BEER WINE LIQUORS

BUDWEISER CASE OF 24-16 OZ BOTTLES $13.49 +DEP
NEW! TARWEBOK (WHEAT BOCK) from HEINEKEN 6-PACK BOTTLES $5.29 +DEP
CATAMOUNT OCTOBERFEST 6-PACK BOTTLES $4.99 +DEP.
NATURAL LIGHT CASE OF 2-12 PACK CANS $8.29 +DEP
1/2 KEGS ICE HOUSE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LIGHT, BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE & LOWENBRAU $39.99 +DEP.

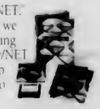
TAYLOR CALIFORNIA CELLARS ALL FLAVORS INCLUDING WHITE ZINFANDEL 3 LITERS $5.99
GEORGE DUBOEUF BEAUJOLAIS VILLAGES 750 ML $5.49
KENDALL JACKSON VINTNERS' CHARDONNAY 750 ML $8.99
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML $3.49
VENDANGE WINES CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON, WHITE ZINFANDEL SAUVIGNON BLANC 1.5 LITERS $5.99

ZHENKA VODKA 1.75 LITERS SALE $8.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 COST AFTER REBATE $6.99
JIM BEAM 1.75 LITERS $12.49
Seagram's GIN 1.75 LITERS $12.49
SCORESBY SCOTCH 1.75 LITERS $14.99
CAPTAIN MORGAN COCONUT RUM 1.75 LITERS $14.99

AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
SALE PRICES THURS. 9/29/94 THRU WEDS. 10/5/94
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

How to interview with the Fortune 500 without even getting out of bed.

OK, graduate-to-be. You can get up early or you can get Career/NET. It's simple. You give us your resume in a personal profile on the disk we provide. And we guarantee to deliver it to 10,000 employers (including the Fortune 500) in exactly the form they're looking for. Your Career/NET enrollment kit—a preprogrammed disk and a booklet of step-by-step instructions—is $99.95* To be in the next nationwide distribution to employers, order today. Call 1-800-682-8539.



Career NET

*Plus $4.95 for shipping and handling

DON'T BE LEFT OUT IN THE COLD . . .
THIS WINTER . . . JOIN THE . . .

UMASS SKI CLUB

SKI CLUB MEETING
GENERAL INFORMATION
7 PM SUNDAY OCT. 2, 1994
EARTHFOODS RM
Student Union

ALL LEVELS OF SKIERS WELCOME!

MEMBER / NON-MEMBER
•DAY TRIPS
•MEMBERSHIP SIGN-UPS
•INFORMATION ON QUEBEC, KILLINGTON AND BRECKENFIDGE TRIPS

FOR MORE INFO CONTACT
UMASS SKI CLUB
430 STUDENT UNION
545-3437
BE PART OF THE TRADITION! LAGNAF

Roberts

continued from page 14

In the process, the junior forward helped the Minutewomen to the NCAA Final Four last fall, an accomplishment that Roberts is proud of.

"I stopped out on the field and I started to choke up, my eyes started to water," said Roberts. "Every time something happened and we did something big, I had to settle down and catch my breath."

This weekend, Roberts and the rest of the women's soccer team will be traveling to California for two games, against Santa Clara and Santa Barbara.

"Anybody is beatable at anytime. We have to go in there and believe in ourselves."

Whether the Minutewomen make it to the Final Four again is unknown. But one thing for sure is that when this season is over, Roberts will be somewhere practicing and trying to improve on her game.

Still not satisfied, still wanting to do more.

football

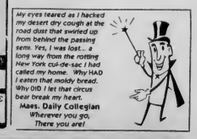
continued from page 14

You have to respect Colorado for playing top-notch opponents every week, yet you can't help but wonder if they won't be burned out by the time they visit Nebraska.

All of a sudden the Heisman race has become very jumbled. The three preseason favorites - Frazier, Stokes and Tyrone Wheatley - have been struck by injuries. Wide receiver Joey Galloway was suspended by Ohio State. As long as Dean puts up astronomical numbers and his team is in the Top 5, it's hard to argue against him. My preseason pick Zeier is now in the spotlight, and he will shine.

Anthony Guido is a Collegian columnist.

TOTAL FITNESS
STAIRMASTERS · LIFECYCLES · TREADMILLS · LIFESTEPS
KEISER · NAUTILUS · FREE WEIGHTS NORDIC TRACK
STUDENT SPECIAL $139
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 WEST ST. ON BUS ROUTE OPEN 7 DAYS



My eyes teared as I hacked my desert dry cough at the road dust that swirled up from behind the passing semi. Yes, I was lost... a long way from the rotting New York cul-de-sac I had called my home. Why HAD I eaten that moldy bread. Why DID I let that circus bear break my heart.
Maes. Daily Collegian
Wherever you go.
There you are!

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring Sam Adams & Catamount $9.95 12/Pk (Your Choice)
Brooklyn Lager or Ale $4.99 6/pk. bots.
Icehouse $12.99 case cans
Yagermeister $13.99 750 ml.
American Lager $7.29 cse cans
Lionshead Pilsner $7.99 cse bots.
Natural light $8.99 cse cans
Michael Sheas amber $12.99 cse bots.
Molsons "Ice" $8.99 12/pk. bots.
Bud "30-Pkg." $14.99 cse cans
S.S.P. Vodka $8.99 1.75 L.
Visa/Mastercard accepted on Keg Deposits
Many More In-Store Specials (especially on wines) Delivery Available
All Beers plus deposit

Soccer Basketball
Collegian
Field Hockey SPORTS Rugby
Has got it all.
Football Baseball
Water Polo

men's soccer

continued from page 14

Jachym said. "I hit it off the side of my foot, I thought I was going to get it a little bit earlier and hit it straight on."

In the final stanza, Hartford ran on empty, creating only two solid chances for a draw. Early in the second overtime, Wolf made a fine save on Thomas from about 14 yards, and Sebastian Cognetta squandered a 25-yard free kick in the 117th minute.

OUR ACTUARIES ARE USED TO BEING CALLED NAMES.
LIKE C.E.O., FOR EXAMPLE.
CIGNA
A Business of Caring.
Our C.E.O. started in the Actuarial Executive Development Program, as did many of our Financial Managers and Divisional Financial Officers. If you like those kind of names, talk to our Director. On campus, September 30, 6:00-8:00 p.m., Campus Center, Room 903.
Members of all classes welcome.

The Boston Globe Offers UMass Students Delivery for 50% OFF

UMass/Amherst	Full Year 9/25 - 5/14	Fall Term 9/25 - 12/18
6 Days MON-SAT	$52.00	$25.25
5 Days MON-FRI	$30.00	$14.25
SUNDAY ONLY	$22.00	$11.00

To order a Boston Globe subscription ON CAMPUS ONLY mail payments to:
The Boston Globe
Campus Program, P.O. Box 2378
Boston, MA 02107
or call 1-800-858-4275 ext.0
If you're a student living OFF CAMPUS we have special discount rates for you too...
Just call 1-800-622-6631 ext.549

This Week at the TOC
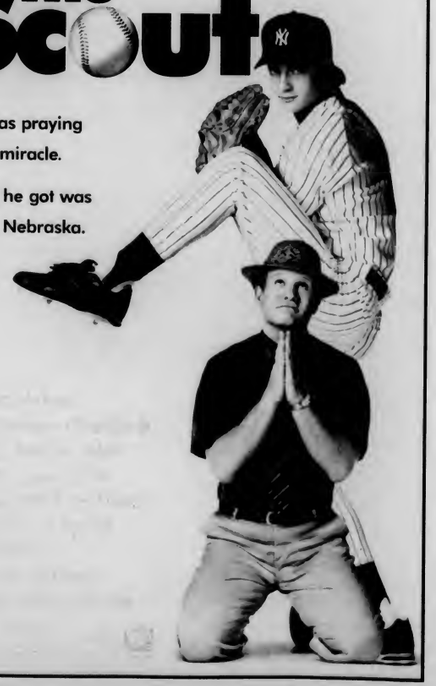
SPORTS BAR & LOUNGE
BUD SPECIAL
16 OZ. BUD BOTTLE $2.00
(Special runs 9/29 - 10/6)
THE ART STEELE BLUES BAND!
THIS SATURDAY, OCT. 1st
9:00 p.m. NO COVER!
NEXT MONDAY (OCT. 3rd)
THE OCEAN SPRAY FOOTBALL CHALLENGE!
8:00 p.m.
OFFICIALLY LICENSED N.F.L. PRIZES!
ICE HOUSE PINT $1.75
MUNCHIES
MON. - FRI. 11:30 a.m. - 1:00 a.m.
SATURDAY 4:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m.
POSITIVE I.D. REQUIRED

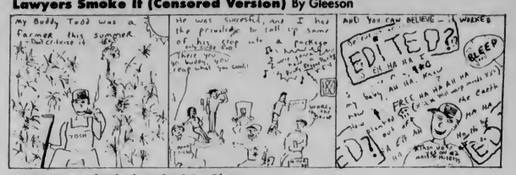
Albert Brooks Brendan Fraser
the Scout
He was praying for a miracle.
What he got was Steve Nebraska.



Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

HI MOM! I'VE GOT MY OWN TV SHOW!
THAT'S NICE
I HE'S CAAALVIN! AMAZING, GREAT CAAALVIN! OH, HE'S THE ONE THAT YOU'D LIKE TO MEET! HE'S THE ONE WHO JUST CAN'T BE BEAT! HE'S CAAALVIN! LA DA TA DA DAAAAA!
THANK YOU! THANK YOU! BOY, WHAT AN AUDIENCE! THANK YOU! PLEASE! HA HA! NO, REALLY, SIT DOWN THANK YOU! THANK YOU!
I'M CHANGING THE CHANNEL OK?
SORRY, I'M ON ALL THE NETWORKS

Lawyers Smoke It (Censored Version) By Gleeson



My Buddy Todd was a farmer this summer.
He was successful, and I had the privilege to tell of some of his crop secrets.
And did you CAN BELIEVE - it worked!
EDITED?
BLEEP

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today Mr. Peterson was grabbing at my shoelaces while I was walking.
I figured she wanted to play, so I got out her paper-on-a-string toy that I made.
She batted around at it for quite a while, then she got tired of it.
Later, I saw her flipped over by my shoes, chewing on my shoelaces.

Ants at a Picnic (squint) By Gleeson

I climbed up to the top of the great Sugary Mt.
We found some ants carrying a half-eaten tuna sub and some of Kimberly's fingers.
Next morning at the highest point on Cinnamon Dune

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

Wildlife 101 Exam
TRUE OR FALSE:
1. The Moose Is A Graceful, Beautiful, Intelligent Animal With A Strong Will.
False
SCHNEIDER

Daily Crossword
Edited byTrudo Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Pair
4 In — briefly
9 Stuffed shirt
13 Part of PPC
14 Masonic lodge doorkeeper
15 Large volume
16 Time and again
18 Out
19 Timeless
20 Medicine man
22 Novelist Reginald
23 Bowwow
24 Come into possession
27 Pages of time
31 Mediterranean island
32 Thin porridge
33 Color or corn lead-in 34 Drones
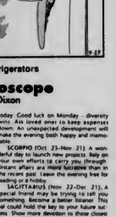
35 Plumbing concerns
36 Bar measure
37 Van Winkle
38 Salad servers
39 Large waterfowl
40 Hugs
42 Wading birds
43 Give off, as smoke
44 Housetop
45 Fisherman's lure
48 Framing pigment
52 Flow through slowly
53 Time out
55 First name in fashion
56 Tatum or Ryan
57 Border
58 Facial feature
59 Gossipy
60 Vintage vehicle

DOWN
1 Allowance for waste
2 De's kitchen chore
3 Sluffs oneself off
4 Accomplish a goal
5 Handle effectively
6 Timeworn
7 Family memo
8 Unproductive oil wells
9 Flower part
10 From time to time
11 Arabian gulf
12 Turkish governors
13 Before beginning?
17 Woody's dad
21 Skating test
24 Earthy tone
25 Boston woman
26 Suits the time
27 Rocky cliffs
28 Puffins' cousins
29 Got up
30 Rituals
32 Kneelike part
35 Spectator
38 Manner
39 Special sight
39 Search for in the dark
41 Recent or repeat
42 Obey
44 Moreno and others
45 In a short time
46 Horseplay?
47 Auberginous
49 Word with street or straus
50 Deli order
51 Certain poem
54 Stitch

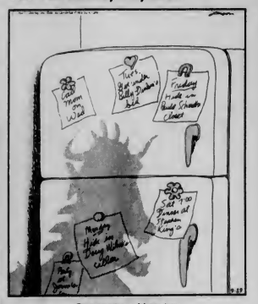
ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



8/29/94

By Nancy Salomon
©1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 8/29/94

The Far Side By Gary Larson



On monster refrigerators

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Old friends prove to be your most loyal allies in business. Trust them with your future. Romance enters an entirely new phase. Keep a tight rein on your temper. Be open to new ideas.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Getting involved in a power struggle would be a mistake. Be firm if others ask you to take sides. You need some pampering tonight. Make sure a romance, relationship is on a long-term basis.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some confusion over details could slow progress. No romance until after the 24th. Do not be afraid to ask personal questions. Secret transactions will not help your cause. Romance is not necessary for most people. For more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext. D5001.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Friendship and romance are in the spotlight. Correct a wrong impression by being more discreet. You would be wise to take greater interest in your future financial security. It pays to play a waiting game.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Welcome news arrives from someone at a distance. Working at home is especially productive for writers or artists. Tell your kids what you really mean. A personal relationship could heat up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Romance and a new career venture could be closely linked. Be careful not to go overboard when entertaining strangers. Save your generosity for your family.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Domestic affairs could take precedence over business today. Good luck on Monday - diversity wins. Ask loved ones to keep expenses down. An unexpected development will make the evening both happy and memorable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A wonderful day to launch new projects. Rely on your own efforts to carry you through. Dream affairs are more successful than in the recent past. Leave the evening free for reading or a hobby.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A special friend may be trying to tell you something. Become a better listener. This pal could hold the key to your future success. Show more devotion to those closest to your heart.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A financial problem is easier to solve than anticipated. A confusing domestic situation will require extra caution. Nip self-doubt in the bud. Don't deviate from basic knowledge comes with abundance. Catch up on minor household repairs this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accept new responsibilities with good grace and you will be considered for a promotion. Your wonderful manners help you quickly win allies in new social situations. Continue to be discreet about previous romantic interests.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Inquire about the cost of taking a service if some. Additional skills will make you a more valuable employee. Be patient with a friend who may be going through hard times. Participate in a charity or community event.

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Kielbasa Grinder	Turkey Tenderloin
Pizza	Fetuccini w/Meatballs
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Rice Pilaf	Turkey Tenderloin
Pizza	Fetuccini w/Sauce

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Emily Marino
Copy Editor.....Art Stapleton, Jr.
Photo Technician.....Rebecca Peterson
Production Supervisor.....Andrew Davidson
Production.....Gleeson, Mark Mitchell, Olmy Rosenstock

Quote of the Day

"Sip the Juice. I've got enough to go around."
—Eric B and Rakim, "Juice (Know the Ledge)"

Collegian Open House
Tomorrow from 12 to 4 p.m.
Are you curious to see what the basement really looks like?
If you have always wondered how and where New England's largest college daily comes from, stop by the Collegian's Open House today between the hours of 12 and 4 p.m. Grab some grub, ask some questions, or just say hi. We may even dress up for you. 113 Campus Center, be there.

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

1968 MUSTANG

Classic '68 Mustang Way Cool Wheels FOR SALE!!! Electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, 2 door, great way to pick up chicks and study alike. Best offer call Beth at 6-6434.

ACTIVITIES

Macrobiotic discussions on natural health. 8 Sundays, 2-4 pm Munson Library South Amherst. Oct 2 - Nov. 20 . 253- 2777

UMass Women's Ice Hockey is back! Season starts soon For information call Cheri 549-7776

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Comedy Chris Avery's Cold Fritzed Comedy presents homecoming comedy 10/7 9:30 Hadley Pub Pit 9 For info call Chris 549-4589

Bette Zara open rush Thursday 6-8pm 11 Phillips St Questions? Call Carrie 549-7361

AUTO FOR SALE

1968 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Beth at 6-6434

81 Olds Cutlass. New parts. Needs minor work $700 or best offer Call Chad 546-1103

1987 Mazda 323 deluxe wagon Excellent condition, carefully maintained, stereo cassette, 97,000 miles $3500 549-2618

1989 Hyundai Excel 47K AC auto stereo cassette sunroof $3000 Call 253-4017

89 Jeep Wrangler black hard top 4cyl 4 wd, stereo, high miles, excellent condition $4000 bo 549 7321

Honda Prelude Si '85 Hiyo moo Sun roof Runs great needs brake work Greg 585-1940 $850

BOXING LESSONS

Pre-recreational + competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional IL Flyers Rumpus. 549-5752

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? We have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service 7 Dartmouth Terrace Fast N. Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

COMPUTER SALE

486DX2 66, 4mb ram, 270mb hd, 3.5" floppy, 14" SVGA monitor, keyboard $1175 other systems and hardware (motherboards, CPU and memory) Call sales rep Paul 549-4453

COMPUTERS

BR Computers & Associates whole systems Parts including monitors, drives, cards and more. Free estimate 549-4382

ENTERTAINMENT

Grunk a high energy alternative original cover band call Chris at 253-5896

FOR RENT

Blue room for rent 2 cats; e-z-a, and an espresso machine $215 + . Call Joan 586-4762

Fridge rentals 253-5742 free delivery

FOR SALE

1992 Trek 720 Bought last year for $740 Need cash must sell for $475. Free cable lock and extra set of offroad tires Call Mike 6-1994

Aerosmith's Puma Clydes autographed Fresh bday present Buy em 4 freshness 545-7876 ask 4 Bobby

Bike for sale Gary Fischer 17.5" 4 months old Little used Free extrace 40 speedometer and wire lock $390 253-3526

Grateful Dead Boston Garden Oct 1 & 2 MSG Oct 14, 2 tickets per each night Best offer 546-0882

Guitar pre - amp Tube works real! Rate 8 Two channels, foot switch Sounds excellent less than one year old Must sell soon! $250 Call Adam 256-1642

Leather jacket, men's large, brown very nice, hardly worn $125 (orig. $285) Bleeding Eagle Creek "convertible" $30 (orig $55) Tel. 586-3172

Microwave must sell 1 Only $50 Good condition Call 549-4776

Pagers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549-7331

Snowboards Burton Performer Elite and Sims Shredder $75 a piece Call Dan at 549-0962

Solid oak triple dresser
Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354

Tag sale Amherst 414 Meadow St (Rt 116) 10/2 9-4pm Quality name clothing much more Huge sale

Tandy computer system, w/ dr-was man, printer Tons of software Asking 375 or bo Call Joe @ 7348

Watch batteries ear piercing eyeglass and jewelry repairs gnat earrings, gifts from glass to gold custom designed jewelry S-Vernace Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3334

FREE

Free kitten, white blue eyes deaf Call 665-7756

HELP WANTED

$363.60 Sell funny college T-shirts Profit $363.60. Risk free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs 1-800-700-4250

Cruise ships now hiring earn up to $2000+/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary. For more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext C5001

Divarra wanted Trattoria Gazzetta Italian restaurant, 1177 N. Pleasant St. Amherst. Apply in person after 3:00 pm 549-7777

Earn $62+ light palletizer. Work for political change with Clean Water Action environmental campaign staff! On-bus tours. Paid training. P/T or career opportunity. Call 584-9830.

Earn $25 in 2 hours. Seniors and first year grads wanted for research study beginning with the GRE. Call Sharon 256-8692

International Employment- make up to $2000- $4000 +/ mo. teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For info call: 206-632-1146 ext. J50001

Jobs for the environment Grassroots political organizing. Earn $40-60/day. Flexible hours/ casual atmosphere Call Alex 256-5434

Receive up to 288,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am-5pm

Wanna-B! Fitness's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips. Jamaica Cancun Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel, fantastic pay 1-800-476-7710

INSTRUCTION

Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools. Night, here in Amherst. Free info session Mon. Oct 3rd. Lord Jeffereys Inn or Call 1-800-U-CAN-Mix

LOST

HAS ANYONE SEEN MY WATCH???? Anyone anyone Buehler

I lost my women's Freestyle watch with leather band SOMEWHERE on campus Please if you find it, bring it on down to the good ol' College office located at 113 Campus Center (the basement) Thanks in advance good samaritan

MOTORCYCLES

89 Ninja 600. New parts, runs excellent Call 665-7694 for info.

MUSICIANS

Guitarist seeking to form 3 piece rock band Diggities and Foxes Matt 253-9827

PERSONALS

Bella,
It's about time you came to your senses Meet me at the banister and we'll discuss the future possibilities of hot erotic nights P.S. I shave my whole body
Happy Birthday Scot.
Try not to get egg high on sunflower seeds Best wishes - Melissa
Hey Colt. Happy 18th Bday! Just think another 3 years to go! Try not to get to sick this weekend (an Oriental food that ain't Dad ya). Finally made it here with me! Love Laura
John Mommsen Walk to a payphone and call me (please) Tom L 253-7873
To the Hot Guy at the Sylvan Bus Stop every morning at 10am. I don't know how to say this any other way, but I think I've fallen in love with you. The way you read your Dungeons and Dragons books, the way you always wear a baseball hat. I love everything about you. Your Secret Admirer
PINNOCHIO'S
Hiring drivers full or part time Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Boltwood Walk Ask for Bob Proprietor special. $6.00 - 1.75 each topping large pizza now!! While they last

RESUME WRITING

We specialize in writing resumes and cover letters. Over a decade of experience, close to campus. 549-0367

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roomate wanted to share a large bedroom in a three bedroom condo. $740 /month includes hot water. Washer, dryer, garage Call 256-4986

Male/female - south Amherst. $275+ Electric/heat/ heat Great house, wooded about 4 miles from campus H253 5531 W756-0870

RUSH SIGMA KAPPA

Wanted fun, down to earth, friendly, social UMass women to attend Sigma Kappa's open rush. Please join us. Sept 27 & 28 8-9pm, Oct 2 12-3pm Call for info 256-0887 We are located at 15 Allen St behind Hillel House.

SERVICES

"Balloon view" cartoon characatures Makes great gift! $25, full color Satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 586-6461

Emie's pet sitting service Call for more info 549-0838

Fundraising Choose from 3 different Campus Center lasting either 30 or 7 days No investment Earn $$ for your group plus personal cash bonuses for yourself! Call 1-800-932-0528, ext 65

I'll sew for you Alterations, buttons, hems, repairs Call Allison 548-0763

Model search. The 1994 Glamour Masters national model search continues. Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Males, females all categories welcome. 617-523-0767

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549-1906

Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office. 922 Campus Center. 545-1995.

SHAREWARE

Free!! Shareware rating hundreds of quality software programs only $1.49 each Call 584-2877

TRAVEL

Spring Break 95 America's #1 spring break company! Cancun, Bahamas, Daytona & Panama! 110% lowest price guarantee! Organize 15 friends and travel free! Earn highest commissions! (800) 32-BRAVE!

WANTED

Attn. Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer/ juggling armourer to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. Bill/ Irene 584-4303

Campus representative Florida products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives Cancun, Nassau/ Jamaica/ S. Padre / Florida We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales Call 1-800 222-4432

WE WANT YOU!!! to be a
HEARING BOARD MEMBER
If You...
• are interested in Campus Leadership
• wish to improve your communication and listening skills
• are a full time student
• have at least a 2.0 G.P.A.
• are not on Judicial Sanction
Apply now to be a Hearing Board Member:
Training Held Oct. 18, 19, & 20
7:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m.
Applications available at
RESIDENTIAL CLUSTER OFFICES &
THE DEAN OF STUDENTS OFFICE
227 WHITMORE
ANY QUESTIONS?
CONTACT:
Paul Vasconcellos, Assistant Dean of Students
Dean of Students Office • Whitmore • 545-2684

IF ONLY THEY CAME WITH INSTRUCTIONS.
American Red Cross
AMERICAN RED CROSS CAMPAIGN NEWSPAPER AD NO. ARC 88-1892-4 COL

Spirit Haus
Refrigerator Rentals
256-8433
253-5384

Sports

Minutewomen tie A–10 foes in 2OTs

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

It would have been unfair to have had either team walk away from this one a loser.

In a heavily fought battle, No. 12 Massachusetts and No. 8 Northeastern played to 0–0 draw in double-overtime yesterday afternoon at Totman Field.

"It was a great UMass and Northeastern game," said Husky Coach Cheryl Murtaugh. "We came out and we knew what UMass' strengths would be, and we tried to be all over it. Their goaltender made some great saves."

"It was a great game," said Massachusetts Coach Megan Donnelly. "It was exciting for the spectators. It was two very tough strong teams going at it in full force. Nobody backed down."

The Minutewomen had a chance to pull out the victory at the very end of regulation, but Husky goaltender Jen Ruggiero deflected a Natalie Hart penalty corner shot as time expired.

Both teams took their level of play up a notch in the extra periods. Early in the first overtime, Northeastern had an excellent scoring chance. Following a UMass penalty corner, the Huskies broke free for a three–on–one, but Kyri Sparks, a senior back for the Minutewomen, blocked the NU pass to quell the danger.

Shortly after, with Minutewoman goalie Hilary Rose down after making a save on a BU penalty corner, chaos ensued in front of the UMass net. With Rose out of position, it appeared that Northeastern had a sure goal, but Sparks dove across the crease to block the shot.

Northeastern	0
UMass	0

The Minutewomen took the momentum back in the second sudden death period with several scoring chances, yet Ruggerio made save after save and UMass ran out of time.

Despite the tie, the Minutewomen took a lot of positives from the game. Sparks and fellow back Andrea Cabral turned in strong defensive performances, and senior midfielder Colleen Duffy was sharp as well.

"I'm happy with our effort," said Donnelly. "It was the first time we put together a full game of great effort and smart play. The [players] obviously would rather have had the win, but they're proud of their effort. We're going in the right direction."

Freshman Courtney MacLean played like a veteran, looking impressive in crunch time, according to Donnelly.

"Courtney has been really playing very well," said Donnelly. "She's been coming on stronger and stronger all the time. I thought she did an excellent job."

As they became fatigued, the Huskies got a little nasty, poking and shoving the Minutewomen late in the game. The Minutewomen received a bit of a scare when Rose appeared to be injured after being hit by a NU forward. Rose was shaken up, but finished the game.

"It was rough," said Donnelly, "but there is nothing we can do about it. We just try to count on the officials to control that. I was very happy with the way we reacted. We didn't let it affect the way we played."

The scoreless deadlock was UMass' second straight; the Minutewomen played Rutgers to a 0–0 tie on Sunday. UMass remains undefeated at 5–0–2.

"I would have liked to take this one until someone scored," said senior co–captain Danielle Borges. "I think we would have eventually put one in."

"I just wanted to win so badly," said Sparks. "I could taste it. Everybody's hustling, we're playing so hard. We're getting better every game."

The Minutewomen embark on their toughest road trip of the season this weekend, facing Richmond and Old Dominion. UMass upset the Lady Monarchs at Totman Field last year.

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Streya Volla and the University of Massachusetts field hockey team could not get past Northeastern, and settled for a 0–0 tie yesterday afternoon at Totman Field.

Water polo hits the pool at Amherst College for home debut against BC

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Everybody loves a homecoming.

Tonight at 6 p.m., at the Amherst College pool, the University of Massachusetts men's water polo team will make its home debut with a match against the Boston College Eagles.

Though it will be pleasant for the team to finally reach their first home–"pool" advantage, it might not be so pleasant for the boys from Chestnut Hill.

You see, the Eagles coaching staff, comprised of Coach G.T. Ladd with assistants Matt Buckley and Dan McCosker, all played for Coach Russ Yarworth here at UMass. At the Cambridge Invitational earlier this season, the Minutemen blew Boston College out of the water with a 19–6 shellacking.

"We handled them pretty easily," said Yarworth. "They are a relatively inexperienced team, but they got some good talent. It's a game where we can hopefully come out and play well. One of the problems of our team is we're inconsistent when we're starting a game."

A problem that could literally arise for the Minutemen manifests itself in 6–foot 6–inch, 210–pound holesetter and 2M standout, Todd Beven. Combined with speedy driver Marcel Williams, BC's 4–12 EWPA record last season could prove to be an enigma if UMass is not ready.

"We are going to play straight press defense, play the lanes and go for the counterattack," said Yarworth. "That's how we took them apart last time."

"BC knows it. The coaches know it. They know we're going to come right at them."

Following tonight's game against the Eagles, the men's water polo team will begin preparation for this Saturday's Eastern Water Polo Association North Division Tournament, held at Fordham University in Bronx, N.Y.

With three straight matches against U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, Saint Francis and Fordham, the Minutemen will look to better their positioning for the North Division playoffs, held in Providence, R.I., on October 29–30.

The records from the three separate tournaments will eventually seed the Top 8 for the division playoff.

That will then lead to the seeding of the Top 4 for the Eastern Championships, held in Cambridge on Nov. 5 and Nov. 6. Sound confusing? Not to Coach Yarworth — he is taking one step at a time.

"We're definitely a little bit stronger than all the teams we are playing. I'll be looking for us to come out and start hard and fast," said Yarworth. "[I would] also [like] to see some of the other players get some significant playing time, so I can start evaluating the bench strength."

Contributions from sophomore 2M–man Dumrul Alcici, junior field player Bob Coletti, and the return of freshman Chris Saranchock from injury should help Coach Yarworth get a clearer perception of positioning for the post–season. For now, he is keeping it as understated as possible.

"It would be nice to keep the winning streak going just a little bit longer," said Yarworth.

Miracle finish similar to Flutie–Phelan pass

Unbelievable.

On the final play of the game, Kordell Stewart unloads a 64–yard bomb that is tipped around and ends up in the hands of Colorado's Michael Westbrook for the most dramatic college football finish in years.

Colorado defeated Michigan in Ann Arbor on a miracle finish reminiscent of Boston College's win over Miami in 1984. Flutie to Phelan, Stewart to Westbrook.

The Wolverines finally beat Notre Dame, and had the second of three major hurdles cleared for 59:50 on Saturday. Michigan, who just couldn't hang on, now must remain focused in its next two games before Penn State. Wouldn't want to be Iowa when Michigan comes to town on Saturday.

The national title picture now looks a lot more cloudy. Nebraska must go on without injured quarterback Tommie Frazier for an indefinite period of time. This shouldn't be a problem until an Oct. 29 home date against Colorado.

Watch for running back Lawrence Phillips [third leading rusher in the nation] to be even more of the focus on offense. Now is the true test as defenses will key on Phillips as the main option.

Can anyone stop the offense of the Florida Gators? Not so far. Terry Dean is the top rated quarterback in the country, and the defense has surprised many. Hey, if you shutout Tennessee in Knoxville, you're doing something right.

Where have you gone, J.J. Stokes? Come on, he spurns the NFL for his senior year claiming he wanted to lead the team to title contention. Stokes has missed most of the year due to a thigh bruise.

Stokes's absence at wide receiver has allowed Kevin Jordan more catches, and Jordan now ranks among the nation's best. UCLA has already lost two games and road dates with Washington and California are up next.

Highlighting this weekend's picks are three good old– fashioned conference rivalries. Last week, this column [1–2] didn't fare all that well, thanks in part to the Colorado miracle.

Wisconsin 27, Michigan State 16 — The Badgers rebounded nicely after being destroyed by Colorado and are hitting their stride offensively. RB's Brent Moss and Terrell Fletcher will rack up the yardage in Lansing. Another home loss for MSU means the firing of coach George Perles [which is long overdue].

North Carolina St. 33, Georgia Tech 20 — The Wolfpack has made a resurgence led by star wideout Ed Gothon. At home, N.C. State rolls against a Tech team which hasn't learned how to win yet; ask Arizona or Duke.

Penn State 873, Temple 6 — Actually 70–3 is more realistic. Want a tough job · how about being the Nittany Lion mascot, having to do pushups for every point they score? Watch out for triple digits as Temple, who does have two wins, probably will not win another game this year. [This game won't count in the season total].

Georgia 21, Alabama 17 — The upset of the week, compliments of Eric Zeier. Georgia will stack the line to stop running back Sherman Williams, forcing the mediocre Jay Barker to win the game. Zeier will outgun the inept 'Bama offense in a major Heisman spotlight game.

You may have noticed Colorado mentioned several times so far. Well, the Buffaloes play anybody, anywhere, at any time. Combine non–Big 8 games [and wins] against Wisconsin and Michigan with this weekend against Texas and you get the toughest schedule in the land.

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 10

Men's soccer upends Hartford in OT

By Ted Kottler
Collegian Staff

They only call it soccer in America, but it was more like football yesterday at Garber Field, where the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team's defeat of the University of Hartford, 3–2 in overtime, had a distinct international flavor.

Karsten Bremke, the junior UMass stopper from Marienfeld, Germany, headed his first two career goals for the Minutemen [4–3–1], but it was sweeper Joe Jacobson from West Hartford, Conn., who struck the clincher at the 98:21 mark.

Hartford	2
UMass	3

Jacobson collected the ball on the left side of the field about 20 yards from the net and shuttled it under the crossbar.

"I feel very lucky," said Jacobson, who is unaccustomed to scoring. "I just tried to put it on goal."

The Hawks' Rob Jachym, just a left–footed sophomore but a proven goal–scoring wonder, curled a beautiful free kick past the UMass wall and keeper Mark Wolf at 51:41, for his sixth goal which gave Hartford [4–5] a 1–0 advantage.

"I saw [Hristo] Stoichkov [forward for the Bulgarian national team] line up a free kick the same spot [in last summer's World Cup], and the near post looked pretty open, so I just hit it well."

Just one minute and 45 seconds later, Bremke did something he hadn't done since his days at Universitat Bielefeld: he scored. Dave Siljanovski chipped a corner kick from Hartford keeper Christian DiGenova's right, and Bremke leapt in the box and headed it in, knotting the count at 1–1.

"I saw there was a space [in front of DiGenova] so I just used it," Bremke said.

At 70:30, Hartford's dynamic forward tandem of Jachym and Elvis Thomas meshed without flaw. Jachym booted a perfect through ball to Thomas, moving to his left inside the 18–yard area. Thomas then lifted a shot over a helpless Wolf, regaining the lead for Hartford, 2–1.

Between the 75th and 82nd minutes, UMass set up three free kicks just outside the area, only to be thwarted. Kevin Martin rang the crossbar in the 78th minute from 21 yards away, the closest miss in UMass' furious late–stage attack.

At 87:22, Martin lobbed a long cross from the right side that Bremke bounced hard into the net, ensuring this would be his most memorable match to date for the Minutemen.

"I just got around the defense," Bremke said. "Just like the first one."

In the 101st minute, shortly after Jacobson's winning tally, two glaring events took place in succession. The first was Mike Butler's scorching bicycle kick that only found the left upright, yet left everyone in attendance in awe.

Moments later, Thomas dribbled into the area and had only one man to beat, but he chose to pass to Jachym, who was too deep to shoot on target.

"I was going full speed and I sort of got jammed,"

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 10

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team came out of yesterday's overtime game with a 3–2 win over Hartford at Richard F. Garber Field.

Unsatisfied Nicole Roberts continues to improve her game

STEVE PEDULLA/ COLLEGIAN

University of Massachusetts women's soccer team's Nicole Roberts, shown here playing against William and Mary, has scored 4 goals and tallied 3 assists for 11 points so far this season.

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

Nicole Roberts is the type of player that a coach wants on his team.

The type of player who is never satisfied with her play. The type of player who is always striving to improve and get better.

"If I ever become satisfied, then what would be the sense of playing," said Roberts.

"She's very demanding on herself," said Coach Jim Rudy. "We've all felt like she's done better than what she has [thought] but that's OK too because that's a sign of someone who's going to succeed and get better. They want to do better all the time, and she certainly has."

Roberts has four goals and three assists for 11 points in seven games so far for the No. 5 UMass women's soccer team.

Even with those great numbers, Roberts has not been entirely happy with her play. She said she is still not satisfied.

"At the beginning of the season, after the last two games, I wasn't happy at all," said Roberts. "I had scored goals here and there, but it wasn't indicative of how I played in my mind. I wasn't very happy and content with that."

Even at the UMass Classic, held this past weekend, Roberts said she did not realize how great her play was.

"This past weekend Coach Rudy [said] 'you played one of the best games of your college career' and I [responded] 'are you serious?' I don't realize it at all."

Still not satisfied, still wanting to do more.

Coming out of Tamarac High School, Roberts was not heavily recruited. Someone who scored 65 goals her senior year usually would be at the top of everyone's list.

But for some odd reason, she was not. Lucky for her and the Minutewomen, she caught coach Rudy's eye at a tournament. After that, Roberts went to a camp at UMass and the rest was history.

"I came here for camp and I [thought] 'I love this,'" said Roberts. "I loved it. I knew I was coming here."

It was a tough adjustment for her in her first year. Once she settled in, though, everything fell into place.

Last season, Roberts was outstanding. She scored a team– high 12 goals, dished out seven assists, and tied for the team lead in points with 31. Along the way, Roberts was named the Most Valuable Performer at the Atlantic–10 Tournament at Rutgers University.

"That [the MVP award] was totally unexpected," said Roberts. "I didn't think I played that well."

Still not satisfied, still wanting to do more.

The MVP award was not all she won. Roberts was named a honorable mention All–American by Soccer News and earned All–Northeast Region, All–New England and All– Atlantic 10 distinctions.

Roberts has enjoyed much success at UMass, considering the fact that she did not start playing until she was a freshman in high school. It takes a special kind of person to start out at something late and to become one of the best at it.

Turn to ROBERTS, page 10

Minutemen ready for Homecoming

Brian Corcoran and the UMass football team host URI tomorrow [1 p.m.] at McGuirkStadium (See related stories and rosters on pages 6, 7, and 12).

Homecoming hits University

This weekend is a time for many UMass alumni to once again admire the campus sights (See Homecoming Photo Essay, pages 8-9).

Ska-fever hits Northampton

Ska takes center stage in Northampton on Monday as The Specials take on Pearl Street (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Weekend Forecast

Today should be partly sunny and breezy. Tonight, mostly clear and cooler. This weekend will be sunny with increasing clouds in the afternoon. Highs in the lower 60's.

HIGH: 57	HIGH: 60	HIGH: 60
LOW: 40	LOW: 44	LOW: 40

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 14 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, September 30, 1994

Conflicting reasons given for GSS vice president's resignation

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

Julia Johnson resigned as the vice president of the Graduate Student Senate (GSS) at the University of Massachusetts, but the reasons for her departure are conflicting.

Johnson released a memo to Prasad Venugopal, president of the Graduate Student Senate, dated September 26, announcing the resignation.

"With much regret, I hearby resign my position as vice president of the Graduate Student Senate, effective immediately," Johnson said in the memo.

In the memo, Johnson cited that her reason for leaving her position was a direct result of "not having received funding for projects" which she proposed to the Executive Committee at the end of June.

"My resignation is a direct result of not having received funding for projects I proposed to the Executive Committee at the end of June," said Johnson.

Venugopal said that while Johnson was vice president, she was also working as an Assistant Resident Director, a job which was in violation of the GSS constitution.

"The constitution states that the president cannot engage in paid employment outside the Senate for more than 10 hours a week and all other officers are limited to 17 hours per week," Venugopal said.

The ARD position requires 30 hours a week of work, according to Venugopal; therefore, Johnson was in breach of the constitution.

After learning of Johnson's second job, Venugopal informed Johnson that she was in violation of the constitution.

"When [Johnson] informed the GSS executive committee it was clear she had to make a choice between the two jobs," Venugopal said. "She chose to resign."

Johnson contests that the resignation had little to do with the ARD job, and that in fact she resigned because she felt that her work was not valued.

Johnson attests that her requests for funding to complete two projects were denied even though, according to her, they were justifiable.

"When these projects were not funded, it became clear that the issues I had been working on and my work in general were not valued," Johnson said.

Johnson explained that because the GSS did not value her work, she began the search for another job.

"If my work had been valued by the GSS, I would not have looked for another job," Johnson said.

According to Venugopal, the reason he disagreed with Johnson's proposal to give Johnson funding for the two projects was because they were already in place or being worked on by the GSS.

"The GSS is working with the dean of the Graduate School to find graduate students to work on similar projects," Venugopal said.

Johnson disagrees, saying that the projects she proposed funding for specifically dealt with graduate students dealing with harassment in the classroom.

Homecoming events set to begin tonight

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

Follow the yellow brick road — to the University of Massachusetts?

Dorothy and Toto will be popular figures this Homecoming weekend with students and alumni participating in contests, parties and a "Wizard of Oz" theme parade.

Activities will kick off today at 5:30 p.m. when the UMass band, Passing Strangers, performs in the Southwest Horseshoe.

At 6:30 p.m. students and alumni will cheer on the UMass football team in a pep rally in the Southwest Horseshoe.

There will be special appearances from UMass football coach Mike Hodges and UMass men's soccer coach, Sam Koch, as well as performances from UMass cheerleaders and the University's Funk Club dance team.

Students are encouraged to create banners for the evening to promote school spirit. All banners will be hung tomorrow in Warren McGuirk Alumni Football Stadium when the UMass Minutemen take on the Rhode Island Rams.

A bonfire will be held during the pep rally in the Southwest playing fields.

All pep rally events are free of charge.

Tonight at 8 p.m., the 20th Annual Multi-Bands Pops concert will be held at the Mullins Center in which a laser and video presentation will be performed with over 500 University musical performers.

Tickets are $12 general public; $9 senior citizens, children 16 and under and students; $8 for groups of 15 or more.

Tomorrow at 10 a.m., students and alumni are welcome to join the UMass coaching staff in a hockey clinic and free skate. Rental skates are available. Hockey equipment will not be provided.

Those preferring to remain off the ice are invited to take part in a tour of the Mullins Center at 10 a.m.

At 11 a.m. a Homecoming parade will begin at the Robsham Visitors Center and travel down Fearing Street to McGuirk Stadium.

Parade floats created by student groups, sororities, fraternities and residence halls will have a "Wizard of Oz" theme. Floats will be judged during the parade.

A pre-game tailgate party outside McGuirk Stadium will be held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Students and alumni are invited to picnic and enjoy music, as well as take part in hay rides and watch juggling acts.

Alumni "talent scouts" will be looking for the picnic that best depicts a person, place or thing from the Wizard of Oz.

At 1 p.m., the UMass Minuteman football team will go head-to-head with Rhode Island.

The UMass men's soccer team will face St. Joseph's at Garber Field.

At 4 p.m. the UMass volleyball team will challenge St. Bonaventure at the Curry Hicks Cage.

During this weekend, the Class of 1954 will be celebrating its 40th anniversary and the Class of 1969 will celebrating its 25th anniversary.

"This is an opportunity for alumni to re-connect with the campus and to meet students," said Ginny Rees, the Assistant Director of Alumni Relations. "This is a social project geared to welcome alumni back."

Rees said the Class of 1969 is celebrating its 25th anniversary at UMass as well as the 25th anniversary of Woodstock and man's walk on the moon.

The Boss Tweeds, an original UMass college band from the Class of 1969, will be performing Saturday evening at The Hatch, during a dinner/dance banquet at 6:30 p.m.

The Class of 1954 will enjoy a breakfast at the Mullins Center on Saturday morning as well as a champagne brunch in the Campus Center Auditorium on Sunday morning.

Finger Painting

MELINDA LESTER / COLLEGIAN

Junior theater major Megan Cannon along with freshman Susan Elliot spary balls for the UMass color guard, getting ready for Homecoming weekend.

Fund created for alum

Scholarship in memory of Cosseboom

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

A scholarship fund has been established to commemorate University of Massachusetts alumnus Michael Cosseboom, who died in the crash of U.S. Air Flight 427 near Pittsburgh earlier this month. The annual scholarship fund is being organized by his friends and relatives.

The scholarship will be available to students who plan to attend UMass and will graduate from Braintree High School, where Cosseboom received his diploma in 1981, Michael Rawson, a close friend of Cosseboom, said.

"Education was very important to him," John Cosseboom, Michael's brother, said. "We want to give other kids the opportunity to have the kind of educational experience he did at UMass. Those were some of the greatest years of his life."

Cosseboom, 31, graduated from UMass in 1985 with a bachelor's degree in communications. He lived in John Adams dormitory in Southwest, and later moved into the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity house on North Pleasant Street, Rawson said.

"We were in shock and disbelief that we could have had members of the UMass family on that fatal flight of 130, or so, people," John Feudo, the executive director of Alumni Relations, said.

Eligibility for the scholarship will be achieved by those applicants who best represent the values, interests and compassion that exemplified Cosseboom, Feudo said.

Once Cosseboom's unborn child, expected in November, comes to the age of college entry, the scholarship funds will be deferred and vested into the child's education, Rawson said.

Cosseboom was on a standard business trip, when he decided to take a flight home to Boston from Chicago for the weekend to spend time with his wife Elaine, Rawson said. She was seven months pregnant at the time of the crash.

"Michael was a terrific brother, and my best friend," John Cosseboom, who graduated from UMass in 1989, said. "You can't comprehend the magnitude of this loss. He was at the height of his life and his career, and six weeks away from having his first child."

Cosseboom was the Director of Sales Training for the Consumer Products Division of the SmithKline Beecham Consumer Health Care Company. He would take an average of three to four business trips a week, Rawson said.

SmithKline Beecham promoted Cosseboom several times, and his next step would have been vice presidency of the international company. His boss, Alan Schaeffer, said that they were grooming him to be president, according to Rawson.

"It's irregular for someone at his age to be a National Director of Sales," Rawson said. "But when you met him, you realized he was something special."

The scholarship fund is seeking donations from the National Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity, the Braintree community where Cosseboom grew up, UMass alumni and friends, Rawson said.

Donations to the fund can be sent to: The Michael J. Cosseboom Memorial Scholarship Fund, c/o Bank of Boston, P.O. Box 151, Boston, MA 02101.

ISO hopes to build on 'dead' political left from the 1980s

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

Interest in socialism is on the rise in the United States and will continue to grow as the political left becomes increasingly frustrated with a lack of economic reform under President Clinton, according to a member of a socialist organization which has recently become active in the Pioneer Valley.

Jay Armstrong of the International Socialist Organization (ISO) said before a meeting on campus last night that the establishment of an area branch the organization about six weeks ago is part of a resurgence in the popularity of radical economic thought.

"In the course of our 15 year history, we're now recruiting at the fastest rate ever," said Armstrong, a graduate student in labor studies. "We're trying to build the political left from being almost dead in the 1980s."

The ISO, a "Trotskyist" socialist organization with approximately 1000 members nationwide, has been recruiting on the University of Massachusetts campus this semester with a table in the Campus Center and plans to hold regular meetings to discuss socialist thought and organize educational forums, according to members present at last night's meeting in the Suffolk Room of the Student Union.

Last night, ISO member Jennifer Holes told attendees that economic reform aimed at giving workers control over the distribution of wealth instead of just the creation of goods was the aim of the organization.

Holes told the group the ISO is committed to the idea that economic reforms truly beneficial to working people are incompatible with the capitalism. She said the ISO does not seek incremental reform but rather the overthrow of the capitalist system.

"The ISO is a revolutionary socialist organization. In order to reach socialism, the capitalist system . . .

Turn to ISO, page 3

Class of 1969 set to return to UMass

By Henry Brier
Collegian Staff

In 1969, President Richard M. Nixon spoke of the "Vietnamization" of the war in Southeast Asia, his efforts to decrease US combat troops and increase South Vietnamese forces.

Neil Alden Armstrong became the first man to set foot on the moon after emerging from the Apollo II. Woodstock, the rock and folk music festival in upstate New York, symbolic of opposition to the Vietnam War, was attended by 400,000 people.

And the University of Massachusetts at Amherst awarded approximately 3,083 undergraduate degrees.

Homecoming is this weekend, and many alumni will be converging upon the Amherst campus. There is a focus on the members of the Class of '69, as they are celebrating their 25th anniversary.

"I talked to one of my roommates from Colorado," said Patti Smith, former Secretary of the Class of '69. "Her husband is whisking her away for a surprise. It's kind of fun."

Smith, who plans on attending as well, now resides in Harwich, Mass. She publishes A+, a periodical insert for area weekly newspapers regarding regional arts and antiques.

Wayne Thomas, former President of the Class of '69, also plans on attending the reunion.

"I'm bringing my wife and new baby, Kathryn," said Thomas, who now lives in Sudbury, Mass.

Thomas has recently developed his own business as a management consultant, entitled Thomas & Company, Inc., in which he helps people with sales and marketing.

Events which Thomas reminisced about included the Beatles making it big in the United States, many of his fellow classmates being drafted for service, and civil rights on campus becoming a major issue.

The Class of '69 has decided upon books as a class gift, in support of the library, which they said they heard needed the help.

"A scholarship benefits few, while library books benefit hundreds," said Thomas, who was also the 1969 commencement speaker at what was Alumni Stadium (now Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium. "We were moved by the fact that the library is slipping, and we wanted to do what we could."

Virginia Rees, the assistant director of Alumni Relations and the Homecoming Coordinator, said that of the 3,000- plus who graduated, so far 150 plan to return, yet the figure of returnees has been steadily increasing. Earlier this week, 100 alumni from the Class of '69 planned on coming back.

"We expect that we'll have people show up spur of the moment," said Rees.

University Alumni earn honors for UM

By Tim White
Collegian Correspondent

Providing more than a social club for their alumni, the University of Massachusetts Alumni Association tries to make a UMass degree better with age.

The Alumni Association of UMass was awarded the Associations Advance American Honor Roll by the American Society of Association Executives (ASAE) in July, placing the alumni group as one of the top associations in America.

"It builds the image of UMass," said John Feudo, the executive director of the UMass Alumni Association. "It helps build the value of a UMass degree."

ASAE, based in Washington, D.C., is a 22,000-member organization which places members on the association's honor roll for achievements in education, international activities, and community service. The UMass Alumni Association has been a member of the ASAE for 10 years.

"This award legitimated what we've been doing," said Feudo. "We have alumni who care very deeply about this University, and they're working on behalf of UMass."

Feudo said that alumni associations are often labelled as social organizations, but the UMass alumni group is trying to change that view, and this award helps.

"Alumni want to know that the degree they got at UMass is going to be worth more and more as they proceed in life," said Feudo. "And one way we can do that by making the association and UMass a player on a national and international basis."

The UMass Alumni Association provides over 60 scholarships yearly to undergraduate students, including a possible minority scholarship program.

A career networking opportunity in which alumni can use other alumni for connections in the job world are ways the association is trying to differentiate themselves from a social organization.

In an effort to do more for the alumni, the association also started a charter membership which is a system for paying dues.

With a membership fee, alumni get certain benefits ranging from hotel and travel discounts, to Mullins Center benefits. Starting in June, the program currently has over 1,000 members.

"There was never a dues push here

Turn to ALUMNI, page 2

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Sept. 30

Pep Rally — Get psyched for Homecoming, Southwest horseshoe, Passing Strangers and many other talents performing, 5:30 p.m.

Film — Tearjerker classic E.T., Gamble Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College. Show times: 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m., $2.50.

Film — She's Gotta Have it, a very sexy movie. Campus Center Theater, Amherst College. Show times: 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m., $1.75.

Music — Annual Mutiband Pops, showcase of 500 performers, Mullins Center, UMass, 8 p.m. Call TicketMaster for prices at 733-2500 or call Mullins Center Box office at 545-0505.

Theater — Brenda Wong Aoki in The Queen's Garden., Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m., $6 or $3.50 for students and elders.

Concert — James David Christie, organ, Abbey Chapel, Mount Holyoke College, 8 p.m. Call 527-7664 for admission prices.

Pianist — Ruth Laredo, Buckley Recital Hall, Amherst College, 8 p.m. Free.

Meeting — "Breakaway" meeting of Campus Crusade for Christ, singing clubs and short talk, Campus Center room 174, UMass, 7 p.m.

Dance — Sponsored by the UMass Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance, Bluewall in the Campus Center, UMass, 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., Information: 545-0154.

Saturday, Oct. 1

Film — "Art to Art," profiles of Asian American women artists, Hillyer 117, Smith College, 2 p.m.

Conference — "Write Angles" for writers at one-day Conference at the School of Management, UMass. Information: 545-0474.

Theater — Tales from the Pacific Rim, Bowker auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m.

Music — Schumann Abend, faculty recital, Bezanson Recital Hall, UMass, 8 p.m.

Festival — Apple Harvest and Crafts Festival, Amherst Town Common, 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Sunday, Oct. 2

Meeting — UMass Fire and First Aid Unit, meeting for new members, 7 p.m., Morrill N406, Information: 665-2101.

Conference — Student leadership conference, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Student Union Ballroom, Information: 545-3600.

Film — Forgotten Tenor, Stirn Auditorium, Amherst, 7:30 p.m.

Monday, Oct. 3

Meeting — Students interested in television production at Union Video Center, UVC office near the Hatch in the Student Union, UMass, 6 p.m.

Blood Drive — Donate blood, Campus Center, UMass, 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Upcoming Events

Volunteers Needed - Campus Pond Cleanup at UMass, Sept. 27 and 28, from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. T-shirts and refreshments will be provided. Call: 545-2317.

Community Service - The Companion Program is looking for volunteers. Call 253-2591.

Internships - MASSPIRG is offering internships for the fall semester. Earn course credits. Information: 423B Student Union or call 545-0199.

Earn credits - The Peer Education Program on Sexual Harassment is recruiting 30 undergraduate men and women for its one-credit training session this semester. Information: Mike, 546-0365.

The Homework Club — Volunteers needed to help in after-school program to help children from non-English speaking family do their homework. Information: Scott, Heap or Seng, 253-0696.

Want to be a teacher? — Students interestcd in becoming teacher (grages 5-12) are invited to visit the STEP Advising office, Room 125 B Furcolo Hall in the School of Education, applications for spring acceptance are available at the office. Information: 545-4397.

Retraction

The headline on yesterday's Collegian story about the Cannibus Reform Coalition was misleading and inaccurate. The coalition is not organizing the "smoke-in" to be held next month at Hampshire College.

The Collegian regrets the error.

Police Log

Compiled by Kelly Spang from University reports

Motor Vehicle Traffic Stops

Sept. 24

Kyle Seymour, 21, of 131 Shawmut St. in Springfield was stopped for two warrant arrests from Northampton and Russell.

James O'Brien, 18, of 26 Silvai St. in Peabody was arrested on University Drive for operating a motor vehicle after his license was suspended, running a red light, and operating a motor vehicle without license in possession.

Christopher Justice, 20, of 3 Garland Ave. in Everett was arrested on Kennedy Road for making an illegal U-turn, operating a motor vehicle without a license, a minor transporting and carrying alcoholic beverages, and a warrant.

Intoxicated Person

Sept. 24

A 21-year-old-individual was taken into protective custody on Sunset Avenue.

Sept. 25

Hakiem Pagan, 20, of 172 Main St. in Haydenville was arrested in John Adams Dorm for malicious destruction of property over $250 and for being a disorderly person.

Sept. 28

Police responded to a report of a male subject in the bathroom of Thoreau Dorm who was unresponsive. Amherst Fire ambulance transported the subject to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Drug Law Offenses

Sept. 27

Police responded to a reported odor at marijuana in Coolidge Dorm and during the investigation confiscated a bong.

Suspicious Activity

Sept. 24

Individuals soliciting in the Orchard Hill Residential Area who had been issued previous warning to stop soliciting were issued trespass notices.

Sept. 28

Two vehicles were identified by officers on Authority Way for allegedly causing damage to the lawn area adjacent to Lot 13.

Annoying Phone Calls

Sept. 27

Several individuals in an academic building on Hicks Way reported receiving calls of a sexual nature from a male subject.

An individual from the Southwest Residential Area reported receiving several annoying calls.

An individual from Off-Campus Housing Office reported a number of annoying calls.

Sept. 28

An individual from the Southwest Residential Area reported receiving a number of derogatory and threatening calls.

Alumni

continued from page 1

before," said Feudo. "Something like this will allow us to better serve the students and the alumni."

Quoting UMass Men's Basketball Coach John Calipari, who called the basketball program a "front porch to the University," Feudo said the alumni group follows the same principles.

"Whatever it takes to get people to stand up and take notice, that's what we want," said Feudo.

at zanna...loggers

ZANNA

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 N. Pleasant St. • Amherst
413.253.2563

CELEBRATING 26 YEARS 1968-1994
THE PUB
Fun, Food & Spirits
Sunday, September 18th
America's Funniest Hypnotist

GEORGE KING
9:30
Enjoy a night of Dancing to the International Sounds of D.J. Mendoza
"Merenge" and "Salsa"
and
Much more
15 EAST PLEASANT·AMHERST

SPORTS ILLUSTRATED WILL BE THERE... WILL YOU?

free food. free sports activities. prizes.

Gatorade Thirst Quencher Presents
Sports Illustrated Campus Fest

Participating Sponsors:
TOYOTA
RIGHT GUARD SPORT STICK

CATCH THE ACTION
Agree
Panasonic R·E·A·L 3DO INTERACTIVE MULTIPLAYER
Symphony
Pier 1 imports for a change pop-tarts
SONY
IBM
SPORT COURT.
BarNone.
1-800-COLLECT

BROUGHT TO YOU BY
UNIVERSITY STORE
OCTOBER 4 - 5 • 10AM - 4PM
(RAINDATE OCTOBER 6)
"SOUTH LAWN STUDENT UNION"

Sports Illustrated is a registered trademark of Time Inc.
Produced by MarketSource Corporation, Cranbury, NJ

Amherst hosts annual autumn festival

By Damien Becker
Collegian Correspondent

Tomorrow on the Amherst Common, autumn will be celebrated with crafts and food at the eighth annual Apple and Crafts Festival.

The festival will take from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and is being sponsored by Atkins Fruit Bowl, which will be providing apples, applesauce, cider and doughnuts.

WMAS-FM, another sponsor, will be broadcasting live from the Common.

The Amherst Family Center is producing the event.

Over 140 talented crafters representing various parts of New England will be on hand displaying their wares.

Jewelry, pottery, marbled paper, gourmet foods, dyed silk items, baskets, and more will be on sale.

Live music will also be provided starting at 11 a.m. with traditional folk songs by local favorite Jerry Bryant. Joan Robb and Caribbean for Kids, featuring Morgan Rael on steel drum, will take the stage at 1:30 p.m.

With pumpkin decorating, mini golf, and a visit from Johnny Appleseed himself, the Festival will be reminiscent of those old country fairs.

The Amherst Family Center, located in the North Congregational Church on North Pleasant Street near Daisy's, is dedicated to helping families with new children.

The Center provides support and advice on how to solve the problems associated with raising a child, such as sleeping and eating disorders.

As a subsidiary of the Hampshire Action Commission, the Family Center is a non-profit organization that offers workshops on infants and toddlers, while providing care for those children.

The center does not, as of yet, provide day-care, but there are infant and toddler rooms where the children can play and learn while the parents attend their own classes. Each room has its own teacher who leads the children in various activities.

By attending these classes, the parents will not only get support, they will meet other new parents in the community, and give their children a chance to meet other kids their age.

The Amherst Family Center is open on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays from 9 a.m. to noon, until May.

RSO gives help to single-parent students

By Laura Schmidt
Collegian Correspondent

Being a single parent and going to college can be difficult. Last semester, a new group called the Single Parents Association, a campus-sponsored and Registered Student Organization, formed to alleviate some of these pressures.

Sandy Verrilli and Kim Carew-Baxter are two students from the University of Massachusetts who are single parents and involved in the Single Parents Association.

Both Verrilli and Carew-Baxter said this new group has helped them a great deal during rough times.

"The Single Parents Association provides a sense of support to other single parents," Verrilli said. This support is done through a network of phone numbers and people.

Verrilli, a landscape architecture major and Carew-Baxter, a counseling psychology major, will both be graduating in May.

The Single Parents Association was originally founded by two single women, Stella Thomson and Emilie Blattman, who realized there was no support on campus for single parent students.

After a year and a half of networking, Thomson and Blatman found ten women who were interested in forming a group for single parents. The group finally became an RSO at the end of last semester.

The organization is mainly comprised of undergraduate women, but Carew-Baxter said the group is open to all single parents.

Carew-Baxter also said the group attempts to let other single parents know that they are not alone and that "there is support available to them if they are ever in a bind."

Kim said the Single Parents Association is not only a support group, but also an organization in which issues are discussed.

The Single Parents Association allows these parents to ventilate certain issues such as child care.

"Often times, single parents, usually women, are stereotyped," said Carew-Baxter.

Every Saturday, one designated parent in the group usually takes the children of the other members for some type of outing. Verrilli said they do this to take some stress off the single parents.

As a result of the Single Parents Association, not only do the parents become close, but the children become friendly as well, Verrilli said.

"The children usually attend these meetings, and sometimes close friendships arise as a result," said Verrilli.

The Single Parents Association will meet Oct. 6 at 7:30 p.m. in the Blue Wall.

UM pairs prospective housemates

Program lets students trade housing for work, cut costs

By John Williams Jr.
Collegian Correspondent

For many University of Massachusetts students, there is rarely too much worrying done over where next month's rent is coming from.

Usually, either Mom and Dad are footing the bill or the state of Massachusetts is reaching deep to help them out with a loan, scholarship or grant of some kind.

The occasional student may even be putting oneself through school.

However, for some students and people out there in what college students unaffectionately refer to as the "real world," it can be a painstaking task to cover each month's expenses.

For those with this problem, UMass has a solution. For some years now, the University's Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center (CSHRC) has been running a program called HomeSharing which pairs prospective housemates.

HomeSharing works by acting as an intermediary between those looking for affordable housing with those who have extra space in their homes and are willing to exchange that space for a few hours work each week, according to Eric Bruinooge, match-coordinator for Hampshire county and a UMass School of Education graduate student.

Some typical matches are an elderly couple offering living space in exchange for chores, companionship and security or a family offering a room in exchange for babysitting, said Bruinooge.

The "homeseekers" are asked to perform about 10 to 15 hours a week of household chores ranging from cooking to carpentry.

Bruinooge said before applicants are allowed to move in, they and the houseowners are put through an extensive screening process which seeks to put only those who are thought to be compatible together.

"The people often become like part of the family because there is a much higher level of involvement that's not very typical of a roommate situation," Bruinooge said.

There are a large number of applicants, though only a small number are actually placed in homes.

"The last thing we want to do is force a bad situation," Bruinooge said. "We do our best to put together parties we feel will get along well."

In rare cases of conflict, the placement coordinators act as arbitrators. According to Bruinooge, the mediation sessions are often successful as he and his fellow coordinators have been given training for these situations as prerequisites for their line of work.

As with most departments on campus, budget cuts have taken their toll on the HomeSharing program. Bruinooge's transportation budget has been cut, so getting a first-hand look at the prospective living space has become much more difficult.

Much of the funding provided by the University itself is gone and the grants the program receives have not grown any larger.

Consequently, the remainder of the costs have fallen to the applicants. The elderly and those in cases of hardship usually have their fees waived.

Overall, the situation has become a quiet success and is looking to grow, Bruinooge said.

Anyone interested in participating on either end of the "homeprovider" or "homeseeker" relationship should contact the HomeSharing Office.

ISO

continued from page 1

must be overthrown," said Holes. "We're talking about the vast majority of society who create wealth but have no control over how it's distributed."

Holes said the organization is increasing its recruiting efforts on college campuses across the country as well as in factories, where they are trying to distribute and sell larger numbers of their newspaper, Socialist Worker.

Last night ISO member Kevin Murphy told the meeting that the elections in the United States almost always serve the needs of the wealthy and powerful because usually only the "elite" are able organize and run a viable political campaign.

"Elections are a passive form of changing society," said Murphy.

This semester the ISO has organized a petition drive to protest the shooting death of Springfield resident Benjamin Schoolfield by a Springfield police officer earlier this year.

Schoolfield, an African-American, was shot and killed while unarmed by a Springfield police officer after a vehicle he was driving was reported stolen.

A grand jury in Springfield failed to hand up an indictment to the officer, who allegedly shot Schoolfield accidentally; the ISO plans to use the incident as the basis for an educational forum on police violence later this year, according to ISO member Wayne Standley.

Yes, it's always a fine day for a barbeque. Ahh nothing like the hot coals to cause a man to break down in a fit of hysterical crying. "WHY DIDN'T I LISTEN TO MY MOTHER AND BECOME A DOG GROOMER!!!!"
COLLEGIAN
NEVER TOO LATE TO CHANGE

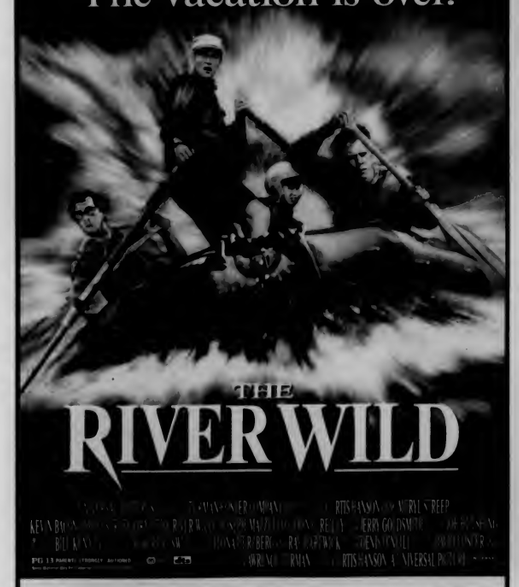
4 Seasons
Rt. 9 Hadley • 584-8174
Beer • Wine • Kegs • Ice
Keg of the Week
1/2 BBL ICEHOUSE
$36.99 +dep

R&P Liquors
Convenient to The Boulders & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street
South Amherst

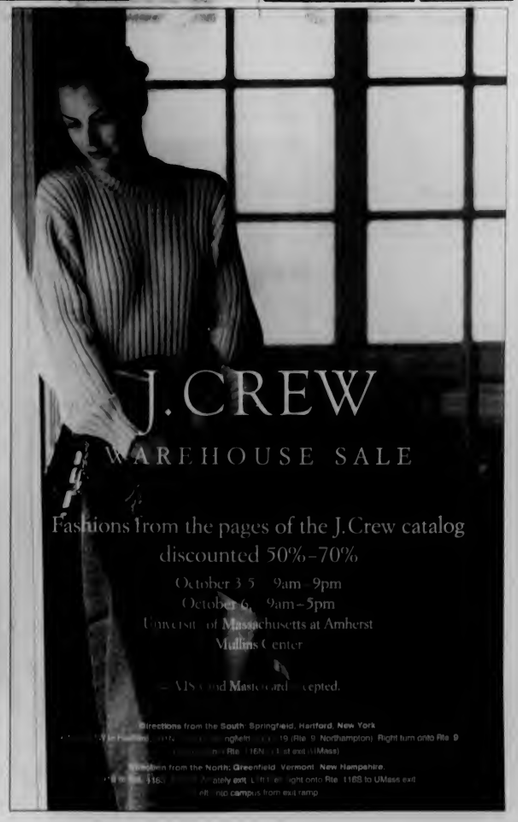
PANDA EAST
CHINESE RE & JAPANESE RESTAURANT

"Best Chinese food in the Valley"
Lunch Special Daily Start at $3.95
AMHERST 103 N. PLEASANT STREET, AMHERST, MA. 01002
TEL: (413) 256-8923, 256-8924

FROM THE DIRECTOR OF "THE HAND THAT ROCKS THE CRADLE"
MERYL STREEP · KEVIN BACON · DAVID STRATHAIRN
The vacation is over.



THE RIVER WILD
PG-13
OPENS FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 30TH
AT A THEATRE NEAR YOU.



J.CREW
WAREHOUSE SALE
Fashions from the pages of the J.Crew catalog discounted 50%-70%
October 3-5 9am-9pm
October 6 9am-5pm
University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Mullins Center
VISA and MasterCard accepted.
Directions from the South: Springfield, Hartford, New York
(Rte 9 Northampton) Right turn onto Rte 9
Rte 116N (1st exit UMass)
Directions from the North: Greenfield, Vermont, New Hampshire
Rte 116 Approximately exit Left at light onto Rte 116S to UMass exit campus from exit ramp

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Andrew Ferguson Business Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Evelyn A. Delerme Multicultural Affairs Editor Mary Peppas Classified Advertising
Kelly Spang News Editor Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Longing for dog days of summer

I've had enough. I'm sick of going to classes, waiting in lines, scrounging enough empty beer cans to buy a slice at Antonio's, and working for meager wages. I'm tired of doing all the trivial things you have to do as part of being a human being. These are the things we all do, but things I could happily live without.

And that is why I want to be a dog.

Let's face it — dogs use us to lead a better life than any other animal. They are fed on a regular basis (for free), they really have no responsibilities aside from performing menial tasks such as laying down and rolling over for treats, and they can get a belly rub just about whenever they please.

I wouldn't want to be a cat. Cats seem to have some kind of chip on their shoulder that makes them always appear to be pissed off at something or another. The only cool things about being a cat are that people will get you stoned on catnip and that you can take out small, defenseless animals by pouncing on them.

David Copeland

Quite simply, dogs are cool, much cooler than cats. There must be no greater power than being able to walk up to a complete stranger and have them start petting you as if you were lifelong friends. Imagine what would happen if you walked up to someone you had never seen before and you started petting them ferociously. More than likely you would get smacked.

There are, of course, drawbacks to being a dog. I don't think I would like being spayed or neutered too much, just because I associate large quantities of pain with any kind of operation performed on the genitalia. I also don't think I would like being taken to the vet for what I thought was a normal paycheck and then being put to sleep.

Still, the advantages outweigh the disadvantages. Most dogs are fed on a regular basis, which doesn't happen to me and my roommates too often. Usually, we are desperately trying to scrounge enough loose change from the couch to buy a loaf of bread, or we are going to Stop & Shop to steal a package of individually wrapped slices of American cheese. Not only is this degrading, but it is also unfair to the people who own that food conglomerate.

Dogs only have to learn how to say one word, and that is "woof." They can express countless desires just by changing the pronunciation of the one word they speak. For example, "woof-woof!" means, "I'm happy, come play with me," whereas "wooooof!" means "I'm pissed off, leave me alone."

Whether they have been fixed or not, dogs have sex a lot. And when dogs have sex, all of their friends come to watch. There is no shame amongst man's best friends. As two dogs get it on, first sniffing each others private parts and then commencing with "doggie style," a group of other dogs will gather around to cheer the participants on. "Woof! Woof!" the other dogs cheer.

And I like the mating habits of dogs. They do not get scorned for "sleeping around." They merely find a dog they like (call it puppy love), sniff their genitalia, and bang, they have sex. I have spent far too much time making a fool of myself at bars and parties to not realize that this is a much easier version of courtship.

I told one of my friends that I wanted to be a dog. Obviously concerned, he tried in vain to talk me out of this abnormal obsession. His final argument was that if I were a dog I could no longer get drunk.

This is not true. We once fed beer to my friend Jen's dog, Casey. Casey is a great dog. He only has one eye, but he still performs his dog duties to a level above and beyond the call of duty. Anyway, Casey seemed to enjoy the two or three Miller Lites we poured into his bowl. After lapping them down, Casey sprinted around the house about a dozen times, and then he passed out for the night. Casey doesn't even have to worry about beer goggling, because as far as I can tell, there are not too many ugly dogs (although Casey isn't too much of a looker with his left eye sewn shut).

I tell you, there can't be too many things better than being a dog. Call me crazy, but I'd do anything to strut around on four legs, naked and tail wagging for the rest of my life. As far is being human is concerned, I say "WOOOOOF!"

David Copeland is a Collegian staff member.

Letters to the Editor

Response to gun control argument

To the editor:

I am writing this letter to respond to the continual attacks on legal firearm ownership which regularly appear in your paper. I've legally owned registered firearms for over 18 years. At an early age I was taught that guns are lethal weapons which loaded or unloaded should never even be pointed at a person. However the media continually portrays these weapons as toys with even less thought about the examples they are setting. Gun play is a constant theme on network T.V. which seldom deals with the harsh realities of such behavior. For instance how many youngsters have been shot after emulating T.V. stars playing Russian roulette? Have you ever seen a program, deal with the proper and safe handling of firearms? Your own paper sets such bad examples.

Remember the stereotype 50's housewife "I shot my dog, I shot my husband, but I did it for you my dear Collegian." Why don't you show the husband and the dog in your ad? Would this reality check be offensive to your viewers? Your ad is offensive to me.

A recent editorial calls for mandatory sentencing for firearms offenders. This state has had a law since 1975 calling for one year's mandatory jail terms for just possession of firearms without a firearms identification card.

I regularly read of people arrested for such offenses but no one ever seems to be convicted. (i.e. continued without a finding for one year.) If the courts don't enforce current laws what good will new ones do? I have no problems with background checks or waiting periods to buy firearms as there are some people who should not own guns.

Lastly I would like to say that main use of firearms is hunting. I take no joy in killing and don't shoot things I don't eat. You won't find me in the woods, Jack Daniels and Uzi in hand, shooting chickadees. If people are truly interested in animal rights how about protesting the next time prime wildlife habitat is developed by Wal-Mart or blazed barrento build condos? Give me a call I'll help protest.

George Trunan
Belchertown

Racism pervades "Happy Valley"

To the editor:

I detected an error in yesterday's lead story,"Police claim reported racial attack a hoax." The article referred to a 13- year-old Black Muslim student at Amherst Junior High School and racist incidents she had reported to school and community authorities.

There was no hoax.

She might have just forgotten some names.

These names are Sojourner Truth, Leonard Peltier, Rosa Parks, Cesar Chavez, Bell Hooks and many, many others. It wasn't just the racist notes at Amherst Jr. High School, but a mountain of paper that could bury the whole school; it wasn't a scarf choking just the one student, but a vast, strong noose with a tight grip on the globe.

I have Native American heritage but my skin is very pale. I don't want to admit that racism exists in Amherst and that I contribute to it, even by my inaction. When I hear the student was "making up" the events, I feel relieved. I want to press charges. I want to be let off the hook. In doing so, I ignore the mountain of paper and the world-sized handkerchief and all those other victims of racist hatred and oppression in the past and every day today. I am sheltered from this racism by my isolation and I'd rather stay that way.

I urge white people to not be distracted from the real issue —racism — is alive and well in the Happy Valley. The students' stories served as a good wake-up call for whites here.

Stay awake.

Ben Zeman
Belchertown

MASSPIRG reveals semester plans

To the editor:

As you may know, MASSPIRG (Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group) is a statewide, student directed environmental and consumer group, with 27 college chapters. By voting to pool their resources through a waivable fee, students are able to hire a professional staff to help coordinate their efforts on these public interest issues.

Last summer, special interests ar the state legislature acted to elimina the rights of students to form an fund groups like MASSPIRG on car pus. Students are now prohibited f form and fund these groups on car pus, even if they voted to do so! S this semester, we are building a car pus-wide coalition to win back tho rights and repeal the anti-student la that was passed last summer. Or first action is to register 6,000 st dents to vote here at UMass, 30,0 statewide. We will then educate at mobilize these students and the re of the state to vote no on Question repealing the anti-student law c November 8, 1994.

In addition we will be continuit our work on environmental issue like the endangered species campaig and the hunger and homelessne campaign.

I encourage everyone to g involved if you're concerned abo these issues. If you have any que tions stop by our office, 423-B in t Student Union or call us 545-0199.

Julia L
Co-ch

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

THE MAN FROM WAL-MART TRIED A DIFFERENT TACK
YOU KNOW, FOLKS, YOU ALL HAVE BEEN FOCUSING ON THE DOWNSIDE OF WAL-MART...
BUT THERE'S A LOT OF GOOD NEWS ABOUT WAL-MART AS WELL! FOR STARTERS, NO MORE LONG TRIPS TO TULSA FOR BASIC NECESSITIES!
THEN THERE'S ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT! PEOPLE WILL BE COMING INTO THIS AREA TO SPEND MONEY FROM AS FAR AWAY AS DENISON AND WICHITA FALLS!
HOLD IT! YOU'RE BRINGING TEXAS TRASH IN HERE?
OH, GOSH! WHAT IS THIS, SOME SORT OF FRIENDLY RIVALRY?
GB Trudeau

Opinion/Editorial

IF WE SEE FARTHER IT IS BECAUSE WE STAND ON THE SHOULDERS OF OTHERS CARTER
NOBEL PEACE PRIZE
MAAN, CAN I TURN THE OTHER CHEEK NOW?

Harassment will not just go away

This article is going out to all the fellas. The issue is sexual harassment. It's gone too far, it's against the law, and it's a disgrace to humanity. But it seems that there are still some guys out there that fell short of the evolution. This issue should not be taken lightly, and it's not something to joke about with your buddies. Everybody hates to be taken advantage of, even just a little. It hurts. Think about it, sexual harassment is one of the ultimate ways to hurt and destroy an individual.

Let's start off with verbal harassment. I'll present you with a true story. A few years ago, I worked at Papa Gino's. One day, I was in the backroom cutting onions and there were two other guys washing pans. These two guys were talking about what typical guys would talk about when they think there are no females around — girls. But what started out as a harmless discussion over who are the two prettiest girls at Papa Gino's turned into a disgusting conversation over what they'd like to do with the two prettiest girls. The conversation became very specific and the names of the two prettiest girls were used. These guys had quite an imagination, it's too bad they couldn't utilize it in a more proper manner. The guys tried to get me into their discussion of sexual fantasies, but I refused. Good thing for me because the two girls that they were fantasizing about overheard the whole conversation.

David K. Chan

Needless to say, these guys got quite a mouthful from the girls. Soon after, the girls quit. This is a very sad story, but it's true and it's common.

As a guy, I know what it's like. When you're with your buddies, you have to be macho and funny. If you show any respect for a female, you would probably be called a feminist or a homosexual (or other things related to homosexuality). What I'm saying is, keep your fantasies to yourself. Words can really hurt and not everybody wants to hear them.

Next, when a woman says "No," she means "No." You just have to accept it. So what if she doesn't want you. Swallow your pride and suck it in. She could be right, maybe you are a jerk. The chief thing that I don't understand is why someone would actually go through with physically abusing someone. How can someone possess such a twisted mind? Why would someone actually want to do such a sick and hurtful act? Some guys actually feel no guilt about it. Unfortunately, I've met some guys like that and, in my opinion, they're sick.

In case some of you guys didn't know, what you see in pornographic movies is not the real world. The girls that you see in those movies are paid to do what they do and say what they say. It's a movie. It's not real.

Guys, you have to take the "No." That way, nobody gets hurt and you're actually practicing safe sex. It's bad enough that the lack of people who practice safe sex is an issue too.

It's a real shame that date rape has to be a major issue on college campuses. It's gone too far. Campuses already have to deal with tuition hikes and overcrowded classrooms.

Many people think that sexual harassment comes from the desire for power. Some men want the feeling of power so they resort to abusing a woman. Well, they got it. Many women are reluctant to report to officials because of embarrassment and fear of reprisals, according to an article in the September 26th issue of U.S. News & World Report.

Victims of rape feel embarrassed and exposed. To fight back this power trip, women should take action. If more and more crimes are reported, then maybe a potential rapist would think twice about going through with his desired actions.

Guys, it's time to shape up. This has nothing to do with the feminist movement. The only thing I'm pleading for is basic humanity. This problem is NOT inevitable. It's up to you to change your attitude.

If you disagree with what I've just said, you can call me whatever you want. But don't call me a rapist.

David K. Chan is a Collegian columnist.

The insignificance of twenty–something

I celebrated my 22nd birthday last week. Or I should say, I turned 22 last week. "Celebrate" is much too strong of a word. I cannot think of a birthday in recent memory which carried less significance.

Caleb Cochran

I had no enthusiasm in the days leading up to my most recent birthday. Usually, I at least know what day of the week my birthday will fall on a few weeks in advance. Not this year. I even told one of my friends that I thought it was on Thursday. Turns out it was Wednesday. I was just completely apathetic about the whole thing.

After the day came and went with little fanfare, I began to try and analyze why the big 2–2 was such a bust. Part of the reason, I think, is that 21 is such an event. Birthdays 17 and up are simply tally marks on the way to the big day. I guess 22 was bound to be anticlimactic.

But even the birthdays before the countdown to 21 held much more significance than 22. I'll show you what I mean.

Age one is a big deal. I mean, before that, your age was referred to in months. But, unless you have an unusually good memory, recollections of this first birthday have long since faded. Which brings us to...

Age seven. I didn't realize the significance of this one until my grandfather sat me down and explained to me (has seven was "the age of reason." This concept was a bit lost on me at age seven. Contrary to what my grandfather told me, seven was not the age of anything special. I was too busy getting my ass beat in the daily sandbox boxing matches at school to know anything about reason.

Age 10. Double digits. I remember having a big conversation with one of my elementary school buds about the significance of this birthday. He discovered that double digits didn't make him feel any cooler than he did at age nine. Nonetheless, a major landmark.

The next birthday of note was 13. I turned 13 earlier than most of my classmates, in September of seventh grade. Thirteen was the age when I hung around with a bunch of really cool kids, one of whom stole my Kudos bar at lunch in exchange for the privilege to sit at his lunch table. Good deal, huh?

Sixteen. The coveted driver's license is finally within reach. Six weeks, two days a week in driver's ed class, not counting driving hours, just for the privilege of getting the license at 16 and a half instead of 17. Was it worth it? Absolutely. Those driving hours were pretty damn monotonous, though. How many three-point turns have I made in my life since the days of driver's ed? Not many. They're usually eight or nine point turns. I'm not the best ambassador for driver's ed class, I know. I don't hold the steering wheel at three o'clock and nine o' clock, either. My teacher would be very disappointed.

17 is not a big birthday in itself, but It is exciting because it serves as precursor to 18. The dim glow of 21 is also visible in the distant future.

I remember my 18th birthday well. We gathered at the home of one of my good friends and watched "The Shining." My friends pitched in and bought me Led Zeppelin's Physical Graffiti on CD. My love of Robert Plant has since faded, but this was a good birthday regardless.

I can't remember a thing about my 19th birthday.

Twenty was significant because it marked the end of the teenage years. As far as leaping into adulthood or some garbage like that, however, I don't buy it. I was just depressed because I still had another year to go before turning 21.

Turning 21 was a bittersweet experience, to say the least. I spent it in South Carolina, where I had yet to meet many friends. My roommate was not yet 21, so the big day consisted of walking down to the local Food Lion and picking up a six-pack of Rolling Rock. Hey, don't knock it if you haven't tried it.

That about wraps it up. Now I'm 22. Big whoop. I haven't had matching digits since age 11. Let's hope 33 brings this much satisfaction.

Caleb Cochran is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please keep your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance. If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only) and all letters to the Ed/Op page are the property of the Collegian.

Arts & Living

The Specials deliver roots of ska to Noho

By Matthew Justin Faerber
Collegian Staff

Monday night Oct. 3, Pearl Street will be hosting an all ska triple-bill headlined by legendary 2-Tone recording artists, The Specials, who have been trend setters in the development of ska music for over a decade.

The band formed fifteen years ago in Coventry, England and almost immediately ignited dance halls across Europe and America with their energetic mix of traditional Jamaican Ska and Dub Reggae.

Along with kindred spirits such as Madness and The Selecter, The Specials condemned Neo–Nazis and encouraged, through example, a multi–racial attitude which is still the backbone of ska music today.

Recently ska has experienced something of a resurgence in popularity due, in part, to the success of bands like The Mighty Mighty Bosstones and Fishbone.

Fans should not forget, though, that it was The Specials and their contemporaries that got the whole movement started.

Even though they have been at it a for a long time, the band's live show has kept audiences skanking to the beat for years and shows no signs of slowing.

Neville Staples, Reddy Byers, Lynual Golding, and Horace "Gentleman" Panter, four members of the original line–up, have added a few new faces in order to put together what should be one of the best dance–oriented tours of the year.

Fellow ska heroes Let's Go Bowling will also be performing as will Massachusetts' own S.M.A. who were most impressive last semester when they opened for The Toasters.

Monday night should be a rare opportunity for local ska fans, as well as those who might not be very familiar with the scene, to check out the past, present and future of the genre all in one night while dancing themselves senseless in the process.

The Specials will play Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton this coming Monday, Oct. 3rd. The show is 18+. The doors will open at 8:00 p.m.

COURTESY THE SPECIALS

The Specials will play Pearl St. on Monday.

Discount theaters offering a cheaper look at flicks

By John Horn
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Would you pay more than $7 for Terminal Velocity to find out if Charlie Sheen finally has learned to act? Is it worth the price of a steak sandwich to witness yet another sequel of The Karate Kid?

More and more moviegoers are reaching the inevitable conclusion: No matter how you figure, some movies aren't worth more than the change underneath the sofa cushions.

The operators of discount theaters agree.

From Florida to New York to California, a new generation of low-cost movie houses are opening their doors, most charging $2 or less. Their featured attractions range from critical bombs to Academy Award-winning blockbusters, and sometimes the popcorn's on special, too.

The one drawback: a long wait. Most movies don't hit discount theaters until more than two months after their first-run debut. Some of the new discount theaters are refurbished first-run houses, while a few leading exhibitors are building discount complexes from the ground up.

The hallmarks of the discount theater visit used to be dirty, tar-pit like floors and seats so threadbare even the Salvation Army wouldn't touch them. These days, however, the accommodations are often first class — some discount theaters now have sound systems rivaling the fanciest showcase theaters.

"Discount theaters really have a different feel now — and the audience is beginning to rediscover them," says Jack Clark, president of the National Association of Discount Theaters. "Some of them are still dumps, but most of them are state of the art."

There are approximately 25,000 movie screens in North America. Although there are no official statistics, as many as 2,000 charge discounted admissions to all shows.

Film fans have three different reasons to like the cheap seats. First, a night at the movies can be prohibitively expensive. A cash-strapped family of four that will have to pay $20 for The Little Rascals can postpone the trip a few weeks and see it in a discount house for as little as $6 total.

Second, some movies simply aren't worth full fare. Forrest Gump may be a value at $6 but North at the same price is a rip-off. Why pay for a diamond when you're getting cubic zirconium?

Third, it's often better to watch a movie in a theater than on home video. A discount theater isn't any more expensive than a rental at the local Blockbuster, and the big-screen experience can't be matched by a living-room Magnavox. That's probably why the visually stunning Jurassic Park claims the record for all-time discount theater gross with nearly $25 million.

Discount theaters can give fresh life to tired releases. In the especially competitive and just-concluded summer season less-than-perfect films quickly were bumped from first-run screens. Those few who actually wanted to see City Slickers 2 in June and missed it could catch it in September and save money in the process.

Like Jurassic Park, there are some movies that play much better in a theater than on television, explaining the current success of Speed and Maverick at the so-called "dollar houses."

The romantic comedy Four Weddings and a Funeral also performed particularly well at discount chains, even though it already was available on home video.

"That was a pleasant surprise for us," says Jim McKenna, whose SuperSaver Cinemas has nearly 200 discount screens nationwide. "I knew the film would do well in California, but it also did well in Texas and Colorado."

While SuperSaver and Cinemark Theatres are building new discount theaters, Cineplex Odeon successfully has converted some underperforming first-run venues to dollar houses.

Fall conference offers new writers' workshops

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

The National Writers Union will host its eighth annual Fall Writers Conference on Saturday, Oct. 1. It will be held at the School of Management by the University of Massachusetts Division of Continuing Education.

The one–day conference is aimed at sharpening existing writing skills, creative talents, and improving professional skills. The conference wants to target writers at all levels, from full–time freelancers to part–time writers and beginners.

The schedule will encompass ten workshops and panel discussions led by successful writers and editors from the Valley and beyond. The sessions will be geared towards helping writers improve creative and business skills, offer tips on varied writing markets, and identify opportunities and pitfalls as publishing joins the world of high technology.

Specific genres will also be covered. Travel writing, food, cookbooks, mystery, suspense and romance novels are just some of the styles that will be touched upon. Tips on breaking into markets for short fiction, nonfiction and poetry, and approaches to self-publishing your own work will also be addressed. Two special workshops will divulge the ins and outs of screenwriting for film, television, educational video and the humor in writing and in life.

Suzanne C. Gordon, a noted writer on contemporary social issue themes, will be the keynote speaker for the conference. Author of the recent Prisoners of Men's Dreams: Striking Out for a New Feminine Future, Gordon is currently working on a book about health care issues.

The National Writers Union is a 12–year old association of freelance writers, in conjunction with the Union of American Writers. The union works to improve rates and contract terms nationally and defends writers in legal disputes, with publishers. The Western Massachusetts chapter represents approximately 100 area writers.

Fees for the conference are as follows: $15 for National Writers Union members and students, and $35 for non– members; $5 more if you're registering at the door. For further information call 545–0474.

Multibands celebrates 25th year

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

The 20th Annual Multiband extravaganza will once again dazzle the Pioneer Valley. 500 performers from the UMass Departments of Music and Dance will participate on Friday September 30th in the Mullins Center. The Multiband Pops for years have been held in the Fine Arts Center is moving to the Mullins due to the historical date.

"We have had sold–out houses for Multiband Pops for several years now. Last year, because of space, we had to turn individuals away," says Department Chair Ernest May. "This year, we expected to attract an even larger and more regional audience to this very exciting event."

New elements will be added to the show in order to enhance the audience's viewing and listening pleasure. Taking advantage of the Mullins Center's excellent resources, the show will include new advances in lighting and visuals to take the Multiband experience to a new level. Changes in the shape, color and pattern of the lights will add to the whole experience and give it a more professional edge.

The format has also been changed. Ensembles will play from various locations in the Mullins. Excitement will be heightened because the audience won't know what will be spotlighted next. The evening is fast paced and presentations are seamless, without time for applause between the performances of one ensemble and the next.

The various performances will include the UMass Marching Band, Percussion Ensemble, University Dancers, University Jazz Ensemble, UMass Marimbas, Vocal Jazz & African–American Music Ensemble, and the Wind Ensemble & Symphony Band.

All seats for the performance at 8pm are reserved. Early purchase will ensure good seating. Tickets are $12 general public, $9 seniors, children 16 & under and students, $8 groups of 15 or more, $3 UMass students. Tickets are available at the Mullins Center Box Office (545–0505).

STARTS OCT. 3
10-Week Adult Evening Dance Programs
AMHERST BALLET CENTRE
549-1555
29 Strong St., Amherst
•Beg. Ballet (Mon - Wed)
•Intermediate Ballet (Tues - Thurs)
•Martha Graham Modern Technique (Mon)

August the First ❖ Beads
❖ Jewlery Supplies
❖ Finished Jewlery
44 Main Street, Amherst · 256-0276
22 Main St, Northampton · 586-7182
20% off until Oct. 3 with this Ad

BOOK SALE
ON UMASS CAMPUS
Location: Campus Center Concourse.
Dates: Oct. 3, 17, 24, 31 - 9:30 to 4 p.m.
AFROBOOKS
Specializing in Multicultural Books and Materials. Children's books, greeting cards, posters, and paintings will be available.

Multiband POPS
Friday, September 30
8 p.m. at the
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
TICKETS:
$12 General Public
$9 Senior Citizens
Children 16 & Under
& Students
$8 Groups of 15 or more
$3 UMass Students
20th Annual Spectacular Showcase of 500 Performers
Minuteman Marching Band • Jazz Ensembles
• Wind Ensembles • Dances & More
Co-Sponsored By:
Advocate
CNN
WTTT 1490
DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
WHCN
Tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office and, for an additional cost at all Ticketmaster Locations and by the phone. (413) 733-2500

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
Miller $10.99
Jack Daniels $11.99
Bud $3.99 /six
Poland Spring Gin $9.99
Molson Golden $6.99
Captain Morgan Coconut Rum $7.99 With Free Mug
Sierra Nevada $3.99 /six
Absolut Citron $13.99
Abita Turbo Dog $5.49 /six
Hot Dam $6.69
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt.9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt.9E
VISA - MASTERCARD - DISCOVER Accepted

JHP Northampton Center for the Arts present
TORI AMOS
WITH SPECIAL GUEST PETER STUART
THUR OCT 20 • 8PM
John M. Greene Hall, Smith College
Northampton
All seats $19.50 except...
Make a contribution of $30.00 or greater to The Center for the Arts and receive preferred orchestra seating. For these seats only call The Center for the Arts at 584-7327 Mon-Sat 10-4pm
ALL TIX NORTHAMPTON BOX OFFICE 150 MAIN ST.
413-586-8686 • 800-THE TICK

FAT TRAX
A SNOWBOARD SHOP.

1st Place ADVOCATE • BEST OF SPRINGFIELD READERS POLL 1994

Thank You For Voting Us Your Favorite Snowboard Shop in the Valley!

COMPLETE SNOWBOARD TUNE-UP
Reg. $20.00 ONLY $9.99 with coupon
Expires 10/30/94
Not valid with any other Discount

FAT TRAX T-SHIRT
$6.00 with this coupon
Expires 10/30/94
Not valid with any other Discount

TUES - FRI NOON -8PM • SAT 10-5
SUN NOON-5
RTS EASTHAMPTON, MA 413 586-8766

Minutemaniacs

The Minutemaniacs, UMass' own student athletic booster club, is back for the '94-'95 season!

UMass

New Member Registration

will be held at UMass Women's Volleyball vs. Rhode Island

ONLY $25 TO JOIN

October 4, 1994 7:00 P.M. Curry Hicks Cage

Valid U Mass Student ID and check or cash must be presented upon registration.

PLEASE NOTE
No lines will be allowed to be formed before 6:45 P.M. or a lottery system will be used to determine new members.

Benefits include:
- Advance Ticket Pickup
- Minutemaniac T-shirt
- Game Receptions
- "The Maniac" Newsletter
- Membership Card

GOOD LUCK TO THE UMASS FOOTBALL TEAM! FROM

THE TOC

SPORTS BAR & LOUNGE
11th FLOOR CAMPUS CENTER
MON. - FRI. 11:30 A.M. - 1:00 A.M.
SATURDAY 4:00 P.M. - 1:00 A.M.

SATURDAY OCTOBER 1st
HOMECOMING!
THE ART STEELE BLUES BAND!
AT
THE TOC
11th FLOOR CAMPUS CENTER
9:00 p.m. NO COVER!
Positive ID required

Salem Cross Inn
Food & Drink

Chowder of the Sea
"A Speciality"
Fireplace Roasting

Ask about our Home Coming Special
Complete Dinner $12.95
After the Game

Rt. 9 East, 30 minutes to West Brookfield
Tuesday ~ Friday 11:30am - 9pm, Early Bird Until 6:15pm
Saturday 5pm - 10pm ~ Sunday Noon - 8pm
Reservations Suggested (508) 867-2345

Anthony's
Northeast's #1 Adult Entertainment Club

18+ Special Seating, Positive ID Required

UPCOMING FEATURES
TORI WELLS
HYAPATIA LEE
BARBI BRIDGES
ALEX BRIDGES
ALEX TAYLOR
RAQUEL DARIEN

MON-WED 4pm-2am
THURS-SAT 12pm -2am
CLOSED SUNDAY

500 New Ludlow Rd., South Hadley
Exit 5 MA Pike to 33 North. Take right at Jiffy Lube, 1/2 mile on left.
(413) 536-0502

SUPERIOR PIZZERIA

NEW ITEMS
Now Featuring
Real Italian Food at its BEST!
Cannoli & Italian Pastries and Cheesburg Grinders
Wednesday Special
Calzones $3.25
- Tortellini Dinners
- Chocolate Pizza
- Chicken Pizza
- Sicilian Pizza

$2.25 OFF Any Large 2 Item Pizza
$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$2.25 OFF Any Large 2 Item Pizza
$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$2.00 OFF Any Large 1 Item Pizza
$2.00 OFF Any Large 1 Item Pizza

one coupon per order • coupon cannot be combined with other offers

17 Montague Rd. Amherst
549-0626

Free Delivery 7 days
11:30am - 2am

HOMECOMING UM '94

Rosters & Lineups

University of Massachusetts

Offense

Pos.	No.	Player	Yr.	Ht.	Wt.
WR-	45	Matt Read	Sr.	6-0	180
	5	Darryl Thomas	So.	5-10	183
LT-	79	Dan Markowski	So.	6-6	300
	53	Lou Brandt	Jr.	6-2	265
LG-	73	Mark Zych	So.	6-3	267
	61	Keith Durden	RF	6-2	298
C-	77	Mark Shalala	So.	6-1	283
	66	Matthew Alegi	Fr.	6-2	279
RG-	[illegible]	Tinker	Sr.	6-2	279
	[illegible]	[illegible]	Jr.	6-1	268
RT-	[illegible]	[illegible]	Sr.	6-4	280
	[illegible]	[illegible]	RF	6-2	273
TE-	80	[illegible]	Sr.	6-3	242
	84	[illegible]	So.	6-4	228
TB-	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	181
	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	173
FB-	[illegible]	[illegible]	Jr.	5-10	202
	[illegible]	[illegible]ington	So.	5-9	200
QB-	[illegible]	Andrew McNeilly	Jr.	6-2	208
	[illegible]	Anthony Catterton	Fr.	5-11	181
WR-	23	Kevin Bourgoin	Jr.	6-1	181
	81	Zach Clark	So.	6-1	177

Special Teams

PK/KO-	14	Eric Oke	So.	5-10	213
	22	Justin Riemer	So.	5-11	192
KR-	3	Breon Parker	Jr.	5-10	183
	21	Tony Williams	Sr.	5-10	178
HLD-	45	Matt Read	Sr.	6-0	180
	12	Jason Tudryn	Jr.	6-1	195

Defense

DE-	92	Brian Corcoran	Sr.	6-2	248
	84	Jeron Alston	RF	6-0	228
DT-	51	Silas Burke	Sr.	6-1	259
	49	David Dakin	Jr.	6-1	244
DT-	97	Ben Albert	Sr.	6-1	246
	90	Mike Batelli	RF	6-2	231
DE-	91	Vernard Fennell	Jr.	6-5	247
	52	Ken Bello	Jr.	6-0	217
OLB-	56	Trejo Rust	Jr.	6-3	219
	85	Mike Dawson	RF	6-2	230
ILB-	34	MikeValentino	So.	5-11	225
	57	Phil Curtin	Sr.	6-1	223
OLB-	25	Roger Kotlarz	Sr.	6-1	205
	46	Brett Hammond	Jr.	6-0	205
CB-	3	Breon Parker	Jr.	5-10	183
	32	Alex Korentis	Jr.	5-8	174
SS-	29	Jason Mumford	Jr.	5-9	191
	2	Bryan Mooney	So.	5-9	177
FS-	12	Jason Tudryn	Jr.	6-1	195
	41	Tony Gugliuzza	Jr.	5-8	169
CB-	21	Tony Williams	Sr.	5-10	178
	4	Kory Blackwell	So.	5-11	167

Special Teams

P-	22	Justin Riemer	So.	5-11	192
	14	Eric Oke	So.	5-10	213
LS-	97	Ben Albert	Sr.	6-1	246
	46	Brett Hammond	Jr.	6-0	205
PR-	3	Breon Parker	Jr.	5-10	183
	21	Tony Williams	Sr.	5-10	178
SS-	3	Chris Lawson	So.	5-11	180
	29	David Pope	Sr.	5-11	190
FS-	17	Dan Sullivan	Sr.	5-11	190
	27	Devon London	Fr.	6-0	175
CB-	22	Mark Swistak	Jr.	5-8	175
	24	Charod Williams	Fr.	5-9	174

1994 UMass Schedule & Results

Sept. 10 at Richmond	14-14L	Oct. 22 at Delaware	1:00p.m.
Sept. 17 at Holy Cross	[illegible]	Oct. 29 [illegible]	1:30p.m. (Parents' Day)
Sept. 24 MAINE*	20-14W (Band Day)	Nov. 5 NORTHEASTERN*	12:30p.m.
Oct. 1 RHODE ISLAND*	1:00p.m. (Homecoming)	Nov. 12 YOUNGSTOWN ST.	12:30p.m.
Oct. 8 at New Hampshire*	12:30p.m.	Nov. 19 CONNECTICUT*	12:30p.m.
Oct. 15 at William & Mary*	1:00p.m.	* Yankee Conference Game HOME GAMES IN CAPS

University of Rhode Island

Offense

Pos.	No.	Player	Yr.	Ht.	Wt.
WR-	1	Cy Butler	So.	5-7	165
	13	Alonzo Boyd	So.	5-8	165
LT-	72	Chris Kenneally	Jr.	6-7	260
	77	Vincent Ceraso	Fr.	6-6	255
LG-	78	Tod Short	Sr.	6-5	295
	74	Frank Romano	Fr.	6-2	245
C-	66	Greg Fournier	Sr.	6-3	282
	71	Greg Gay	So.	6-2	265
RG-	62	Nelson Martin	Fr.	6-3	265
	64	Devan [illegible]		6-2	285
RT-	76	Mike Hanson		6-6	282
	68	Andy Gresh	So.	6-4	298
TE-	48	Frank Marcella	Sr.	6-3	255
	88	Kris Kelly	Jr.	6-3	230
WR-	25	Bobby Apgar	So.	6-0	175
	11	Shawn Morgan	Sr.	5-9	170
QB-	7	Chris [illegible]	So.	6-3	205
	19	Tony Sutherland		6-0	180
FB-	2	Kevin Quinn	Sr.	6-0	220
	38	James Krause	Jr.	6-0	210
TB-	33	Carmello Cruz	Fr.	5-11	215
	34	Samuel Poole	So.	5-10	173

Special Teams

PK/KO-	98	Skip Thomas	So.	5-11	185
	99	Michael Viveiros	Fr.	6-0	205
HLD-	17	Dan Sullivan	Sr.	5-11	190
KR-	22	Mark Swistak	Jr.	5-8	175
	1	Cy Butler	So.	5-7	165

Defense

LE-	86	Eric Jenkins	Sr.	6-6	245
	90	Paul Wortley	Fr.	6-5	230
LT-	52	Will Santi	So.	6-0	275
	95	Jesse Clark	Fr.	6-2	230
RT-	60	Brian Smith	Jr.	6-4	245
	94	Robert McGoodwin	Fr.	6-4	230
RE-	95	Jesse Clark	Fr.	6-2	230
	57	Rashidi Lewis	Fr.	6-2	211
WLB-	58	Lou D'Agostino	Jr.	6-0	230
	10	Troy Rothmann	Sr.	6-1	200
LB-	55	LaJhon Jones	Fr.	6-3	230
	44	Rob Wondolowski	So.	6-0	227
SLB-	30	Lucien Belanger	So.	5-11	218
	47	Jared Elwell	Fr.	6-1	215
CB-	8	Shundell Hicks	Sr.	5-7	160
	28	Tredell Dorsey	Fr.	6-0	180
SS-	3	Chris Lawson	So.	5-11	180
	29	David Pope	Sr.	5-11	190
FS-	17	Dan Sullivan	Sr.	5-11	190
	27	Devon London	Fr.	6-0	175
CB-	22	Mark Swistak	Jr.	5-8	175
	24	Charod Williams	Fr.	5-9	174

Special Teams

P-	37	Kevin Dobryzinski	Jr.	5-9	170
LS-	88	Mike Hansen	So.	6-6	262
PR-	1	Cy Butler	So.	5-7	165
	25	Bobby Apgar	So.	6-0	175

Immigration Law

Hans & Curran, P.C.
30 Years of Experience in Immigration Law

1163 Main St. Springfield, MA 781-6370
13 Old South St. Northampton, MA 684-3232
50 Congress St. Boston, MA (617) 722-0043

Free Consultation For Five-College Students/Faculty

Candy Ford of FORD MODEL MANAGEMENT Presents
image resource.ltd
- Photography
- TV/film
- Makeup
- Runway
- Portfolio & Composite Development
- The Business of Modeling

A Two Day Modeling Workshop on November 5th & 6th in the Campus Center
Interviews will be held on October 13, 14, 19, & 20
Contact Suzanne to set up a consultation:
(617) 262-9300

"Naughty Yet Hilarious"

Gross yet laughable, Tasteless yet witty, revolting yet funny...Words can hardly describe the FUN STUFF AT JOKE CITY

Halloween Stuff

Come See For Yourself! JOKE CITY Come See For Yourself!

1,001 laughs in store for you at
233 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 549-8117
(in the carriage shops)

University of Massachusetts

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN

One of the scenic trademarks of UMass, Southwest residential area's towers stand tall above campus.

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

The Minuteman mascot has become a trademark at Massachusetts sporting events.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Co-captain Rene Ingoglia and the Massachusetts football team take center stage on Saturday against Rhode Island.

Yes, times are tough. I use 5 cents each into my pocket and get a decent cup full of pocket lint. The other day
I leaked water my couch cushions and found only four bottle caps. Yes, mentioned you have to compete a little.
COLLEGIAN
"DOWN SO FURTHER"

haircuts always $10!
Bucci
a hair space
29 N PLEASANT ST AMHERST 256 0733

Women Of Color Reception
PROGRAM
1:00 to 3:00 Local Guest Speakers
3:00 p.m.: Yuri Kochiyama - Guest Speaker
4:00 p.m.: Film, "Yuri Kochiyama: A Passion For Justice" Campus Center Rm 163
5:00 to 7:00 p.m.: Reception Campus Center Auditorium
8:00 p.m. Play, "Queen's Garden." Bowker Auditorium
Carmen Rosa, Springfield School Committee
The Bin, Cambodian American Association
Marsha Burnette, ARISE
Maria Morales Loebl, Spanish-American Union
RSVP to: (413) 545-0883

CELEBRATING 26 YEARS 1968-1994
THE PUB
Fun, Food & Spirits
23RD ANNUAL BLOODY MARY BREAKFAST
14oz Bloody Mary
2 Eggs, Ham, Bacon or Sausage Homefries, Toast Coffee 4.95
SATURDAY OCT 1, 1994
10:30 AM - NOON
AFTER THE GAME JOIN US
15 EAST PLEASANT-AMHERST

RICH'S ARMY NAVY
Converse Sneakers 19.99
Jungle Boots 24.99
SALE!
24 CENTER ST. NORTHAMPTON
585-0275

THE DOVE'S NEST
Rt. 116 Sunderland • 665-7969
Open Mon-Sat 6am - 3pm
Sunday 7am - 3pm
THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL
2 Pancakes, 2 Eggs & 2 Bacon or Sausage for $2.15

INCENSE • SINGLE EARRINGS • COTTON CLOTH IN CAREA RUG
THE MERCANTILE HAS TAPESTRIES!
AND COOL POSTERS!
T-SHIRTS • MUGS • CHAPSTICKS • SUN PRICES • LAMPSHADES • ETC.
JOURNALS • BAGS • POUCHES • SUNGLASSES • AND BOXES
• CANDLES • SUNGLASSES • STONE PENDANTS • BASKETS • BANDANAS
The Mercantile
Northampton 18 Center St 584-1205
Amherst Carriage Shops 549-1306
Mon-Sat: 10-6 Sun: 12-5 Thurs & Fri til 9

FIVE COLLEGE LAW, PUBLIC POLICY & INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS SCHOOL FAIR 1994
Hosted by
Amherst, Smith, and Mount Holyoke Colleges
•Meet representatives from over 35 schools•
•Get information on these schools' programs•
•Learn more about careers in these fields•
AMHERST COLLEGE
Front Room, Campus Center
Monday, October 3rd • 3:30 - 6:00 p.m.
SMITH COLLEGE
Davis Ballroom
Tuesday, October 4th • 11:00 a.m. - 2:00 p.m.
(At 1:30 p.m. there will be a Personal Statement Workshop in the Ballroom)
MOUNT HOLYOKE COLLEGE
Blanchard Campus Center
Tuesday, October 4th • 3:30 - 6:00 p.m.
A chance to explore opportunities at a wide variety of schools from all regions of the country

Have You Spoken to Your Attorney?
FREE professional legal assistance for fee-paying UMass/Amherst students!
Student Legal Services Office
922 Campus Center
545-1995
Call Today for an appointment

Homecoming 1994

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

The highlight of Homecoming weekend for many students and alumni is the Power and Class of New England, the Minuteman Marching Band.

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN

The William D. Mullins Center is the home of both the Massachusetts men's and women's basketball teams as well as the Minuteman hockey team.

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN

Chancellor David K. Scott recently announced that he supports the proposal to name the Tower Library after W.E.B. DuBois.

My eyes teared as I hacked my desert dry cough at the road dust that swirled up from behind the passing semi. Yes, I was lost... a long way from the rotting
New York cul-de-sac I had called my home. Why HAD
I eaten that moldy bread.
Why DID I let that circus bear break my heart.
Mass. Daily Collegian
Wherever you go,
There you are!

Spirit Haus
Refrigerator Rentals
256-8433
253-5384

ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435
This Film Must End. Oct. 6th
CURTAIN DAILY AT 7:00 & 9:15
"Has the best porno-culinary sequences since BABETTE'S FEAST!" -David Denby - New York
"The most delectable food-related hit this side of 'LIKE WATER FOR CHOCOLATE'!"
"SUPERB, WONDERFUL AND COMPELLING! Deserving of an Oscar nomination." -Jeffrey Lyons EAT DRINK MAN WOMAN
THE LAST WEEKEND TO SEE IT!!
AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

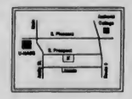
The Boston Globe Offers UMass Students Delivery for 50% OFF

UMass/Amherst	Full Year 9/25 - 5/14	Fall Term 9/25 - 12/18
6 Days MON-SAT	$52.00	$25.25
5 Days MON-FRI	$30.00	$14.25
SUNDAY ONLY	$22.00	$11.00

To order a Boston Globe subscription ON CAMPUS ONLY mail payments to:
The Boston Globe
Campus Program, P.O. Box 2378
Boston, MA 02107
or call 1-800-858-4275 ext.0
If you're a student living OFF CAMPUS we have special discount rates for you too...
Just call 1-800-622-6631 ext.549

Largest Game Section in Area
The Game Master
In Amherst & Northampton!
Hundreds of video games to rent including Super Nintendo, Sega Genesis, CD Rom.
Try out the games in the store - Rent for 3 days, 2 nights
We also rent video game systems
COUPON MOVIE PASS SPECIAL 10 Movies For Just $19.99 One coupon per customer Expires 10-30-94
COUPON Rent 2 Movies at Reg. Price. GET ONE FREE Good Mon. Thurs. Keep for 3 days and 2 nights Includes new releases One coupon per customer Expires 10-30-94
SOUNDS EASY VIDEO STORES
Amherst 9 University Drive 549-5200 Sun. - Thurs. 10 - 10 Fri. & Sat. 10 - 11
Northampton Hemp Plaza 586-7260 Sun. - Thurs. 10 - 10 Fri. & Sat. 10 - 10:30
Greenfield 20 Mohawk Trail 772-1441 Sun. - Sat. 10 - 10

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385



• Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
• Over 90 years staff experience
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
• Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems.
• We provide substitute transportation
• Users of Sikkens paint products
Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities
Shop Registration # RS1212

Men's soccer to host pesky St. Joseph's

By Brian Gormley
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team will try to protect its first-place status in the Atlantic-10 when the Minutemen battle second place St. Joseph's University on Saturday.

The Minutemen enter weekend's game [1 p.m. at Richard F. Garber Field] on a two-game winning streak, having beaten Rutgers on the road and Hartford at home this week. The two wins improved their record to 4-3-1 overall and 2-0 in the A-10. But now they must face a pesky St. Joseph's team [4-4-2 overall, 1-0-1 in the A-10] that will not give Massachusetts any breaks.

"St. Joseph's is a hard working, short passing team and they are right behind us in second place in the A-10," Massachusetts Coach Sam Koch said. "They will put you under pressure early, they play hard off the ball and they keep coming at you. They don't let up."

Koch said St. Joseph's goalkeeper Sean Vliet is excellent, having surrendered just one goal in two A-10 games, and said they have two top offensive performers in John Sharp [5 goals, 13 points] and Michael Feite [3 goals, 7 points].

Despite St. Joseph's strengths, Koch said that he is more concerned with making sure his team plays up to their potential rather than looking for specific strategies to attack its opponent.

"We have got to work on doing the things that we do well, and they are going to have to worry about us if we do that," Koch said.

Koch said he hopes his team will be more consistent and communicate more defensively, that the two goals Massachusetts gave up in their 3-2 win against Hartford Wednesday were unnecessary. The first goal occurred because of movement in a Minuteman wall during a free kick and the second goal came when two Hartford forwards beat three Massachusetts defenders because of a lack of communication on the part of UMass.

Offensively, Koch said they have played well, but he still thinks they can produce even more. Massachusetts needs to work hard off the ball to create more options for his offense.

"Offensively, we can create more chances and be even more dangerous," he said. "We are not really where we want to be, but we are getting closer to it."

Koch believes it is paramount that the Minutemen play together and to strive for a consistent effort each game.

"We have got momentum and we are going in the right direction, but a two-game winning streak is not earth- shattering," he said. "We have to work hard for each other. If we are not working hard for each other on and off the ball we're not as effective of a team. We are not a good enough of a team to have one or two players do it by themselves."

The game at home is particularly important because it is Massachusetts' last home game until they play Providence on October 12. It is important for the Minutemen to leave with, what Koch termed, "good taste in their mouths."

Women's crew to compete in Regattas

By Jody King
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts women's crew team is about to row for the first time as a varsity squad, with two races on Saturday in a local Mount Holyoke Regatta, and one on Sunday in the Textile River Regatta in Lowell.

"I don't think it has really hit the team yet since our first race is in a local regatta that we've never raced in before," said UMass varsity eight coxswain Dena Hiller of Saturday's races.

"It will be a lot different when we go away and make a big trip. Sunday's regatta will be a bigger deal. The Head of the Textile is usually very impressive."

This weekend will be the first real challenge for the team, and a test of how well prepared they are for the season. In Saturday's regatta, five or six teams will race on the Connecticut River in a regatta hosted by the Mount Holyoke Community.

Sunday's meet will be of greater magnitude, including at least 15 teams. Because of the structure of Saturday's regatta, one of the UMass women's eights could conceivably row against a club eight boat. Although mostly colleges will be entered, it is not specifically a college regatta.

"We are basically using Saturday's regatta as a yardstick to see our competition and how we measure up," said Coach Jim Dietz. "We need to see who we are going to be rowing against."

After a tough practice week, Dietz had his boatings in order for this weekend's races on Thursday. Due to an injury, the UMass varsity women's eight stroker, Nancy LaRocque, will not be rowing in Saturday's race, but Dietz has hopes she will be back in the boat for Sunday.

Their new uniforms have not yet arrived, and their new boats are nowhere to be seen. In fact, the crew team will be rowing their boats down the river to the regatta instead of bringing them on trailers. Despite all this, the rowers have noticed some major differences that have come from their varsity status.

Along with the addition of a coaching staff with an outstanding reputation, they have begun to see financial support and recognition from the athletic department.

"There is a feeling of a better overall attitude from the team. It helps a lot to know that the school is behind you," said Co-Captain Wendy Wilbur.

This change in attitude on the team comes not only from the support of the athletic department, but also from Dietz himself who brings his incredible knowledge and dedication of the sport to the Minutewomen.

"He is an amazing coach and an incredible guy. He brings his feeling of enthusiasm to the team and makes everyone enjoy the sport, which is one thing that has definitely been lacking in the past few years," said Hiller.

In the fall, head races, which are long, usually two-and-a- half to three mile races that test the physical preparation of the teams and working to broaden their aerobic base for the spring season, are dominant.

In the spring, competition heightens, consisting mainly of sprint races, which are much quicker and usually cover about 2000 meters.

Adding to the intensity needed for this weekend is the fact that the varsity team will be rowing both head and sprint races.

"It will definitely be tough having three races in one weekend but I don't think it will hurt our performance any," Wilbur said. "The way I see it, every time we race it makes us that much better for the next one."

■ Nash

continued from page 12

three seperate occasions, against Rutgers, Siena and West Virginia, all in the Curry Hicks Cage.

"Those games were probably the best I've played," said Nash. "I can kind of tell how I'm going to play during warmups. If I'm hitting the ball well, I know I'm going to have a good game."

This season, an early ankle injury hampered Nash, and she got off to a bit of a slow start. Yet, she has come on strong recently, being named Most Valuable Player of the UMass Classic Tournament where the Minutewomen captured first place by going 4-0.

"I thought I played well, I did my part and played hard. [junior setter] Cass [Anderson] makes it easy," said Nash.

The Minutewomen have all played well so far, and the returnees from last year have mixed with a strong recruiting class to put together a program that is currently undefeated at 12-0, and has won 36 of 38 games played in this season.

"I knew we'd be pretty good, and win some, but I had no idea that we would keep it going this long." said Nash.

UMass will begin its tough A-10 schedule tonight when it hosts Duquesne in the Curry Hicks Cage at 7 p.m. The Minutewomen will then face St. Bonaventure, also at home, Saturday at 4 p.m.

The Minutewomen swept the Bonnies last year, and split with the Lady Dukes, with each team taking a victory at its home court.

"Last year when we went down there, it was probably the worst game we played, I mean it was bad." Nash said. "[The Atlantic-10 competition] is a totally different level than what we've been playing, but we're ready.

"We really want to win the A-10's and go to the NCAA Tournament. If we can do that, we'll be noticed."

The way Dionne Nash is playing, more than a few people will notice.

■ Corcoran

continued from page 12

and friendly Corcoran pays little attention to them. All of his hopes for a successful season comes down to one basic desire — winning.

"I really don't set personal goals," said Corcoran. "I was sitting down talking with [defensive his former teammates, and show them the improvement that has been made since playing with them.

"Homecoming's a special week. You're going to have a lot of past players that you played with, like the guys that were seniors when you were a freshman.

"We want to show them, 'look at me, I'm a senior, and I'm doing what you did back then.'

What Brian Corcoran doesn't know is that he may be doing a little more.

All I need is my fork, my serrated edged Ginsu© knife and a few good friends. Now there is a real meal!!!
DAILY COLLEGIAN...we know a good meal when it looks us in the face.

Going back to Cali', Cali', Cali'

The University of Massachusetts women's soccer team travel to Santa Barbara, CA., to take on powerful Santa Clara tomorrow afternoon.

■ Field Hockey

continued from page 12

poll. In the next two weeks, the Minutewomen face two top five teams [ODU and UNC], giving UMass a chance to prove the poll wrong.

"We're willing to prove it on the field," Donnelly said on her team's lack of recognition. "We have one of the toughest schedules in the nation.

"We have to put up or shut up. We want them not to be able to ignore us."

Nothing like a Fall day to get a good old fashioned family barbeque. The ribs are on the grill, beer and brats are cooling, and like we said Even old Mr. Earth, he should never have come down to the meat freezer with me. Still... there will be some great ribs.
DAILY COLLEGIAN
You are our friendly neighbor!

FUEL FOR OPTIMUM PERFORMANCE

Low-fat Sustained Energy

Suggested Retail: $1.69
Fat 2.5 grams
Protein: 10 grams
Carbohydrate: 42 grams
In Chocolate, Malt-Nut, Wild Berry and Apple-Cinnamon flavors.

For a 12-page Guide to Nutrition and Energy, call 800-444-5154.

PowerBar
Not for Ordinary Performance

kinko's...
the place to copy
• Quality Copies of all sizes
• Full Color Copies
• Computer Services
• Binding and Finishing
• Fax & Mailing Services
• Volume Discounts
• Open 24 hours (in most locations)

WITH THIS COUPON
20% off on all school supplies
Bring this coupon into the Kinko's listed and save 20% on all regularly-priced school supplies. One coupon per customer. Not valid with other offers. Good through October 31, 1994.
kinko's the copy center
AMHERST: 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2343 Open 24 Hours
NORTHAMPTON: 34 Bridge St., 585-5000 (Across from the Post Office) HOURS: 8am to 12

UMASS!
GET PSYCHED FOR A GREAT HOMECOMING!
SEE YOU AT THE:
PEP RALLY
PARADE
TAILGATE & GAME
BEAT THE RAMS
FROM THE UMASS GREEKS

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Waterson

WHERE'S YOUR TV SCREEN?
MY FALL LINEUP GOT CANCELED
DAD SAID ONE TV IN THE HOUSE WAS BAD ENOUGH, AND HE PREFERRED THE ONE WITH THE VOLUME CONTROL.
MAYBE YOU SHOULD GO CABLE
I'VE GOT AN IDEA FOR A SIT.COM CALLED "FATHER KNOWS ZILCH"

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Waterson

HI, MOM. CAN I LOOK AT YOUR WALLET FOR A FEW MINUTES? I JUS WANT TO SEE SOMETHING.
HOLD ON, DID YOU MAKE YOUR BED LIKE I ASKED YOU?
I'M WORKING ON IT
AS I RECALL, YOUR BED IS IN YOUR ROOM
I'M INVENTING A ROBOT TO MAKE THE BED BUT I NEED A GRANT. CAN I HAVE 450?
WHAT'D SHE SAY? DID YOU GET THE MONEY?
BOY, WHEN WE'RE THE COVER STORY OF POPULAR MECHANICS, I'LL HAVE SOME CHOICE WORDS TO SAY ABOUT FAMILY ENCOURAGEMENT.

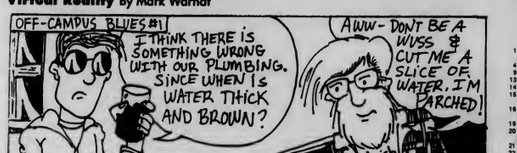
Jim's Journal By Jim

Ruth and I went to a garage sale today.
Ruth saw a Batman necklace and said, "Ha! Look at this."
We didn't end up buying anything.
As we left, Ruth said, "There were some neat little things there."

Without Purpose By Kennet Dall

WITH THE FIRES OF HELL IN THEIR EYES,
BATS FLY INTO THE DARKNESS WITH THE LUST OF THE HUNT.
...WELL THEN THERE'S BASIL.
HEY! LOOK I CAN BE SCARY ALSO... LOOK... GGRRRR!

Virtual Reality By Mark Warnat



OFF-CAMPUS BLUES #1
I THINK THERE IS SOMETHING WRONG WITH OUR PLUMBING. SINCE WHEN IS WATER THICK AND BROWN?
AWW- DON'T BE A WUSS & CUT ME A SLICE OF WATER, I'M PARCHED!

Bruno By C. Baldwin

HEY STEWARDESS, BABY, I NEED MYSELF ANOTHER BEER, I AIN'T COCKED ENOUGH TO... HEY! ... WHERE YA' GOIN'?
EXCUSE ME MAM, DO YOU HAVE A NON-ASSHOLE SECTION? THE SECOND-HAND-ASSHOLENESS IS BATHERING ME
I APOLOGIZE THAT WE DON'T, BUT WOULD A BEER HELP? I'D LOVE TO GET YOU ONE.
THANK YE' KINDLY MAM, I DON'T THINK I'LL BE COCKED ENOUGH

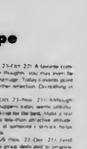
Daily Crossword
Edited byTrude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 The legal profession
6 Clergyman
13 Oklahoma city
14 Angler's basket
15 Program of events
16 Like Whittier's boy
19 Rugged rock
20 Title for a retired professor
21 Come forth
23 Betsy or Diana
24 Wear away
25 Small drum
28 Something to bend
30 Hires
33 Oeser and Tony
35 Rickey Fruit
37 Singing Cole
38 The red planet
39 Woodwinds
41 Melon
42 — — I see Elba
43 Scheme of action
44 Very funny joke
46 "— Without a Clause": 1955 movie
48 Something to stand on
50 Blowjoby
51 A self-evident truth
53 "— Ben Adhem"
55 More risque
57 Like a certain slip
61 Annoys
62 Name for HRE Frederick I
64 John Masefield, for one
65 Adored ones
66 One of Alcott's Little Women
67 Concludes
68 "— -seong, go along."
69 Utter

DOWN
1 Paul Bunyan's Mule or
2 "Madam, I'm —"
3 Singular
4 Highlanders
5 Provoke
6 Wagers
7 Grant or Marvin
8 Presbyter
9 Agree
10 Infertility
11 Boast
12 Bros.
17 Blunders
18 Feature of Norway's coastline
22 Additional
24 New York canal
25 Circus performer
26 Informed
27 Like some ball gowns
29 "Home —"
31 Records
32 Bustling unit
34 Note of the scale
36 NYC sports arena
40 Aromatic ointment
41 Spurious
43 Ballet bend
45 Love affair
47 Has being
49 Datori
52 Satellite path
54 Belle's beloved
56 Meture
56 Elvis' middle name
57 Prince in disguise?
58 Doctrines
59 Confused
60 Imire —
Hungarian statesman
63 Hobbub

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

8/30/94



By Jeanne L. Beers
©1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate
9/30/94

The Far Side By Gary Larson

Sheep authors

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

1968 MUSTANG
Classic '68 Mustang Way Cool Wheels! FOR SALE!!! Electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, 2 door, great way to pick up chicks and studs alike. Best offer call Beth at 6-4434

ACTIVITIES
ISU rush on 10/3 from 6-8. Please call for more info. Karan at 549-3974. All University women are welcome. Come see what ISU is all about!
Macrobiotic discussions on natural health. 8 Sundays 2-4 pm Munson Library South Amherst Oct 2 - Nov 20 253- 2777
NECAC Karate Club Shotokan shinkicked Tomran 101 M-W 8-9:30 F 7-9 All levels welcome! Call Jessica at 549-4279

ANNOUNCEMENTS
Comedy. Chris Avery's Cold Filtered Comedy presents homecoming comedy 10/2 9:30 Hadley Pub Rt 9 For info call Chris 549-4589

AUTO FOR SALE
1968 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metalic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Beth at 6-4434
81 Olds Cutlass. New parts. Needs minimal work $700 or best offer Call Chad 546-1133
1987 Mazda 323 deluxe wagon Excellent condition, carefully maintained, stereo cassette, 97,000 miles $3500 549-2619
1990 Hyundai Excel 42K AC auto stereo cassette sunroof $3000 Call 253-4012
86 Jeep Wrangler black hard top 4cyl, 4 wd, stereo, high miles, excellent condition $4500 to 549-7321
Honda Prelude 82. 95 thou, mig Sunroof. Runs great needs brake work Greg 585-0540 $850
Oh boy! 1976 Dodge Aspen Coupe auto, runs, stylish, cheap! I wouldn't sell if I didn't have to 300 549-4679

SOXING LESSONS
Recreational + competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional © Dijete Bumpus. 549-5752

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE
Do you need $$$ for college??? WE have the solution Guaranteed results Write to Corporate Scholarship Service, 2 Oakhurst Terrace East, N Reading, MA 01864 for free details

COMPUTERS
BK Computers & Associates whole systems Parts including monitors, drives, cards and more Free estimate 549-4362

ENTERTAINMENT
Bronk a high energy alternative original cover band call Chris at 253-5996

FOR RENT
2 rooms in private home $300/ mo Kitchen privileges- Kosher/ vegetarian preferred Laundry, parking, furnished 549-4853
Blue room for rent. 2 cats, a lake, and an espresso machine. $215 + Call Juan at 586-4782
Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery

FOR SALE
Bike for sale. Gary Fischer 17.5" 4 months old. Little used free advice 40 speed/ shimano grid wire lock $280 253-3526
Super pro- amp. Tube works real tube 8 Two channels, foot switch. Sounds excellent- less than one year old Must sell! soon! $250 Call Adam 256-1642
IBM XT computers $100!!! Includes monitor, CPU, keyboard, 10 meg hard drive, 5 1/4 floppy, ms dos. Printers $80. Call 256-8094
Microwave must sell ! Only $50 Good condition Call 549-4726
Motorcycle Honda Nighthawk 700S Good condition runs great $1700 or bo 253-9522
Pagers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549-7231
Solid oak triple dresser
Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354
Speakers brand new phase linear cheap 549-7728
Tag sale Amherst, 415 Meadow St. 10/1- 10/2 9-4pm. Quality name clothing, much more. Huge sale
Tandy computer system w/ drives, mon, printer Tons of software Asking 325 or bo. Call Jay 5-2348
Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from glass to gold, custom designed jewelry Silverscape Designs 264 N Pleasant St, Amherst 253-3324

FOUND
Attention new students - personal items left at the new students program this summer may be picked up at the new students office. 304 admissions center
Found two tennis rackets. Call 545-3548

FREE
Free kitten. white- blue eyes- deaf Call 665-7756

HAPPY BIRTHDAY JO-JO
Have a great birthday Joanna! Hope your day is filled with fun and nice weather. And hey, why not register to vote? Come on over for a slice of Antonio's. Love, M

HELP WANTED
$363.86 Sell funny college t shirts. Profit $363.86 Risk free Choose from 19 designs Free catalogs 1-800-700-4250
Cruise ships now hiring earn up to $2000s/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies World travel Seasonal and full time employment available No experience necessary. For more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext C50011
Drivers wanted Trattoria Gappetto Italian restaurant, 1177 N Pleasant St Amherst Apply in person after 3:00 pm 549-7777
Earn $6/hr flight pollution. Work for political change with Clean Water Action environmental campaign staff On bus lines Paid training P/T or career opportunity. Call 584-9830
Earn $25 in 2 hours. Seniors and first year grads wanted for research study dealing with the GRE Call Sharon 256-8092
International Employment- make up to $2000- $4000 s/ mo teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea No teaching background or Asian languages required For info call 206-632-1146 ext J50011
Receive up to 768,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am- 5pm
Wanted!! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Earn free travel, fantastic pay 1-800-426-7710

INSTRUCTION
Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools, right here in Amherst. Free info session Mon Oct 3rd Lord Jefferey Inn or Call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

LOST
Black tri-fold wallet 7pm on 8/25 at Antonio's pizza Any info please call Paula 546-7478

MOTORCYCLES
83 Ninja 600. New parts, runs excellent Call 665-7894 for info

MUSICIANS
Guitarist seeking to form 5 piece rock band Originals and covers Men 253-4927

PERSONALS
Alpha Chi Omega Get psyched for homecoming weekend! It will be a blast!! Love your social chair
Attention 5th Floor! The Asylum is at it again! The first Asylum event of this semester will begin at 7:00 in the Asylum's lounge. Be there!
Hey Boomer. It's your birthday! Jim and Rob are in town and they want to celebrate. Hold on to your Marks!! Love, Mother and Suitel
Jesse Tobin - Happy 21st birthday from Harold and everyone on N. Pleasant St
JOY CHAFETZ Happy, happy birthday! Hope you have a wonderful day! Enjoy and celebrate- you totally deserve it! We are going to have an amazing semester- we are off to a great start!! Happy Birthday!! Love, Stephanie
PINNOCHIO'S
Hiring drivers full or part time Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Boltwood Walk, Ask for Bob.
Proprietor special. $6.00 1.25 each topping large pizza now!! With this ad.

RESUME WRITING
We specialize in writing resumes and cover letters. Over a decade of experience, close to campus 549-0367

ROOMMATE WANTED
Male/female. south Amherst, $225+- Electric/heated. Neat. Great house, wooded about 4 miles from campus. H253-5531 W256-0870

RUSH SIGMA KAPPA
Wanted fun, down to earth, friendly, out-going UMass women to attend Sigma Kappa's open rush Please join us Sept 27 & 28 6-9pm Oct 2 12-3pm Call for info 256-0867 We are located at 19 Aiken St behind Hillel House

SCHOLARSHIPS
Apply for private scholarships- we guarantee one or your money back- price $45.00 for more information call Janice 585-0877

SERVICES
"Balloon view" cartoon characatures Makes great gift!! $25. full color! Satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 586-9447
Ernie's par pilling service Call for more info 549-0808
I'll sew for you Alterations, buttons, hems, repairs Call Allison 546-6283
Model search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography Beginners and experienced models Males, females, all categories welcome. 617-523-0367
Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906
Term paper typing service Call Service King 253-9282

SHAREWARE
Free!! Shareware listing Hundreds of quality software programs only $3.49 each Call 584-2782

WANTED
Ren. Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jugglers, armourer to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. Bill/ Irene 584-4303
Campus representative Kodak products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S Padre + Florida We handle the bookkeeping You handle the sales Call 1-800-222-4432

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Events behind the scenes capture your attention. Let your ideas and wishes be known through an intermediary. Secret transactions can be rewarding. Trust your instincts. Romance should be exciting for both married and single.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A encounter you meet socially can be very helpful. Make a business presentation in writing. Daytrip developments give you an opportunity to improve your finances. By changing your routine, you'll make out fabulously.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Agreements negotiated today promise long-lasting benefits. Deal with top people. Your written letters or solicitations. Friends could be in a difficult mood tonight. Offer distractions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A good day to set a new course financially. Influential people will offer their support. Take a firm stand with family members who tend to be overly generous. Events at a distance involve your concern.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You receive some fantastic news! Avoid showing about your good luck. Instead, be grateful to those who have helped you. Deeds mean more than words to someone you hope to impress.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A new job could mean lots of travel. Unsubstantiated rumors could have your co-workers on pins and needles. Continue to meet all deadlines. A missed mortgage or rent payment could spell trouble.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Lend your support to a group dedicated to progress and reform. A close friend makes valuable suggestions. Consider them carefully. Keep a romantic rendezvous somewhere cheerful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Although something that happens today seems unfortunate, it will work out for the best. Make your wishes known. Be willing to change a less-than-attractive attitude. Putting yourself at someone's service helps you make friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Lend your support to a group dedicated to progress and reform. A close friend makes valuable suggestions. Consider them carefully. Keep a romantic rendezvous somewhere cheerful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Several pressures may have caught up with you. Today you will run out. Rest. By late afternoon, you will feel rejuvenated and ready for an exciting outing. Dine with good friends in a favorite restaurant.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) All will go smoothly if you curb a tendency to overreact to criticism or gripe at your peers too bitterly. Show your sense of humor when dealing with your co-workers. Good will is contagious!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Someone's reluctance can be overcome if you approach him better nature. Constructive criticism will be appreciated at this time. Don't let the vagaries of those in high positions. If you cannot handle all the paperwork, hire someone who can.

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Chicken Cutlet
BASICS LUNCH
Colache..?
Chicken Cutlet

DINNER
Roast Beef
Seafood Newburg
BASICS DINNER
Garbanzo Veggie Stew
Veggie Croquettes

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Art Stapleton
Copy Editor.....Jacob Michaels
Photo Technician.....Gordon Fenwick
Production Supervisor.....Sandy Bogage
Production.....Mike Stern, Andrew Davidson, Joshua Grey

Quote of the Day

"Vasectomy means not ever having to say you're sorry."
—Larry Adler

GRAND OPENING!
Sat. Oct. 1
STORE OPENS 10:00 AM
Coach Cal's Closet
LOCATED BELOW CAFE DICARLO AT 71 N. PLEASANT, AMHERST ★ Great Prizes • Balloons Giveaways!
★ Out-Shoot Coach Cal and Win a Prize!
★ 30% OFF Coach Cal's Logo Apparel
10% STUDENT DISCOUNT
COACH CAL'S CLOSET
GRAND OPENING COUPON
GOOD ONLY OCT. 1 & 2, 1994
MUST PRESENT VALID STUDENT I.D. WITH COUPON

Sports

Minutemen to host Rams

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

Coach Mike Hodges looks to continue his Homecoming tradition as well the University of Massachusetts football team's recent mastery of the University of Rhode Island on Saturday at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

The Minutemen [2-1, 1-0 in the Yankee Conference] have won both of Hodges' Homecoming games. Rhode Island [2- 2, 2-1] visits Amherst, having dropped seven of the last eight meetings against UMass.

"This game means a lot to us, the tradition that goes on here. A lot of people who have a lot to do with our tradition will be here on Saturday," Hodges said.

Last season, the Rams were run out of McGuirk Stadium 36-14. Rhode Island last defeated UMass in 1991. Running back Frank Alessio led the squad with 84 yards on the ground, with fullback Rene Ingoglia picking up 75.

"We approach every game the same way, every game is equally important now," Hodges said.

Rhode Island comes in with an explosive passing game led by last year's Yankee Conference Rookie of the Year quarterback Chris Hixson. Hixson has thrown for 970 yards in four games [a 243-yard per game average], completing 69 percent of his passes. The sophomore QB won the Golden Helmet award for the week of Sept. 10.

Hixson, the third-rated QB in the conference, will look to wide receivers Bobby Apgar and Cy Butler. Apgar, just a sophomore, already has climbed to tenth on the all-time URI receiving list with 1,247 yards.

"I sure hope we will be able to throw the ball down the field on Saturday," Rhode Island Coach Floyd Keith said.

"Bobby Apgar is as fine a receiver as there is in the conference. He's outstanding, great hands and athletic," Hodges said.

UMass will attempt to answer on defense with the standout pair of cornerbacks, Breon Parker and Tony Williams. Williams leads the team with two interceptions. Parker intercepted Hixson three times in last season's meeting.

"We'll try very hard to know where Apgar is at all times. It's difficult to do too much [double-teaming] on him because Cy Butler is a quality receiver himself," Hodges said.

UMass fullback Rene Ingoglia was named the Yankee Conference Offensive Player of the Week as UMass defeated Maine, 20-14, last weekend. Ingoglia racked up 124 yards rushing and one touchdown. Alessio had a career-high with 115 yards on 24 carries.

"We will do the same thing as always. By scheme, we should be able to run on them, unless they have better people than we do," Assistant Coach Doug Berry said.

"I haven't heard of anybody who has stopped the UMass running game," Keith said.

Expect the Rams to stack the line to try to stop the Minuteman rushing attack. Maine tried a similar strategy last week, forcing quarterback Andrew McNeilly to pass. McNeilly looked deep for receivers Darryl Thomas and Matt Read several times against Maine.

"I'm concerned that they might add a defensive back to the front. We're going to do what they let us do," Berry said.

"URI will try to beat us with personnel, not schemes. They'll come after us with the linebackers to put pressure on."

Homecoming Notes: A victory on Saturday would be Massachusetts' 150th all-time win in the Yankee Conference. UMass is the all-time winningest team in YanCon history.

Last Saturday's home opener at McGuirk attracted a crowd of 14,873, the largest at a UMass home game since 1987.

The game can be heard on WMUA, 91.1 FM, pre-game at 12:45 p.m.

COLLEGIAN FILE

QB Andrew McNeilly and the University of Massachusetts will go head-to-head against Rhode Island tomorrow afternoon in the annual Homecoming game. Kickoff is at 1 p.m.

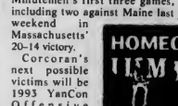
Corcoran transformed from special teamer to star

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

Brian Corcoran makes things happen.

Just ask the 12 opposing quarterbacks that were sacked by the University of Massachusetts standout defensive end last season as he made First Team All-Yankee Conference.

As for this season, Corcoran has continued where he left off last year, recording four sacks in the Minutemen's first three games, including two against Maine last weekend in Massachusetts' 20-14 victory.



Corcoran's next possible victims will be 1993 YanCon Offensive Rookie of the Year QB Chris Hixson and Rhode Island, as Massachusetts hosts the Rams tomorrow afternoon in the annual Homecoming Game at 1 p.m. at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

It was four years ago that the senior defensive end arrived at Massachusetts from C.W. Baker H.S. in Baldwinsville, N.Y., and turned some heads with his play on special teams.

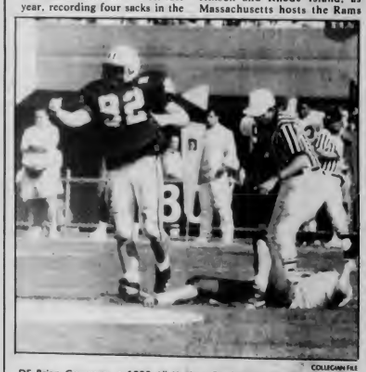
The success he had on special teams, including 15 total tackles during the 1991 season, only helped him grab the starting position in all 10 games of 1992. The result? Second team All-Yankee Conference as a sophomore.

The 1993 season was an even better season for Corcoran. While former standout linebacker Mario Perry, a pre-season All-American, was double and sometimes triple-teamed by opposing offenses, Corcoran picked up the slack for the defense, racking up 82 tackles [equaling his 1992 total] to go along with his team-leading sack total.

"Last year, I was getting pressured inside a lot, but this year, I'm rushing outside a lot," said Corcoran. "We got lots of other people that are taking up some of the others."

Nowadays, it's Corcoran that is the pre-season All- American. This year, though, the Minuteman defense has more depth at each position, and Corcoran doesn't have to worry so much about defenses keying up on just him.

"No more than anyone else is," said Corcoran. "I get doubled, but no one's really doing anything special for me because you really can't with our defense. Everybody's just as good as the next guy.



COLLEGIAN FILE

DE Brian Corcoran, a 1993 All-Yankee Conference member, will lead the strong defensive front in tomorrow's Homecoming game against the Rhode Island Rams.

"We're playing eight guys on the front, and we didn't do that last year. My back-up [sophomore Jeron Alston] is as capable as I have ever been. We're rotating, where I was taking every one last year."

According to Corcoran, the depth of the defense is beneficial for the Minutemen not only in tomorrow's game against URI, but for the games down the road, as well.

"That's going to help us as a team," said Corcoran. "The more people we can play, the fresher we are, and if somebody goes down, we're more prepared in the long haul. Against Richmond, I think we thought we were better than we were.

"[Defensive line] Coach [Ted] Roof said the best thing to me after that game when I came out slow. He said, 'concentrate more on your effort instead of your ability.' If you have the ability and you're not putting towards the effort that made you that good, than you're no good. It's all about hard work."

And hard work is something that is not foreign to Corcoran. Considering he is big, though not overly large for a football player at 6-foot 2-inches tall and 245 pounds, Corcoran compensates with quickness and agility — as well as intensity and hard work.

"He's a very quick player," said Coach Mike Hodges. "He's not the biggest defensive lineman, but his ability and his quickness carry him."

As for personal goals, the modest

Turn to CORCORAN, page 10

Women's tennis falls to CCSU

Minutewomen's undefeated streak ends

By Derek Milosavljevic
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's tennis team lost its first match of the season yesterday, but it didn't go down without a fight- or two.

The Minutewomen fell 4-3 to Central Connecticut State University in a hotly-contested battle that was marred by two embarrassing incidents involving CCSU Coach Vic Stone.

After seeing his team drop the doubles portion of the contest, Stone began complaining loudly that the singles matches should begin immediately. UMass Coach Judy Dixon countered that the rules allowed for a fifteen minute break between the events.

Stone continued to vehemently voice his displeasure with the delay, culminating in personal insults toward Dixon, and his telling her to "shut up."

When singles play did begin, UMass' Liz Durant became the next to draw Stone's ire. Playing at the No. 4 singles slot against CCSU's Janet Rubin, Durant found her line calls being questioned from outside the court by Stone.

"I felt she missed four or five calls early on and that we needed a referee," Stone said after the match.

One nonplaying member of each team was brought in to officiate the remainder of the match.

From that point on, down 3-1, Durant took control of the match. She broke Rubin's serve in the fifth game, and went on to win the remaining games of the first set, closing it out with a break after trailing in the game, 40-0.

Durant's groundstrokes in the second set went mainly unreturned as she won easily, 6-1.

"I was really happy I pulled through," Durant said. "I was down 3-1 and there was a lot of pressure on me."

Durant admitted she was upset by Stone's antics outside the court.

"I had to be calm for the team," she said, "but if I was at a tournament, I probably would have told him off."

When asked after the match if he thought it was acceptable to tell one of his players to yell at an opposing player, Stone said, "She told me to shut up first. It was the heat of battle and was just one of those things."

UMass Captain Liesl Sitton continued her unbeaten season, dispatching Daniella Klein-Impelmann at the No. 1 singles position, 6-4, 6-2.

With the victories by Sitton and Durant combined with the doubles win, UMass was one point away from winning the match, but it was not to be.

In front of both teams as well as spectators, Minutewoman freshman phenom Noelle Ortini put up a gallant fight against Michelle Castellon, before finally falling, 6-3, 6-3.

Dixon addressed the situation with Stone after the match.

"He's known for behavior like this," she said. "We keep scheduling them because they're a very good team, and they are Division 1, but after this, we may have to rethink that."

Dixon said there were some positives in the tense, conflicted day.

"They fought their way through a very difficult situation," she said. "I'm disappointed, but not upset. This loss will make us a better team."

Field hockey ready for huge weekend

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

On the front cover of the 1993 Old Dominion field hockey media guide reads the caption "Just do it better."

For the last 12 years, the Lady Monarchs have done just that. They have played better field hockey than any team in the nation. They have amassed seven national titles in that time. Several players have gone on to the United States National Team, which was coached by ODU Coach Beth Anders until last January. The program emanates success.

One year ago at Totman Field, the University of Massachusetts field hockey team found a weakness in that brilliance. The Minutewomen outplayed the Lady Monarchs and came away with a 2-0 victory. The defeat exposed an unexpected vulnerability in the ODU team, and the 1992 National Champions have not been the same since.

Revenge will clearly be on the mind of the Lady Monarchs when the Minutewomen head to Norfolk, Va., this weekend.

The No. 4 Lady Monarchs come into this weekend with a record of 6-2-1. The losses came at the hands of No. 1 North Carolina and No. 2 James Madison. Old Dominion is unbeaten in their last four games coming into this weekend.

UMass is prepared for what will probably be its toughest weekend.

"Old Dominion is one of the toughest places to play in the nation," said UMass Coach Megan Donnelly. "They have won so many National Championships. There is an aura surrounding them that they will find a way to win.

"Old Dominion, North Carolina and UConn are special games. I know we're going to play our best."

The Minutewomen said they feel that they have something to prove in this game as well. Including last year's game, UMass is 3-12 lifetime against the Lady Monarchs. After being dominated by Old Dominion for years, some people passed off last year's game as a fluke.

"We want to prove that last year's game wasn't a fluke," said senior co-captain Kyri Sparks. "We're looking forward to playing on turf."

Donnelly said she feels that having Northeastern right before this weekend would be a positive for the Minutemen.

"Wednesday was a big game," said Donnelly. "They felt they needed a big game before Old Dominion."

Donnelly looks to last year's hero, Kyle Rothenberger, to step up once again.

"I look to Kyle to have a big game," said Donnelly. "We're very happy with the center-midfielder matchup. We feel Kyle is the better player. Right now I wouldn't trade her for anybody. Kyle is like Larry Bird, she makes everyone around her better."

> "Old Dominion is one of the toughest places to play in the nation. They have so many National Championships. There is an aura surrounding them that they will find a way to win."
>
> Coach Megan Donnelly

Before they even play Old Dominion, the Minutewomen will face off against the Richmond Spiders this afternoon.

The Spiders have had a rough season, so far. They are 4-5 in their first nine games, including a 5-0 thrashing at the hands of Maryland.

Despite Richmond's record and the ODU game looming, Donnelly said she is not worried about her team overlooking the Spiders.

"If we had won Wednesday, I would be worried," said Donnelly. "Right now they are so hungry for goals. They can't wait to get back on the field."

Despite being undefeated at 5-0-2, the Minutewomen have fallen six spots in the rankings since the preseason

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 10

Nash making an impact in second season

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

Impact player.

For the 12-0 University of Massachusetts volleyball team, that phrase relates to sophomore outside hitter Dionne Nash.

"Dionne is a phenomenal athlete," said Coach Bonnie Kenny. "She does everything asked of her."

With her talent, she is capable of doing quite a lot. Last year, while leading the newly reinstated Minutewoman team to a 17-14 record, Nash was named to the All-Atlantic 10 first team as a freshman.

"That was a real honor," said Nash. "When I look back on it now, to achieve that as a freshman made me very happy."

Nash played her high school career at Quartz Hill in Lancaster, Calif., where aside from volleyball, she lettered in basketball and track.

"When I was a [high school] freshman I couldn't even serve the ball over the net," Nash said of her volleyball skill.

Her skills improved immensely, however, as she was eventually recognized as Golden League MVP and an All-CIF Southern Selection. Although she was recruited by several schools, Nash said she was impressed by Kenny and the opportunity to build the foundation for a new program.

"I knew Coach Kenny was a good coach, and she had faith in me," Nash said. "She saw the potential in me more than anyone else, even myself."

"Dionne has not had a lot of competitive experience, but she is definitely capable of training at a higher level," said Kenny. "Her athleticism makes coaching her easy."

Nash obviously fit in fine with the UMass offense, as she led the team in kills last year 11 separate times for a team high of 371 on the season. She collected 20 on

Turn to NASH, page 10

COLLEGIAN FILE

Sophomore Dionne Nash has escaped the sophomore jinx, helping the University of Massachusetts volleyball team to a 12-0 mark thus far.

Redford's latest is a classy winner

Robert Redford returns to the directing chair with Quiz Show. Check out our review of one of fall's best films (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Shelter fundraiser lacks support

The Amherst Survival Center's fundraiser last Wednesday at the Student Union Ballroom earned them just $10. Story on page 2.

A record breaking performance

Minuteman fullback Rene Ingoglia captured the UMass and Yankee Conference rushing records with 313 yards Saturday. See story page 7.

Extended Forecast

Expect sunny skies today and tomorrow. Highs for today and Tuesday are expected to be in the mid to upper 50s and the lows to be in the mid to upper 30s.

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 56 LOW: 36	HIGH: 59 LOW: 38	HIGH: 51 LOW: 36

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 15 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Monday, October 3, 1994

Trustees to vote on renaming library after W.E.B. DuBois

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

The Board of Trustees will be on the campus of the University of Massachusetts this week to decide if the library will be renamed in honor of African–American scholar and civil rights activist, W.E.B. DuBois.

According of Chancellor David K. Scott, the Board of Trustees will be meeting today and tomorrow at the William D. Mullins Center. The proposal to rename the UMass library is on the Board's agenda.

Scott will recommend that the name of the library be changed to the W.E.B. DuBois Library. The recommendation is supported by Michael K. Hooker, president of UMass, Scott said.

A group of students first brought the idea of naming the library after DuBois to the attention of the University and administration last semester during a rally. The rally was sponsored by the Petition Coalition, a group in support of the renaming of the library to honor DuBois.

The Petition Coalition received 1200 signatures of students, administrators, faculty members, staff and residents of Amherst supporting the renaming of the library, according to Shamala Ivatury, a graduate student and member of the Petition Coalition.

After gaining support, the Coalition took the signatures and a proposal to Scott asking that the library be named in honor of DuBois.

Scott responded by investigating the process of renaming buildings on campus. Scott also created the Library Naming Committee, according to Ivatury. The committee dealt specifically with renaming the library.

Scott named former chancellor of UMass Randolph Bromery, chairman of funding for renaming the library, and Deputy Vice Chancellor Marcellette Williams, chairperson of the Library Naming Committee, said Ivatury.

Members of the committee included Dr. Ester Terry and Dr. Michael M. Thelwell, professors in the African Studies Department, Al Lizana, student trustee, and David DuBois, stepson of W.E.B. DuBois, among others.

The Committee gathered at the end of the summer and formed a proposal to present to the Board of Trustees, according Ivatury.

"We gathered together all the material about his life and articulated the reasons why to rename the library," Ivatury said. "The reasons were forwarded by the Committee to Scott."

Scott will bring the proposal to the executive committee of the Board of Trustees today, for their recommen-

Turn to DUBOIS, page 10

Marching to Victory

PAUL BRODEAU / COLLEGIAN

University of Massachusetts Coach Mike Hodges leads his team on to the field for the start of the second half of Saturday's game against Rhode Island. The Minutemen beat the Rams 22–12 in front of a Homecoming crowd at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium. See sports weekend, page 7.

Patricia Crosson ready for tasks her Provost role requires

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

New University of Massachusetts Provost Patricia Crosson will attempt to open the lines of communication between the University and the other schools in the five–college system.

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

New Provost Patricia Crosson has a full agenda set up for her next two years in office, and has already begun to work towards those objectives.

Upon her Aug. 1 appointment in the two–year interim position as provost, Crosson set out to work closely with the deans of all nine schools and colleges, she said.

Her main focus is to increase communication and collaboration between administration and faculty. She hopes to increase communication with the other colleges in the five–college network, as well, she said.

"You have to work with a lot of different people to get things done and to get subjects to the top of the agenda," Crosson said.

Before entry into the position, Crosson had already become well–acquainted with a good portion of the deans and administrators through her seven years as deputy provosts, she said.

She feels that the weight of her experience was helpful in winning her an administrative position that she may have been an "atypical choice" for. Most of the provosts have historically been men from one of the Arts and Sciences.

She said that, despite the fact that last spring was such a difficult period for everyone, because of administrative lay– offs, former Provost Glenn Gordon, whom she replaced, has been enormously helpful.

"He couldn't have been more generous with his time and advice," she said.

Gordon provided the developmental process that really kicked off Chancellor Scott's Strategic Planning initiative, Crosson said. She is going to continue the tradition.

She is following through on Strategic Planning, and has taken a particular interest in the Teaching and Learning Task Force, which aspires towards improving undergraduate education at the University of Massachusetts, she said.

Through assembling the task force on teaching and learning, and appointing Javier Cevallos of the Spanish and Portuguese department as her faculty advisor, Crosson has found an avenue in which she can explore issues groomed for her main interest in educational quality, she said.

"There has been a renewal of concern for undergraduate education and teaching. I intend on continuing that interest," Crosson said.

She is in the process of examining the relationship between administrative dealings and the quality of education. She has found that many believe research has been overstressed and other important aspects of faculty activity have been undervalued, she said.

The task force meets, through Strategic Planning, with other task forces to communicate about prominent issues concerning faculty, multiculturalism and all around awareness levels on campus, she said.

"There needs to be fundamental change in the culture. We need to transmit to the faculty what is important and valued by the University," Crosson said. "It's complicated, but terribly important that we take the campus in a slightly different direction for the future."

Last week, Crosson attended a roundtable discussion alongside faculty members, students, University staff, trustees and alumni, she said.

Large issues on higher education and their affect on the UMass campus were discussed. Analysis of various task force reports and new approaches to campus change in areas of public service, research, economic development and faculty roles and awards, offered insight, she said.

Crosson is the co–chair of a committee that deals with these type of issues and will put out a prospective report at the end of the semester. They hope to address the ambiguity of awarding faculty on a merit award system, she said.

Crosson's position was awarded to her after a long and complicated process of selection and elimination, she said.

She found out that she had been nominated while spending time working in Ireland. She had done

Turn to PROVOST, page 3

U.S. begins to take weapons away in Haiti

By David Beard
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — American military patrols rolled through the capital searching for weapons Sunday after seizing 1,000 weapons at a border outpost and hundreds more at a paramilitary training base.

In another sign of change in Haiti, the voice of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide was heard on state radio for the first time in years. State media, which had banned his voice, was under the control of Haiti's coup leaders until American troops seized the installations Friday.

U.S. military police guard dogs sniffed through the Bouitillier area overlooking the capital, and convoys of armored vehicles snaked through Port-au-Prince and suburban Petionville.

"That's the mission we came here to do - disarm the military and go from there," said Army Chief Warrant Officer Roland Van Dorn, who had been in one of the helicopters providing surveillance for U.S. ground troops.

The U.S. troops are charged with providing stability and security in Haiti during the transition period before Oct. 15, when the nation's top military leaders are to resign, making way for Aristide's return.

The American mission was being debated Sunday in Washington, where the House is expected to vote this week on setting a pull-out date for American troops.

Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said the administration was "on the edge of disaster." He told NBC that U.S. troops should be pulled out "as quickly as possible, and I mean weeks - not months, not years."

White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta told CBS that American troops will "be a little more aggressive ... in regard to disarming" the Haitian paramilitary.

To Van Dorn and other troops waiting to make long-distance phone calls at the airport, the mission seemed vague and confusing. Van Dorn, 26, was reading a paperback copy of Dante's "The Inferno," while fellow Chief Warrant Officer Ron Menoher, 30, played an electronic game of golf on his Nintendo Game Boy.

"We're still feeling our way through," said U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager.

American military police removed semi-automatic weapons, machine guns, tear-gas grenades and rifles from the Admiral Killick Naval Station in Bizoton, west of the capital, late Saturday. The navy base had

Weekend marks reunion for many alums

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

AMHERST - Kean Foo, a 1994 University of Massachusetts graduate said this homecoming weekend felt like one big party with close friends and familiar sights.

Foo, a member of the Alpha Chi Rho Fraternity during his years UMass, said he came to Amherst to visit friends and spend his afternoon tailgating at the Warren G. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

School spirit soared high this homecoming weekend as UMass alumni returning to their old stomping grounds, connecting with college friends and cheering on the Minutemen football team brought back several cherished memories.

Beverly Ziomek, a 1955 graduate of the University said the school spirit is as strong as ever, but she has seen a change.

"As a freshman years ago, we had to learn the school songs," said Ziomek. "We had to wear red beanies to show our school spirit, now the students don't know the words to the school songs."

"We had a great time," said Sarah Hardy a 1994 UMass graduate from the School of Education. "A bunch of my friends from the School of Education came down."

While some like Hardy, chose to tailgate at the Warren G. McGuirk Alumni Football Stadium, others felt the uptown bars were the places to be.

A Wizard of Oz theme parade Saturday morning paved the yellow brick road to UMass for many students and alumni.

Floats created by UMass fraternity and sorority students were enjoyed on Saturday afternoon by students, alumni and the general public.

A large number of the parade observers were alumni previously involved in UMass fraternities and sororities as students.

Mark Bruno, a 1986 University graduate majoring in Urban Forestry and Landscape Operations and member of the Alpha Tau Gamma Fraternity (ATG), said he liked the tradition of the homecoming parade.

Bruno said homecoming weekend gave him an opportunity to visit with fraternity brothers from his class who he continues to stay close with.

Themes of the floats ranged from There's No Place Like Home to There's No Place Like Woodstock.

UMass cheerleaders, the Minuteman Marching Band, the Reserve Officers' Training Corps Color Guard and antique cars traveled down Fearing Street en route to the football stadium with a large crowd cheering behind them.

Eight floats were judged on creativity, enthusiasm and spirit by University alumni during the parade.

First prize went to the Iota Gamma Upsilon Sorority and the Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity for their Emerald

Turn to ALUMNI, page 2

Charges fly in Mexico

Congressman being linked to murder

By Isaac A. Levi
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — A man who confessed to a role in the assassination of a top ruling party politician told investigators Sunday the plot was masterminded by a congressman upset over plans to reform the party.

According to a statement from the attorney general's office, Jorge Rodriguez Gonzalez, who was arrested over the weekend, told police the congressman, Manuel Munoz Rocha, hired him and his brother, Fernando, to plan last week's killing of Jose Francisco Ruiz Massieu.

The congressman wanted Ruiz Massieu killed because he was a member of a new group of politicians trying to reform the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI), the attorney general quoted Jorge Rodriguez Gonzalez as saying.

Ruiz Massieu, the PRI's No. 2 official, was shot in the neck and killed Wednesday outside a Mexico City hotel. The gunman was arrested at the scene and has also confessed, police said. The slaying was the latest in a series of violent attacks that have rattled Mexico for more than a year. It also shook the PRI, in power for 65 years, which lost its first presidential candidate, Luis Donaldo Colosio, to an assassin's bullet in March.

The man who police say confessed to shooting Ruiz Massieu, 28-year-old horse trainer and farmhand Daniel Aguilar Trevino, was arraigned in a Mexico City criminal court for murder and possession of a firearm prohibited

Turn to MEXICO, page 10

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Monday Ticker

Market closes as of 4p.m. Friday, Sept. 30, 1994

Index	Close	Change
Dow Jones Industrial Average	2843.19	-11.44
Standard & Poor's 500	462.64	+0.45
Nasdaq Composite Index	764.29	+4.95
AMSE Index	458.81	+2.34

Market Reports

Compiled by Andrew Ferguson

Stocks lose steam due to computerized trading

•NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks ended mixed Friday, losing some strength late in the trading session as computerized selling strategies pushed the Dow Jones industrial average into negative territory.

The average of 30 big-name stocks closed at 3,843.19, down11.44.

The blue chip average was up as much as 20 points in the afternoon, boosted by the second consecutive day of upbeat economicnews and encouraged by a firming bond market.

The 30-year bond sank early in the day but turned around. It closed up 5-16 to yield 7.81 percent.

Stock prices were also driven higher early in the session as investors bought some star performers to add to their portfoliosbefore the end of the quarter.

Portfolio managers "need to look good for the quarter" in their reports to investors, said Trude Latimer, a stockbroker atFerguson Andrews in Charlottesville, Va.

Broad-market indexes outperformed the Dow average and ended theday higher.

The NYSE composite index rose 0.37 to 255.52. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 0.45 to 462.69. The Nasdaq composiiteindex rose 4.95 to 764.29. At the American Stock Exchange, themarket value index rose 2.34 to 458.81.

Despite the last-minute selloff in the Dow, advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 3 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume totaled a moderate 291.94 million shares, down from 302.13 million on Thursday.

Dollar surges after 11th hour trade agreement

•NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar surged against the yen Friday on areport of an 11th-hour agreement in one area of the U.S.-Japantrade dispute, but retreated from its highs after officials denieda pact had been reached.

The dollar still finished with modest gains vs. the yen and key European currencies. Analysts said heavy dollar buying indicatedthat dealers who bid the currency lower as the trade talks boggeddown in recent weeks are worried they'll be caught short in theevent of a broader-than-expected agreement.

Washington set a Friday midnight deadline for agreements to broaden the U.S. presence in several Japanese markets and cut the American trade deficit, threatening sanctions if deals aren't reached. Announcements are expected on Saturday.

Agriculture Dept. report sends wheat prices soaring

•CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures prices climbed above $4 a bushel for the first time in 18 months Friday after the Agriculture Department reported a lower U.S. wheat stockpile than traders expected.

Soybean futures neared a two-year low on news of higher-than-expected stocks. Corn futures edged higher.

The USDA report, released shortly before the markets opened, showed 2.06 billion bushels of wheat on hand in the United States as of Sept. 1 compared with trade estimates averaging 2.22 billion.

"Evidently, a lot of people were using wheat to feed livestock in June and July before prices really ran," said Joel Karlin, research analyst with Kemper Securities Inc. in Chicago.

Wheat had risen steadily since early July before setting back earlier this week after failing to crack the $4 barrier.

"A wave of emotion hit the pit and got everybody excited," said Joe Victor, marketing director for Allendale Inc., a commodities brokerage house in Crystal Lake, Ill. "I wouldn't be surprised if on Monday morning, they look back over their shoulders and say maybe they overreacted a little bit."

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, Oct. 3

Meeting — Students interested in television production at Union Video Center, UVC office near the Hatch in the Student Union, UMass, 6 p.m.

Blood Drive — Donate blood, Campus Center, UMass, 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Tuesday, Oct. 4

Meeting — Information social, Lesbian, Bisexual and Gay Alliance, Campus Center room 803, UMass, Free, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Writing Test — mandatory for all new first-year students, Bartlett Hall room 61, 7 p.m.

Music — Faculty Recital, David Sperny and Nadine Shank, Bcxanson Recital Hall, UMass, 8 p.m.

Wednesday, Oct. 5

Speaker — Judith LeBlanc, Native American activist, Student Union Ballroom, UMass, Free, 7 p.m.

Meeting — Student Government Association meeting, Commonwealth room at the Campus Center, UMass, Free, 7 p.m.

Lecture — Advances in Nursing Scholarship Colloquia, Health Care Reform: Effect on Nurses, Suzanne Gordon will be speaking, Morrill 1, UMass, 4 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Speaker — Felice Yeskel, "Making Schools Safe for Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual Youth", Campus Center room 917, UMass.

Writing Test — Mandatory for all new first-year students, Bartlett Hall room 61, 7 p.m.

Meeting — South Asian Club, learn abut the different events going on througout the semester, Campus Center room 905, 7 p.m.

Thursday, Oct. 6

Give Blood — Blood drive at the Campus Center Basement, UMass, 10:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Film — Vampyr, Herter Hall room 227, UMass, Free, 7:30 p.m.

Visual Art — Closing Reception, France '94, Herter Gallery, UMass, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Other Activities and Upcoming Events

Volunteers Needed - Campus Pond Cleanup at UMass, Sept. 27 and 28, from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. T-shirts and refreshments will be provided. Call: 545-2317.

Community Service - The Companion Program is looking for volunteers. Call 253-2591.

Internships - MASSPIRG is offering internships for the fall semester. Earn course credits. Information: 423B Student Union or call 545-0199.

Earn credits - The Peer Education Program on Sexual Harassment is recruiting 30 undergraduate men and women for its one-credit training session this semester. Information: Mike, 546-0365.

The Homework Club — Volunteers needed to help in afterschool program to help children from non-English speaking family do their homework. Information: Scott, Heap or Seng, 253-0696.

Want to be a teacher? — Students interested in becoming teacher (grages 5-12) are invited to visit the STEP Advising office, Room 125 B Furcolo Hall in the School of Education, applications for spring acceptance are available at the office, Information: 545-4397.

Survival Center fundraiser fails to fulfill expectations

By Matthew Pottinger
Collegian Correspondent

Fundraising at the University of Massachusetts did not yield the money the Amherst Survival Center was hoping for because of virtually no community participation.

The fundraiser last Wednesday at the University of Massachusetts Student Union Ballroom was needed to raise money for what organizers expect will be a "tough winter."

The fundraiser was originally planned to have run four hours, but was cut short two hours because of lack of participation.

While no goal was set for the fund raiscr, organizers said only about $10 was raised. Less than five people attended the fundraiser.

"I think it had a lot to do with the rain and advertisement," said freshman Jenn Willard, who volunteered for the event.

The Amherst Survival Center is a food pantry for poor people in Amherst and the surrounding area.

The center, whose services include free daily lunches, free clothing, an open food pantry and weekly visits by a nurse, serves between 60 and 100 people per day.

Greg Haase, a UMass senior who started working at the Survival Center about a month ago, organized the volunteer work for the fundraiser.

"It's really too bad [no one showed up]. We didn't put up posters or advertisements," he said.

Edwina Eskew, the center's volunteer coordinator hoped that enough money would be raised at the event to contend with a recent 40 percent increase in the number of people using the center.

"We're at rock bottom. That 40 percent was the killer for us," Eskew said.

"The food pantry is low," said Michael Haynes, President of the Board of Directors for the center. "If the kids have any stuff in their dorms they want to donate it's always appreciated," he said.

Haynes is discussing with Chancellor David K. Scott the possibility of putting some food donation barrels on the Campus Center Concourse.

"We want to put a box out two days a week and then people can throw in any Spaghetti-O's they don't want," Haynes said.

The Amherst Survival Center is located at 1200 North Pleasant St. in North Amherst.

Donations of food, clothing, money and time are accepted.

The Collegian
is looking for writers!
No experience necessary

If you're interested in writing for:
Black Affairs
Developing Nations
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues
Jewish Affairs
Multicultural Affairs
Women's Issues

Please come down to the Collegian Offices in the Campus Center Basement

■ alumni

continued from page 1

City: There's No Place Like Mardi Gras float.

"I think the spirit is peaking at UMass," said 1995 alumni student Ann D. Balliro.

Balliro who was one of the three alumni judges, said there were four additional floats in this year's parade.

"If you attend any UMass event, I find if I look around, there are a lot more people," said Balliro.

Foo said he saw a large increase in the number of students and alumni involved in tailgating activities this weekend.

SHOOT FOR THE COLLEGIAN
New photographers are always welcome at the Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England

Teacher for a Day

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

University of Massachusetts senior David Fontaine speaks to Professor Albey Reiner's Biology of Cancer and Aids class on Friday. Fontaine, who is in remission from non- Hodgkin's Lymphoma, spoke as part of his volunteer work for the Jimmy Fund.

Chabad House lends insight into Judaism

By Henry Brier
Collegian Staff

Shmuel Arnold, a Jewish and American history major at Hampshire College in Amherst, was looking for living quarters which would conveniently accommodate his lifestyle.

"I am a Jew, and I follow Jewish law," said the fifth year student, whose concentration is the assimilation of American Jews.

Arnold had since found Chabad House, located at 30 North Hadley Road, where he currently resides. Of six available rooms, five are full.

The religious leader of the Chabad Coalition, a Registered Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts, is Rabbi Chaim Adelman, who was recently awarded chaplaincy by the University. Hillel House had previously been the only religiously recognized Jewish organization by the administration.

As a chaplain, Rabbi Adelman works with the University of Massachusetts administration to help make informed decisions and to iron out problems which may come up.

Chabad House is open to all Jews, regardless of previous affiliation and background, said Adelman.

"Our goal is to help Jews become more observant and more familiar with the basic tenets of the Jewish faith," said Adelman.

Chabad also offers different programs, he added, which include the observation of major and minor Jewish Holidays.

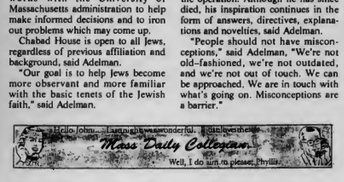
Every Sabbath, Friday through Saturday nights, services are held in the shtiebel, which is a one-room synagogue, and also complementary meals are served, although a contribution is suggested. In the event that the attendant prefers not to drive, Chabad has the capability and is willing to put him or her up.

The synagogue, located in the basement of the house, has a separation in the middle, so that men and women can pray on either side.

"This is no means to degrade one sex over the other," said Adelman. "There's a place for socializing, and it's not the synagogue. We're here to personally connect with God."

The main influence of the Chabad movement broached by Adelman was the late Menachem Mendel Schneerson, who, since 1950, had assumed leadership and spearheaded the operation. Although he has since died, his inspiration continues in the form of answers, directives, explanations and novelties, said Adelman.

"People should not have misconceptions," said Adelman, "We're not old-fashioned, we're not outdated, and we're not out of touch. We can be approached. We are in touch with what's going on. Misconceptions are a barrier."



Countries get hand

UMass student helping out in Nepal

By Earl T. Martin
Collegian Correspondent

A University of Massachusetts graduate student is breaking out of the standard educational mold often surrounding grade-conscious business students.

Julia Kreisinger, an Masters of Business Administration student, will take part in this year's Free Market Development Advisor's Program. Kreisinger, who has already spent over a year in Japan, is now in Katmandu, Nepal to provide technical assistance for a franchise bakery called "Hot Breads."

FMDAP is a U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) sponsored program. According to Program Coordinator An Trotter, the FMDAP selectively sends graduate students pursuing their MBA from colleges and universities around the country to assist companies in poor nations.

The program was started in 1992 with a two-fold mission, said Trotter. Initially, the purpose was to increase the managerial competency of the people in these emerging markets.

An additional goal was to eventually expand the number of U.S. executives who understand the business issues and economic structure of these countries.

FMDAP, administered by the Institute of International Education, implements the USAID policies by first sending each student to a small indigenous company in their respective project nation.

This year, the 12 MBA students participating in the program will be traveling primarily to places in Africa, according to Trotter. Students represent schools from all over the country, including the University of Connecticut and Chicago as well as Yale University.

The students then teach and administer business concepts such as marketing, expansion and the use of modern financial controls.

After the student has spent a year grappling with the company's problems and development, they are required to write a case study about their first-hand experience and then share this information with the business community at an annual convention.

The program is already a success, according to Trotter. She discussed another participant, Robert Carter, a graduate student of the University of Houston as an example of the program's success.

Carter helped to establish the first finance company in Nepal by assisting the business in automating its financial control system and by offering initial stock.

Because Kreisinger just arrived early in September there has been no official report on her status. She will return to UMass next fall to finish her master's degree.

■ Provost

continued from page 1

her sabbatical in Ireland and decided to go back during the summer and continue work on her research there, she said.

In order to qualify for the position she had to write a five page essay on her thoughts about the campus. Once she was notified that she had made it through the preliminary selection process, she flew back to the states and went for the interview, she said.

Chancellor David K. Scott was given recommendations of who to hire for the position and he asked Crosson to fill the slot. Once she accepted she had a month to prepare for the semester.

Crosson was already accustomed to the system and many of the people involved because of her previous positions. Following her position as deputy provost, Crosson had returned to her initial faculty position in the education department, and eventually became the department chair.

Sarah Lawrence College at Oxford

Qualified undergraduates are invited to apply for a year of study at Oxford. Individual tutorials with Oxford faculty, Oxford University lectures, and full affiliation with an Oxford college immerse students in Oxford's rich education tradition.

For information contact:
Sarah Lawrence College at Oxford
Box
Sarah Lawrence College
1 Mead Way, Bronxville, NY 10708-5999
(800) 873-4752

Peace Corps
on-campus at UMASS AMHERST

INFO MEETING: Wed., Oct. 05, 7:00 pm, Campus Center Room 804

ON-CAMPUS INTERVIEWS: By Appointment

For more information, call or visit the UMASS Amherst Peace Corps Office, 12 Draper Hall
Call: 545-2105

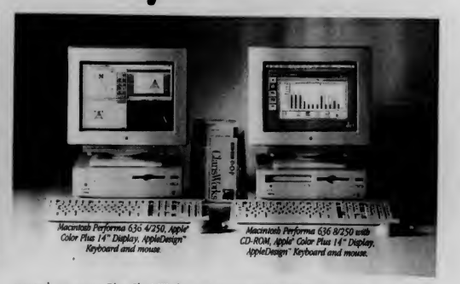
Accepted at more schools than you were.

It's everywhere you want to be.

© Visa U.S.A. Inc. 1994

Two of the most popular bundles on campus this year.

A distinctively fragrant assortment of wool, denim, rayon and poly-cotton blends.



Macintosh Performa 636 4/250, Apple Color Plus 14" Display, AppleDesign Keyboard and mouse.

Macintosh Performa 636 8/250 with CD-ROM, Apple Color Plus 14" Display, AppleDesign Keyboard and mouse.

Now you can really clean up when you buy a select Macintosh Performa. For a limited time, it comes bundled with a unique new student software set available only from Apple. It's all the software you're likely to need in college. You'll get software that takes you through every aspect of writing papers, the only personal organizer/calendar created for your student lifestyle and the Internet Companion to help you tap into on-line research resources. Plus ClarisWorks, an intuitive, integrated package with a spreadsheet, word processor, database and more. Buy a select Performa with CD-ROM, and you'll also get a multimedia library of essential reference tools. And now, with an Apple Computer Loan, you can own a Macintosh for less than a dollar a day. It's the power every student needs. The power to be your best.

Apple

Power through it.

UNIVERSITY STORE

Campus Center
545-2619

Mon.- Fri. 9a.m. - 5p.m.
Sat. 11a.m. - 3p.m.

Offer expires October 17, 1994, available only while supplies last. ©1994 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the apple logo, Macintosh, Performa and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. AppleDesign is a trademark of Apple Computer, Inc. ClarisWorks is a registered trademark of Claris Corporation. †An estimate based on an Apple Computer Loan of $1,549.15 for the Performa 636, and $1,882.59 for the Performa 636 with CD-ROM system shown above. Prices and loan amounts are subject to change without notice. See your Apple Campus Reseller or representative for current system prices. A 5.5% loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount. The interest rate is variable, based on the commercial paper rate plus 5.35%. For the month of August, 1994, the interest rate was 10.10%, with an APR of 11.36%. 8-year loan term with no prepayment penalty. The monthly payment shown assumes no deferment of principal or interest. Students may defer principal payments for up to 4 years, or until graduation. Deferment will change your monthly payments. The Apple Computer Loan is subject to credit approval.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1582

Dareene I. Hayes Editor-in-Chief — Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager — Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager — Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Cooney Advertising Production Manager — Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor — Andrew Bruce Main Features Editor
Chris Taylor Senior Basics Editor — Erich Martin Women's Issues Editor
Andrew Ferguson Business Editor — Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Pearson Yacavo Developing Features Editor — Jeff Krachkovsky Finance Manager
Traci Monahan Editorial Assistant Editor — Jen Rocco Circulation Manager
Richard Hackett Copy Editor — Eric Arenson Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Senior Copy Editor — Maureen Mazerolle Senior Bookkeeper
Kai Michelle Lugo Photo Editor — Matty Pazos Classified Advertising
Kelly Young News Editor — Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Nathan K. Martin Photographics Editor — Turtles Publications Printing Services

The Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life and became a broadsheet newspaper one year later. In 1906, The Massachusetts Collegian changed its name to The Collegian. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet newspaper since January 1986. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Watching our passive decline

The Public was bored.

It had come home from a hard day's labor, and after a quick meal had slumped down on the couch in exhaustion. The Next Generation was running around the room and up the stairs, yelling at the wall and making painfully obvious observations. The Public turned on the television, turned it up loud. The Media, with its eager and serious face, was doing an interview with the Government.

"Look, look! That's the Government on T.V.!" called the Next Generation. "Neat!"

The Public shrugged. "Sure it is." The familiar face of Corporate Manager was hovering around the Public's mind, snapping given name it remembered the names and jobs of it's co-workers. The Public, however, had taken the abuse with strength, and silently continued on.

The Government was explaining how it had ordered the bombing of Scary Evil Dictator for being mean. The Media nodded seriously in understanding. Then it cut to pictures of the Happy Soldier, giving a thumbs up. Then to the scowling portrait of the target.

"Who's that?" asked the Next Generation, letting it's head rest heavily on the floor.

"That's Scary Evil Dictator."

"But who's that?"

The two girls gave the public "Why don't you go pay" speaking made the Public wear. People got bored and complained and yelled at work, and the Public had too many useless words running around it's head. It had begun to simply wish for silence. The stream of thought underscored by needles of voices.

The Next Generation ran up the stairs.

People were dying now. Streets of corpses, stiffening and strewn about, and the soft wail of a child running. "Fighting Scary Evil Dictator. The Public cringed. What had the world become? Violence was this great human civilization, this fabled New World Order. These centuries of anarchy, death as its law. It sighed, and wondered if the Government had actually accomplished anything.

The Next Generation came back down the stairs, making buzzing noises. It held a plastic model airplane, an old German dive-bomber. "Boom!" pretended, then ran around shooting invisible targets.

The Media, after breaking to allow the display of the violence, continued its straight faced reporting and flashed the face of Violent Black Man in the corner of the screen, his visage now calm. The Public shook its head. It felt so sick of hearing about him. The Media said that the judge had dismissed a piece of evidence because of illegal police procedure

"Stop running around, please." Why don't you go upstairs and do that?" the Public shouted abruptly, a sudden impulse of anger welling up inside. It could not believe the judge had done that in the case. How could anyone come to justice in this system, especially in a case this obvious? It made the Public sick to see such things happening. It sometimes wished they could just take some people and lock them away forever. You could just tell with some people.

Nathan Crick

The Public took the remote control and switched the channel, just as Happy Man began his sports coverage. The sitcom Smiling Unreality was still on, and the main character was apparently in some tricky situation again. The Public put it's head back on the couch, the laugh track massaging its ears.

It wondered what it was doing with it's life. The bills continued to come, linking chains around its feet, keeping it laboring, laboring as the voices around it mumbled and laughed. It saw an image far away, the sun setting, lying upon some lonely beach. It could almost feel the breeze.

"Look! There's that Big Scary Man again!" shouted the Next Generation, as it sat on the couch, fiddling with its plane.

The Public opened its eyes, and saw the Government on the screen again as the half hour show came on. Exploitation "No, that's the Government." the Public mumbled.

"Oh, can I watch cartoons?" the Next Generation asked.

"No. Why don't you go play upstairs?"

"But I want to watch cartoons."

"No!" the Public yelled. "Go upstairs!" it shouted, grasping the remote control in its fist. "Just leave me alone please!"

The Next Generation ran back down the stairs, making buzzing noises. It held a plastic model airplane, an old German dive-bomber. "Boom!" pretended, then ran around shooting invisible targets.

The Media, after breaking to allow the display of the violence, continued its straight faced reporting and flashed the face of Violent Black Man in the corner of the screen, his visage now calm. The Public shook its head. It felt so sick of hearing about him. The Media said that the judge had dismissed a piece of evidence because of illegal police procedure

"Stop running around, please." Why don't you go upstairs and do that?" the Public shouted abruptly, a sudden impulse of anger welling up inside. It could not believe the judge had done that in the case. How could anyone come to justice in this system, especially in a case this obvious? It made the Public sick to see such things happening. It sometimes wished they could just take some people and lock them away forever. You could just tell with some people.

The Public took the remote control and switched the channel, just as Happy Man began his sports coverage. The sitcom Smiling Unreality was still on, and the main character was apparently in some tricky situation again. The Public put it's head back on the couch, the laugh track massaging its ears.

It wondered what it was doing with it's life. The bills continued to come, linking chains around its feet, keeping it laboring, laboring as the voices around it mumbled and laughed. It saw an image far away, the sun setting, lying upon some lonely beach. It could almost feel the breeze.

"Look! There's that Big Scary Man again!" shouted the Next Generation, as it sat on the couch, fiddling with its plane.

The Public opened its eyes, and saw the Government on the screen again as the half hour show came on. Exploitation "No, that's the Government." the Public mumbled.

"Oh, can I watch cartoons?" the Next Generation asked.

"No. Why don't you go play upstairs?"

"But I want to watch cartoons."

"No!" the Public yelled. "Go upstairs!" it shouted, grasping the remote control in its fist. "Just leave me alone please!"

The Next Generation ran back down the stairs, making buzzing noises. It held a plastic model airplane, an old German dive-bomber. "Boom!" pretended, then ran around shooting invisible targets.

The Media, after breaking to allow the display of the violence, continued its straight faced reporting and

Trapped by Superwoman & Mrs. Cleaver

The battle between the sexes has raged on for many years.

More recently though, there is an internal struggle that perpetuates these gender wars. With the current ability by employers to bring more women into the work force, women themselves seem to sabotage their own efforts towards gender equality.

Men have won the current power struggle, whether they are aware of it or not, through years of mind, a dominance over women. This self is, even-present, dominance is continuously being passed on to the images we see in the internet, books of it's co-workers. The Public, however, had taken the abuse with strength, and silently continued on.

Tara Ruelle

The dual role is a challenge many women choose not to tackle. Those who do pursue this challenge are blamed for the destruction of the traditional American family." Women who are forced to work for financial reasons are still subjected to cruelty by those who feel women have no right in pursuing their own "American Dream."

Yet the door to opportunity is starting to open now for those of us that can overcome our own insecurities. There is a current thrust towards hiring women and minorities in many sectors of the work force. Though seemingly a positive approach to bringing equality at all levels, it may be doing more harm than good.

Women are now finding offers for more nominal roles in the work force, but are second guessing their own abilities. Without just accepting more prominent positions, confident of their own merits, women are painfully wondering whether or not they were hired to fill a gender quota.

Because of this reaction, there is an internal struggle within women who still feel like second-class citizens. Again, this is an idea that has been implanted in many young girls heads throughout their early years. Even cartoons rarely portray a female as a fearless heroine.

A greater problem between the sexes, even still, is the glaring division that remains. Women and men will always be at odds with misconceptions that remain including "men can never truly understand what we go through." or, "women don't know how easy they got it." We never can achieve or understand anything as a people, without sitting down and telling each other about it.

The images we have created for each other will always leave us powerless, without someone there to correct them. Though, in my opinion, men still have the upper hand, they cannot truly be happy until they understand the female gender better.

Women, on the other hand, need to change their perceptions about their own gender before tackling the opposite sex. The basic attributes, accurate assumption one can make about these issues is, "united we stand, and divided we fall."

Women need to empower themselves, and in doing so, ignore or move on from the old ideals of the "perfect woman." Many doors are now starting to creep open for women in the work force, we must take those jobs, if only to prove something to ourselves.

What television and media now project as the modern woman should not be accepted. I guess that if you are willing to sacrifice one part of yourself, you can achieve the title of the "90s Woman," but if you are not willing to do so then you better settle for something less, or rather something realistic.

Tara Ruelle is a U Mass student

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

BOOPSIE! MOM'S HOME! HAPPY? TRY FOR 'EM!
I'M ALWAYS GETTING DOWN ITS A POINT OF HONOR.
WE'VE DECIDED TO RATTLE YOUR CAGE AND GUESS WHO WE PICKED?
BETTER ARRANGE-JOHN HUNTINGTON, MINISTER OF LIGHT IN JOHN ROBERTS MOVEMENT OF STRATEGIC INNER AWARENESS
PLEASE PLEASE, DON'T INVITE ME
AND WE WANT YOU TO BE SARA'S GOD-FATHER, JOHN.

Opinion/Editorial

BUT THE REAL STORY HERE AT THE OJ TRIAL IS THE MEDIA FRENZY..
THIS REPORTER HAS NEVER SEEN SUCH A PREPOSTEROUS LEVEL OF COVERAGE...
It has finally come to this.
MAYBE I SHOULD DO A CARTOON ABOUT IT

The true value of little brothers

Guilty as charged. I beat up my younger brother. I also have loving nicknames for him (e.g. Bucky the Beaver for his cute little buck teeth). Now I'm not just talking about innocent pinches or even foot-extended-as-he-walks-by maneuver. I mean serious harassment. I have to admit I enjoy it too much to feel guilt. After all, it builds character.

That's my side as a big sister — to help the pre-pubescent little guy on his journey through the rough realities of life. But enough about what I do for him. I like to shed some light on why little brothers are actually good to have around, mine especially.

It's 1984 and my brother and I have been shuttled off to my father's for Thanksgiving dinner. He was seven. I was 13 or so. I'll be honest: it was a rough holidays for me. My father had invited his present-day girlfriend and company (i.e. her five kids) for some quality holiday celebration. I, however, wasn't in the mood to celebrate.

My mom had just gotten remarried to the chief of police (my grandmother spent the entire meal bashing my mother for who-it's going to be there to defend herself, and my dad certainly wasn't going to do it), and my long-lost relatives from Louisiana unexpectedly showed up with boxes of scented soap for everyone — what the hell was I going to do with seven bars of Strawberry Patch soap? But most importantly, the Brady Bunch-like setup.

So there I was, surrounded by strange screaming kids, a bunch of screwball adults, runny potatoes, tears ready to trample my face, praying that God would take pity on me and somehow knock me unconscious. Then I heard my brother whisper something to my father.

"It's happening again..."

"What is?"

Christina Levere

He pointed under the table, between his legs.

"You know — it's growing again!"

Forks and mouths dropped. Yes, we all knew to what he was referring.

"Dad! I can't make it stop!"

Now Bucky was really concerned. Gosh, I almost felt sorry for the little guy. He put his hands under the table and pushed down, not so subtly grunting.

"Ugh! Ugh! Go down!"

Clearly he was upset. He didn't know yet about IT and just what IT did, whenever IT wanted to. But the rest of us knew. So my father left the table with him, you know, to have one of those infamous talks.

Suddenly I realized there was a smile on my face — an enormous one. Not only had he made a complete fool out of himself in front of the entire table, but he had helped me forget the not-so-Norman-Rockwell-like dinner and its participants. Bucky had come through for his big sister without even knowing it.

It's that kind of stupid stuff that makes life a little bit easier to handle. Absurd things are funny and I needed that. And over the years I've come to see just how much I needed him. To make me a little less serious. To make me remember that laughter really is the best medicine. I realized that little brothers are good for something other than punching bags.

Not that I regret body-slamming him into the car when we were vacationing in Niagara Falls when Bucky made the mistake of spitting on me; or putting little holes in his socks so his big toe would always poke through when he baby- powdered my room. But I have a new respect for him. He makes me laugh, he helps me through the hard times, and best of all, he has a lot of character. Hey, I wonder how he got so much of that?

Christina Levere is a Collegian staff member.

Letters to the Editor

Words of caution to campus

To the editor:

Henry Brier's cautionary column in last Tuesday's Collegian contained timely reminders to all on campus. This advice bears repeating and some extension.

Bicycling is a burgeoning phenomenon in the 90s. The immense popularity of the mountain-style bike has generated an encouraging increase in bike use across the land of automobiles. But bikers are not always minding the rules of the road and motorists not looking or seeing the dangers created when they share the road. Pedestrians, as always, are caught in the middle.

Mr. Brier implies that in the accident that injured his wife and sent him to the hospital, the pedestrian was primarily at fault. Not being a witness I cannot assign blame, but having had a number of bike accidents myself over the last 30 years, I can say that fault in the collision of two moving objects usually lies with both parties.

My observations of bikers, motorists and pedestrians (rollerbladers, too) on campus is that the users of the first two categories too often fit the definition of speeding, i.e. moving too fast for conditions, and that the latter are too often inconsistent and unpredictable in movement.

Words of advice: them to pedestrians — be aware that bikers and motor vehicles use the campus walkways; to bikers and motorists — campus ways are primarily walkways, not highways; to motorists — campus ways are primarily walkways, which vehicles use at the indulgence of pedestrians.

And a final note to bikers: Register your bike with the University police (no charge?) and lock your bike with a real "U-type" lock!

John McDonald
Collection Development
University Library

GSS chooses new vice-president

To the editor:

On behalf of the Executive Committee of the Graduate Student Senate, I would like to inform the graduate student community that Iulia Johnson resigned from her position as vice-president of the GSS effective September 26, 1994.

Following procedures outlined in the constitution and by- laws of the GSS, the Senate, at its first regularly scheduled meeting on September 27, 1994, unanimously elected Iulia Mahoney to serve as the vice-president protem. She will serve in that capacity for the remainder of the term.

As you will recall, Iulia Mahoney served as GSS vice- president last year, and has continued to work closely with the Senate on many graduate student concerns, including the Graduate Women's Network. Her experience and commitment will provide continuity and leadership for the work of the GSS.

We appreciate the confidence and trust shown by the Senate and graduate students in our efforts to address issues of concern to the graduate student community.

Prasad Vennapusal
GSS President

This letter was signed on behalf of the GSS Executive Committee.

Sports rivalry could be great

To the editor:

Why is BC backing down?

A great injustice is happening again. Deep in the "esteemed" college bowels of Conte Forum those sharp minds who control the sports agenda are leaving a great opportunity on the table.

I'm talking about a UMass vs. BC basketball rivalry. College Sports Magazine has ranked our "public" university #2 in the polls for preseason lead by Coach John Calipari. For years Coach Cal has been pushing to get his team back in the Boston circuit.

With the tens of thousands of UMass alumni in the Boston area this would create one of the fastest and biggest rivalries on a local level in history. Recently a deal was in the works for the first college basketball game at the new Shawmut Center to actually include UMass and Boston College. I know Coach Cal wanted to do it but the deal flew away as fast an eagle soars.

Obviously Mr. Gladchuk and other BC "brats" do not want UMass in their territory at any cost. I'm sure the true BC sports fan would not shy away from such competition. After Chet lost his football and hockey coaches in embarrassing fashion, I'm sure he doesn't want to be embarrassed again, especially by UMass — a public university! Remember Mr. Gladchuk, "you can't score if you don't shoot the ball." Let's not waste this opportunity.

Mark S. Yetman
South Boston

Information incorrect in article

To the editor:

I am writing to express my disappointment with presentation of contradicting information in two recent news articles pertaining to Bell Hooks's campus visit. The articles were front page stories on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week, and were written by Matthew Pottinger. Tuesday's article stated that Bell Hooks is an English and women studies professor at Oberlin College. Wednesday's article stated that she is an English professor at City College in New York. Tuesday's article stated that "her most new book," which she would be signing copies of on Tuesday, is Sisters of the Yam: Black Women and Self Recovery. Wednesday's article stated that her new book, which she signed copies of is entitled Killing Rage. It is extremely unfortunate that Tuesday's article, which I assume was intended to inform the campus community about the nature of Bell Hooks' visit, was so inaccurate. I hope that in the future the Collegian will take greater measures to ensure accuracy in its reporting.

Lia Williams
Department of Sociology

Arts & Living

Redford's Quiz Show a piercing examination of fifties' Americana

By Jon Lupo
Collegian Staff

QUIZ SHOW
DIRECTED BY ROBERT REDFORD
WITH JOHN TURTURRO, ROB MORROW, RALPH FIENNES AND PAUL SCOFIELD

There's an old line that says the bigger the lie, the more people will believe. Today, it seems a fact of life. With cynicism and distrust running rampant, it's easier for people to accept deception as the rule rather than the exception.

But back in 1958, America was, to say the least, a very different country. Trust was a given, and television was king (seeing is believing, right?). So when it was revealed that one of it's most popular programs, the game show "Twenty–One" was guilty of giving its contestants the answers to the questions before the show, America was shaken.

Director Robert Redford recreates this pivotal period in Americana as a kind of an end to the post–World War II innocence; a fable of pop–cultural history. Drawing from a sterling cast, Redford has made the first must–see movie of the fall season. And even if Redford holds back — the film ends up being a bit too reverent — Quiz Show still reveals itself as a handsome, thoughtful piece of filmmaking.

In 1958, "Twenty–One" was America's favorite game show, a ratings powerhouse that had America glued to its collective sets whenever it aired. The hero of the moment was Herbert Stempel (John Turturro), a working class egghead from Queens. Once the wimpy nerd, Stempel's know–it–all brain transformed him into the toast of the neighborhood — and the country.

NBC and Geritol, the show's network and sponsor, were also pleased; as Stempel's winnings rose, so did the ratings. However, when the points began to plateau, "Twenty–One" producers Dick Enright (David Paymer) and Albert Freedman (Hank Azaria) needed a new hero.

That hero's name was Charles Van Doren (Ralph Fiennes), a popular Columbia professor who is also part of one of America's foremost intellectual families (his father, Mark, is a Pulitzer Prize–winning poet; his mother, Dorothy, a magazine editor and novelist). Doren is the exact opposite of Stempel: suave, good–looking...and not Jewish. Enright and Freedman know he's the one. After tricking Stempel into throwing the match, Van Doren assumes his place.

Enter Congressional investigator Richard Goodwin (Rob Morrow), who probes allegations by a ruined Stempel that the quiz game is a fraud. Stempel claims that if he received the answers then so did Van Doren. The gig is up — and the cover–up has begun.

From the stunner of an opening scene, Redford has captured the era with a inner glow that not only nostalgicizes but mesmerizes. It was a time of promise, to be sure, but Redford doesn't fall into the trap of over– emphasizing the wide–eyed innocence. That's what makes the "Twenty–One" deception so hard to believe and so plausible at the same time.

However, the best moments of Quiz Show aren't on the TV program stage or during the investigation, but in the complicated relationships between the characters. While the bonds between Goodwin and Van Doren and Stempel and his wife are intriguingly played out, the central conflict here is between the two generations of the Van Doren family.

It's in these subtle, electric scenes that Quiz Show finds its soul. The film's best moments happen between them: a late– night snack that proves quietly revelatory or Charles' confession of his wrongdoing in his father's lecture hall. And as portrayed by Scofield and Fiennes, it becomes more than the meeting of two superb actors, it's a powerful, moving feat of characterization. In these handful of scenes, the film achieves its richest heights. (The emphasis on Mark and Charles is also telling of Redford's career as both Ordinary People and A River Runs Through It are essentially father and son tales.)

Quiz Show is ostensibly about the decay of America's ethics, or in Oliver Stone–like shorthand, how the media became bad, very bad. Redford doesn't simplify the situation, if anything, he's too restrained. As the conspiracy begins to unfold, Redford plays his hand way too quickly. The film could've used at least another half hour — not to fill out the blanks necessarily, but to flesh them out. In the end, Morrow's Goodwin remains a cipher, the NBC and Geritol heads (one of whom is playfully acted by Martin Scorsese) end up colorless villains.

If some of the supporting characters are a bit underplayed, it's not for lack of trying. Morrow, saddled with the impossible task of trying to make a Bah–ston accent plausible, the "Northern Exposure" star tries his hardest to carve a persona out of an underwritten role. John Turturro does his best work as the disgraced Stempel; his scenes have a maniac intensity only matched by Scofield and Fiennes. For what it's worth (not much), all three deserve Oscar consideration.

In the days of big budget explosions and graphic sex, a movie about a 36–year–old game show scandal may not seem like the makings of a blockbuster. Yet Quiz Show, despite minor flaws, delivers a blockbuster of illusive proportions. It's a tale of good and evil, guilt and innocence...and the America caught in the middle. B+

COURTESY BARRY WETCHER

Ralph Fiennes, Christopher McDonald, and John Turturro star in Quiz Show.

You believe in the Man in the Moon. You believe in the Coach Barry. Your mother. Tooth fairy. Easter bunny. Santa Claus. And, to top it all, you know the Massachusetts Daily Collegian Cooks like you're gonna be single.

BEE BOP

If you've got a good vibe you can snap your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum. Mass Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

Research Interviewers
Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Monday–Friday, 5pm–10pm, Saturday 11am–5pm and Sunday 3pm–9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.

We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Interested candidates, please call between 9am–7pm, Monday–Friday, (413) 586-8635.

Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer

Abt

* * IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT * *

The next Writing Program Placement Tests will be offered on the following dates:

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1994 and WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1994
7:00 PM BARTLETT 61

This test may be taken only once.
Students should pre-register for ENGLWP. 112.
Students do not need to register for the test.

If it ain't broke, we don't fix it

MONRO MUFFLER/BRAKE

mufflers • brakes • shocks • springs • alignments
tires • front wheel drive experts

Hadley 360 Russell St. 586-0892
Northampton 326 King St. 586-3266
Chicopee 461 Memorial Dr. 594-9161
Wilbraham 1971 Boston Road 543-8027
W. Springfield 777 Riverdale St. 739-3860

90 days same as cash!

Coupon Specials

Monro Muffler Brake
Oil, lube & filter
$16.99
Includes up to 5 quarts Kendall motor oil, new Kendall oil filter, chassis lube and free undercar inspection. Available for most vehicles. Please call for an appointment. Additional charge for filters on some vehicles.
Coupon valid through 10/22/94
7777

Monro Muffler Brake
$20 off wheel alignments
Take $20 off our regular price on any 2-wheel or 4-wheel alignment service with this coupon. Coupon cannot be used in conjunction with any other offer. Please call for an appointment.
Coupon valid through 10/22/94
7778

40,000 mile limited treadwear warranty from $37.95
Free brake inspection any time!
With no obligation on your part. We only make repairs with your permission. We only recommend repairs if they are necessary.

J.CREW
WAREHOUSE SALE
Fashions from the pages of the J.Crew catalog discounted 50%–70%
October 3–5 9am–9pm
October 6 9am–5pm
University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Mullins Center
VISA and MasterCard accepted.
Directions from the South: Springfield, Hartford, New York
Directions from the North: Greenfield, Vermont, New Hampshire

Liz Phair delivers with latest release

WHIP-SMART
LIZ PHAIR
MATADOR/ATLANTIC RECORDS

COURTESY STEPHEN APICELLA-HITCHCOCK
Liz Phair

Rock Goddess. Sex Queen. Girl Next Door. Liz Phair wears many different faces. Each one as intriguing and misleading as the next, but all adding to the myth that Phair has managed to cleverly create in a remarkably short period of time.

When she quietly slipped into the music scene last year with her debut Exile In Guyville, she might as well have been just another lonely girl with a notebook full of verse and a guitar. But Phair is no fool. She knows, as well as Madonna, that a little controversy goes a long way. By stating that her album was a song by song answer to Mick and the boys sexual male swagger, and then tossing in a hefty handful of four letter words for good measure, it wasn't long until she had the gossip-hungry media eating out of the palm of her hand.

Suddenly before the little indie-boys next door could try to spot the irony, Phair was claiming underground credibility, while at the same time striking some sultry poses for every magazine imaginable. Luckily for her she can have her cake and eat it too, since she just happens to be a tunesmith of top caliber.

With Whip-Smart Phair has avoided any sort of sophomore slump, and happily stomped down on the fingers of those who pointed her out to be just another one album wonder. Whip-Smart is nothing less than brilliant, delivering on the promise that Exile In Guyville hinted at, and then going a bit further. There isn't a dud presented amongst the fourteen tracks presented here. From the delicate musings of "Shane," to the revved-up power pop of "Supernova," Phair has managed to create a body of songs that are all good enough to stand on their own, but at the same time work as a collective whole.

Unlike Guyville which had a tendency to sometimes float away into light folky territory, the songs on Whip-Smart are much more straight forward, unashamed to revel in their traditional rock structures and often complimenting Phair's sometimes dead-pan voice.

While many other acts are good at drawing attention themselves, Phair can play the media game but at the same time delivers the goods. A (Matt Audette)

DEFINITELY MAYBE OASIS
SONY/CREATION

When I left England a couple of weeks ago Oasis were the latest hype-pumped heroes of the notoriously fickle and self- important British press. By now they might well have been consigned to the faddish wilderness of arrogant young darlings who pout for too many magazine covers (see Happy Mondays, EMF, Huggy Bear). But who cares if Oasis can conquer the Promised Land of Corporate Grunge?

The (contrived) cover of this album might anticipate Oasis' US fate. A strategically placed photo of the legendary "soccer" star George Best would in Britain be a metaphor for the mercurial genius to which Oasis aspire; in the US, all it will conjure up will be bemused bafflement, for how many natives will know who he is? Oasis' Englishness may like (proper) football become a world-wide success except in the USA.

But what of the songs? This is not the bitter limeyness of Suede or Blur that Pearl Jam fans would profess to loathe. As with nearly all the bands on the ultra-hip British Creation label, Oasis are very derivative and retrospective. Opener "Rock 'N' Roll Star" is an innocent starstruck self-confidence like on the Byrd's more cynical "So You Wanna Be A Rock N' Roll Star". "Cigarettes and Alcohol" with joyous swagger rips off T-Rex, while on "Digsy's Dinner" you could swear that Liam Gallagher is a pseudonym for Ian Brown, and this was the return of the Stone Roses after their five-year hiatus.

So, I'm not saying believe the hype, but there are better British bands than Lush. Generation Xers might even wonder why they go see relic bands such as "The Dead" or "The Floyd" (the most evil British export since taxed tea) when there are some exciting new bands around not conforming to the slacker (lack of) ethic. At the very least, Oasis do a better karoke version of the Stones (and infinite other bands) than the group themselves. Will Oasis and this LP crack the US? Definitely maybe. B (Martyn Bone)

Trax On Trax Off

STRANGER THAN FICTION
BAD RELIGION
ATLANTIC RECORDS

The condemnation of long-time punk icons Bad Religion by the indie-rock world began nearly a full year prior to the release of their Atlantic debut. The first accusing fingers were pointed by the ardent fans of independent music who seem to feel that nothing worthwhile could ever come out of a major label.

The band did little to ease such worries in the coming months, next abandoning the familiar environment of their own Epitaph recording studios and then handing over production control to "Nevermind" engineer Andy Wallace (who Kurt Cobain accused of making that album sound "more like Motley Crue than a punk record").

Bad omens aside, however, it is the music itself which is the only true measure of an album's worth, the ultimate test of a band's credibility.

Unfortunately, Bad Religion fails.

"Stranger Than Fiction" presents us with a new, candy-coated Bad Religion. Long gone is the raw fury of their earlier albums. In its place we find not the clever song-writing and engaging vocals of "Recipe For Hate," but instead glitzy guitars and an overdose of harmonies sweet enough to spoil your supper.

Once known for his urgent, rapid-fire vocals, frontman Greg Graffin has adopted a more leisurely, sing-along style which can be easily digested by the average MTV viewer.

The group's overall sound has undergone a similar transformation. Songs like "Better Off Dead" and "Slumber" would sound right at home on a mix tape wedged between the Lemonheads and Soul Asylum. Even the re-recording of their psuedo-classic "21st Century Digital Boy" has been stripped of most of it's original intensity for the sake of pop accessibility.

At times, the production is so glossy, the vocals so laid-back, and the guitars so unthreatening that it's easy to forget that this is supposed to be a punk album.

Bad Religion have become an unintentional parody of themselves. The very qualities which defined their distinctive sound have been distorted to the point of caricature and the result is a lethargic album which is bland at best. C- (Matthew Justin Faerber)

Experiencing the hits, misses at Big E: thrills, chills and a whole lot of livestock

By Jon Lupo
Matt Audette
and Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

On Saturday, Oct. 1, the Arts and Living Staff (made up of trusty editor Jon Lupo and crack associate editors Matt Audette, Tara MK Connelly and Mike MacLean) decided to tackle their toughest assignment yet - covering the Big E. We realized it wasn't any ordinary assignment, as the Big E isn't any ordinary state fair. So, armed with our press passes and plenty of spending money, we ventured where no Arts and Living Staff had gone before...West Springfield.

Here, then, is a no-holds-barred account of our Big E adventure:

11:30 a.m. The adventure begins.

11:31 We realize we don't know how to get there.

11:45 We find directions and begin the long trek. The essentials: Lupo drove, Audette navigated, and MacLean and Connelly rode behind. It was one of those soul-searching times for all of us. Conversation ran the gamut from nuclear war, environmental conservation to why Audette thought the Kinks were better than the Beatles.

12:32 p.m. We arrive in West Springfield. We decide to have lunch at McDonald's. Tara spilled her soda, Matt told us how to make fake IDs, Jon tells this disgusting story about how he once went to McDonald's and this woman started going to the bathroom in the middle of the restaurant. We leave.

1:00 Arrived at the Big E. Spent a while meandering through craft area. Realized how many useless things were being sold. Matt vows to find the place that sells cheesy concert shirts. Walked by reproduction of the Gilbert House built in the 1700s. After discovering the real thing was in West Brookfield, Matt attempted to gain free admission into the house because he lives in West Brookfield. He even showed the lady his license. Lady in dopey Puritan outfit said no.

1:15 Dodged marching band on way to avenue of various buildings housing specialties of all the New England states. Since it had just begun to rain, we decide it's time to get inside.

1:30 By far, Vermont was the best house. Totally captivated by mechanical dolls singing about dairy farming, we were up to our asses in cheese displays. The Massachusetts house was pretty lame - with the exception of a lottery booth outside. Matt blew $5 on two scratch tickets, Tara won four bucks and broke even. Jon and Matt lost Tara in the throng of people trying to get free food. Jon and Matt were mesmerized by the giant tank of tobacco spit on display.

1:40 Tara met Mike outside and went to the Rhode Island house. Very posh. Mike commented on how they ignored to represent the more poverty-stricken areas, although who wanted to pay eight bucks to see the sleazy part of Rhode Island. Tara bought a great stuffed clam. They couldn't see all of house because a big line had formed at the Dell's Lemonade stand. Mike was upset. He loved Dell's lemonade.

2:00 Finally met up with Jon and Matt. Proceeded to arcade to get out of the freezing downpour. Played Star Trek pin ball for 45 minutes. Tara got highest score with 300,000,00. Jon got an analysis on his sexual prowess for fifty cents (according to the print-out, Jon is a wild sexual animal). Jon starts pointing this out to anyone who will listen. He gets an offer from the hairy woman who runs the camel rides.

2:30 Decided to play one of those rigged midway games. In this particular one, you had to place fifty cents on a color and then see if a plastic ball will land on the color. Matt wins a big stuffed wrinkled dog. We nick-name him "sassy." People start looking at us funny, I mean haven't they ever seen wet college students frolicking in the clam chowder tent with a stuffed dog named Sassy. Jeesh.

3:11 Itching to try one of the many midway rides, we choose to try our luck on the Haunted Ghost Ride. Plucking down 2 bucks each (!!) we are strapped into rickety carts and dragged through a dark tunnel with paper mache monsters taped to the wall. The scariest thing about the ride was fearing we'd get thrown off the track and fall down the four perilous inches to the ground.

3:57 We decide to head to the livestock tent, mainly because Matt is feeling a bit homesick. After perusing the cows, we head to the llamas, where we learn many interesting facts: llamas are mainly a show animal and, although it is eaten in other countries, in America, eating a llama is like eating someone's pet dog. We leave.

4:22 The rain is getting unbearable, so we decide to head home. It was a long, eventful day. As we ponder our great Big E adventure, we look forward to next year, to another Big E. We all fall happily asleep. Including Jon.

Some of the names, places and events were changed to protect the innocent from being included in this article. No animals were hurt during the writing of this article, except, of course, for Jon's ego.*

COURTESY DAN WINTERS
Bad Religion

JHP Northampton Center for the Arts present
TORI AMOS

WITH SPECIAL GUEST PETER STUART
THUR OCT 20 • 8PM
John M. Greene Hall, Smith College
Northampton
All seats $19.50 except...
Make a contribution of $30.00 or greater to The Center for the Arts and receive preferred orchestra seating. For these seats only call The Center for the Arts at 584-7327 Mon-Sat 10-4pm
ALL TIX NORTHAMPTON BOX OFFICE 150 MAIN ST.
413-586-8686 • 800-THE TICK

The Collegian understands your needs. We hear your concerns and are sympathetic to your worries. In fact we have taken measures to insure that we deal with these issues...

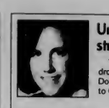
The Collegian ...
Looking out for our readers who are looking out for us as we are looking out for those who are...

On the day of the apocalypse Gail finally revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her "Mrs. Pretty" make-up kit in the 3rd grade.
Meet Daffy Collegian
"Make America Now"

TONIGHT AT THE
TOCI
THE OCEAN SPRAY FOOTBALL CHALLENGE
OFFICIAL NFL PRIZES!
8:00 P.M.
16 OZ. BUD BOTTLE $2.00
MUNCHIES
11TH FLOOR CAMPUS CENTER
MON. - FRI. 11:30 A.M. - 1:00 A.M.
SATURDAY 4:00 P.M. - 1:00 A.M.

CAREER FAIR
October 12, 1994
OLDE, America's Full Service Discount Broker℠ is looking for motivated people to establish a career in the brokerage business.
OLDE offers:
12-18 month paid training program
Potential six-figure income
Excellent benefits
If you possess excellent communication skills, general market knowledge and the desire to excel, see us at the Career Fair on October 12, 1994.
If you are unable to attend the Career Fair call:
1 800 937-0606
or send resume to:
OLDE Discount Stockbrokers
National Recruiting
751 Griswold Street
Detroit, MI 48226
OLDE DISCOUNT STOCKBROKERS
Member NYSE and SIPC
An Equal Opportunity Employer

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Sports Weekend Homecoming Wrap-Up
Monday, October 3, 1994



Undefeated streak snapped
The UMass field hockey team dropped their first game in the Megan Donnelly era yesterday with a 2-0 loss to Old Dominion. Story page 8.

Patriots capture third straight win
New England quarterback Drew Bledsoe passed for 334 yards and Matt Bahr hit a last-second field goal, to give the Patriots a 17-16 victory over the Green Bay Packers. Story page 9.

Unbeaten and still No. 1
No 1. Florida beat Mississippi 38-14 to remain atop the college football polls despite a poor performance by their Heisman Trophy candidate quarterback Terry Dean. Story page 9.

Men's soccer starting to roll
UMass Coach Sam Koch and the men's soccer team pounded St. Joseph's 4-1 for their third straight victory. Story on page 8.

Minutemen win big at Homecoming

Led by over 300 yards by Rene Ingoglia, UMass defeats University of Rhode Island Rams

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

"It was just one of those days," said University of Massachusetts fullback Rene Ingoglia.

Just one of those days resulted in a 22-12 Minutemen victory over Rhode Island in the annual Homecoming game on Saturday afternoon before a crowd of 10,812 at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

UMass	22
URI	12

Just one of those days produced nine sacks [led by Brian Corcoran's three] and 14 pass deflections [three Minutemen had three each] from the Massachusetts defense.

And just one of those days also turned into a record-setting performance for the All-American fullback candidate. Ingoglia, the Yankee Conference rushing leader, ran for 313 yards on 28 carries [11.2 yards per carry], including two spectacular runs of 84 yards and 75 yards, both for touchdowns.

HOMECOMING USM '94

"The offensive line did a great job controlling the line of scrimmage," said Ingoglia. "We were a little slow on offense getting drives going in the beginning, but with big plays like that, it compensates for it."

The 313 yards broke the Massachusetts game-rushing record set by Garry Pearson [288 yards in 1982] as well as the Yankee Conference record, set by URI's Pat Abbruzzi's 306 yard game in 1952.

"He's a special player," said Coach Mike Hodges. "He's something."

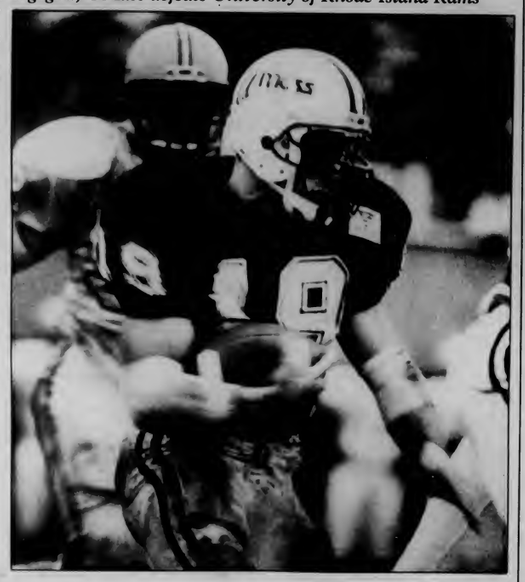
On only his third carry of the afternoon, Ingoglia ran for a loss of six yards, just the second time this season he has been pushed back for a loss behind the line of scrimmage.

From that play on, Ingoglia put on his head-turning show, frustrating the Ram defense by running through them up the middle, and by them on the outside.

"He's a good back," said Rhode Island coach Floyd Keith. "He earned every yard he got."

While the star back carried the offense on his ever-capable shoulders, netting 328 of the 386 total yards, the Rams went to the air — 58 times. Chris Hixson, last season's YanCon Rookie of the Year, was 26-58 for 294 yards.

And while his main target was Bobby Apgar for the first four Rhody games of the season [31 catches for 503 yards], Hixson instead went to Cy Butler [15 for 146 yards] most of the game. As for Apgar, a 53-yard, late fourth quarter touchdown contributed to his three-reception day.



PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN
Junior fullback Rene Ingoglia carried for a UMass and Yankee Conference record 313 yards on Saturday.

Turn to HOMECOMING, page 9

Ingoglia produces record setting day at Homecoming

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

Time and time again Rene Ingoglia proves he is the power that drives the University of Massachusetts football as far as it can go.

Ingoglia rushed for a single-game Yankee Conference record of 313 yards on 28 carries, for an amazing 11.2 average per carry in a 22-12 Homecoming victory of Rhode Island.

"Ingoglia is really a special player, he was winning footraces against their defensive backs," coach Mike Hodges said.

HOMECOMING USM '94

The junior fullback broke off long runs of 84, 75, and 55 yards, good for two touchdowns. With nothing else working on a cold and rainy day at McGuirk Stadium, Ingoglia was the offense.

"We were a little slow on offense getting drives going, but I guess if you get big plays like that it compensates for it," Ingoglia said.

Take away Ingoglia's three huge runs totaling 214 yards, and there is a 25-99 yard effort.

"Usually that's what I'm getting, the tough yardage, we're a smashmouth football team. I'll take the big plays, I'm not going to complain," Ingoglia said.

The Minuteman offense, gaining 386 total yards, made Ingoglia's total of 313 all the more amazing. In completing only six passes all afternoon, UMass was about as one- dimensional as possible. Oh, but what a dimension.

Ingoglia now averages over 191 yards rushing per game, with 5 touchdowns. In all four games the Minutemen have played, he has outgained the opposition on the ground. Defenses key on him, but it often does not seem to matter.

"We owe it to the offensive line to hit the holes hard, especially the way they opened them today," Ingoglia said.

Out of the I-formation, split backs, or when running the option, Ingoglia seems to be a threat to break it all the way, as he did twice against URI. So often it took four or five Rams to bring down Ingoglia, who seemingly never stops running.

Turn to INGOGLIA, page 9

UM volleyball still unbeaten; spikes two Atlantic 10 rivals

By Steven Grant
Collegian Correspondent

Despite the absence of middle-blocker Rachel Sky, who was suspended for breaking team rules, the University of Massachusetts volleyball team improved their record to 14-0, defeating Duquesne and St. Bonaventure.

Going into this weekend, the team owned an impressive 12-0 record, having breezed through their schedule which was filled with teams outside of their own conference.

But on Friday and Saturday, Atlantic 10 rivals Duquesne and St. Bonaventure each paid a visit to Curry Hicks Cage.

UMass defeats Duquesne 8-15, 15-8, 9-15, 15-10, 15-11:

Actually, the Minutewomen did anything but breeze through this match, as Friday marked the first time this season that an opponent took them to five games. With their backs against the wall and down, two games to one, UMass got its act together.

This one was close until the very end.

The Minutewomen actually trailed 10-5 in the final game, before rallying when it counted the most. This contest was truly an excellent learning experience for UMass, who before this match rarely even played past the third game, let alone the maximum of five. And the team walked away with a win.

"At the beginning, it seemed as if we were playing not-to- lose volleyball," said Massachusetts Coach Bonnie Kenny. "But fortunately, we improved with each game, and at the end there we really dug deep and was able to come out with a win."

Kenny credits her bench as a key to the victory.

"We couldn't have done it without the people coming off of the bench," said Kenny. "They were able to stay involved in the match, and came out ready to play whenever called upon."

Outside hitter Giza Rivera played exceptionally well, totaling a season high 21 kills. Although Kenny said she was pleased with the play of her entire squad, she particularly recognized the strong outing of her talented sophomore.

"I thought Giza played very well for us. She's working hard and seems to be improving with every match, said Kenny. "Cass Anderson also made some smart decisions out there, especially in some critical situations."

Anderson, a junior setter, had a season best 48 assists against the Dukes, in addition to managing 13 digs. Anderson now leads the Minutewomen in assists with 424, and is averaging 11.10 assists per game, also a team high.

Not everything was top-notch, however.

"We served kind of passively tonight," said Kenny. "And you

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN
UMass women's volleyball was the only team to remain undefeated this weekend as they improved their record to 14-0 with wins over Duquesne and St. Bonaventure.

Turn to VOLLEYBALL, page 9

Women's soccer suffers two setbacks to Santa Clara and Santa Barbara

By Mike Reiss
Collegian Staff

Prior to this past weekend, the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team had been truly tested just once – at the UMass Classic September 24-25. The Minutewomen passed that test, winning both matches against high-quality opponents.

Saturday at Santa Barbara, Calif., No. 9 nationally ranked Santa Clara posed the second test of the young 1994 season for No. 5 Massachusetts.

"We passed the test, but lost the match," said head coach Jim Rudy, whose team fell 1-0 in an NCAA high-caliber matchup. "We outplayed them for the majority of the match and our tactical play was excellent. But we just couldn't finish off our chances."

The one opportunity Santa Clara (5-3) did have, it converted. With less than 10 minutes remaining in the game, Mikka Hansen took the ball off an Emmy Barrti throw in and dribbled it to the end line. From the left side of the field, Hansen sent a crossing pass which Tracy Giogetti headed in from six yards out.

Massachusetts deserved a better fate.

"It was a great game, played very well against a high- quality opponent," said Rudy. "We missed three goals by about four, five inches. We were a bit unlucky with finishing, but we played well and the players know it."

The first half was a 45 minute stretch dominated by Massachusetts. A key for the Minutewomen was the play of sophomore midfielder Julie Magid, as she clamped down on Santa Clara's highly-touted talent Jen Lalor.

With Magid keeping Lalor in check, the UMass offense was able to keep much of the action in Santa Clara's end of the field. Midway through the half, sophomore defender Erin Lynch had an opportunity to put the visitors on the board.

"She picked up a loose ball from about 18-yards out, and just volleyed high," said Rudy.

Santa Clara	1
UMass	0

Sophomore midfielder Rebecca Myers and junior forwards Nicole Roberts and Rachel LeDuc all had bids in the second half, but were also denied. LeDuc broke past the defense three times in the second half, fighting through the rough, jersey-tugging tactics of the Santa Clara defenders.

Overall, Massachusetts accumulated 15 shots, but Santa Clara goalkeeper Rachel Stoppello was forced to make only three saves as a result of the shots that just sailed wide.

Meanwhile, freshman goalkeeper Danielle Dion did not see much action throughout the match.

"She didn't face much pressure," said Rudy. "She played a long free kick well, and picked up a long shot through a crowd. We did a nice job in reducing their opportunities."

Heading into the match, Massachusetts found itself in a similar position to that of last season's contest with Santa Clara. The Minutewomen traveled to California undefeated at 7-0, while last season it was 6-0-1. This season, Santa Clara was coming off a loss, and last season the team was coming off a loss as well. All signs pointed to a

COLLEGIAN FILE
Despite a strong showing, the women's soccer team dropped its first game of the year to Santa Clara.

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 9

Field Hockey splits weekend

No. 12 UM pounds Richmond, fall to No. 4 Old Dominion

By Mike Pinder
Collegian Staff

The No. 12 ranked Univcrsity of Massachusetts field hockey team split a pair of road games this weekend, destroying Richmond 3–0 while being edged by national powerhouse and No. 4 ranked Old Dominion 2–0.

In the premiere match–up of the weekend, the Minutewomen suffered their first loss of the year at the hands of the Lady Monarchs.

According to Coach Megan Donnelly, UMass turned in their best all–round performance, against the stifling defense of Old Dominion.

The Lady Monarchs had revenge on their minds entering yesterday's contest in Virginia.

Last year the Minutewomen upset Old Dominion 2–0 at Totman field. This time the Lady Monarchs returned the favor and defeated UMass by the same score.

Unfortunately for the Minutewomen they were not able to score on Monarch goalie, Kim Decker. Decker recorded three saves while facing three shots by UMass.

Donnelly indicated that the game was very evenly played and UMass rose to the challenge of Old Dominion.

"It was a very evenly played game," said Donnelly. "I'm satisfied with our performance, we took our game to a higher level. It just shows that we are a very good team and we can compete with anyone at anytime."

The 2–0 score was not indicative of the level of play by the Minutewomen and does not show how closely contested the game really was.

"We played a great game," said Donnelly. "Most of the game was played in the middle of the field with both teams attacking and counter attacking very effectively. The score really doesn't indicate how close the game actually was."

Old Dominion	2
UMass	0

Old Dominion put the game away midway through the first half scoring two goals within two minutes of each other.

Netting the goals for the Lady Monarchs were Karen Neiss and Gwen Davis.

UMass Sophomore goalkeeper, Hilary Rose, recorded eight saves while facing 11 shots.

Old Dominion outshot the Minutewomen 11–3, while UMass held the edge in penalty corners 4–3.

On Friday UMass outplayed and outhustled a far inferior Richmond team en route to the blow out.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

After an impressive 3–0 win over Richmond, the Minutewomen fell to Old Dominion on Sunday.

In the eyes of Donnelly, the Spiders were lucky to lose by only three.

"It could of been much worse for Richmond," said Donnelly. "We failed to convert on a few good scoring opportunities."

Despite the failed scoring chances Donnelly was very pleased with the Minutewomen's performance.

"We had good passing and good shot selection," said Donnelly. "It was a very good game for us, we played the whole game with a high intensity."

Three different players got into the scoring act for the Minutewomen.

Netting the first goal was junior forward Kerry Meteliski at the 4:57 mark of the first half. Assisting on the score was senior All–American candidate Danielle Borges.

"It was a very nice goal," said Donnelly. "Danielle crossed the ball from the right wing and Kerry shot it into the open net."

Also figuring in the scoring was Natalie Harri, assisted by Andrea Cabral and Borges, with freshman Courtney MacLean adding the other.

MacLean's goal, coming at the 49:58 mark of the second half, was her first score of the year and sealed the victory for the Minutewomen.

UMass outshot the Spiders 27–5 and held a 9–0 advantage in penalty corners.

Rose registered her 22nd career shutout, (seventh of the season), recording four saves. Rose's counterpart, Kim DePoto, had 13 saves for the Spiders.

The Minutewomen bring their 6–1–2 record back home to Totman Field when they face off against Syracuse on Wednesday at 3:30 p.m.

Minutemen capture third straight win

By Brian Gormley
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team overcame a sluggish first half to record their third straight win, routing Atlantic 10 rival St. Joseph's University, 4–1.

The Homecoming victory improved Massachusetts' record to 5–3–1 overall and 3–0 in the A–10, while St. Joseph's dropped to 4–5–2 overall and 1–1–1 in the A–10.

UMass	4
St. Joseph's	1

Massachusetts was propelled by junior Karstin Bremke, who had his second consecutive two–goal game. Bremke, a native of Marienfeld, Germany, got help from Co–Captains Mike Doyle and Colin Johnson who each scored their third goals of the season.

The game began with St. Joseph's jumping quickly into the lead. After a missed Massachusetts scoring opportunity, Hawks forward John Sharp took a breakaway pass from midfielder Art Sotos and drove down the center of the field towards the net. Minutemen goalkeeper Mark Wolf came out of the net to challenge him, but his diving attempted save only partially deflected the shot, which rolled slowly behind Wolf and into the net at 11:21.

The Minutemen struck back at 22:51 when Bremke scored the first of his two goals. The goal came when Massachusetts back Joe Jacobson lofted a long, lobbing pass from the right corner of the midfield to Bremke, who gathered the ball in and angled a left–footed shot from the left corner of the goalie's crease past Hawk goalkeeper Sean Vilet to tie the score at 1–1.

The first half, which ended in a 1–1 tie, was played evenly by both teams. In the second half, however, the Minutemen asserted themselves by erupting for three goals and stifling the Hawk's offensive attempts.

Early in the second half, Bremke went to work. He took advantage of a scramble in front of the St. Joseph's net to boot a loose ball in the goal, putting Massachusetts up 2–1. The goal, which came at 51:20, was his fourth of the season.

Bremke later said that both of his goals came because of his ability to capitalize on mistakes made by St. Joseph's defenders.

The Minutemen used teamwork and smart passing to add another goal three minutes later. Midfielder Joe Maruca advanced the ball towards the right center of the field. He then fired a centering pass to midfielder Colin Johnson just inside the center of the goalie's box. Johnson then walked in on Vilet and chipped it over his head, making it 3–1.

The final Massachusetts goal came at the 65:30 when midfielder Mike Doyle took advantage of another loose ball in front of the goal. His shot from about 12 yards out deflected off of a St. Joseph's player past Vilet, who was helpless to stop the fourth UMass goal.

Bremke nearly scored again a few minutes later when forward Dave Sijanoski set him up with a great crossing pass, but his attempt to head the ball in sailed over the net.

Although the Minutemen carried the play for the entire second half, St. Joseph's did have two excellent scoring chances from in close to the UMass net. Their chances, however, were thwarted by some diving saves by Wolf, who had four saves on the day.

Massachusetts Coach Sam Koch was pleased with his team's performance, especially their offensive effort. He also said that defensively they were able control the game in the second half by keeping the ball away from the Hawks.

"Overall I think we played very well, offensively it was one of the better performances we've had this season. We were able to one–touch the ball well, Koch said.

"In the second half we just wore St. Joseph's down. They were getting frustrated because they were not getting too many one–touches on the ball. The second goal just finished them."

The Minutemen now have a week to rest before they go on the road to play A–10 rival West Virginia on Oct. 7.

STEVE PEKULA / COLLEGIAN

Men's soccer posted its third straight victory with a 4–1 win over St. Joseph's.

STARTS OCT. 3
10-Week Adult Evening Dance Programs
AMHERST BALLET CENTRE
29 Strong St., Amherst
549-1555
•Beg. Ballet (Mon - Wed)
•Intermediate Ballet (Tues - Thurs)
•Martha Graham Modern Technique (Mon)

BE A TEACHER.
BE A HERO.
Call 1-800-45-TEACH.

U-MASS. vs BC
Game Ticket - Round Trip Bus
Sunday afternoon Oct. 30th Hockey Game at BC
Call Steve at Rock & Jock
(508) 877-6050

Yes, It's always a fine day for a barbeque. Ahh nothing like the hot coals to cause a man to break down in a fit of hysterical crying. "WHY DIDN'T I LISTEN TO MY MOTHER AND BECOME A DOG GROOMER!!!!"
COLLEGIAN
NEVER TOO LATE TO CHANGE

CONTACT LENS SERVICE
At The University Health Services
We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
All fittings are done by an eye doctor with experience in contact lens care and in solving contact lens problems.
Unlimited follow-up visits are available to you under the UHS Eye CAre Savings Plan at no additional cost.
Reduced costs on contact lenses are available to you under the UHS Eye Care Savings Plan.
If you tear or damage a contact lens within 45 days of receiving it, we will replace it for you at no extra cost.
Same day replacement of contact lenses in many cases due to our large in house inventory.
Contact lenses can be mailed to you at no extra charge for postage.
Convenient hours and on-campus location.
Free sample start-up solutions, as available.
Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over 19 years has been consistently excellent.
"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."
Eye Care Program
University Health Services
Call 549-2671 ext 244
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.

START HERE
It's Not Too Late To Turn Your Art
AROUND
Film Dance Music Theater
Ask the UMass Arts Council about single project grants
fall deadlines: 10/21 & 11/18
Applications & "How To" Answers
101 Hasbrouck Hall 545-0202

SARAH LAWRENCE COLLEGE IN PARIS
For information and an application, contact Sarah Lawrence College in Paris Box 1 Mead Way Bronxville, New York 10708-5999 (800) 873-4752
Study for a semester or a year at the Sorbonne, the Ecole du Louvre, and the Institut d'Etudes Politiques. Work closely with French faculty in small seminars and private tutorials. Two years of college French required.

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR
&
AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
•Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
•Users of Sikkens paint products.
•Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
Remember
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

Patriots squeak by Packers

Late field goal clinches New England's third straight win

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass.— The ball fluttered awkwardly, barely clearing the crossbar in a fitting climax to a kicking comedy.

Matt Bahr's 33-yard field goal with four seconds left gave the New England Patriots a 17-16 win Sunday over the Green Bay Packers and ended a tough day for two of the NFL's best kickers.

UMass	27
BC	17

The Patriots (3-2) overcame a 10-0 halftime deficit for their third straight win. The Packers (2-3) rallied from Drew Bledsoe's two scoring passes to Vincent Brisby to retake the lead on Reggie Cobb's 1-yard run with 1:14 left.

Bahr missed his other two field goal attempts Sunday, from 48 and 32 yards. And Chris Jacke bungled a kickoff after a botched extra-point attempt left Green Bay ahead 16-14 after Cobb scored.

"Sometimes ugly looks pretty good," Bahr said of his winning kick . "I didn't hit one ball good today."

But he had the chance to be a hero because of Packers mistakes on consecutive plays.

After Cobb's touchdown, Craig Hentrich couldn't handle Mark Chmura's low snap and Jacke didn't even get a chance to kick the extra point, although his streak of 127 successful extra points remained intact.

Then Jacke, who made his only field goal attempt from 27 yards, put the ensuing kickoff out of bounds at the New England 40-yard line, giving the Patriots excellent field position.

"I tried to make the type of kick that you want to wobble," Jacke said. "It was something we had been practicing to hit a fine drive. I just mis-hit it."

"The special teams made too many errors," Green Bay coach Mike Holmgren said. "That fumbled snap on the extra point is something we might not ever see.

"The kickoff was inexcusable," he added. "You give them ideal field position."

Bledsoe took advantage of it, moving the Patriots to the Green Bay 15.

A field goal seemed a cinch. Bahr had the wind at his back. He entered the game having made all 12 of his field goal attempts and all 23 extra points since he became a Patriot late last season.

"There's no such thing as a chip shot, but it wasn't the ugliest game-winner, either," Bahr said. "I didn't even see it. I can't see over the line of scrimmage."

"It wasn't artistic," New England coach Bill Parcells said of the victory.

But the ball went over the bar, moving Bahr, 38, into 12th place on the NFL's career scoring list with 1,248 points, passing Cincinnati's Jim Breech.

Before Bahr could kick it, Bledsoe had to move the Patriots into scoring position against the team that began the game with the NFL's second best defense.

"We put decent pressure on him, but he would not be rattled," Green Bay defensive end Sean Jones said. "He has tremendous poise and confidence."

Bledsoe completed 29-of-53 passes for 334 yards, the fourth time he went over 300 yards this season. His 10-yard pass to Ray Crittenden put the ball at the 15.

"I've always felt comfortable in the two-minute offense because you can get into a rhythm," Bledsoe said. "There's an attitude on the team now that hasn't been there before. We expect to win."

Fourteen of their last 15 games have been decided by six or fewer points. And they have won six of those last eight close calls.

Bahr's kick ruined a strong performance by Brett Favre. He completed 25-of-47 passes for 295 yards and an 11-yard touchdown to Sterling Sharpe that gave the Packers their halftime lead.

Sharpe set a Packers record with 533 career catches, passing James Lofton's 530. Sharpe had nine receptions for 132 yards and extended his streak to 92 games with at least one catch.

■ Homecoming

continued from page 7

tion, 62-yard effort.

Rhode Island [2-3 overall, 2-2 in Yankee Conference] took the upper hand in the time-of-possession category of the first half [16:52-13:08], but the Minutemen [3-1, 2-0 in YanCon] were the ones who capitalized on the time.

As for the first quarter, Ingoglia's exciting 84-yard touchdown run with 8:40 left in the first quarter was the only score of the 15-minute period. Eric Oke missed the extra point, making it 6-0.

"[Rene] ran away from the secondary, it was just a foot race," said Hodges. "He was pulling away. When a 200- pound fullback runs away from defensive backs — he can run."

The second quarter started with Massachusetts defense getting points on the board. Justin Reimer, the Minutemen punter who earned his first career start at outside linebacker, blocked a Kevin Dobryzinski punt that cornerback Kory Blackwell picked up and sped for a 28-yard TD.

QB Andrew McNeilly attempted the two-point conversion, but was stuffed by the Ram defense.

At 5:38 of the second quarter, Ingoglia ran for his 75-yard touchdown on a pitch, breaking a tackle at midfield and blowing by two Rhode Island players in the secondary for the TD.

Oke then made the PAT, making it 19-0 at the half.

"I was thinking 'don't get caught, and don't turn around,'" said Ingoglia. "A lot of backs make the mistake of turning around, and it slows you up. I was pecking out of the corner of my eye, though. [The offensive line] opened it up, and I was able to scoot through there."

On the first drive of the second half, with third–down and four on the Massachusetts nine–yard line, Hixson was sacked by Trejo Rust and Justin Reimer for a loss of six yards. Skip Thomas then booted a 32–yard field goal, decreasing the Minutemen lead to 16, 19–3.

The very next drive consisted of 12 plays and 65 yards gained, and was culminated by an Oke field goal from 24 yards out, pushing the score to 22–3.

McNeilly, who in the first four games took every snap, suffered a hip pointer in the game, and was relieved by Anthony Catterton. The freshman fumbled on his very first collegiate play, with the Rams taking possession. Thomas then kicked a 34–yard field goal.

Hixson then finalized the scoring with the TD pass to Apgar to narrow it to the final score.

The defense, as evident by the two field goals and the late, meaningless touchdown late in the contest, played another solid game.

"Defensively, we played another strong game," said Hodges. "We took the run game away from them, made them throw the football, and stayed patient in our passing defense.

"I'll tell you what, that was as good a defensive performance as we've had any other week."

"The defense won this game for us," said Ingoglia.

Along with a guy named Rene Ingoglia.

■ Ingoglia

continued from page 7

Whatever the Ram defense threw at him, Ingoglia had the same answer; tough physical running. Strong enough to knock heads with lineman up the middle, and quick enough to bounce to the outside to outrun the secondary.

"When I'm making those big runs, I just don't want to look back and get caught. It's a case of having a tailback playing at the fullback spot," Ingoglia said.

"He's such a quick back, we took bad angles and he burned us," URI linebacker Lou D'Agostino said.

Ingoglia broke the all–time conference record set back in 1952 by Pat Abruzzi of Rhode Island (306 yards).

"Records are made to be broken, I'm sure this one will be too. All the credit has to go to my offensive line," Ingoglia said.

Coach Hodges and Ingoglia credit a lot of this season's success with Rene's improved speed. The Rochester, New York native worked all summer to bring his 40–yard dash time down to a 4.44, while weighing in at over 200 pounds.

As a high school star at Bishop Kearney, Ingoglia played the role of the quick slashing runner. After reconstructive surgery on his left knee, Ingoglia bulked up and didn't pay much attention to his 40 time until this summer.

"You have to wrap your arms around Rene, he just does everything right. He runs hard with great balance, a strong kid with great upper and lower body strength," Hodges said.

Ingoglia will need to come up big once again, with three straight Yankee Conference road games up next on the schedule.

"Three top twenty teams on the road, it's going to be tough. I can't let this stuff go to my head, it's back to practice on Monday," Ingoglia said.

Rene Ingoglia is the UMass offense, every game will be the same story until some opponent can re–write it. So far, no one has come close to doing that.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 7

deja vu.

But according to Rudy, even though the result was the same, this time around things were different.

"The situation was similar, but last year they killed us 1–0. This year was a different story," he said. "It was a great high–powered NCAA level game, high–paced with a lot of intensity. We put forth a team effort, basically winning every aspect of the match."

Massachusetts played Santa Barbara yesterday and suffered another 1–0 setback in the final game of its weekend set. Rudy said the weekend was a part of the maturing process.

"I guess this is part of growing up with such a young team," said Rudy. "We'll be back."

The Minutewomen (7–2) will look to return to their winning ways on Thursday when they travel to Connecticut to take on Yale.

Florida holds on to defy Mississippi attack

No.1 Gators win despite Quarterback Terry Dean's off day

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

OXFORD, Miss.— Terry Dean hopes he has his bad game behind him. The Florida senior quarterback, one of the Heisman Trophy frontrunners, threw three interceptions and was sacked three times at Mississippi.

But Dean also threw for four touchdowns as the top-ranked Gators won their fourth straight game by at least three touchdowns, 38-14 Saturday.

"It was definitely my worst game," Dean said after completing 19 of 32 passes for 292 yards and increasing his touchdown total to 17. "Hopefully, this will be my only bad game.

"I had it in the back of my mind that I would have a bad game. Now I know I've got it out of the way. Now I can concentrate on LSU."

The Gators (4-0, 3-0 in the SEC), after dominating Southeastern Conference foes Tennessee (31-0) and Ole Miss on the road, play their next four league games at Florida Field - including struggling LSU and No. 9 Auburn the next two Saturdays.

The only road games left for Steve Spurrier's team are at Vanderbilt and the regular-season finale Nov. 26 at third-ranked Florida State.

Ole Miss (2-3, 1-3) plays its next two games on the road. But the Rebels have an open date before playing at Arkansas and No. 11 Alabama.

Against Ole Miss, the Gators weren't perfect, with four turnovers, eight penalties and five quarterback sacks allowed. It was their closest game this season, but they still won by 24 points.

Florida led 14-0 just two minutes into the game, Dean capping an opening four-play, 60-yard drive with a 24-yard TD pass to Chris Doering. Then Fred Weary returning a blocked punt 10 yards for a score.

"We got overconfident early. (Spurrier) told us to learn from this, and don't ever give up on a game hoping they would lay down," Dean said. "They were able to bounce back (from 14-0), but it was a testament to our play, we kept coming back, too."

The Rebels battled back to tie it at 14-14 when Fred Thomas intercepted Dean and ran 85 yards for a touchdown with 7:09 still left in the first quarter. But they didn't score again.

It was the first of three interceptions of Dean, who had been picked off just once in the first three games. His last one was in the end zone after the Gators have driven from their own 3 to the Ole Miss 24 in the third quarter.

By then, Dean had already found Jack Jackson in the end zone twice and thrown another TD pass to Dorien to put Florida in front 35-14. But Spurrier was still stomping the sidelines after the miscue.

"Offensively, we sputtered (in the second half) and threw some stupid interceptions during the day," Spurrier said. "We made a lot of mistakes, but hopefully we'll learn from them."

The Gators were "held" to 481 yards, 65 below their previous average, but more than Ole Miss had given up in 2 1/2 years under defensive coordinator and first-year head coach Joe Lee Dunn, whose defense was the best in Division I-A last season.

Florida had only 156 yards in the second half, but Ole Miss had just 46 and never passed midfield.

"They're a great football team, and they're gonna be really tough to beat at home," Dunn said. "Yeah, I'm disappointed with a lot of things in the football game. But they're the No. 1 team in the country, and a lot of people are going to look bad against the No. 1 team."

In the second quarter, Dean threw 15- and 22-yard TD passes to Jackson, who had six catches for 120 yards.

■ volleyball

continued from page 7

shouldn't be doing that, especially when you're playing at home. Also, our defense lacked a little intensity, and we still need to work on our blocking. But overall, I'm extremely happy with our performance."

"I'm really proud of my teammates," said Rivera. "Whichever team has more heart at the end wins these kinds of matches. And I think we were that team tonight."

UMass defeats St. Bonaventure 15-4, 15-11, 15-1

After escaping the night before with a nail–biting win over the Dukes, UMass was not exactly complaining Saturday's match only went three games.

Kenny realized that the St. Bonaventure Bonnies owned a 4–9 record (0–2 in the Atlantic 10) coming in. Despite that fact, it was apparent that she did not exactly tell her players to ease up, as her team rolled over its opponent in three straight games.

Dionne Nash in particular played brilliantly in the sweep, collecting six digs to go along with her .346 hitting percentage. In fact, the team percentage was .310, the first time it's been over the .300 mark this year.

"Offensively, we played just great," said Kenny. "Once again Cass Anderson did a super job making decisions on where to set the ball throughout the match. And I think that both Dionne and Giza had at least ten kills a piece."

"I felt that we played much better than in our last game," said Nash. "Everyone came to play tonight. These Atlantic 10 matches will prove to be more difficult than our previous games, so we'll have to keep it up in order to keep on winning."

NHL talks set to resume on Tuesday

TORONTO (AP) — The first step toward beginning the NHL season was taken on what was supposed to be Day 2 of the league's most successful year yet.

League commissioner Gary Bettman and union head Bob Goodenow agreed Sunday to resume negotiations Tuesday in an effort to reach a collective bargaining agreement and get the season started by Oct. 15.

The site and time of the talks have not yet been set, although they are likely to be held in New York.

Fourteen games were postponed over the weekend, and two more were scheduled for tonight. Talks broke off last Wednesday, and if Bettman feels their resumption makes progress, the season will begin with the postponed games to be made up throughout the season. "We have wide differences, no doubt about that," Goodenow said. "We have a lot of work ahead of us if we're going to put this thing together."

At an NHL Players Association meeting Saturday, 102 players reviewed the situation.

"We're trying to find common ground, but (the owners) keep moving the target around," Toronto defenseman Jamie Macoun said. Added Winnipeg forward Tie Domi: "The ball is in the middle right now. It's in nobody's court."

In a three-page letter sent Friday to each player, Bettman stated his case for the necessity of economic change. He explained that in the last five years, player payrolls have increased $1.14 for every dollar earned.

"I share your concern that a delay in the season will undercut much of the progress that our sport has made over the past year," Bettman wrote in the letter, a copy of which was obtained by The New York Times.

"We need a player employment system that avoids making this a league of haves and have-nots. Until we develop that type of system, our recent success will not solve our economic and competitive problems. This situation must be addressed, and addressed now."

This economic mess wasn't supposed to be.

In 1992, when owners and players signed their last collective bargaining agreement, the two sides agreed to form a committee to come up with a way to restructure the business and avoid the financial plight owners say they face.

A provision of the collective agreement dealt specifically with restructuring the relationship between the NHL and NHL Players Association.

The collective agreement, which expired Sept. 15, 1993, said "the NHL clubs have expressed an intent to develop and submit to the NHLPA as promptly as possible a proposal for restructuring with a salary cap and a revenue-sharing concept along the lines of the NBA system.

"The NHLPA commits that, as soon as reasonably practicable after the Joint Study Committee report issues, it will begin bargaining in good faith with the clubs in an effort to reach agreement regarding restructuring by Sept. 15, 1993."

The problem was that the Joint Study Committee was never formed. Soon after the 1992 agreement, NHL owners began a successful campaign to oust then-president John Ziegler, and his successor, Gil Stein, was too preoccupied with running for the office of NHL commissioner to worry about the joint study committee.

When Bettman came on the scene, his priorities were to reshape an organization that many felt wasn't being run like a professional sports league.

Eating Disorder Programs • 1994/95
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Call for more information 549-2671, Ext. 233.
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phoneline for help around eating disorders - yourself, or someone you know. 549-2671, ext. 168.

LRC Learning Resources Center
• Absolutely Free
• Computer-aided Instruction
CD-ROM
• Video-aided Instruction
• Study-skills workshops
• Popular software packages
MS-Word, Excel, Page Maker, Word Perfect
• Trained & Experienced Peer Tutors
Convient Hours:
Monday-Thursday 12-9, Friday 1-4
1020 Tower Library
545-5334

Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
ZIMA CLEARMALT
COACH'S CORNER
every Monday night
7:30-8:30
Talk UMass Football with
Coach Hodges.
Live from Rafters Sports Bar & Restaurant
University Drive, Amherst
T-shirts, Prizes, Yr-time appetizers.
Tune into CNN WTTT AM 1430
University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

Poor conditions unable to stop success of festival

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Blacksmith John Boyd shapes a metal rod into a hook at the Apple Harvest Festival on the Amherst Common Saturday.

By Beth Levrault
Collegian Correspondent

AMHERST — The eighth annual Apple Harvest and Crafts Festival, held Saturday on the Amherst Town Common, combined a wide selection of crafts with various types of food and live entertainment.

Despite the rainy weather, many people enjoyed the fair and thought it to be a huge success.

Ruth Seitz, the former manager of the Worcester Munchy Store at the University of Massachusetts, said she loved the fair and would never even think of missing it.

Many of the artisans expressed their enjoyment also.

"The turn-out is remarkable," said Emily Shelton, a student at Amherst College.

The craft show featured 140 talented crafters from New England selling many hand-crafted items such as pottery, handmade baskets, pressed flowers, and silver jewelry.

Entertainment included a morning show of traditional folk songs by Jerry Bryant and an afternoon show by Joan Robb and Caribbean for Kids.

WMAS-FM broadcasted live from the Common and sold raffle tickets for prizes such as a computer table, dinner for two, and gift certificates.

The fair included other types of food also, such as grade-A maple syrup, free samples of many flavors of relish and mustard from Mother's of Shelburne, and various types of traditional fair foods such as fried dough and hot dogs.

The fair was sponsored by the Atkins Fruit Bowl, which provided a wide selection of apples, cider, applesauce, cider doughnuts and other treats.

The fair was produced by the Amherst Family Center, an organization devoted to helping families with new children.

The center is a non-profit organization that provides workshops on infants and toddlers. The center is located in the North Congregational Church on North Pleasant Street.

A special section just for children included face painting, pumpkin decorating, and games.

One artisan sold a selection of colorful "batiked" shirts, which is an Indonesian word meaning "to draw with wax."

"Everyone is very friendly and the activities are very well coordinated," said Anna Viadero from Country Cottage Creations in Montague.

However, a few people were disappointed at the fact that they did not think there were enough apple-related crafts and food.

"For an apple fair, there aren't a lot of apples," said Stephanie Ciccarello from Northampton.

All I need is my fork: my serrated edged Ginsu® knife and a few good friends. Now there is a real meal!!! DAILY COLLEGIAN we know a good time when it looks us in the face.

■ DuBois

continued from page 1

dation.

The executive committee will make an informal vote and if they recommend the proposal it will move on to the full Board.

"Scott will make a presentation to the Board and recommend the proposal," Ivatury said. "If the proposal is recommended it will go on to the Board of Trustees full meeting on Tuesday to be voted on."

Ivatury does not see any reason why the proposal will not be passed, especially with the recommendations from both Hooker and Scott.

"All indications are that we have reason to be optimistic and the Board will pass the proposal," Ivatury said.

The Petition Coalition and Library Naming Committee want a bust of DuBois and a quote from him outside the library if the proposal is agreed to, according to Ivatury.

The renaming of the library may attract large donations for specific areas, said Ivatury.

"I think we have reason to believe that their will be a large amount of donations associated to the naming of the library in the honor of W.E.B. DuBois," said Ivatury. "If the library is not renamed, I been told, there will be no donations."

If the library is renamed it will be the first academic building on campus named after a person of color, said Ivatury.

"I am pleased that it is going to happen and the library will be appropriately named," Ivatury said.

Suspect faces charges

AMHERST—A man facing arraignment on murder charges today in Springfield told Springfield police he was an Amherst resident after his arrest last Thursday, according to the Springfield Police Department.

Robert Shular, 17, is expected to be arraigned today at the Hamden County Hall of Justice for the July 23 shooting death of a Springfield man, according to the Springfield Police Department.

Hiram Broxton, 79, was shot and killed July 23 in his Lebanon Street home, according to a July 24 article in the Springfield Union News.

Shular was arrested late Thursday night on two outstanding juvenile warrants for parole violation and receiving a stolen vehicle, and was later charged with the July 23 murder, according to the Springfield Police Department.

Springfield police told the Daily Collegian that Shular gave them an address at "Townhouse Road" in Amherst, but they do not believe he is an Amherst resident.

"We don't believe he ever lived there," said Lieutenant McGovern of the Springfield Police Department. "We don't know if he has any permanent address."

Springfield Police told the Daily Collegian that at the time of his arrest Shular gave no address but later claimed to be an Amherst resident.

—Ben Geman

■ Mexico

continued from page 1

for civilian use, a federal felony. He was being held Sunday night.

But authorities allege Treviño was part of a wider conspiracy of at least five men, all from Tamaulipas state.

Munoz Rocha is accused of hiring the two brothers, who then hired Treviño as the triggerman, authorities say.

Munoz Rocha and Fernando Rodriguez Gonzalez, who is an aide to the congressman, were being sought by police for questioning.

BROUGHT TO YOU BY

UNIVERSITY STORE
OCTOBER 4 - 5 • 10AM - 4PM
(RAINDATE OCTOBER 6)
"SOUTH LAWN STUDENT UNION"

Sports Illustrated is a registered trademark of Time Inc.

Produced by MarketSource Corporation, Cranbury, NJ

The Boston Globe
Offers UMass Students
Delivery for
50% OFF

UMass/Amherst	Full Year 9/25 - 5/14	Full Term 9/25 - 12/18
6 Days MON-SAT	$52.00	$25.25
5 Days MON-FRI	$30.00	$14.25
SUNDAY ONLY	$22.00	$11.00

To order a Boston Globe subscription ON CAMPUS ONLY mail payments to:

The Boston Globe
Campus Program, P.O. Box 2378
Boston, MA 02107
or call 1-800-858-4275 ext.0

If you're a student living OFF CAMPUS we have special discount rates for you too...
Just call 1-800-622-6631 ext.549

Graduate Management Studies in France

Five Leading French Grandes Ecoles
CERAM (Nice Sophia-Antipolis) - ESC Lyon
ESCP (Paris) - ESSEC (Paris) - HEC (Paris)

offer a two-year graduate program:

Master's in Management

a comprehensive international programme with a focus on Europe, a balanced approach to management theory and practice, and a close partnership with the business community.
For graduating students (all subjects).

For further information about the schools and the programs they offer, please meet our representative, Mr Ian Tovey at a Presentation

At 10.00 am and 11.00 am
On Wednesday, October 5th, 1994
At Room 804-08, Campus Center
(Dicussion group at Mather Career Center at 1.00 pm)
(Contact: Terri McIntosh, Mather Career Center)

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today Tony and I went to the video game place.
Tony says he's been getting into video games lately.
"They're better than sitting around at home," he said.
while we were there we mostly just played air hockey.

Big Man On Campus By Dave Schneider

HEY, MIKE, GUESS WHAT... I GOT A JOB!
ARE YOU FUCKING ME?
I GET PAID SEVEN BUCKS AN HOUR TO SIT ON MY BUTT, WATCH T.V., TALK ON THE PHONE, EAT FOOD, AND OCCASIONALLY FALL ASLEEP
YOU MEAN...
THAT'S RIGHT...
I'M A SECURITY GUARD!
SCHNEIDER

Jim's Journal By Jim

"Jim," Tony said, today, "my college education finally paid off."
He told me he found some of his old textbooks and sold them back to the bookstore.
"fifteen bucks," he said. "whoop dee doo."
(He was being sarcastic.)

Urban Shocker By Deg

Daily Crossword
Edited byTrude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Scotch
5 — Han
9 Gives a layer of paint
14 Hawaiian port
15 Highest point
16 It's in a quiver
17 Piccadilly figure
18 Short note
19 Tele add-on 20 Abolished
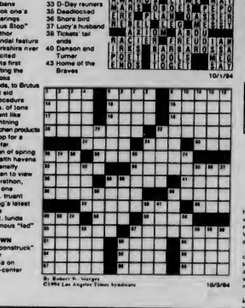
22 Climbed precipitously
23 Blueprint figure
24 School org.
25 Peggy or Spoke
26 Limp
29 Shoes' attendants
32 Urbane
34 Toon one's bearings
36 Snare bird
37 Lucy's husband
38 Tissues' tail ends
40 Danson and Turner
43 Home of the Braves
44 Grimm character
46 "Odyssey" locale
47 They're at the ends of their rope?
48 Ricochet
50 Establish the truth
51 Attired for court
54 Allen or Frome
56 Troublesome situation
57 Skirmish
58 Former football player Patrick —
59 Slugger Slaughter
60 Moneys
62 — Lanka

DOWN
1 "Moonstruck" star
2 Take on
3 Off-center

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

10/1/94



By Eugene T. Maleska
©1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 10/3/94

The Far Side By Gary Larson

"I wouldn't do that, Spunky — I have friends in pie places."

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may be placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

1968 MUSTANG
Classic '68 Mustang Wire Cool Wheels FOR SALE!!! Electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, 2 door, great way to pick up chicks and studs alike. Best offer call Beth at 6-4434

ACTIVITIES
HOU rush on 10/5 from 6-8. Please call for more info. Karen at 549-3974. All University women are welcome. Come see what HOU is all about!
HECKC Karate Club Shotokan style-coed. Totman 103 M-W 8-9:30. F 7-9. All levels welcome! Call Jessica at 549-4279.

ANNOUNCEMENTS
Learn to Surfcast with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price at other schools right here in Amherst. Free info session Mon. Oct 3rd. Lord Jeffery Inn or call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Sigma Delta Tau invites all University women to attend "Saturday Night Live at SDT" which will run from 8-10 this evening. Please call Kristin 549-7361

AUTO FOR SALE
1966 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Beth at 6-4434
91 Olds Cutlass. New parts. Needs minimal work. $700 or best offer. Call Chad 546-1133
Honda Prelude 82. 95 thou/ mi. Sun roof. Runs great needs brake work. Greg 585-0540 BP60
Oh boy! 1978 Dodge Aspen Coupe, auto, runs, stylish, cheap! I wouldn't sell if I didn't have to. 368-5487B

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE
$?- you need $$$ for college??? WE have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service, 2 Dalhurst Terrace East, N. Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

DISC GOLF
If you would like to start a disc golf club call Amanda 6-2930

FOR RENT
2 rooms in private home. $300/ mo. Kitchen priviledges. Kosher/ vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished 549-4853
Blue room for rent. 2 cats, a lake, and an espresso machine. $215 + Call Juan at 586-4762

Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery

FOR SALE
Guitar pro- amp. Tube works real tube. Two channels, foot switch. Sounds excellent! less than one year old. Must sell soon! $250 Call Adam 256-1642
IBM XT computers $160!!! Includes monitor, CPU, keyboard, 10 meg hard drive, 5 1/4 floppy, ms dos. Printers $60 Call 256-8094
Large (32") high dorm fridge in great condition. $60 or best offer. Call eves 253-2104
Motorcycle Honda Nighthawk 700S. Good condition runs great. $1200 or bo 253-9502
Pagers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549-7231
Solid oak triple dresser. Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354
Sperry Topsiders brand new. phase I sale! cheap 549-7728
Stereo cabinet, glass door + top, wheels, 4 shelves, 40" x 17" x 18". $75 or best offer. Call evenings 253-2104
Tandy computer system w/ drives, mon, printer. Tons of software. Asking 375 or bo. Call Joe 6-7348
Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from glass to gold, custom designed jewelry. Silverscape Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3324

FOUND
Attention new students - personal items left at the new students program this summer may be picked up at the new students office. 304 admissions center
Found two tennis rackets. Call 545-3348

FREE
Free kittes. white- blue eyes- deaf. Call 665-2756

HELP WANTED
$363.60. Sell funny college T shirts. Profit $363.60. Risk free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs 1-800-700-4250
Cruise ships now hiring - earn up to $2000+/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary. For more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext C50011
Earn $$/hr fight pollution. Work for political change with Clean Water Action environmental campaign staff. On bus lines. Paid training. P/T or career opportunity. Call 584-9830
International Employment- make up to $2000- $4000 +/ mo. teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For info call 206-632-1146 ext. J50011
Jobs for the environment. Grassroots political organizing. Earn $40 $60/day. Flexible hours/ casual atmosphere. Call Alex 256-6434
Kitchen help or delivery persons wanted. Must be able to work 20 hrs a week, apply at D.P. Dough
Receive up to 288,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am- 5pm
Wanted!! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips- Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel, fantastic pay. 1-800-426-7710

INSTRUCTION
Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools, right here in Amherst. Free info session Mon. Oct 3rd. Lord Jeffereys Inn or Call 1-800-U-CAN MIX

LOST
Black tri-fold wallet 7pm on 9/25 at Antonio's pizza. Any info please call Paula 546-7478.

MUSICIANS
Guitarist seeking to form 5 piece rock band. Originals and covers. Matt 253-4927

PERSONALS
Bro+ Lisa squared- girl on biker girls! We love you- Jolly Wendy Jeannine: Thought I'd make you famous!! Lee, Jeff
Kelly Sayers! Happy Birthday roommate- hope your day is amazing! Celebrate and enjoy! Party! Have a blast! Love, Stephanie P.S. Just for today I won't drive you crazy AND you can make our answering machine message! hahal!
Thank you Lord for your great intervention from above. RER

PINNOCHIO'S
Hiring drivers full or part time. Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Boltwood Walk. Ask for Bob

ROOMMATE WANTED
Male/female, south Amherst, $725+. Electric/wood heat. Great house, wooded about 4 miles from campus. H253-5531 W256-0870

SCHOLARSHIPS
Apply for private scholarships- we guarantee one or your money back!- price $45.00- for more information call Janice 585-0872

SERVICES
"Balloon view" cartoon characters to Make great gifts! $25, full color Satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 586-5647
Fundraising Choose from 3 different fundraisers lasting either 3 or 7 days. No investment. Earn $$$ for your group plus personal cash bonuses for yourself call 1-800-932-0528, ext 65.
Going away? Can't take Fluffy with you? Erma's pet sitting service 549-0838 We'll bring the treats!
Model search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues. Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Males, females, all categories welcome. 617-573-0087
Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906

SHAREWARE
Free!! Shareware listing hundreds of quality software programs only $2.49 each Call 584-2282

TRAVEL
Spring Break 95 America's #1 spring break company! Cancun Bahamas, Daytona & Panama! 110% lowest price guarantee! Organize 15 friends and travel free! Earn highest commissions! (800) 32-TRAVEL

WANTED
Attn. Drama and medieval performers! 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jugglers, armourer to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. BW/ Irene 584-4203
Campus representative Kinder products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S Padre + Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1-800-222-4432
I need a genetics tutor will pay $10/hr Call Michelle 6-1874

On the day of the apocolypse Gus finally revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her "Mrs. Pretty" make-up kit in the 3rd grade.
Mass Daily Collegian
"Make Amends Now"

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Cheese Sandwich	Cajun Style Scrod
BLT Sandwich	Tacos
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Grilled Cheese on Wheat	Cajun Style Scrod
Veggie Casserole	Vegetable Tacos

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Brian Gormley
Copy Editor.....Jeff Crofts
Photo Technician.....Jessica Taverna
Production Supervisor.....Marni E. Helfner
Production.....Christina Levere, Andrew Davidson, Jon Lupo

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Call a halt to exorbitant spending. Reducing waste and inefficiency will make you much more competitive in business. Welcome a close associate's new interest in science or the arts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A show of initiative will pay off handsomely today — if your thinking and planning are sound. Err on the side of discretion when deciding what should or should not be divulged to outsiders.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You know what has to be done and are eager to take care of business. People who have all kinds of fancy notions will only create confusion. Chart your own course. Finances require careful attention.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Pay close attention to suggestions for conducting your financial affairs more successfully. An introduction to a prominent person may help you achieve an economic objective.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Concentrate on the broader picture instead of getting details. Helping others to show will win you valuable good will. Put more energy into a relationship without expecting great things in return. Creative inspiration runs high!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You find yourself attracted to someone with whom you share a strong mental rapport. Focus on artistic and creative endeavors while in the mood to try new things. Be tactful when making suggestions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Today is a good day for you — your friends will treat you well. Get your work done early and be ready for a legal night upcoming. Warm wishes come for you from the Midwest. Keep smiling.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Getting a head start this morning should place you firmly in the lead. The future is an exciting subject. Play it safe when it comes to love and travel are concerned. Protect your interests. Avoid arguments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Trying to keep your mate or partner on a tight leash will invite rebellion. Back off. Every person has their own hobbies and idiosyncrasies. A move or concern date will make your evening very special.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Refrain from saying or doing difficult things. Those who act professionally at all times will win widespread respect. An occasional period of solitude spurs you on to new artistic triumphs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An argument is brewing that could bring the loss of something valuable. Take all due precautions. Adopting an "all-or-nothing" approach would be a big mistake. Tread softly in romance. Offer to compromise.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keeping visits and conversations upbeat will avert any moody moments. Your valiant efforts to keep the peace will encourage others to make concessions. Readings in metaphysics and history offer valuable illumination. Find out more.

Quote of the Day

"Aah, my handcuffs are a little tight."
—Craig Ferrara,
as he entered the paddy wagon

University Barbers
in campus Center
549-0123
Hours
Weekdays
9 am - 5:30 pm
Saturday 9 am - 1:30 pm
No Appointment Necessary

READING BY ABBY
PALM TAROT & ESP READING
10/19 SEE IT ALL FROM END OF LIFE HELPS YOU UNDERSTAND YOUR GOOD AND BAD STRIVES OF LIFE. TELLS THE EXCEPT DAYS AND SAFEST MONTHS AND WHAT WILL HAPPEN THIS YEAR. $10 DEPOSIT TO ALL READERS $20 DAYS
All readings Confidential and Results Guaranteed
HOURS 9 A.M. TO 7 P.M.
2nd Floor Front Hadley MA 01035
(413) 584-8711
Walk-ins are welcome

"The freshest in town."
"Ambiance galore."
"The waiters are always friendly."
"Best I've ever had."
Collegian
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Fresh news, friendly service

ANNOUNCEMENT
Two Graduate School Interns

The two individuals will be responsible for:
Preparation of a comprehensive Graduate School Handbook,
Expansion of a mentoring program for incoming graduate students,
Development and submission of articles about Graduate School activities and Development of projects related to graduate education and research.

Experience required:
The individual must be a full time graduate student with an excellent academic record. The individual must have appropriate knowledge and experience to assume responsibilities outlines in the job description. The individual must be sensitive to issues facing today's graduate students at a major research university and should exhibit a demonstrated willingness to work with the Graduate Student Senate and the Graduate Women's Network. Good writing skills are essential.

How to apply:
Submit your resume, two letters of recommendation (one must be from current full time faculty member at UMASS and the other must be from either another full time UMASS faculty member or UMASS administrator), and a two page letter describing your unique qualifications for the position and why you should be selected (anything over two pages will be eliminated).

Deadline: October 17, 1994 by 5:00 pm. Submit all materials to the Graduate School, Room 514 Goodell. Late or incomplete materials will not be accepted.

Stipend: $8,500, with a tuition waiver and health benefits, 20 hours per week, from November 1, 1994 to August 31, 1995.

Contact: Charlena Seymour, Graduate Dean, 545-5271, 514 Goodell

RETURNING TO THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS THIS FALL... THE MOST SUCCESSFUL NATIONAL BARTENDING SCHOOL PRESENTS ...

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING™

•Professional Bartending and Bar Management Training — at a fraction of the cost at most schools
•Full certification in as little as six weeks
•Specific programs tailored to your specific needs
•T.I.P.S.™ and Serv-Safe™ certification available
•Approved by the National Restaurant Association®

FREE INFO SESSION TONIGHT!
Mon., Oct. 3 @ 7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn

Shop around and compare! Call
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
for more information.
Act now! Space is limited!!

© 1994 Citibank (South Dakota) N.A.

HOW TO KEEP PEOPLE'S HANDS OFF YOUR MONEY.

- Carry only enough cash to last the day. Anyone who tries to borrow your last five spot isn't a friend, anyway.
- Label your spare-change jar "beetle farm." Then, put your beetle farm in a jar labeled "spare change."
- Mark up every space on checks. Don't leave room for someone to fill in their name and extra zeros.
- Keep your wallet in your front pocket. It discourages pickpockets. So does wearing really tight pants.
- Put your picture on your credit card. A Citibank Photocard is tough for anyone else to use, unless they look just like you.

WE'RE LOOKING OUT FOR YOU.℠
To apply, call 1-800-CITIBANK.

Apply for the Citibank Classic card by completing the application in this issue or by calling 1-800-CITIBANK

Thriving outside of the spotlight

While the offense has grabbed most of the headlines, co-captain Kyri Sparks has emerged as one of the nation's top defenders (See Sports, page 10).

Election results in

Find out how the Undergraduate Student Senate election turned out, and why positions are still vacant (Story on page 3).

The River Wild is the river tame

Meryl Streep takes on the rapids in her new film, but just ends up water-logged (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast

Expect temperatures to drop to as low as the mid-thirties as the week progresses, with breezes increasing. As cloudiness persists, sweater-weather is on its way.

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 60	HIGH: 55	HIGH: 55
LOW: 40	LOW: 40	LOW: 35

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 16 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, October 4, 1994

UMass gives money to students Fight for tuition freeze pays off

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

Students at the University of Massachusetts will finally see the result of their efforts to freeze tuition and fees in the form of a split refund for the school year 1994-95.

The refund students will receive in the next year is the result of a massive school-wide lobbying effort made over the last nine months.

Contibutors to the lobbying effort include the Student Government Association, Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy, students, administrators, faculty, staff and parents.

The target of the lobbying campaign was the Massachusetts State House.

UMass needed a $21.8 million increase in state appropriations, or at least the cost of living to freeze tuition and fees.

The UMass system received a $15 million increase in funding from the state.

The Amherst campus got a $6.3 million increase. The increase was enough to cause the first tuition and fee freeze for the first time in 20 years.

Because the final budget was not approved until after the University had sent the tuition and fee bills, students saw their costs increase. The refund from the University will offset the cost increase.

UMass students who are carrying a full course load of 15 credits, and do not owe the University any money, are entitled to a discount of $107, according to Dr. Karen Shelley, a bursar at the University Bursar's Office.

The financial reduction will be divided into the fall and spring semesters, giving students a $53.50 reduction each semester.

Shelley said the discounts on the students' bills were entered into the UMass computer systems at the Bursar's Office on Sept. 8.

Financial discounts were automatically taken off for students whose bills were completed after Sept. 8.

Shelley said students whose bills were finished before the reductions were entered into the computers, should come to the Bursar's Office to collect a refund check.

The financial amount reduced in a student's tuition fee will be proportioned to that student's credit status, according to Shelley.

A student will only receive a refund check if they do not owe UMass any money.

"I was told by the Bursar's Office that if a student owes the University money, whether in the form of unpaid tuition or fees, or if your loans are still pending, or if the school is waiting on a promissory note, then they will receive the $107 reduction on the money owed," said Mercedes Betanco, undergraduate student speaker.

"If you owe the University $100 this semester, your bill will be reduced to $47," Betanco said.

Despite student rumors sayings checks have to be picked up by this Friday, Shelley said there is no time frame for students to pick up refund checks.

The Bursar's Office will make an official public announcement about the refund students can get, according to Betanco.

The Bursar's Office will not give any money out unless your bill is clear.

The Bursar's Office is located in the Whitmore Administration Building, in room 215. More information regarding the split refund is available through this office.

Questions may also be answered by calling the Bursar's Office at 545-2368.

Heather Redfern contributed to this story.

Haiti strife overstated

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — News depictions of violence in Haiti overshadow the calm existing in most of the country and complicate the U.S. military mission there, Rep. John Murtha said Monday.

Murtha, D-Pa., who led a delegation of House members to Haiti over the weekend, said media "distortions" of the situation in the country "are starting to change the mission" by putting pressure on U.S. troops to become involved in dangerous confrontations.

Depictions of violence are "like looking at the country through a straw," said Murtha, chairman of the House Appropriations defense subcommittee.

Murtha also warned that it would take two or three months to train a local police force and create an environment secure enough to begin turning over responsibilities to a U.N. peacekeeping force.

He said he would oppose resolutions to be debated in the House this week that would put a March 1 deadline, or earlier, on the U.S. military presence.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., a senior member of the Senate Armed Services Committee who also visited Haiti over the weekend, said he was "strongly opposed" to fixing an end date for the mission.

The House or Senate should do nothing that will "reverberate in such a way to raise the risk of that American trooper on a crowded street corner in Haiti. We should not do anything by word or deed to increase that risk."

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a critic of U.S. mission to help restore democracy in Haiti, is working on a resolution in the Senate that will call for quick withdrawal but set no deadline.

Warner also expressed concern that the role of U.S. troops might be extended beyond the current attempts to capture large caches of weapons to a campaign to retrieve weapons from individual citizens.

"It would be very wrong and high risk to order them into the slum areas, to go house-to-house. There you would have confrontation."

Warner and Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., led a six-member Senate delegation that also met with Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, the military leader involved in the coup that overthrew elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide in 1991.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., another member of the group, said Cedras repeated his intention to step down no later than Oct. 15, the date set for the restoration of Aristide's authority.

Murtha predicted that Cedras and other Haitian military leaders will leave the country because an amnesty law now being debated by the Haitian parliament will "not be adequate for them to feel comfortable in the country."

Cedras, in negotiations with former President Carter on Sept. 18, agreed to give up power but not to leave the country.

Prop. tax override aiming to alleviate crowded schools

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — Amherst residents are going to the polls today to vote on a property tax override designed to fund a proposed $22 million renovation and expansion of Amherst Regional High School.

Voters will determine whether the town will override state tax prop 2 1/2, which caps property tax increases at 2 1/2 percent yearly.

If passed, the town would be allowed to increase its yearly property tax by more than 2 1/2 percent for the time needed to repay debts incurred renovating and expanding the school.

Amherst residents are voting on an override measure for the second time this year after voters rejected a $23 million plan by 72 votes in June.

The other towns in the regional school system — Leverett, Shutesbury and Pelham — passed override measures last spring, but all towns in the system must agree on the measure in order for it to go into effect.

Under the measure, the state will reimburse the school system for 67 percent of the proposed cost. The towns in the school system would pay the balance, bringing the cost for the town of Amherst to $5.7 million plus costs incurred financing the incurred debt, according to literature provided by the superintendent of schools.

Supporters of the proposed renova-

Turn to OVERRIDE, page 3

Elie Wiesel speaks at Smith College

Nobel prize winner addresses students on variety of topics

By Lisa Greenfield
Collegian Staff

Nobel Peace Prize winner, teacher and storyteller, Elie Wiesel spoke last night at a crowd of approximately 3000 people in John M. Greene Hall at Smith College about hope, fear, memory and responsibility.

Born in Sighet, Transylvania, Wiesel was transported to Auschwitz at the age of 15, and later brought to Buchenwald. After the war, Wiesel went to Paris and became a journalist. In 1958 he published Night, the first of over 30 books.

Sixty colleges and universities around the world have given Wiesel honorary degrees, and he has won over eighty awards.

Wiesel began last night's speech by expressing his love for the Bible, which he said had meaning for the time in which it was written, and has "meaning for every generation."

The Bible, he says, has "so much truth and beauty in it." Pointing out that we are all descendants of Adam and Eve, he asked "how much more humanistic can you get?"

He went on to tell the story of Cain and Abel, in which one brother killed another. The lesson he relates is, "It is possible to be brothers and hate one another, it is possible to be brothers and kill one another."

The one lesson no one has learned, he says, "is whoever kills, kills his brother, and we are all brothers."

In speaking of the story of Noah and the ark, Wiesel says God promised never to destroy the world again by flood. Wiesel then alluded that God meant humankind would be responsible for destroying the world.

He introduced international human rights struggles, such as Bosnia, and explained the need to react. His advice in becoming socially active was to "begin anywhere, and you will see it leads you everywhere."

Wiesel says allowing events to happen in one part of the world will affect the rest of the world, and indifference is "the worst of all evils."

When offering students advice he questioned what the future will hold.

"When I think about the year 2001, I live with your fears, I don't know what to tell you."

He confesses that he is obsessed and afraid of what he called the "nuclear issue," admitting that he is apprehensive of the coming nuclear weapon technology.

Wiesel explained how he was once shown a computer the size of a whole room, and how technology has advanced to the point that a computer fit into an attache case. He said, if this could happen with computers, it may also happen to nuclear weapons.

On speaking of his writings, Wiesel said each is focused around memory. He read from his latest novel The Forgotten, in which the hero is stricken with Alzheimer's disease and is faced with losing his memories.

Wiesel said, forgetting is "the tragedy of all tragedies." However, he showed skepticism in the power of memory, saying, "If memory didn't cure humanity of anti-Semitism, then how can I be so sure it will cure other diseases to come?"

Wiesel says he tells his story because, "in spite of all the burning scars that cover it, it may be shared by you, by others, and because of that it may save some victim from being victimized."

He closed his speech by offering students the wisdom, "the answer is always in your hands."

SUZANNE GAMB/COLLEGIAN

Nobel Peace Prize Laureate Elie Wiesel lectured last night at Smith College's John M. Greene Hall.

Sign me up

JESSICA TAVERNA/COLLEGIAN

Saturday morning, lines of Nancy Kerrigan fans both young and old flooded the fitness center at the Yankee Candle Factory in South Deerfield. Multiple video screens replayed Kerrigan's Olympic silver medal victory performance as she autographed skates, pictures and other memorabilia.

Faculty Senate is on the search nominees needed for Secretary

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

The recent appointment of Professor Javier Cevallos, Secretary of the Faculty Senate, to the position of Faculty Advisor to the Provost has prompted the immediate election of a new Senate secretary.

In accordance with Senate bylaws, a slate of one or more nominees must be presented to members of the Faculty Senate during its Oct. 6 meeting.

Additional nominations are welcome to be made from the floor at the meeting.

The election of a new secretary will be held at the meeting on Oct. 27.

At the present time, Ernest May, a professor in the Music and Dance Department is filling an interim position of Secretary to the Faculty Senate, said Sherri Barnicle, an assistant to the Secretary of the Faculty Senate.

Faculty Senate Secretary serves as the principle administrative officer of the Senate.

The Secretary also serves as spokesperson of the body to faculty, administrative members and the student population.

At the present time, a nomination commiftee appointed by the Chancellor is seeking to find faculty members able to fill the position.

Candidates are not required to be current members of the Senate, but familiarity with procedures of the body will be considered at the time of election.

Names of potential nominees may be provided to any member of the Nominating Committee via telephone, note, electronic mail, or any other medium before 5:00 p.m. on Friday, October 23.

The faculty senate can be reached at 545-3611.

Professor's dedication and contribution are awarded

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Correspondent

A conference was held yesterday in the Gunness Engineering Student Center at the University of Massachusetts to honor Vladimir Haensel.

Haensel is an award winning chemical engineer who, at the age of 80, still works on chemical engineering research and teaches two lectures at the University.

A $50,000 endowment was given to the University in Haensel's name by the Illinois based oil company UOP. Robert F. Anderson, vice president of quality and productivity at UOP, attended the symposium to present the check.

"Val Haensel's contribution to the oil products industry cannot be overstated," said UOP President and Chief Executive Officer Michael Winfield in a press release yesterday.

"He is enormously talented and dedicated to his field. We hope that this fund serves to recognize his long and extraordinary career, and acknowledges his commitment to providing challenging research opportunities for undergraduate students," Winfield said.

Haensel has worked with UOP for four decades.

"In all that time," said Haensel, "I never said thank God it's Friday."

"The most important part of learning the ropes is to gain the confidence of the people that work for you," said Haensel.

He also told the story of once having the embarrassing task of offering a subordinate a raise, of three cents per hour. The subordinate, in good humor, said, "Why not just let them keep it."

"That's when I learned, if you're going to give an increase, never be cheap," said Haensel.

He also spoke of his teaching methods. "Respect the dignity of each student," Haensel said. "In my lectures, I give out apples for good

Turn to HAENSEL, page 3

JOANA KANGANIS/COLLEGIAN

Engineer Vladimir Haensel (center) receives an endowment from members of the UOP Oil Company.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Oct. 4

Meeting — Information social, Lesbian, Bisexual and Gay Alliance, Campus Center room 803, UMass, Free, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Writing Test — mandatory for all new first-year students, Bartlett Hall room 61, 7 p.m.

Music — Faculty Recital, David Sporny and Nadine Shank, Bezanson Recital Hall, UMass; 8 p.m.

Lecture — Gallery Talk — Nicholas Roerich: Sailing to Byzantium, Amherst College Mead Art Museum, AC, free, 12:15 p.m.

Music — Music in the Noon Hour, Christopher Krueger, flute and John Van Buskirkk, piano, Sweeney Concert Hall, SC, free, 12:30 p.m.

Music — Faculty Recital: Trombone and Piano in Concert, Bezanson Recital Hall, UMass, 8 p.m.

Wednesday, Oct. 5

Speaker — Judith LeBlanc, Native American activist, Student Union Ballroom, UMass, Free, 7 p.m.

Meeting — Student Government Association meeting, Commonwealth room at the Campus Center, UMass, Free, 7 p.m.

Lecture — Advances in Nursing Scholarship Colloquia, Health Care Reform: Effect on Nurses, Suzanne Gordon will be speaking, Morrill 1, UMass, 4 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Speaker — Felice Yeskel, "Making Schools Safe for Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual Youth," Campus Center room 917, UMass.

Writing Test — Mandatory for all new first-year students, Bartlett Hall room 61, 7 p.m.

Meeting — South Asian Club, learn abut the different events going on throughout the semester, Campus Center room 905, 7 p.m.

Celebration — Rosh Chodesh, celebration of the New Moon for Jewish Women, Hillel House, UMass, 7:30 p.m.

Peace Corps — Film presentation, come find out what we are all about, Campus Center room 804, UMass, 7 p.m.

Speaker — Batya Weinbaum will give a reading from her new book, "The Island of Floating Women," Campus Center room 803, UMass, 7:30 p.m.

Film — A Man When He is a Man, Augusta Savage Gallery 101 New Africa House, UMass, 7 p.m.

Dance — Mallika Sarabhai Darpana Dance Company, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m., Call 545-2511 for ticket prices.

Lecture — Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Studies Lecture Series: Making Schools Safe for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Youth, Campus Center room 1634, UMass, 11:15 a.m.

Thursday, Oct. 6

Give Blood — Blood drive at the Campus Center Basement, UMass, 10:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Film — Vampyr, Herter Hall room 227, UMass, Free, 7:30 p.m.

Visual Art — Closing Reception, France '94, Herter Gallery, UMass, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

French Club — Meeting at Cafe Di Carlo in Amherst, 7 p.m. All welcome.

Seminar — Chemistry seminar, Lederle Graduate Research Tower room 1634, UMass, 11:15 a.m.

Lecture — Feng Distinguished Lecture Series, Campus Center room 1009, UMass, free, 3 p.m.

Film — Go, Trabi, Go, Campus Center Theater, AC, free, Show times: 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Film — Jean-Michel Basquiat, Museum of Art in the Museum Lobby at MHC, 4 p.m.

Music — Terrence Wilson, piano, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, $8, 8 p.m.

Music — Chris Smither, Campus Center Theater, AC, $8 or $2 with Amherst College student ID., 8 p.m.

Friday, Oct. 7

Services — Shabbat service led by Professor Julius Lester, Hillel House, UMass, 7 p.m.

Lecture — Visiting Lecturer Series in Geology, Morrill Science Center room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Conference — Negotiation Identities: What's Difference Got to Do With It?, Willits-Hallowell and Dwight Hall, MHC, 6 p.m., Information: 538-2653.

Community — Green Tara Meditation, Wright Hall Common Room, Smith College, 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Other Activities and Upcoming Events

Community Service - The Companion Program is looking for volunteers. Call 253-2591.

Internships - MASSPIRG is offering internships for the fall semester. Earn course credits. Information: 423B Student Union or call 545-0199.

Earn credits - The Peer Education Program on Sexual Harassment is recruiting 30 undergraduate men and women for its one-credit training session this semester. Information: Mike, 546-0365.

The Homework Club — Volunteers needed to help in after-school program to help children from non-English speaking family do their homework. Information: Scott, Heap or Seng, 253-0696.

Want to be a teacher? — Students interested in becoming teacher (grades 5-12) are invited to visit the STEP Advising office, Room 125 B Furcolo Hall in the School of Education, applications for spring acceptance are available at the office, Information: 545-4397.

J. Crew Warehouse Sale — Mullins Center, UMass, Monday to Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Police Log

Compiled by Kelly Spang from University reports

Larceny

Sept. 29

An individual reported his sneakers stolen from the Campus Center while he was resting on the lower level.

Sept. 30

An individual returned to her office in Whitmore Administration Building and found a man rifling her purse. As the individual fled, she chased him along with other employees into a women's bathroom. He was found hiding in a stall and agin fled from the building into Lot 71. He was last seen heading into the Munson Annex. The woman's wallet was found outside the office. Police had a description of the man but failed to find a subject after a complete search of the area.

An individual reported leaving her room unlocked in Prince Dorm to take a shower. On returning to her room, she discovered $32 in cash stolen from her wallet.

Vandalism

Sept. 28

Staff reported someone smashed the North entrance door of Herter Hall.

Sept. 29

An individual reported his vehicle was "keyed" on Presidential Drive.

Sept. 30

An individual reported his vehicle in Lot 11 was broken into and that his stereo, radar detector CB Unit were stolen.

An individual reported a rock was thrown through the window of his vehicle parked in Lot 13.

Oct. 1

A poster of Nelson Mandela in the basement of Cance Dorm had a swastika written with a racial slur.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering

Sept. 29

An individual reported his vehicle broken into in Lot 44 and his Sony Discman was stolen.

Annoying Phone Call

Sept. 29

An individual from Brown Dorm reported receiving a threatening message which is under investigation.

An individual from the Southwest Residential Area reported receiving a number of harassing calls which is under investigation.

Fire Alarm

Sept. 30

A paper notice on the 15th floor of Coolidge Dorm was set on fire.

"The freshest in town."
"Ambiance galore."
"The waiters are always friendly."
"Best I've ever had."
Collegian
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Fresh news, friendly service

STARTS OCT. 3
10-Week Adult Evening Dance Programs
AMHERST BALLET CENTRE
29 Strong St., Amherst
549-1555
•Beg. Ballet (Mon - Wed)
•Intermediate Ballet (Tues - Thurs)
•Martha Graham Modern Technique (Mon)

 IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT **
The next Writing Program Placement Tests will be offered on the following dates:
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1994 and WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1994
7:00 PM BARTLETT 61
This test may be taken only once. Students should pre-register for ENGLWP. 112. Students do not need to register for the test.

Only Eleven More Days...

No one plays like the three-time defending Atlantic-10 Champion Minutemen. And no one covers UMass Basketball like Collegian Sports. From Midnight Madness to the Final Four, the Daily Collegian will bring you all the action, five days a week.
Midnight Madness — October 15

Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
SHARK NIGHT IS HERE
Single Elimination Pool Tournament
• Free Pizza for Players
• $2.00 Entrance Fee
Sign Up: 7:30-8:00
WINNER TAKE ALL!!!
University Drive & Amity Amherst • 549 4040

Gain Valuable "Real World" Experience on Campus!
The Collegian Business Office is looking for ambitious, organized Sophomore SOM majors for the position of
Associate Business Manager
Direct supervision received from the Collegian business manager, as well as the assistant business manager. Applications may be obtained at:
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center (the basement)
Resumes and cover letters may be directed to:
Michael McRae, Business Manager
Application Deadline: October 17
The Collegian is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer

Anti-abortionists banned from clinics

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court rejected an appeal Monday by five anti-abortion protesters banned from demonstrating at several Massachusetts clinics.

The court, without comment, turned away the protesters' argument that they were wrongly denied a chance to find out the identities of the women whose rights their demonstrations allegedly violated and question the women to defend a lawsuit arising from the protests.

The protesters' attorney, Francis Fox of Boston, said the court's action ends the case without a ruling. At Operation Rescue in Braintree, Bob Delery said the high court's decision was disappointing but expected.

"We realize this Supreme Court is not ready to protect he unborn child," Delery said. "All we know is we have to keep fighting for the lives of unborn babies until we can convince the court of the worthiness of protecting the children's lives."

However, in Massachusetts the quest to end abortion stops at the clinic door, since anti-abortion groups are barred by a court order from mounting blockades.

"We're happy. We're real happy," said Susan Newsom, spokeswoman for Planned Parenthood. "That's something we would never do, to give them access to names of patients. Even if the court had ordered us to, we wouldn't. One of our primary goals is to protect their privacy."

The five protesters were among 79 individuals sued by Planned Parenthood and Massachusetts abortion clinics in 1989. Also sued were the anti-abortion groups Operation Rescue: Boston and the Pro-Life Action Network of Arlington.

The lawsuit, which led to the permanent injunction against blockades, had claimed demonstrations blocking access to abortion clinics violated the rights of women who had sought the clinics' services. The suit said those women had been intimidated, threatened and coerced by the tactics used.

The Supreme Court last June ruled that judges have the power to bar even peaceful demonstrators from getting too close to abortion clinics.

During pretrial hearings, the protesters sought to question the women who allegedly had been intimidated, threatened and coerced.

But state courts ruled that the women's identities could remain confidential and that lawyers for the protesters could not question them even anonymously.

In its ruling last April, the state Supreme Judicial Court acknowledged that "how actual participants responded to events could be a guide to how a reasonable person would react in the same circumstances."

But the state court said it was unlikely that any woman affected by the clinic blockades would have testified that they were not traumatized.

"The number of trespasses, the scores of scheduled blockades that were impeded, the physical intrusiveness of the blockaders and the evidence of reactions of patients and clinic personnel make it unlikely" such questioning could have helped those eventually barred from participating in such protests, the state court ruled.

In the appeal acted on Monday, lawyers for the five protesters said the state court elevated the privacy rights of clinic patients above the fair-trial rights of the protesters.

The state court rejected that argument, noting that the trial was civil — not criminal — and that no monetary damages had been sought from the protesters.

The five protesters who filed the Supreme Court appeal are Kevin Blake, Sean Brogan, Mary Kelliher, John D. McCarthy and Mortimer O'Shea.

The case is Blake vs. Planned Parenthood, 94-52.

Judge orders change of venue on abduction case

By Jeff Donn
Associated Press

PITTSFIELD — A 13-year-old girl lifted her hand and pointed across the courtroom at the man she says tried to grab her on a downtown street last January.

"He's over there," Rebecca Savarese said in a clear, calm voice in Berkshire Superior Court.

Savarese was pointing at Lewis Lent, the 44-year-old North Adams man who is accused not only of trying to abduct the Pittsfield girl on Jan. 7, but also of killing two children.

Judge Daniel Ford is expected to hear a motion today to dismiss the murder indictment and change the venue.

Lent's attorneys say the photo line-up used to identify their client as the would-be kidnapper was rigged. The defense is also trying to strike down Lent's reportedly self-incriminating statements in both child murders, saying they were obtained by "duress and coercion." The statements, if allowed, are expected to play a central role at trial.

Russell Davis of Lenox, a hospital orderly on his way home from the night shift, testified he saw the confrontation between Savarase and a would-be kidnapper Davis identified as Lent.

"We locked eyes. It seemed like a lifetime, but it was probably just a few seconds," Davis said.

Lent sat through most of the hearing stone-faced. At one point, though, while his lawyer was describing how the girl identified him, he shook his head slightly.

His mother, Lois Wood, came to the hearing but declined comment to reporters. Lent's family said he denies involvement in the crimes and complained that he was pressured by police into implicating himself.

Lent's lawyer said at the hearing police had prompted the girl to pick Lent from a photo array and police lineup by making sure he was the only choice who closely resembled a description she gave earlier of the man who tried to force her into his pickup truck.

"The photo array is suggestive, and I would suggest unnecessarily so," said defense lawyer Richard LeBlanc.

But Anne Kendall, an Assistant District Attorney, contended that the girl identified Lent because she remembered him clearly, not because he was the only choice in the array or lineup with short hair or thick silver rimmed glasses.

Undergrad Senate needs commuters to fill post-election vacant positions

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

The Undergraduate Student Senate at the University of Massachusetts held elections for senate seats last Thursday, but the voting is not yet over.

There were 28 new senators living on-campus elected, 18 senators who are commuters, and 2 senators from the Greek area.Yet, because not enough students were nominated, there are seats still left empty.

According to Mercedes Betanco, undergraduate student speaker, not enough students went through the process of being nominated for the senate seats that are available for commuters.

There were 23 senate seats available to students who commute to school, and the senate received only 18 nominations, according to Betanco.

There were six commuters written-in on the election ballots, but only five available senate seats, said Betanco.

The senate will not rehold official balloted elections for the five seats, according to Betanco, but there will be a write-in ballot tomorrow.

"We cannot go through the process of handing nomination papers out again," said Betanco. "There will not be a regular election with ballots or referendum questions."

"In the case where no one was running, the open senate seats will be filled by write-ins."
-Mercedes Betanco

Tomorrow's election will only be for commuters.

The election is being held at the Hatch from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The ballots will be write-in and the winner will be decided by majority.

Of the 28 available senate seats on campus, four were elected from the Central area, two from Orchard Hill, three from Sylvan, six from Northeast, and 13 from Southwest.

The elections for all the dorms on campus have not yet been completed. Some senate seats have yet to be filled.

"In the cases where no one was running, the open senate seats will be filled by write-in's," said Betanco. "As of now I have not contacted all the students who have a chance at the position."

The two referendums on the ballot both passed. Question one, involving Advocacy Agencies on campus, passed by 792 votes. Question two, concerning the Cannabis Reform Coalition, was a closer race passing by 188 votes.

Approximately 1200 students voted last Thursday in the Student Senate elections, according to Betanco.

There will be a mandatory open house meeting for all the elected senators tomorrow at 7 p.m., in the Student Union Ballroom.

The meeting will be a welcome to the to the student senate for all the senators, according to Betanco.

■ Haensel

continued from page 1

answers, and good questions. Never say 'That's a stupid question.'"

"He is an inspiration to his colleagues and his students who are continually amazed at his energy level and his commitment to new research. Listening to him conduct a class, one cannot help but share his enthusiasm and respect his almost unlimited knowledge," said Dr. Michael Doherty, head of the Chemical Engineering Department.

Haensel has written over 120 scientific and technical papers and had been granted over 545 patents world wide. Haensel is continuing his research and his lectures.

■ override

continued from page 1

tion and expansion say the measure is needed to meet rising projected enrollments in the high school, and to upgrade the school library, science labs and foreign language facilities.

"The current library is undersized for the population it serves, let alone the population we're going to get," said Assistant Superintendent of Schools Ron Bell. "We have out-of-date science labs. Most were built in the 1950s."

The plan has also drawn critics in Amherst.

Former Select Board member David Keenan said having another override vote just months after the failure of last June's slightly more expensive effort is "undemocratic."

"I don't believe it follows the democratic process to keep bringing projects to vote after they fail," said Keenan. "This is an end run around democracy."

The proposed expansion and renovation represents a "wish list" of the school's teachers, and should have been reviewed by "independent authorities," according to Leo Bouchard of the anti-override group STOP.

"The building as proposed is a poor idea," said Bouchard. "The building committee didn't question the criteria presented to them."

The proposed expansion and renovation was presented as the only alternative," said Bouchard.

Supporters of the measure point out that State mandates required that space be used for special education and language programs, and have thus reduced the existing amount of classroom space in the high school.

The creation of computer labs has also reduced the amount of classroom space, bringing the capacity of the high school down by approximately 150 students since classrooms began to be used for other purposes.

If the plan passes, the expanded high school would enroll ninth graders. Currently the town's junior high school holds grades seven through nine, while the high school holds grades 10-12.

Making the high school available to ninth graders would be good for the educational development of students in the junior high, according to Margaret Collins of the pro- override Vote Yes Campaign.

"It will solve two problems: crowding in the high school and crowding in the junior high," said Collins, co-chair of the high school parent advisory council and director of the Hampshire Youth 2000 Coalition. "It unites ninth graders with the high school, which is developmentally where they

The Mass. Daily Collegian FILLED
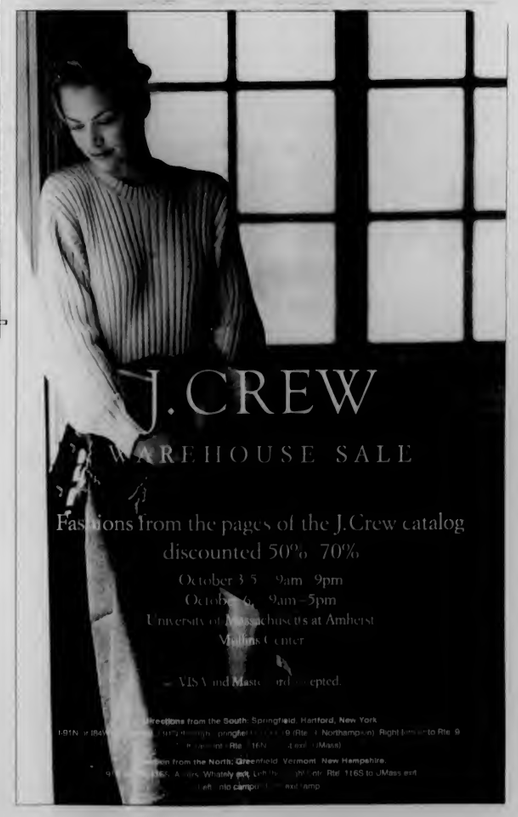
The part of the paper that no one misses.
Yes folks, this is what you too can do at 3 A.M.

Mental Health Groups Fall 1994
Topic-Focussed Groups being offered by the Mental Health Division of UHS this Fall are:
• Eating Disorders Group — Tuesdays 4-5:30
• Exploring Gay, Lesbian, Bi-sexual Identities — Tuesdays 4:30 -6
• Building Self-Esteem — Wednesdays, 3:30-5
• Skills for Combatting Depression — Wednesdays 3:30-5
Groups are open to students covered by the health plan and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. Groups begin in mid-October. Pre-group interviews are required. For information or to sign up for a pre-group interview call 545-2337 or stop by 127 Hills North. We're open M-F, 8-5.

Peace Corps on-campus at UMASS AMHERST
INFO MEETING: Wed., Oct. 05, 7:00 pm, Campus Center Room 804
ON-CAMPUS INTERVIEWS: By Appointment
For more information, call or visit the UMASS Amherst Peace Corps Office, 12 Draper Hall
Call: 545-2105



J.CREW
WAREHOUSE SALE
Fashions from the pages of the J.Crew catalog discounted 50% 70%
October 3 5 9am 9pm
October 6 9am 5pm
University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Mullins Center
VISA and MasterCard accepted.
Directions from the South: Springfield, Hartford, New York
Directions from the North: Greenfield, Vermont, New Hampshire.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne L. Hawley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton II Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Stanley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bruce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Chris Taylor-Conner Black Affairs Editor Emily Maynes Women's Issues Editor
Andrew Ferguson Business Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Eric Abraham Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Maureen Marcewski Senior Bookkeeper
Michelle Ada Lugo Multicultural Affairs Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Keith Spera News Editor Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Nathan K. Martin Photographs Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call 413-545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Fad calls for crime punishment

Peter Orvetti

The latest fad of the political season is crime. Not crime prevention, as the new crime laws prove. The craze now is for punishment. The government has rejected educational, social and community programs meant to give the impoverished and the disadvantaged a better shot at a decent life, and to prevent teenagers from becoming criminals in the first place. Instead, our populist president has opted to affix his signature to legislation that expands the death penalty, builds more jails, and imposes harsh restrictions on immigrants.

That is the way things work today. Crime is not caused by economic polarization, nor by the computer-industrial age that drives more and more people into poverty. Nor is it caused by the illegal drug trade and the abysmal state of urban education. Crime, say the Senate and the President, is caused by law-abiding immigrants, and by teenage girls who make themselves pregnant (without male assistance!) in order to receive an additional $67 welfare payment.

Immigrant fever has swept America. Although there is absolutely no documented correlation between immigration and crime, and immigrants are among the hardest-working Americans, our representatives have opted to push racist buttons and foment division rather than seriously tackle the crime problem. Now, the White House wants all "real Americans" to carry federal I.D. cards, that could be checked at will by the likes of Officer Stacey Koon. Some lawmakers want to force doctors to report to the feds on patients who are legal immigrants.

All well and good for folks facing tough elections. Racism and hysteria are proven vote-getters, while serious proposals are the butt of jokes on the late-night talk shows. Fascist proposals mean big votes. But they won't stop crime.

How can we decrease crime in America? My program is relatively simple, but makes a lousy sound bite.

First, immediately decriminalize all victimless crimes. I will discuss what this means in the weeks to come. For now though, just remember that the majority of those incarcerated are not murderers and rapists. They are perpetrators of victimless crimes. More than 60 percent of jail space would be cleared out immediately.

Second, use this free jail space to force murderers and rapists to serve full sentences. Most of these criminals are repeat offenders, who get out in one-third of their sentence time because those who have committed victimless crimes are taking up all the space. Keep these real criminals in jail; increase the mandatory sentence for rape to life.

Third, only if and when these jails are full — and they will not be full since by this point crime will have been decreased by half — build more prisons. Base any new construction on rehabilitation and education. Right now, there are prisons in this country being investigated by human rights groups, and the United States impounds more people than any other industrial nation.

Fourth, abolish the death penalty in all states. While constitutional, the death penalty has been proven a failure. The crime rate is increasing even as the death penalty is adopted in more and more states. Studies that include conversations with prisoners show that it has no deterrent effect on someone considering committing a crime. It is just another political hot-button; it makes the politician look tough. Only one other industrial nation has a death penalty; it is South Africa, and the law was crafted under apartheid. That's no surprise; in America the death penalty is left to the whim of the judge, and there are proportionately far more Blacks than Whites awaiting execution.

Fifth, stop all efforts at "three-strike" laws. Odds are a serious criminal will be in jail for life after two or three offenses under my program. The trouble is, current three-strike efforts would put a repeat petty burglar in jail for life, but let a one-time rapist out on parole. We do not need a statute based on baseball as our form of justice. We must have faith in our fair trial system. In one publicized case, a small-time robber now faces life imprisonment for stealing a slice of pizza. Now that's democracy.

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

The insignificance of life at the beach

David Jastrow

There was a gentle wind brushing against the young man's face, and he sat contently on his Philadelphia Eagles towel.

The breeze provided a perfect balance to the radiant August sun. His only possessions were Panama Jack tanning lotion, a cheap yellow volleyball that was probably much cooler in 1984, and the previously mentioned towel.

A man approached him and asked if he wanted to play some volleyball. He looked at the court and noticed two guys who were confidently hitting a ball back and forth.

He was slightly skilled at the game, and it wasn't really too different from basketball, or so he thought.

They began to play, and it became obvious that the man, who was middle-aged, knew what he was doing.

They lost the first couple of points and the two opponents bumped chests and reached for their beers.

It was the only celebrating they would be doing. The young man and the middle-aged man seemed to connect. They set up perfects to each other, and powerful slams were combined with hanging drop shots that fell just out of reach of their dumbfounded opponents. When it was over, the two strangers took the game, 15-4. They decided to play again.

The second match was closer, and with the score tied the middle-aged man set up a beautiful shot. The young man's eyes widened.

But as he ran up to the net, his eyes glued to the ball, he failed to notice the net.

He ran full speed into it and fell flat on his back from the sudden reversal of momentum.

The flesh under his left arm was covered with red scratch marks. He instinctively glanced at a pretty young woman who was watching the match and saw that she was giggling, and he could only speculate how the scene must have looked.

The game deteriorated at that point and he sneaked off the beach as quickly as he could.

He realized that he was late for work, so he immediately grabbed his uniform. He grimaced as he put on his black polyester pants which placed too much tightness in the crotch area.

His job was to operate a ride called "On The Boardwalk," a slow moving journey through the past of Atlantic City. To get onto this Mecca of excitement, it was necessary to step onto a moving sidewalk and then embark onto the actual ride.

After an hour of work, he was bored. He wondered to himself if one-half of his college education should have brought him more challenging jobs than this one.

Suddenly, a fat woman stepped up to his ride and he warned her that the conveyor belt he stood on was in motion. His advice was ignored and she fell flat on her back. Her motionless body moved slowly down the conveyor belt until the young man, with his cat-like instincts, stopped the ride. He convinced the woman not to sue the company, and at last, he went back home.

He smoked a cigarette on the wooden deck outside his home and he planned to sleep. As he was about to go back inside the people next door asked the young man if he wanted to come over to have a few drinks.

The atmosphere over there reminded him of school, and he drank with his neighbors most of the night. One guy talked about his girlfriend who left him after being engaged to him for a few years. She also took his stereo with her.

"You've got to get it back," was all he could say to comfort his saddened new friend. A while later, the new friend threw up and it was time to go home. He thought about how strange everything is sometimes, and then he faded off to sleep.

David Jastrow is a UMass student

Letters to the Editor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance. If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

IT WAS NICE OF YOU TO COME ON SUCH SHORT NOTICE, SID! ISN'T IT A BEAUTIFUL DAY FOR A BARBECUE?
UM, I GUESS SO. WILL THIS TAKE LONG?
I DON'T IMAGINE SO. MINISTER ARIANNA JOHN HAS A VERY TIGHT SCHEDULE. BUT YOU SHOULD SEE SUAN — SHE'S SO EXCITED ESPECIALLY WHEN SHE HEARD YOU'D BE HER OLD-FATHER JOHN!
MOM, MY WHAT'S GOING ON?
OH, THERE YOU ARE, SWEETIE! REMEMBER MOMMY'S AGENT, UNCLE SID?
HI, KID
DADDY SAYS YOU'RE A BLOOD-SUCKING WEASEL.
HE HAS TO BE. HE'S ON THE 17TH HOLE.
IS THERE ANYTHING BAD?

Opinion/Editorial

WE CAN WORK TOGETHER ON WORLD TROUBLE SPOTS, SURE, BUT EVEN THOUGH I'M COMING FROM A STRONG POSITION AT HOME, THERE'S ONLY SO MUCH I CAN DO TO HELP YOUR DOMESTIC POLITICAL SITUATION.
YOU'RE ENJOYING THIS, AREN'T YOU.
YELTSIN
TOLES
YES, NOW LET ME TELL YOU WHAT WE'RE GOING TO DO ABOUT WORLD TROUBLE SPOTS

What should I be when I grow up?

A.J. Stewart

"What do you want to do when you grow up?" Knowing the people at UMass, this is still a very pertinent question. Personally, I have been asked this question a thousand times, and answered it much less. The truth is, I haven't any idea what I'm going to do with my life. Well, that's not exactly true. I have plenty of ideas, they're just not very good ones.

My career mess started at the age of four. Mom sat me down at the kitchen table and wanted to know what was running through my head. I told her that I wanted to be President. She said that was a good start.

Then she started talking about achievement and hard work and the like. She was really getting into this, telling me what it takes to be successful. Looking back, I wish I had taken notes; they'd probably come in pretty handy right around now. What I do remember is this: "You can be a doctor or a lawyer." I am deathly afraid of blood, so I chose law. To this day, I plan on going to law school. They say you get a Porsche when you graduate.

But I have had other dreams. For a long time, I wanted to run my own hot dog stand. Something about being in the sun, listening to music, and providing the highest quality condiments had tremendous appeal. You're the boss, and can play by your own rules. No suits or ties, no office, no set hours, what could be better? Then again, there are no benefits, no steady paycheck, and no way that I could deal with all those eight-year-olds. Scratch that idea.

I wanted to open my own bar. I was somewhat discouraged that my two choices for names, the 21st Amendment and the Booze Shop, were already taken. I thought it would be fun to drink as much as I wanted to without running up a tab. The idea of becoming a voluntary alcoholic seemed rather appealing. That is, until I got really drunk one night and . . . ah, but that's a column for another day. The bottom line is that I have experienced total and complete inebriation. The end of the night was not nearly as much fun as the beginning. This leads me to believe that the law of diminishing returns was formulated in a bar.

My latest great idea is to become a professional golfer. They make an exorbitant amount of money to wander around beautiful country clubs. They don't even carry their own clubs. Imagine being able to wake up and say, "I'm playing 18 at Augusta today." Like all of my potential career choices, this one has its drawbacks. One is I'd have to get a whole new wardrobe (complete with funky hats and checkered pants), and the other is I have absolutely no talent.

Other desired occupations, at least for a second and a half: stunt man, race car driver, accountant(?), porn star(?!), Roadrunner, poet, mountain climber, NFL Mascot (only for the Patsies or Colts(es)), beekeeper and Jon Bon Jovi. I realize that not every one can be a glam rocker, but how can you not love his hair?

Hopefully, I will graduate next year. Perhaps by then I will have received the great vision from a higher being. Maybe it will point the way, deciding my career fate for me. In a deep, booming voice, the heavens will cry out, "Take the Packers getting three." With that kind of inside information, I could be the next Jimmy the Greek. And I'd take you all out to lunch, if you're not all ready there.

A.J. Stewart is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor:

The recent lecture by African American feminist Bell Hooks here at the University of Massachusetts was both timely and thought provoking. By bringing a revolutionary feminist perspective to the struggles against white supremacy and racism, Bell Hooks shed new light on the underlying reasons for the current paralysis of these struggles.

She identified a persistence of male patriarchal and capitalist values that are being promulgated by the leadership within various movements for social change. Clearly and consistently throughout the lecture, she raised contradictory acts and values projected by the leaders and spokespersons of both the feminist and civil rights movements. She discussed capitalist feminists who write feminist material only when it has become profitable. She also discussed Black capitalist "fascists" who promise liberation for the masses of the Black underclass, while encouraging them to give up on receiving public assistance and become par of the same corporate imperial structure responsible for their conditions.

Ms. Hooks cited sexism among Black men as being counterproductive to the struggle for social justice, and gave a vivid account of this problem. She discussed a recent Boston Globe article as an example of how the only Black intellectuals featured in America are men. The article featured Black Studies professors Henry Louis Gates and Cornell West of Harvard, and Molefi Asanti of Temple University, but did not acknowledge the existence of a single female Black academic.

It was encouraging to hear that the Black Student Union had invited Ms. Hooks to be a guest on their morning radio show, a decision that deserves to be commended on the part of the show's host, Yusef Lateef. Putting male ego aside to pay tribute to such an important feminist writer indicates that progress is indeed underway.

Nevertheless, things will not change until the leadership of our civil rights institutions can follow suit fully, as the Benjamin Chavis/NAACP confrontation indicated this past summer. Black men, as do all men, still have a long way to go before coming to realize that the struggle against injustice will not be won by replacing "old boy networks" with "homeboy networks." Whether in a civil rights organization, the Black church, or even within a Black student group on a college campus, African American women can no longer afford to offer unconditional support for this kind of thinking on the part of their men, as this encourages them to perpetuate the principles that are, whether they are aware of it or not, leading to the demise of the very same communities they lay claim to protect.

For the sake of all that is at stake, men and women alike must stop collaborating with the destructive patriarchy that is evil from which too many people have, and continue to suffer from, and die. From the onset of Ms. Hooks' lecture, it became clear that it is only from a revolutionary feminist perspective that the struggle against social injustice will be won.

Leona Walker
Central

To the editor:

The Cannabis Reform Coalition would like to remind all UMass undergrads to vote in the upcoming Student Government Association elections on Thursday. We are optimistic about this election, since many CRC members are running for office. We are also very confident that students will vote YES on question number two, which would allow those attending UMass to donate money for marijuana legalization when they pay their semesterly tuition and fees. (If they want to, that is.)

The reason we are sure that UMass wants to vote YES on 2 is really very simple. Most people at UMass think marijuana should be legal. In the spring of 1993, students here said so by voting two-to-one against marijuana prohibition. Public support for our cause is obvious to us, during the first few weeks of school, the CRC has gained over 300 new members, for a total of more than 600. On Tuesday we signed up 25 more at our general meeting — 175 people walked through the pouring rain that night to come make plans with the CRC.

Across the campus, attitudes toward cannabis have definitely been improving. Graduate students, resident assistants, resident directors, teaching assistants and even professors have come to up to us and expressed their support.

The SGA is much more willing to listen to our concerns as a group. Housing Services is considering training new RAs not to overreact when their residents "spark up" in the dorms, and finally, most of the administrators and police have stopped harassing us when we hand out literature or protest. This is definite progress.

It isn't just UMass, though, last year U Magazine reported that 93 percent of college students think legal cannabis is the way to go. It isn't just a college thing, either. Within the last two years there have been many major victories in U.S. cities — especially when it comes to marijuana's use as a medicine. There is a bill sitting on California Governor Pete Wilson's desk right now which outright demands that medical marijuana be legalized.

The way we see it, legalizing marijuana is just a matter of time — but it is time we can't afford to waste! Every two seconds a police officer is using our tax dollars to arrest someone for marijuana. Meanwhile violent crime goes unpunished more and more these days.

Your YES vote on question number 2 helps us to stop this madness before someone you know gets hurt. And, after question 2 passes, every dollar you donate will bring us a few minutes closer to legalization by funding the drug education programs, legal support services, research and lobbying which are necessary to win the fight. The UMACRC is active and on the move — say no to bad laws. Vote YES on 2.

Kristie Matinko
President

Arts & Living

Streep can't save soggy River Wild script from sinking fast

By Daniel Pellegrini
Collegian Staff

THE RIVER WILD
Directed by Curtis Hanson
with Meryl Streep, Kevin Bacon
David Strathairn and Joseph Mazzello

COURTESY GETTEN PICTURES
Meryl Streep, seen here in 1990's Defending Your Life, stars in the new thriller The River Wild with Kevin Bacon and David Strathairn.

Intrusion films. There have been good ones, there have been not so good ones. Unfortunately, the latter applies to The River Wild, a film that not only drowns in its own right, but may also have worn out the welcome of the exhausted trend of "unwelcomed guest" films as well.

The standard formula for these films is quite simple: Shady nice guy (in this case Kevin Bacon) encounters family or married couple, acts vulnerable and in need of help, wins family's trust and enters their lives. Shady nice guy always poses some sort of sexual threat to the opposing gender in the family, inevitably resulting in their division. But once the family can overcome the disfunctionalities they were having before the movie even started, they can "lose" shady nice guy and live happily ever after.

One would think that director Curtis Hanson, who is making a career of these intruder-thrillers (he helmed Bad Influence and The Hand That Rocks the Cradle), would be able to apply just a moderate amount of originality here. Instead he rests on the laurels he created in The Hand That Rocks the Cradle and offers us practically the same movie with the same effects — soft, gentle music counterpointing a few subtle scares.

Even when disregarding the formulaic plot, The River Wild still lacks the elements needed to hold its own as an action- thriller. The wild river calms down in the middle of the film and relies on shore-based action that is cut too quick. Every time an action sequence occurs and you begin to engrossed in the suspense, Hanson cuts it off with a cop-out resolution. The outcome is routine rather than spectacular.

I wasn't expecting anything more than predictable pulp in seeing this film, but with the popularity of these intruder- thrillers during the last three years, I was at least expecting a slight twist. The usually prominent Kevin Bacon is monotone and stale as the psychotic infiltrater, and David Strathairn (last seen as Tom Cruise's brother in The Firm) is traditional and unenthusiastic as the helpless husband.

An exception as always is Meryl Streep, ageless as usual. Although the poor script saddles Streep with one too many melodramatic lines, there is never a question that she's undoubtedly in control.

The River Wild is at times mildly entertaining, but for the most part it misses the complex character conflicts and psychological torment that usually kindle these type of films. It's not really a wild river, but more of a narrow, shallow one.

BEE BOP
If you've got a good vibe you can snap your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum.
Mass Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

100% BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
Great Burgs! Great Deal!
QUARTER POUNDERS* OPEN YEAR ROUND
585-0241 ROUTE 9 HADLEY MA
PETE'S

Collegian Classifieds
They Really Work!

Multibands Pops concert a dizzying feat

By Stacy Guerasseva
College Correspondent

It used to be that the best place to go to experience several thrilling acts simultaneously would be to attend a circus. Under the big top, kiddies and their parents could feast their eyes on a jumble of dizzying, exciting and uninterrupted performances. On Friday, Sept. 30, the 20th Annual Multiband Pops concert brought back the circus atmosphere to the Mullins Center with a wide array of dazzling performances — all coming at the audience at furious pace.

For the past 19 years, the annual Pops concert has been held in the Fine Arts Center. This year, however, the concert's enormous popularity necessitated the move to the bigger Mullins.

"We have had sold-out houses for Multiband Pops for several years now. Last year, because of a lack of space, we had to turn individuals away," explained Ernest May, department chair.

For the event, Mullins was divided in half by large red curtains, so the audience sat only on one side of the arena. Behind the curtains were the three main "stages" where most of the performances took place.

There were two large video screens that displayed close-up shots of the performers throughout the concert, creating an air of intimacy with the audience. The audience's experience was also heightened by the use of special computer controlled lighting effects.

None of the presentations exceeded 15 minutes, and the audience never knew where in the arena a performance would take place. One presentation would flawlessly flow into the next, the performers hardly pausing for applause. The only indication of the location of a performance was a spotlight which landed on the musicians, singers or the dancers as soon as the previous performance was completed.

One presentation would flawlessly flow into the next, the performers hardly pausing for applause. The only indication of the location of a performance was a spotlight which landed on the musicians, singers or the dancers as soon as the previous performance was completed.

The concert opened up with the University Jazz Ensemble, which did a lively rendition of Ernie Wilkins' "Kansas City Shout." Perhaps the two most memorable performances of the evening were the a cappella groups: The Vocal Jazz and African-American Ensemble, and The A Capellas. The two groups sang frothy, lively tunes titled "Chili Con Carne" and "David and Goliath," respectively.

The evening ended with the Minuteman Marching Band, which gave the audience a sample of their 1994 Field show. The Multiband Pops Concert, a traditional part of Homecoming weekend, was indeed an unusual, but very lively, stimulating experience. It offered students, their parents and many other people a taste of the different sounds and sights of the UMass Music Department.

Blues guitarist captures Texas sound

60-year-old musician is a legend in his own backyard

By John McFarland
Associated Press

ELMO, Texas — Henry Qualls settles into a weather-beaten plastic chair and adjusts his guitar. He takes a long swig from a beer can, then looks over the dozen or so people who have gathered in his front yard.

A comment from somewhere elicits a deep, booming laugh, which evolves into a scratching wheeze before eventually becoming a cough.

"The TB's killin' me," the wiry, 60-year-old says, his bloodshot eyes drooping sadly. "But I'm gonna be OK."

He has to be OK. This is Saturday night in Elmo, which means hundreds will flock over from about 45 miles east of Dallas to hear Qualls, one of the last true East Texas blues guitarists.

"Some nights, there are so many of them that you can't hardly stir them with a stick," says Qualls, a bristly bearded chain-smoker who tears through the blues on a 36-year-old guitar he's named Maybelline. "I guess this is one of the last places for real Texas blues."

About 75 people recently filled the dirt driveway and patchy front yard of his house, a converted railway station about 100 yards from the tracks.

Most were drinking, some were dancing and others were just tapping their toes. Trains regularly roared by. A sheriff's deputy stopped to say a neighbor had complained about the noise. The music didn't stop for the trains or the cops.

It looks a lot like a really good house party. And it is. But the alcohol-soaked Elmo jams also serve as a living link to a time gone by.

"Henry has remained virtually untainted by outside musical influences," says Dick Waterman, who has managed and promoted blues legends such as Mance Lipscomb and Muddy Waters.

"Either he didn't hear them or he heard them and rejected them. He's playing in a style that's certainly vanishing," Waterman said in an interview from his home in Oxford, Miss.

"The tone of his guitar echoes of Lightnin' Hopkins, Frankie Lee and Lil' Son Jackson. He's just the living embodiment of real Texas blues," says Wes Race Jr., president of the Wichita Blues Society.

Qualls plays several covers, although many of them would only be familiar to true blues fanatics. The influences of early 20th-century work-camp "hollers" and "spirituals" also are evident in his music, much of which focuses on familiar blues themes: death, heartbreak and God.

The result, says his promoter, Chuck Nevitt, is a unique yet traditional sound.

"He plays a lot of stuff by Lightnin' Hopkins and those guys, but it still comes out sounding like Henry," Nevitt said.

For a long time, there wasn't much music at the faded yellow house just outside Elmo. Qualls has played his guitar

Turn to BLUES, page 6

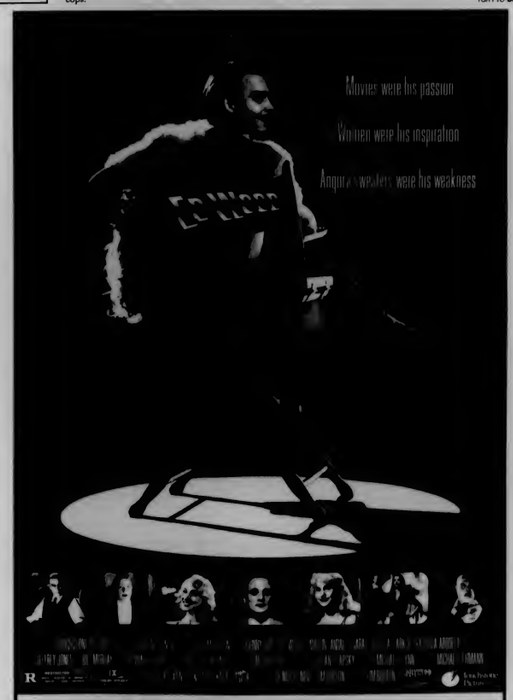
NATIONAL DEPRESSION SCREENING DAY

Thursday, October 6, 1994
90-minute sessions
Arrive anytime between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. or between 5 and 7 p.m.
Dakin Conference Room, Cooley Dickinson Hospital
30 Locust Street, Northampton

Symptoms of depression include:
- changes in appetite
- trouble sleeping or awakening
- inability to concentrate
- inability to enjoy usual activities
- feelings of hopelessness
- lack of self-esteem
- feelings of fatigue
- unexplained physical ailments
- thoughts about suicide

Depression affects 10 million people in the United States, yet only a third of them seek help. Fortunately, help is available. If you think you might be suffering from depression, consider coming and talking with a mental health professional. It's free and confidential, and no appointment is needed. You will listen to a brief talk about depression, watch a short video, complete a checklist about your symptoms, and meet briefly with a mental health professional. You will be given referral information if you wish.

Sponsored by Cooley Dickinson Hospital, Franklin/Hampshire Community Health Center and Valley Programs
For more information, call 582-2000



Now Playing in Selected Cities. Starts Friday, October 7th at Theatres Everywhere.

The River Wild makes its way into first place at box office

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Meryl Streep's thriller The River Wild held the top spot at the box office this weekend, earning an estimated $10.5 million.

Timecop took in $5.5 million, according to estimates Sunday by studios and industry sources.

The Mask, which comes in ninth, remains popular with moviegoers, while Forrest Gump stays in the running. Oliver Stone's controversial Natural Born Killers, starring Woody Harrelson and Juliette Lewis rounded out the top ten.

The final box office figures will be released today.

The Top 10 movies at U.S. and Canadian theaters over the weekend and their estimated grosses were:

1. The River Wild, $10.5 million.
2. Timecop, $5.5 million.
3. Jason's Lyric, $4.8 million.
4. Forrest Gump, $4.2 million.
5. Quiz Show, $3.4 million.
6. Terminal Velocity, $3.3 million.
7. Clear and Present Danger, $2.1 million.
8. The Scout, $1.6 million.
9. The Mask, $1.1 million.
10. Natural Born Killers, $1.1 million.

■ Blues

continued from page 5

off and on for more than 40 years, but he never had much time to pursue a career in music.

He had more important things to do, like mowing wealthy people's lawns in Dallas in order to feed his 10 kids. After 35 years, Qualls retired a few years ago because of medical problems.

Qualls' musical resurgence began in 1990 when he met Scottie Ferris, a local blues enthusiast and bass guitar player.

Ferris owned a trailer outside Elmo that he'd converted into an old-time juke joint. Qualls soon began spending his Saturday nights jamming at the packed trailer. Ferris then began telling stories of Qualls' guitar mastery to Nevitt, who's also president of the Dallas Blues Society.

For years Nevitt couldn't be persuaded to take a chance on Qualls.

But Nevitt changed his mind last year after seeing a video of Qualls playing at his house, where the jams had been moved to accommodate larger crowds.

"The fun thing about seeing Henry play is that you're getting to hear 70 years of history," Nevitt said. "That's why I feel he's so important."

Qualls' first CD, Henry Qualls: Blues From Elmo, Texas, was released this year. Nevitt says about 3,000 copies have been sold, but Qualls already is starting to get some recognition.

He's played clubs in Dallas, and he's been featured in several European blues magazines. He's also been booked for a November blues festival in the Netherlands.

But there are concerns about just how much success Qualls can take. He's had trouble performing in front of large and unfamiliar audiences.

"He's great out there at his house, but if you get him out in a strange place, people will start slipping him free drinks and it gets bad," says Ferris, who had to unplug Qualls' equipment in midsong more than a few times.

Then again, maybe it doesn't matter much to Qualls if he winds up touring major cities or just jamming in his yard.

"As long as he could play at his house, have some whiskey, and have

Women's Issues Meeting

We are looking for a few good women (and men) to write for the Women's Issues desk.

If you are interested please come to our meeting Thursday, October 6 at 5:30 p.m., 113 Campus Center or stop by and talk to Emily.

"Simplify, simplify."

Henry David Thoreau

"Hey, that's not a bad idea."

AT&T

AT&T Universal MasterCard.
The credit, cash and calling card. All in one.

The AT&T Universal MasterCard. No annual fee—ever. Access to cash at over 350,000 locations. Plus an AT&T calling card. Because life should be contemplated. Not complicated.

Call 1 800 438-8627 to request an application.

Look For FREE STUFF at The AT&T Universal MasterCard Table

AT&T

Women's Crew performs well at regattas

By Jody King
Collegian Correspondent

They looked good. Really good.

The University of Massachusetts women's crew team placed first in its first two varsity regattas over the weekend.

At Mount Holyoke's 20th Annual Women's Regatta, held Saturday on the Connecticut River in South Hadley, the UMass varsity eight boat placed first in the Grand Race, which is the showcase event of the regatta. The team placed second overall behind Mount Holyoke College.

"It was a good starter," said UMass Coach Jim Dietz. "We were out rowing low, we did technically well and I was pretty pleased with our performance.

"We actually understroked the competition by three to four strokes during the race which does not help to win a race, but does show that a team has better control," Dietz said.

The real test of the young varsity team came with Sunday's regatta in Lowell, Mass.

In the Textile River Regatta, UMass was up against 12 other teams, all starting 15 seconds apart and racing against the clock.

Starting through the mark first in its varsity eight race, UMass rowers had a hard time judging if they were ahead or merely holding the distance with no boat ahead of them.

"We pulled way ahead right in the beginning. When we got to the last 700 meters, people watching thought we were in our own race because we were so far ahead," said UMass varsity eight stroke Nancy LaRocque.

LaRoque was unable to row in Saturday's race due to a lower back injury that she sustained over the summer, but was back in action for Sunday's contest.

"I felt good to be back in the boat," said LaRoque. "I was out for four days. I had a hard time sitting on the side watching on Saturday. I wished I could have been in the boat."

The Minutewomen finished the race in a time of 19:02, with the second place finisher, Trinity, at 19:41, a whole 39 seconds behind.

"It is always nice to win a big race like this," LaRocque said.

"In most races, the finishing times are only a few seconds apart. I think we impressed everyone."

"Even though these are only head races, and we will be up against more challenges in the spring, it felt great," said LaRocque.

With their victory in the Textile, the Minutewomen took home the Joseph T. Begley Jr. Trophy as a symbol of their first accomplishment as a varsity squad.

"I was very pleased about doing so well in the Textile, it was a great way to start out," Dietz said.

Next weekend the Minutewomen will row in the Head of Connecticut hosted by Wesleyan in Middletown, Conn.

The Head of the Connecticut will be a similar size to the Textile River race.

UMass has competed in the Head of Connecticut before as a club team but have not had very memorable finishes.

Desire and enthusiasm are two things that the new UMass varsity women's crew team are not lacking.

Women's rugby tied for second spot

New varsity squad finds high success early on in season

By David K. Chan
Collegian Staff

Despite their lack of physical size for rugby standards, the University of Massachusetts women's rugby club has come up big.

"Our biggest problem is our size," said UMass Coach Robert Laurence. "My average player is probably about 5'3 and 120 lbs. We are tiny."

To date, the Minutewomen are tied for second place in the New England Rugby Conference's Premier League with a 2- 1 record.

One of the wins was against Boston College, a two-time National Champion and last year's finalist. UMass shocked BC by a score of 12-10.

The most amazing point about the win is that the UMass women's rugby team has only been around since the spring of 1993.

"The win was unbelievable," said senior co-captain Becky Landry, a fly-half. "BC has won two national championships and we went into the game not as positive as we should have been."

"It was an overwhelming win and the whole game was intense," said Landry.

The team was also led by junior co-captain Denise Goren, a flanker. Leading the way along with Goren was sophomore Kerry Haggiun, who provided 10 of the 12 points by scoring two tries (five point score).

Last Saturday, the team was scheduled to play at home on the Deits Memorial Pitch against the University of Rhode Island. UMass won by forfeit.

On Sunday the Minutewomen were put to test as they faced Dartmouth College, the best in the Premier League. During the game, Landry suffered an injury and had to leave to be treated for minor head injuries.

With the absence of Landry, the offense sputtered and Dartmouth handed UMass their first loss of the season by a rout of 36-0.

"This loss really pointed out our weaknesses," Laurence said. "We're a team of little depth. We made too many of our own mistakes and it's back to the drawing board."

Despite the early setback against Dartmouth, the Minutewomen still have high hopes and expectations.

"We should finish with only one loss," said Landry. "Dartmouth is the bestt team and we're expecting to never lose the way we did."

According to Laurence, the team should finish in the top three or four in the Premier League.

For a young team, these are pretty high expectations.

"We have risen," Laurence said. "The women's rugby club from the University of Connecticut is perhaps the best team in New England, and they accomplished this in just four years. Maybe we can do it too."

The team faces Radcliffe College this Saturday at 12:30 p.m. at home on the Deits Memorial Pitch.

■ Tightends

continued from page 10

Montana's favorite target in the re-emerging Chief offense. Chicago's Chris Gedney makes eye-popping catches every single week for the Bears.

Jerry Glanville even made a big deal about Green Bay's tight end, Ed West, on Sunday, bagging the Pack to throw to the "toolbox."

Brett Favre has a strong arm, but asking him to reach Fox's broadcast booth was too much to ask.

By the turn of the century, kids will be walking around wearing tight ends' jerseys, not from players like Wolford. Not a surprise that SI messed this one up as well.

* * * *

Week after week, the debate rages on as to who's the best running back in the NFL — Dallas' Emmitt Smith or Detroit's Barry Sanders. One thing's for certain: both will go down in history as two of the best, as well as most exciting to watch.

Sanders doesn't have the line to run behind like Smith does. Sanders can't produce like Smith does with a talented offensive line. His running style doesn't jell like Smith's does. Smith gains most of his yardage between the tackles — he's an inside runner.

Sanders, on the other hand, excels when he doesn't exactly have the holes laid out for him, so he creates his path through which he runs. Smith has the rings and the offensive weapons surrounding him. Switch teams and Sanders has the rings and everyone is crying that Smith is the best.

This bout's a draw.

Arthur Stapleton Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 10

"They're going to come at us pretty strong," Kenny said. "Hopefully we can remember the enthusiasm we had in [last year's tournament] game and recapture it."

The WRams are led by senior Sue Consavage and junior Kristine Normandin. Both have over 100 kills so far this season.

"Outside hitting is their strength, it's their bread and butter," Kenny said. "They also have a good young setter (freshman Jessica Salmans) who has played well."

The Minutewomen will once again be without junior middle blocker Rachel Sky, who was suspended indefinitely for breaking team rules.

"Any time you lose someone who is an integral part of your team, everyone has to step up," Kenny said.

The Minutewomen were able to step up last weekend. Sophomore outside hitter Giza Rivera collected a team-high 21 kills against Duquesne, while junior defensive specialist Beth Cabral led the team in digs for the first time this season.

"I was happy," Kenny said. "In crunch time we really competed well."

Against the Bonnies, it was once again sophomore outside hitter Dionne Nash, making a bid for her second straight All A-10 honors, who stepped up and got it done for UMass.

"We're definitely able to compete in the A-10. We just have to prove we can win in the A-10," Kenny said.

Learning Resources Center

- Our peer tutoring is absolutely free, and is certified by the CRLA Int'l Tutor Ceritfication Program
- Computer-aided Instruction CD-ROM
- Video-aided instruction
- Study-skills workshops
- Popular software packages MS-Word, Excel, Page Maker, Word Perfect
- Trained & Experienced Peer Tutors

Convient Hours:
Monday-Thursday 12-9, Friday 1-4
1020 Tower Library
545-5334

Immigration Law
Hans & Curran, P.C.
30 Years of Experience in Immigration Law
1161 Main Street Springfield, MA 781-6370
13 Old South St Northampton, MA 584-3232
50 Congress St. Boston, MA (617)722-0043
Free Consultation for Five-College Students/Faculty

On the day of the apocalypse Gail finally revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her "Mrs. Pretty" make-up kit in the 3rd grade.
Mass Daily Collegian
"Make Amends Now"

haircuts always $10!
Bucci
a hair space
25 N PLEASANT ST AMHERST 256 0733

Did you get your Collegian today?

Look for our convenient distribution boxes located in Amherst and Northampton. The Collegian. We're everywhere.

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家酒園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 p.m.
Sunday Brunch 11 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3 p.m. - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

START HERE
It's Not Too Late To Turn Your Art
AROUND
Film Dance Music Theater
Ask the UMass Arts Council about single project grants
fall deadlines: 10/21 & 11/18
Applications & "How To" Answers
101 Hasbrouck Hall 545-0202

SYLVESTER STALLONE SHARON STONE

THE SPECIALIST
WARNER BROS. PRESENTS
A JERRY WEINTRAUB PRODUCTION A FILM BY LUIS LLOSA SYLVESTER STALLONE SHARON STONE
JAMES WOODS "THE SPECIALIST" WITH ROD STEIGER AND ERIC ROBERTS
JACK HOFSTRA, A.C.E. JEFFREY L. KIMBALL, A.S.C. JOHN BARRY R.J. LOUIS
STEVE BARRON & JEFF MOST AND CHUCK BINDER ALEXANDRA SEROS
JERRY WEINTRAUB LUIS LLOSA
R
OPENS OCTOBER 7TH EVERYWHERE

Pros

continued from page 10

"Boomer" Berman on ESPN's one-hour Primetime show Sunday nights? Ben "Winter" Coates and Vincent "Ultimate" Brisby are a few of the Boomer's best to get you going.

Yet ultimately it all comes down to one sole point — the level at which the game is played. People want to be the best, and people want to watch the best. And when people respond to the sport of football, their first thought is of the best.

Let me leave you with a few more questions. Who do you think is the best running back to ever play the game? Also, who do you think is the best wide receiver to play the game?

Chances are, your answers were players who starred and gained notoriety in the NFL. Because just like most everyone else, you respond to the best. And that's why the NFL is the No. 1.

Mike Reiss is a collegian staff member.

college

continued from page 10

credit here as due. The Super Bowl is a great event. Great for the neworks, the owners, the advertisers, local businesses — everybody except for the fans. Each and every year, millions of people tune in to watch fancy advertising, the Bud Bowl and an awful football game.

Those who would propose a playoff for the National Championship of college football need only look to the NFL to see why it is a bad idea. This is why there was no blowout in the Orange Bowl last year to decide the number one team. In college football there is no wild-card, no "wait 'till the second season." Each week a team goes out to play knowing that this game means everything, that there is no tomorrow. Each week, they must, as the sign says in the Notre Dame tunnel, "Play like champions today."

That is college football.

Derek Milosavljevic is a Collegian columnist.

sparks

continued from page 10

successful and I give her credit. She has made herself. She should be a great inspiration to the younger players."

Sparks points to her mother as the source of that determination.

"She has always accomplished so much with so little," said Sparks. "I know I can do anything, because she always has."

When Sparks finishes her collegiate playing days, her career statistics will likely read zero goals, zero assists for zero points — a line that is fine with her.

"I won't be remembered for my statistics," said the former Davis scoring star.

"I just want to be remembered as someone who worked hard.," said Sparks.

"Field hockey has given me a chance to be around a lot of great people, and to be involved with one of the best programs and tradition in the country.

KNOW MVXD
BZTTDGHL
IPWHOPGD
ILJKECNF
OMZCODE℠E

dial 1800 CALL ATT

ALWAYS COSTS LESS
THAN 1-800-COLLECT.

Hello? Want the lowest price for a collect call?
Lower than that other number? Then dial this one.
Because THE CODE always costs less than 1-800-COLLECT.

Your True Voice.

AT&T

©1994 AT&T FOR ALL INTERSTATE CALLS.

Jim's Journal By Jim

I looked out my window today and saw some dandelions.
It seemed like there were twice as many as yesterday.
Then I let my eyes unfocus and there were twice as many again.

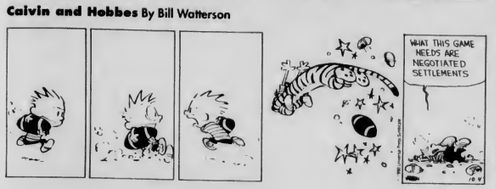
Bruno By C. Baldwin

Jim's Journal By Jim

I was taking a shower today when I thought I heard the phone ring.
It was very faint, since my phone is way on the other side of my apartment.
And I couldn't tell if it actually was the phone.
or if it was just the sound of the shower playing tricks on me.

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson



Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

1968 MUSTANG

Classic '68 Mustang Way Cool Wheels FOR SALE!!! Electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, 2 door, great way to pick up chicks and studs alike. Best offer call Beth at 6-4434

ACTIVITIES

NECKO Karate Club Shorokan style-coed. Tomari 101 M-W 8-9:30 F 7-9 All levels welcome! Call Jessica at 549-4729

Spectrum arts and literary magazine general mtg and ptectons tonight at 7pm CC rm182. Photo editor, businessmanager and production editor positions available. Bring an informal resume w/you if you are interested. Call or stop by our office at 408E SU 5-2740 if you cannot make it

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Learn to bartend with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools right here in Amherst. Free info session Mon Oct 3rd Lord Jaffery Inn or call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

International Students Associaties meeting on Wed Oct 5, 7pm in Campus Center rm 167. All welcome. Free pizza!

AUTO FOR SALE

1968 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Beth at 6-4434

81 Olds Cutlass New parts. Needs minimal work. $700 or best offer. Call Chad 546-1123

Honda Prelude si 95 thou mi, Sunroof. Runs great needs brake work. Greg 545-0540 $950

Oh boy! 1976 Dodge Aspen Coupe, auto, runs, stylish, cheap! I wouldn't sell if I didn't have to. 300 549-4578

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? We have the solution! Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service 7 Oakhurst Terrace East, N Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

DISC GOLF

If you would like to start a disc golf club call Amanda 6-2930

FOR RENT

2 rooms in private home $300/ mo Kitchen priviledges. Kosher/ vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished 549-4853

Blue room for rent. 2 cats, a lake, and an espresso machine. $215 + . Call Juan at 586-4762

Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery

FOR SALE

1984 Buick $1700/neg call 6-2031 Dorm fridge $20 call 6-2031

Atari 2600, hardware and games. Eric 256-6166

Guitar pre amp Tube works real tube !! Two channels, foot switch. Sounds excellent- less than one year old. Must sell soon! $250 Call Adam 256-1642

IBM XT computers $168!!! Includes monitor, UPU, keyboard, 10 meg hard drive, 5 1/4 floppy, ms dos. Printers $80 Call 256-8094

Large (32") high dorm fridge in great condition $60 or best offer Call eves 253-7184

Macintosh 4 sale Mac+ 20mb hd 2mb RAM HP laserjet printer $400 obo call Jeff 545-1181

Motorcycle Honda Nighthawk 700S Good condition runs great $1200 or bo 253-9522

Pagers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549-7331

Rather shabby but comfortable overstuffed sofa and matching chair $150 call 253-7499

Solid oak triple dresser Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354

Speakers brand new phase linear cheap 549-7728

Stereo cabinet, glass door + top, wheels, 4 shelves, 40" x 17" x 18". $75 or best offer Call evenings 253-7104

Tandy computer system w/ drives, monprinter Tons of software Asking 325 or bo Call Joe 6-7348

Watch batteries ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from glass to gold, custom designed jewelry. Silverscape Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3324

FREE

Free kittes, white-blue eyes deaf Call 665-7756

HELP WANTED

$363.60. Sell funny college T-shirts. Profit $363.60. Risk free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs 1-800-700-4750

Cruise ships now hiring earn up to $2000+/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary. For more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext C50011

Earn $$/hr fight pollution. Work for political change with Clean Water Action environmental campaign staff! On bus lines. Paid training P/T or career opportunity. Call 584-9830

International Employment- make up to $2000- $4000 +/ mo teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For info call 206-632-1146 ext J50011

Jobs for the environment. Grassroots political organizing. Earn $40- $60/day. Flexible hours/ casual atmosphere. Call Alex 256-6434

Kitchen help or delivery persons wanted. Must be able to work 20 hrs a week, apply at D.P. Dough

P.C.A for male aged 5'r mann eva overnight. Sat overnight Call 546-0666

Receive up to 288,000 dollers in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am- 5pm

Wanted!! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel, fantastic pay 1-800-426-7710

We are in need of support personnel on an as-needed basis. Tasks include packing and mailing test materials, large volume collating and other general clerical tasks. Some lifting may be necessary. Minimum commitment of three hours required. We are located on a bus route. Fill out application or mail resume to: Personnel, National Evaluation Systems 30 Gatehouse Rd, Amherst MA 01002

INSTRUCTION

Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools, right here in Amherst! Classes start Wed. Oct. 12th. Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX to register today!

LOST

Oh yes it' s me again. I still have not recovered my watch. I'll just remind you what it looks like: women's Freestyle, leather band , black! Please help. I keep looking at my wrist to tell time and all that's left is a tan line. Bring it on down to the Collegian, 113 Campus Center or call 545-1864

MUSICIANS

Guitarist seeking to form 5 piece rock band. Originals and covers. Matt 253-4977

PERSONALS

Gaston, I'm sorry I couldn't make it last night. I was too busy helping Father with his new invention. Meet me at the library tomorrow. I'll be in the human growth and development section. Belle

Happy 21st Marnie! You've finally caught up to everyone! Have a great birthday Bud! Love ya, Wardo

...hey baby Happy 21st b-day! Have fun (I wish for you eli you want. Thanx for everything. Never forget our times. You mean a lot, you're the best. I miss you! love forever, Angel smile

K, Happy Happy Birthday! Peace, love, and happy sun, Y

Thank you Lord for your great intervention from above. BEB

PINNOCHIO'S

Hiring drivers full or part time. Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Boltwood Walk. Ask for Bob.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female to share large bedroom in House. Great location/behind Dairy Mart uptown! 258/mo + utilities. Move in immediately, lease ends May. No payments! Call Kristin 549-3992

SERVICES

"Balloon view" cartoon characterures Makes great gift!! $25, full color! Satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 586-6442

Going away? Can't take Fluffy with you? Email a pet sitting service 549-0836 We'll bring the treats!

Model search. The 1994 Glasmour Models national model search continues. Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Males, females, all categories welcome 617-523-0367

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549-1906

SHAREWARE

Free!! Shareware listing hundreds of quality software programs only $2.45 each Call 584-2782

Call the playground bbs! 256-6085 Msg boses, files, online games etc New bbs are welcome!

WANTED

Alan Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jugglers, armourist to oversee games of skill and magick guests at their 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. Bill/ Irene 584-4203

Campus representative Kodak products giving break trips "guaranteed" base prizes + incentives Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica S Padre + Florida. We handle the bookeeping. You handle the sales Call 1-800-722-4432

HADLEY TIRE AND BRAKE CENTER
439 Russell St., Hadley
253-9911 or 253-9054
Prices only with this Collegian Ad • Free Brake Inspection • Lube Oil Filter • Monroe Shocks/Struts

D.S.R. II 45,000 MILE

P155/80R13	$33.45
P165/80R13	35.69
P175/80R13	36.21
P185/80R13	38.18
P185/75R14	40.22
P195/75R14	41.34
P205/75R14	42.93
P215/75R14	45.61
P205/75R15	44.51
P215/75R15	46.10
P225/75R15	48.72
P235/75R15	50.82

DSR II
EXCELLENT GRIPPING ACTION FOR ALL WEATHER PERFORMANCE

HERCULES MERIT A/S 45,000 MILE

155SR12	$37.82
145SR13	36.36
165SR13	39.77
185SR14	48.81
165SR15	46.12
175/70SR13	44.85
185/70SR13	46.49
185/70SR14	48.79
195/70SR14	51.17
205/70SR14	53.94

ALL SEASON B/W DESIGN STEEL BELTED RATED TO 112 MPH

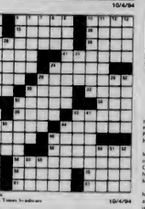
Daily Crossword

Edited by Trudo Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Stamp
5 Less ripe
10 Scions
14 Baseball number
15 Egg-shaped
16 Alphabetical series
17 Like a teetotaler
19 Westernmost point of the United States
20 Gets an A in department
21 One or the other
23 Bill in a coat
24 Colorful merbie
25 Squirrels' nests
28 New York City's — Park
31 Beach sights
32 College student
33 Proper function
34 — loss perspexed
35 1850 Dater
36 It may be sweet
37 Bog
39 Honduras seaport
40 Net
42 Like some hosiery
44 Rosebery prides
45 Appearances
46 Geometric term
47 Group of seven
49 Farm implements
53 One ... chou' a garlic
54 Fair and square
57 Venetian title of old
58 Did a fall job
59 Horsea
60 Luge
61 Vail — German painter
1440-1533
62 Sign of a school

DOWN
1 Bunch-up person
2 "— Irene Nachtmusik"
3 Collection of writings- Abbr
4 French port
5 Second crops of spring
6 Sparks command
7 Cain's command
8 Deserter
9 Diabolo
10 Beyond hope
11 Staff symbol
12 Staff symbol
13 On the — of the moment
18 Smooths
22 "— Woman"- Helen Reddy
24 Fighter's wing
25 Number of two presidents
26 Swelters
27 Bullpen ant
28 Aim
29 Shoe projection
30 A Senator's term, as
32 Game with a knight
35 Loud-voiced orators
38 Issued
40 Angler's basket
41 Tool brass
43 Getter Trevino
44 Beliefs
46 The phoenix rises from these
47 Makes a new lawn
48 Environmental acts
50 Wicked
51 Make over
52 Large number
55 — "King" Cole
56 Rell's decision

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



10/4/94

10/4/94

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Broccoli & Cauliflower	Savory Baked Chicken
Italian Sausage	Powerful Pizza
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Hummus Veggie Pocket	Lentil Barley Stew
Broccoli & Cauliflower	Pizza / F-Squash Bake (?)

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Emily Marino
Copy Editor.....Geri Sahn
Photo Technician.....Steve Pedulla
Production Supervisor.....Tony "Xot" Morse
Production.....Wendy Rae Nutter, Tony Caterina

THE PUB
26 YEARS 1968-1994
Fun, Food & Spirits
TUESDAY
Live Entertainment with
New Horizons
and special guest
Mentos
Reggae - Calypso
9:30-1:00
Nachos $2.00
9:30-10:30
15 EAST PLEASANT-AMHERST

Land Without Priorities By J. Earl

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21- April 19): Showcasing your athletic efforts will help you make an excellent impression on someone influential. Post your heart into a task that could bring benefits for years to come!

TAURUS (April 20- May 20): Your commonsense handed down from the past can't together with people who share your hopes for the future. A wish could be fulfilled.

GEMINI (May 21- June 20): Projects that have had the benefit of expert advice enjoy a greater chance of success than those based on hit or miss methods. Building up your hopes too high could make a disappointment all the more crushing.

CANCER (June 21- July 22): You and an older person will make a good team if you give each other a chance to talk. A lucky career break places you in the driver's seat. Reevaluate a professional relationship.

LEO (July 23- Aug. 22): You could be cast in a leadership role today. Try handling personnel problems more creatively. You have a golden opportunity to make a dream come true. Do it! Keep your night eyes open while shopping.

VIRGO (Aug. 23- Sept. 22): The spotlight is going to be turned in your direction today. Launch a pet project with enthusiasm and flair! Being on your best behavior helps you make the most of your charms. Return compliments.

LIBRA (Sept. 23- Oct. 22): People who previously ignored you suddenly find you irresistible. It is normal to be attracted to someone who shares your intellectual interests. Be prompt on the job.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23- Nov. 21): Do not wait for someone else to call the shots. Taking the initiative will get you noticed and appreciated. Put your whole heart into the work at hand. Be tender and attentive toward your mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22- Dec. 21): Your social contacts could keep you from attending to important business matters. Using greater self-discipline? News from distant shores may have romantic implications. A your paycheck has injured get it renewed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22- Jan. 19): Someone who has been impressed by you for an unsure for comes to appreciate the depth your intellectual curiosity has with. Your interpersonal skills will be right on the mark in both business and romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20- Feb. 18): Doing do others will bring you benefits now. Your focus on caring behavior wins widespread attention. Team tasks or a fitness workout will give you a healthy glow. A part your fears will last.

PISCES (Feb. 19- March 20): A renewed commitment to your work or views will impress other people. You know that you are on the right track when you win a legal ruling or favorable media coverage. Pursue romance tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22- Jan. 19): Someone who has been impressed by you for an unsure for comes to appreciate the depth your intellectual curiosity has with. Your interpersonal skills will be right on the mark in both business and romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20- Feb. 18): Doing do others will bring you benefits now. Your focus on caring behavior wins widespread attention. Team tasks or a fitness workout will give you a healthy glow. A part your fears will last.

PISCES (Feb. 19- March 20): A renewed commitment to your work or views will impress other people. You know that you are on the right track when you win a legal ruling or favorable media coverage. Pursue romance tonight.

Quote of the Day

"Phenominal cosmic POWERS!!....itty-bitty living space."

—The Genie from Disney's Aladdin

The Boston Globe Offers UMass Students Delivery for 50% OFF

UMass/Amherst	Full Year 9/25 - 5/14	Fall Term 9/25 - 12/18
6 Days MON-SAT	$52.00	$25.25
5 Days MON-FRI	$30.00	$14.25
SUNDAY ONLY	$22.00	$11.00

To order a Boston Globe subscription ON CAMPUS ONLY mail payments to:

The Boston Globe
Campus Program, P.O. Box 2378
Boston, MA 02107
or call 1-800-858-4275 ext.0

If you're a student living OFF CAMPUS we have special discount rates for you too...
Just call 1-800-622-6631 ext.549

Sports

Kyri Sparks rises as a defensive star

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

If determination and hard work advertised, Kyri Sparks would be its spokesperson.

The itinerary of college field hockey recruiting usually has stops throughout Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and other places along the East Coast. Recruiting seldom finds its gems in California.

The West Coast has water polo, soccer and baseball players, but as far as the University of Massachusetts field hockey program is concerned, the West Coast produced Kyri Sparks.

In high school, Sparks was a scoring star. She set a Davis High School record with 30 goals in her senior year. But because of the lack of field hockey tradition of the West Coast, she went virtually unnoticed in the eyes of recruiters.

"She was relatively unknown," said Massachusetts Coach Megan Donnelly.

"When you only get one or two opportunities to evaluate a person, you don't get a chance to measure a person's heart. That is what she has in unbelievable amounts. She has tremendous heart and tremendous work ethic."

At an all-star game in Florida, Sparks caught the eye of then UMass Coach Pam Hixon.

"I was fortunate to be chosen for a Northern California All-Star team that came to play in Florida," said Sparks. "That's where I ran into Pam, and my opportunity was born."

Nothing comes easy for invited walk-ons. In her first two seasons, Sparks saw minimal action and did not travel. Despite being a scorer in high school, when she finally saw action, Hixon converted the California native to defense.

"It wasn't my choice," said Sparks of the transition. "Pam decided all along that I was built to play defense. But if I had the choice now, I'd do it. I love defense."

"She has the most difficult role on this team because what she does is the least noticeable," said Donnelly.

"She made the ultimate sacrifice for her team. She has to be extremely selfless. She wants this team to succeed.

"She sacrifices her own notions of glory to get the team where she wants the team."

It proved to be the best thing for her.

Through her determination and hard work, Sparks has thrived in the "shadow" role marking each team's top scorer.

NATHAN MARTIN/COLLEGIAN

Senior Kyri Sparks has been very effective on defense in the Minutewomen's quest for a national championship.

"They [other top players] hate her," said Donnelly. "It has gotten to the point where they just expect it. They know that they're not going to touch the ball. It has got to be frustrating."

"If I'm someone's worst nightmare, that's great," said Sparks.

This season, Sparks has moved into a leadership role as well. She and fellow senior Danielle Borges are the team's co-captains.

Her determination and hard work have made her a natural leader.

"It's an honor. I'm flattered that my teammates feel that way about me. I just go out and try to work hard and hope that inspires the other players," Sparks said. "I expect from myself that I always give 110 percent. When I step off the field, I ask myself, 'Did I do everything I could?' I hope to be able to answer yes every time."

Sparks expects no less from her teammates.

"If they're not (going all out), I'll say something," said Sparks. "If bugging players to hustle aggravates them, then they'll play harder to shut me up. I'm not critical of them. I just know that we have so much potential."

"The team really has a lot of respect for her," said Donnelly. "If I were on this team and I gave less than a full effort, I wouldn't be able to look at her. I would be embarrassed. If I saw her working like that for no recognition, I'd be pretty embarrassed."

Off the field, Sparks has the same intensity in her everyday existence. In addition to her athletic time commitments, Sparks is double majoring German and journalism,.

Sparks was recognized by the University as having the highest GPA on the team. If that is not enough, Sparks is also the president of the Student Athlete Advisory Committee.

"She's very composed, very mature," said Donnelly. "She's very determined in everything. She says good morning with determination. She is intense. She's very

turn to SPARKS, page 8

Tight ends key for 1994 season

Sports Illustrated proclaimed this 75th season of the National Football League the year of the offensive tackle in its annual preview and placed the Indianapolis Colts' Will Wolford on its cover. Wolford, donning a leather helmet, was the model for SI's vision of the 1994 season — offensive tackles would revolutionize the game and become superstars just like the running backs and quarterbacks they protect.

After five weeks of the NFL, there is a position at which players are having an impact and becoming superstars, yet it is not offensive tackle, but tight end.

Arthur Stapleton on the NFL

In the age of double and triple-teaming wide-outs, tight ends are no longer extra players brought out on the field for third-and-short situations. Over the past two years, guys like Keith Jackson and Mark Bavaro paved the way and cast the mold in which players of today fit — big, nasty guys who can not only block but can catch and run like wide receivers.

Defenses are beginning to have trouble covering tight ends with linebackers who are often too small or too slow to haul them down. Tight ends rumble and stumble down the field after a catch, causing the defense to force the passing outside, opening up deep routes for the speed men.

It all starts in Foxboro, where New England's Ben Coates allowed the Patriots to dump former All-Pro TE Marv Cook and his contract and still feel no ill-effects from the salary cap.

Coates has become Drew Bledsoe's number one receiver in the most productive passing offense in the league; he has tremendous hands to go along with his immense frame. Take his Week One TD catch against the Dolphins as an example, leaping to the corner of the endzone, fully extended, and hauling in the score. He is now an offensive weapon, and like Cook before him, will be an All-Pro for New England, especially for his production in the red zone.

Jackson is the quintessential pass-receiving tight end, and with Dan Marino throwing to the former Eagle, he is deadly every time he touches the ball.

Dallas' Jay Novacek is often the forgotten weapon in the Cowboys' potent attack. San Francisco's Brent Jones makes secondaries in the league regret doubling Jerry Rice and John Taylor.

Kansas City's Kerry Cash has developed into Joe turn to TIGHTENDS, page 7

Men's water polo has successful weekend at tournament

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Two down and one more to go.

This last Saturday at the Eastern Water Polo Association Varsity North Division Tournament at Fordham University in Bronx, N.Y., the University of Massachusetts men's water polo team took another step in the right direction with a sweep of this match.

The consecutive victories over U.S. Merchant Marine Academy (27-11), Saint Francis (21-10), and host team Fordham (21-7) have steadily begun to place the Minutemen in top positioning for the North Division playoffs held in Providence, R.I. October 29 and 30.

Led by junior two-meter man Luis Limardo (72 points in 48 quarters played), and his thirteen goals this weekend, UMass was able to outdistance their opponents on sheer firepower alone.

Combined with eight goals apiece by sophomores Greg Menton (39 points in 51 quarters played, third with 14 steals) and Dumrul Alcici (18 points in 17 quarters played), the team was able to spread the wealth.

"Its kind of hard to evaluate (the team) because the competition we were playing are teams that are just developing, that weren't of national caliber," said UMass Coach Russ Yarworth. "It was a good trip for the kids, just to play without any pressure."

One of the key elements to any successful team sport is not just the production from star players, but the significant background support that comes from experienced bench depth. In most tight regular season situations, this cannot be accomplished effectively. Thankfully for Yarworth, this last weekend he was able to test that unknown quotient.

"I was able to give them certain things that we are trying to accomplish, whether it was defense or offensive schemes," said Yarworth. "You always want to give playing time to the bench, especially for next weekend."

"We will be playing Princeton and Villanova, which are very good clubs. So hopefully those kids that played more this weekend will have a little more experience and will be able to step up for us."

• • •

The next match for the Minutemen will be this Wednesday against Harvard University, where they will reacquaint themselves from an earlier matchup this season. At the Cambridge Invitational last September, the men's water polo team came up to the surface with a 16-10 win.

In this prior match, UMass got its production from perennial scorer and senior co-captain Javier Gonzalez and junior field position player John Luviano, both chipping in four goals apiece. Even with the extra-man percentage going at a four-out-of-ten clip in this match, Yarworth still feels they need the work in this aspect of special teams.

"We still want better extra-man play, both when we're a man up and a man down," said Yarworth. "I think we are coming together slowly, but surely."

For better or for worse, a slight overlook of one game in the season against an opponent you have had your way with can wreck havoc. Not only on the coach, but the team.

"Harvard's improving every time they play," said Yarworth. "And last year we went down this same week and came back really disappointed because we only beat them 19-15, which means they haven't made the commitment to defense, and they have heard about that all season."

"So I'm going there on Wednesday and expecting good defense. And if they don't play it, they'll have morning practice and I will teach them how. You can't rely just on scoring to win championships," said Yarworth.

AP PHOTO

Emmitt Smith

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

The UMass women's volleyball team is hosting the University of Rhode Island tonight at 7:00 p.m. in Curry Hicks Cage.

Minutewomen are ready to test winning streak

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

And then there was one.

By winning two contests against Atlantic-10 rivals Duquesne University and St. Bonaventure University over the weekend, the University of Massachusetts volleyball team kept their undefeated streak alive.

They are now the only unbeaten squad on campus, after entering last weekend as one of three undefeated women's teams.

"We have to keep this in perspective," said UMass Coach Bonnie Kenny. "I can only hope that one day our program can compete at the level that our women's soccer and field hockey do every day."

UMass, now 14-0, (2-0 in the A-10) is one of only four women's volleyball teams in the country who have not suffered a loss. The other three teams are ranked in the national top ten.

Tonight at 7 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage, the Minutewomen's streak will be on the line against a talented Rhode Island squad. Last year, URI defeated UMass in both regular season encounters, but when the WRams entered last year's tournament as the number one seed, they ran into the upstart Minutewomen and were defeated.

turn to MINUTEWOMAN, page 7

Which is the better game, pro or college football?

Professional football is by far the best

Mike Reiss

For the record, let it be shown that I do like college football, a tradition-rich sport played at a level that has the ability to produce exciting endings and top-notch play. Yet today, the time has come to put the lid on an obvious argument — the NFL is the No. 1 game in regards to football. Today, I am here to dismantle and embarrass my counterpart, in showing why the NFL is No. 1.

So here I am, flipping through the sports page on Sunday, glancing through the scores of most of the nation's college games played the day before. The first score I come across is 67-0. My only question is this, how can a team score 67 points?

What was that team possibly thinking when it was 60-0, and it went in for the final score?

Nonetheless, with that long-standing anger off my chest, from this point on I will try to remain classy, focusing only on the strengths of the NFL.

Let's face it, the dream of most college athletes is to take their game to a professional level. Because at that level, only the best in the world can showcase their talents. Hey, I'm an aspiring sports writer, and just like most athletes, I hope to someday ascend to the highest level possible in my respective field. That's what motivates me to carry on each day.

To the top. Someday, I want to be at the top. Most everybody wants to be at the top, for who wants to settle for anything else?

The NFL, no doubt, is the top in regards to the sport of football. It is where you will find the highest level of talent. It is where you see years of longevity, a player like Lawrence Taylor who proves year in and year out he is perhaps the best player to ever play his respective position.

If I were to ask you, "Who is the best quarterback to ever play football," what is the first thought to run through your mind? Is it a professional that played in the NFL? Or is it a college player who perhaps won the Heisman trophy his senior year?

Today, as you read and answer that question to yourself, the NFL is picking up momentum. Over the past few years one of the greatest things happened to the NFL, that being the inception of a hard salary cap.

With the new cap, each team is allotted the same amount of money in which it can spend to sign players ($34.6 million). Believe it or not, there have been some NFL players that have taken pay cuts to play the game. Or players that have offered to take a salary cut so the team can sign a free-agent.

With that in mind, throw the they don't play for the love of the game arguments out the window. These guys do play for the love of the game. They play for the Super Bowl ring, the ultimate honor awarded to the team that is the top of the top. The best of the best. Everyone wants to be at the top.

To boot, the NFL has adjusted with the times and changing needs of the fan and game, making some major rule adjustments (two-point conversion, kickoffs at the 40- yard line etc . . .) for the 1994-95 season.

Now, let's talk a little about the playoffs and the Super Bowl. The NFL's structured playoff system is something college football should take into consideration. It's hard to say a team (i.e. Florida State) is a national champion when half the nation disagrees. On the other hand, is there any doubt the Dallas Cowboys were the top team in the NFL in 1993-94?

And plus, is there anyone better to watch TV highlights from than Chris turn to PROS, page 8

College ball is the granddaddy of them all

Derek Milosavljevic

The Granddaddy of Them All. The Heisman Trophy. Bear Bryant and Joe Paterno. Tailback U. Quarterback U. The quest for the Mythical National Championship.

The above only serve to scratch the surface of what makes college football the greatest game this country has ever known, and in themselves dwarf any relevance, excitement and history the National Football League can lay claim to.

On each and every Saturday during the fall, students, alumni, children and local fans head for their favorite school's stadium to cheer on their favorite athletes. These athletes aren't multi-millionaire product pitchmen. And most of them will never make a buck taking the snap from center or hauling in a touchdown pass.

On Tuesday morning you won't find them filming a Nike commercial, but rather agonizing over a physics exam. They eat their dinners not at four-star restaurants, but campus cafeterias and pizza joints. When a kid asks his favorite college football player for an autograph, more than likely he'll get it for free. College players play hard, not for incentive bonuses, but because they love the game.

And we love the game they play. Quick, name an intense NFL rivalry. Don't feel bad, I couldn't come up with one either. Now give it a shot on the college level. Having grown up in Cambridge, I'm partial to the Harvard/Yale game. Student-athletes in the truest sense of the term, each year those brainiacs and their maniac fans leave their textbooks at home and become a part of one of the greatest events in all of sports.

Even the folks at M.I.T. recognize the significance of the day, trying each year to lend their stamp to The Game with a well timed prank.

The folks at the service academies of Army and Navy would argue that their rivalry is the most intense around. Ditto for those on the campuses of Michigan University and Ohio State, USC and UCLA, Auburn and Alabama . . . these schools hate each other. If the only win one of these teams gets all season is over the other, the year was not a complete failure. That is college football.

Anyone who has ever attended both a college football and an NFL game will surely recognize that the former is a much more pleasurable experience. However, they are similar in at least one respect . . . they are both all day events.

A college football game is not complete without the tradition of tailgating. School colors proudly displayed by thousands of loyal fans as they fuel up on all-America treats such as hamburgers, hot dogs and beer. A tailgate party is one of the very few good reasons to wake up early on a Saturday morning. Postgame, head back to the parking lot to salute the winning squad or lament what might have been.

Any fan of the New England Patriots will admit that a Pats game is also a full day's worth of action. After the hour-plus drive from just about anywhere to historic Shaeffer, um, Sullivan, uh, Foxboro stadium; the fans are treated to over 3 1/2 hours of fantastic NFL action, complete with breaks every four or five minutes so NBC and Budweiser can make more money. Hopefully the outcome will be clear early so you can beat the rush to the stadium's one exit, thereby cutting the trip from the exit to the highway from 90 minutes down to 60. All this for only about $200 for a family of four. That is NFL football.

The NFL has gone to great lengths this season to applaud itself for surviving 75 years. Happy Birthday. Of course, the aforementioned Harvard/Yale game was first played in 1875. That's 119 years for all you English majors.

In reality of course, the NFL as we know it has only existed since the first Super Bowl, 27 years ago. I must give turn to COLLEGE, page 8

Getting 'em when they count

Junior forward Rachel LeDuc has emerged as a big-game scorer for UMass women's soccer. See story on page 10.

Pianist set to highlight Russian works

Terrence Wilson, an 18-year-old pianist, will be performing at Bowker Auditorium on Thursday night. See story page 5.

Examining gender roles and definitions

The definition of bisexuality is still unclear, according to Clare Hemmings, but Michel Foucault should help sort things out. See story page 6.

Extended Forecast

Break out those barn jackets and rollneck sweaters, autumn is here. Today, partly sunny with clouds rolling in this evening. Thursday, partly sunny again. Friday will see fair weather.

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 60	HIGH: 55 LOW: 60	HIGH: 55 LOW: 65

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 17 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, October 5, 1994

Final vote on library naming to be held today

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Dr. Michael M. Thelwell addresses the executive committee of the Board of Trustees yesterday afternoon as Chancellor David K. Scott listens on.

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

The library at the University of Massachusetts is one step closer to becoming the first academic building on campus to be named after an African-American scholar.

With the support of the president of the University of Massachusetts Michael K. Hooker and Chancellor David K. Scott, the executive committee of the Board of Trustees unanimously agreed to recommend the proposal to name the University library after African-American scholar and civil rights activist W.E.B. DuBois.

The executive committee met yesterday at the William D. Mullins Center to vote on whether to recommend that the university library be named after DuBois.

Scott presented the proposal to rename the building citing a brief history about DuBois, adding his support for the recommendation.

"The reasons for naming the library after DuBois are numerous. DuBois is a major American intellectual of the 20th century and the University Library houses the largest and most distinguished collection of [DuBois] materials in the world," Scott said.

Hooker also presented his recommendation that the library be renamed saying that "it is altogether fitting and proper that the library which houses the W.E.B. DuBois paper should be named in his honor."

"During his lifetime, DuBois, a product of Western Massachusetts, had a world-wide impact by virtue of his scholarship and his ceaseless efforts on behalf to freedom, justice, peace and racial equality," Hooker said.

According to Scott, the Library Council has recently endorsed the renaming of the library.

The Council also emphasized the need for funding, Scott said.

"With the renaming of the library we should work on the increase of resources it houses," he said. "We should work in conjunction to raise private funds."

Scott also recapped the steps students and administrators have taken over the last six months to rename the library.

He was presented with the idea of renaming the University library last semester by the Petition Coalition, a group of students in support of naming the library after DuBois.

Scott created the Library Naming Committee to deal specifically with the renaming of the library in response to the coalition.

Deputy Chancellor Marcellete Williams served as chairperson of the committee which consisted of professors in the African-American Studies Department, students and the stepson of W.E.B. DuBois. Scott also named former University Chancellor Randolph Bromery as chairman of funding for renaming the library.

The Library Naming Committee met at the end of the summer and formed a proposal to bring to the executive committee of the Board of Trustees, where it was recommended.

The full Board of Trustees are meeting today at the Mullins Center to vote on whether to pass the recommendation.

Professor Dr. Michael M. Thelwell of the African American Studies Department, Student Trustee Al Lizana and Bromery all spoke at the meeting in favor of changing the name of the library to honor DuBois.

Lizana said he feels that after the unanimous vote of the executive committee, the Board of Trustees will support the recommendation to name the library in honor of DuBois.

Top coup leader abandons Haiti

By David Beard
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Police chief Michel Francois sneaked out of Haiti in the dark Tuesday, the first coup leader to abandon the struggle against American soldiers who poured into Haiti to install a democratic government.

Several hours later, a militia leader renounced violence and called off his opposition to the planned return next week of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

"No more violence," said Emmanuel Constant, the leader of the pro-army militia FRAPH, whose headquarters were taken over by the American soldiers Monday. "I'm asking everyone to put down the stones, to put down the tires and to put down the guns."

The practice of placing burning tires around someone's neck — known as "necklacing" — has been a notorious form of terror in Haiti.

Screams of "Murderer! Murderer!" from about 2,000 Haitians who gathered outside the presidential palace punctuated Constant's speech. Americans troops were protecting Constant, whose group directed terror attacks since its formation in August 1993. In additional signs of the push toward democracy, Haitians led U.S. soldiers to homes of suspected civilian gunmen to assist in the American disarmament campaign.

And Aristide himself pledged to return quickly, telling cheering delegates at the U.N. General Assembly he would be back in Haiti in 11 days.

Francois' nighttime drive to the Haitian border post at Malpasse came after his soldiers were humiliated Monday — laid out on the ground and handcuffed in front of jeering Haitians — by some of the nearly 20,000 American troops here to ensure the exit of the Haitian coup leaders.

Francois' four-wheel-drive vehicle passed into the neighboring Dominican Republic after daylight Tuesday, en route for Santo Domingo, after several hours of waiting.

Border officials in the Dominican Republic said Francois was accompanied by his brother, Evans Francois, a businessman and former Haitian consul to the Dominican Republic, his wife, two other women and three bodyguards.

Francois left behind a resignation letter defending his actions. "It was not for me to juggle with the destiny of the country," he wrote, in words broadcast on local radio. "I am proud of myself." After arriving at his brother's luxurious home in suburban Santo Domingo, he refused to talk to reporters.

Turn to HAITI, page 3

Former vice president tapped to fill vacant seat

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

Julia Mahoney has stepped in to fill the position of vice president of the Graduate Student Senate (GSS). The seat was made vacant by the recent resignation of vice president Julia Johnson.

Mahoney, who was vice president last year, was elected to serve for the remainder of the current GSS term at a September 27 meeting.

Johnson sent a letter of resignation to Venugopal dated September 26, stating her departure was the result of "not having received funding for projects," which she proposed to the executive committee of the GSS in June.

Venugopal said her departure was made necessary by Johnson's acceptance of an assistant residence director position, which made the number of hours of paid employment undertaken by the vice president greater than that allowed for GSS officers in the their constitution.

Johnson said she obtained another job because she felt her work wasn't being valued by the GSS.

Mahoney said she was approached because she, like Johnson, had experience working with the GSS.

"When Prasad and the other executive officers received Julia's resignation, they discussed among themselves who they thought they could work with and who they thought would be a good person," said Mahoney, who is pursuing a doctorate in communications. "They thought of me in light of Julia Johnson [GSS treasurer in 1993-1994] being an executive last year and her being able to provide continuity from last year."

Venugopal said Mahoney's prior experience will be valued because "in Johnson, we lost the most experienced person on our executive committee."

"We were extremely fortunate and grateful that Julia Mahoney agreed to be considered for the position," said Venugopal.

Mahoney said an vice-president she will continue to work with the Graduate Women's Network, a peer counseling program for female graduate students.

She said she wants to put the program on "firm institutional grounding" and secure more office space for the program, which currently operates out of a desk "crammed full of stuff and people" in the GSS office in the University of Massachusetts Campus Center.

Mahoney said she also hopes to work with new Dean of Graduate Education Charlene Seymour to establish a counseling program next semester similar to the Graduate Women's Network, but available to men and involving faculty members.

"In the first year of graduate school, people need those kinds of support services," said Mahoney.

"There's been a laissez-faire attitude in the administration about graduate students. This is changing with Seymour."

Mahoney said she's "happy to be of service to the graduate student community" but notes "I'm doing it with some regret because I think Julia Johnson is a good person who served the community well."

Collegian staff member Justin Doyle contributed to this story.

Two referendums passed in senate vote

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

The two referendums involving advocacy agencies and the Cannabis Reform Coalition (CRC) were passed in last Thursday's Student Senate vote.

Question 1, involving the lobbying restrictions on members of the Advocacy Agencies, passed by a wide margin; 998 votes for and 206 against.

Question 1 read: Should advocacy agencies of the Student Government Association (SGA) [Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center (CSHRC), Student Legal Services Office (SLSO), and the Office of Third World Affairs (OTWA)] be designed as official representatives of the student body for the purposes of promoting, opposing or influencing legislation and\or actions of the government officials for matters affecting the general welfare of students?

According to Lynn Robitaille, co-coordinator of SCERA, the vote will help the advocacy agencies on campus work better for the students.

"The advocacy agencies will have more ability to work on the issues affecting students like tuition and fee control, increasing state funds for the University, and limiting the amount of rent landlords can charge," Robitaille said.

"Advocacy agencies can go to the statehouse and work on the issues because the student body has now declared us as your representatives for that purpose," Robitaille said.

Question 2, regarding the CRC passed by a closer vote; 705 for, 517 against.

Question 2 read: Donations to the UMass CRC should be made possible through a check on the semester bill. The suggested donation should be $5?

The referendum question will allow for a positive check- off box for a donation of $5 or more on students regular bills, said Kristie Matisko, president of the CRC.

"It is like the MASSPIRG negative check-off box, except if you don't check it off, you don't pay," Matisko said.

The CRC said the referendum legitimizes the organization and creates another avenue for people to support them without fear of reprisal.

Mandela asks for American support

South African president encourages expansion of assistance

By Rita Beamish
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Grateful for past help and seeking more, Nelson Mandela asked Americans Tuesday to expand the support they gave South Africa in the victory against apartheid — this time by helping revive his nation's economy.

"Come and invest in our country," he said. "I come here ... knowing I will not go back with empty hands."

President Clinton welcomed Mandela to an exuberant White House ceremony underscoring the 76-year-old African leader's rise from imprisonment in the apartheid state to the presidency of South Africa's new democracy.

On his first visit to the United States since his inauguration in May, Mandela was greeted by 4,000 guests at the White House, including diplomats and politicians, actress Alfre Woodard and Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman John Shalikashvili.

Mandela, on a week-long visit to New York and Washington in search of business investment, said he had come with a message: "People of the United States of America: Open your markets to us. People of the United States of America: Come and invest in our country."

Clinton told Mandela the United States is committed to helping him fight apartheid's legacy of joblessness, homelessness and poverty.

"We will walk every mile with you and ... we will not grow weary on the way," Clinton said. Noting Mandela's 27 years in prison and emergence as the elected president, Clinton said, "You are living proof that the forces of justice and reconciliation can bridge any divide."

Clinton has already promised a three-year, $600 million package of assistance for South Africa's struggle with poverty, a 40 percent unemployment rate and 50 percent illiteracy rate. Some $200 million has been obligated in just the five months since Mandela was elected.

The two presidents held a brief business meeting at the White House as a prelude to a larger working session Wednesday. At the State Department, Mandela had lunch with executives of leading U.S. companies as well as social activists, diplomats and religious leaders.

Mandela told them his government is "committed to creating an environment containing optimal conditions for investment and economic growth."

A formal state dinner was set for Tuesday night with entertainment by singer Whitney Houston.

Mandela, at the White House, gave credit to the United States for helping to dismantle apartheid through sanctions and diplomatic pressure.

"You have no idea how your involvement in the anti-apartheid struggle in our country actually helped to facilitate the transformation," Mandela said.

He paid special tribute to Black Americans who kept the anti-apartheid battle alive in the United States over many years, even when the government was resisting imposing sanctions. They "opened the coffers, and set the environment for every citizen of the United States of America to feel that this is a battle in which they should participate," Mandela said.

"Afro-Americans never forgot that Africa is their continent. Our victory is your victory."

He drew a parallel with the "decisive role" U.S. business can play "in ensuring that there are enough homes, there are enough jobs, there are enough schools, there are enough hospitals and doctors for our country."

To coincide with Mandela's trip, U.S. and South African representatives in Pretoria signed an agreement on South Africa's decision to terminate its missile production program and abide by the non-proliferation guidelines under the international Missile Technology Control Regime.

State Department spokesman Mike McCurry said the accord allows South Africa to import temporarily space launch vehicles for satellites, and to terminate its existing space launch vehicle program.

The agreement reflects a joint commitment against proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and indicates "the positive turn in relations," McCurry said.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nelson Mandela.

Bombs away

MELINDA LESTER / COLLEGIAN

First year students Collin O'Sullivan and Matt Rufo test their skills at sumo wrestling during the Sports Illustrated Campus Fest.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Wednesday Ticker

Market Closes as of 4pm Tuesday ,October 4, 1994

Index	Close	Change
Dow Jones Industrial Average	3,801.13	-45.76
Standard & Poor's 500	454.59	-7.15
Nasdaq Composite Index	747.30	-13.58
AMSE Index	453.81	-4.65

Market Reports

Compiled by Andrew Ferguson

European currencies

LONDON (AP) — The dollar ended mixed against other key currencies in European trading yesterday. Gold prices fell.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 99.37 yen, down 0.21 yen from late Monday. In London, the dollar rose to 99.65 yen from 99.58. At midday in New York, the dollar was worth 99.53 yen.

Other late dollar rates in Europe compared with late Monday: 1.5505 German marks, down from 1.5545; 1.2888 Swiss francs, down from 1.2930; 5.2948 French francs, down from 5.3028; 1,565 Italian lire, up from 1,564; and 1.3448 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3456. The British pound was quoted at $1.5783, down from $1.5785 At midday in New York, the pound fetched $1.5798 at midday.

Other dollar rates at midday in New York included: 1.5488 marks, 1.2863 Swiss francs, 1,564 lire, and 1.3451 Canadian dollars. Gold closed in London at $391.80 per troy ounce, down from $394.40 late Monday. In Zurich, the metal fell to $392.25 from $393.75. In Hong Kong, gold was up 10 cents at $393.90.

Interest rates fuel

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices fell sharply Tuesday afternoon as worries about higher interest rates were fueled by speculation that Friday's employment report would show stronger job growth.

The Dow Jones industrial average was down 18.84 points at 3,828.05 at 2 p.m. Wall Street. Volume on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange was 220.48 million shares.

Declining issues exceeded advancers by about 9 to 7 with 1,455 down, 641 up and 717 unchanged.

Prices started the day modestly higher and turned mixed around midday. Just after noon, the Dow started a slide that took it down nearly 30 points before recovering somewhat.

"It's really a traders-dominated market with anxiety being the primary theme," said Michael Metz, investment strategist at Oppenheimer & Co.

Analysts said the selling started in stock futures trading and the price drop was exaggerated by thin lunchtime volume.

Much of the selling was driven by speculation that Friday's employment report would show stronger-than-expected job and wage growth. Both scenarios could entice the Federal Reserve to raise interest sooner rather than later, making it more expensive for companies to borrow.

Espy quits, traders fearful crop ends mixed

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybeans futures prices finished mixed Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade, reflecting market uncertainty following Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy's resignation and active harvesting of crops.

Traders fear a lack of leadership at the U.S. Department of Agriculture could hamper sales of subsidized crops, particularly wheat.

Espy, who has pushed to expand U.S. agricultural exports, resigned amid an investigation into gifts he received from individuals and firms that do business with his agency.

"His demise could mean a less aggressive (Export Enhancement Program," said Rich Feltes, director of commodity research at Refco Inc. in Chicago. "The perceptions are that Espy is a big farm program spender."

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, Oct. 5

Speaker — Judith LeBlanc, Native American activist. Student Union Ballroom, UMass, Free, 7 p.m.

Meeting — Student Government Association meeting, Commonwealth room at the Campus Center, UMass, Free, 7 p.m.

Lecture — Advances in Nursing Scholarship Colloquia, Health Care Reform: Effect on Nurses, Suzanne Gordon will be speaking, Morrill 1, UMass, 4 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Speaker — Felice Yeskel, "Making Schools Safe for Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual Youth," Campus Center room 917, UMass.

Writing Test — Mandatory for all new first-year students, Bartlett Hall room 61, 7 p.m.

Meeting — South Asian Club, learn abut the different events going on throughout the semester, Campus Center room 905, 7 p.m.

Celebration — Rosh Chodesh, celebration of the New Moon for Jewish Women, Hillel House, UMass, 7:30 p.m.

Peace Corps — Film presentation, come find out what we are all about, Campus Center room 804, UMass, 7 p.m.

Speaker — Batya Weinbaum will give a reading from her new book, "The Island of Floating Women," Campus Center room 803, UMass, 7:30 p.m.

Film — A Man When He is a Man, Augusta Savage Gallery 101 New Africa House, UMass, 7 p.m.

Dance — Mallika Sarabhai Darpana Dance Company, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m., Call 545-2511 for ticket prices.

Lecture — Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Studies Lecture Series: Making Schools Safe for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Youth, Campus Center room 1634, UMass, 11:15 a.m.

Auditions — UMass Theater Guild, Godspell Auditions discussed, old and new members welcome, Campus Center room 911–915, UMass, Information: 545-0415.

Meeting — Kennedy Campaign for senate, organizational meeting, Student Union Dukes room, UMass, 8 p.m.

Thursday, Oct. 6

Give Blood — Blood drive at the Campus Center Basement, UMass, 10:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Film — Vampyr, Herter Hall room 227, UMass, Free, 7:30 p.m.

Visual Art — Closing Reception, France '94, Herter Gallery, UMass, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

French Club — Meeting at Cafe Di Carlo in Amherst, 7 p.m. All welcome.

Seminar — Chemistry seminar, Lederle Graduate Research Tower room 1634, UMass, 11:15 a.m.

Lecture — Feng Distinguished Lecture Series, Campus Center room 1009, UMass, free, 3 p.m.

Film — Go, Trabi, Go, Campus Center Theater, AC, free, Show times: 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Film — Jean-Michel Basquiat, Museum of Art in the Museum Lobby at MHC, 4 p.m.

Music — Terrence Wilson, piano, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, $8, 8 p.m.

Music — Chris Smither, Campus Center Theater, AC, $8 or $2 with Amherst College student ID., 8 p.m.

Group therapy — Grief survival group, a support group for those who have suffered a loss, Campus Center room 801, 7 p.m.

Friday, Oct. 7

Services — Shabbat service led by Professor Julius Lester, Hillel House, UMass, 7 p.m.

Lecture — Visiting Lecturer Series in Geology, Morrill Science Center room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Conference — Negotiation Identities: What's Difference Got to Do With It?, Willits–Hallowell and Dwight Hall, MHC, 6 p.m., Information: 538-2653.

Community — Green Tara Meditation, Wright Hall Common Room, Smith College, 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Lecture — Free Friday Night Lecture Series, Jude Rozhon, Tarot: Fool's Gold and the Sacred Journey, 63 Main Street, Amherst, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Conference — William's College will be hosting a South Asian Student conference on Oct. 7, 8, and 9, Information: 546-0888.

Saturday, Oct. 8

Conference — Negotiation Identities, Willits–Hallowell and Dwight Hall, MHC, 8:30 p.m.

Film — Forgotten Tenor, Main Lecture Hall, Franklin Patterson Hall, HC, free, 7:30 p.m.

Music — Mozart and Macchia, Bezanson Recital Hall, UMass, 8 p.m., Information: 545-2227.

Other Activities and Upcoming Events

Auditions for UMass Theater Guild's production of Godspell — Oct. 6, 7, and 8, Call 545–0415 for more information.

Community Service - The Companion Program is looking for volunteers. Call 253–2591.

Earn credits - The Peer Education Program on Sexual Harassment is recruiting 30 undergraduate men and women for its one–credit training session this semester. Information: Mike, 546–0365.

The Homework Club — Volunteers needed to help in afterschool program to help children from non–English speaking family do their homework. Information: Scott, Heap or Seng, 253–0696.

Want to be a teacher? — Students interested in becoming teacher (grades 5–12) are invited to visit the STEP Advising office, Room 125 B Furcolo Hall in the School of Education, applications for spring

Field Experience Program provides opportunity

By David K. Chan
Collegian Staff

"Don't graduate without experience," advises Jeffrey Silver, the associate director of the Field Experience Program at the University of Massachusetts Mather Career Center.

UMass freshmen and seniors alike should consider checking out the Field Experience Program. The program provides students with applications and information for co– ops and internships offered locally and throughout the country.

To be a part of the program, a student must fill out an application, available at the Mather Career Center.

To be eligible, a 2.0 grade point average is required and the student must not graduate before the co–op or internship that the student is applying for.

"In today's competitive world, it is a real disadvantage without experience," says Silver. "I know this woman who graduated last May without any experience through co–ops or internships. She's currently on her third job since graduation and she doesn't like what she's doing."

When accepted into the program, a personal file is opened for the student. The file contains information about the student that will be used in applications for field experience.

Students are then able to meet with peer advisors specializing in the student's major or field direction. The advisor can help with preparing the student's resume and applications.

The program also provides videotapes on how to prepare for interviews and how to contact companies.

One such student who has gained valuable experience through the program is senior computer science major, Ziv Gillat.

Gillat has worked at Apple Computer Inc. in Cupertino, Calif. for the past three summers. Gillat was part of a group working to put foreign languages on the Macintosh.

"The Field Experience Program is doing a great job," said Gillat. "Not many people know that this service exists on campus. Students should utilize it."

Gillat plans to work at Apple Computer Inc. after graduation.

Approximately 1800 students a year apply to the Field Experience Program for summer internships. About 250 go on co–ops and internships during the semester, and about 500 go during the summer. Silver hopes that students will utilize the semester possibilities more.

"The Boston Globe's fall semester co–op program was offering 50 positions and they were only asking for a 2.5 G.P.A., but only about six UMass students are in the co–op."

UMass currently has students doing co–ops with businesses such as MTV as well as television programs such as "Saturday Night Live," "Late Show with David Letterman," and various television networks.

"You can get jobs through connections, I've seen results," Silver said.

The UMass internship program started in the 1960s and the co–ops started in the early 1980s. The two programs are currently merged.

Silver is a graduate of UMass and has been the associate director of the Field Experience Program since 1982.

Distinguished Teaching Award Nominations

Deadline: Monday November 14, 1994

If you know a faculty member or Teaching Assistant/Associate who is truly outstanding and deserves recognition, submit a nomination in writing with a brief description of why your nominee deserves the Award.

Alumni and current undergraduate/graduate students may nominate.

For more information contact:
Lori Baronas at 545-5278
or E-Mail lbaronas@dcp.umassp.edu

Send Nominations To:
Distinguished Teaching Award Committee
Office of the Graduate Dean
514 Goodell Building
University of Massachusetts

Whistle while you work

HOLLY ANDERSON / COLLEGIAN

Odenir Ramos, of Seidl Construction, Inc., works on repairing the pavement outside the Fine Arts Center. The project is scheduled to be completed by early December.

Confessions made public in Lent trial

By Jeff Donn
Associated Press

PITTSFIELD — Lewis Lent, who is accused of two child murders, taped one victim to a bed, assaulted him and held him in terror overnight before killing him, according to details of a confession made public Tuesday.

Lent, who was arrested in January for allegedly trying to kidnap a 12-year-old girl, has confessed to involvement in that crime, too, a prosecutor also said publicly for the first time.

The release of these details means authorities hold confessions from Lent in all three cases in which he has been charged. Investigators, who have described Lent as a pedophile who stalked children, also have said they believe Lent may be responsible for other murders or abductions.

But defense lawyers will ask a judge at a hearing set for Wednesday afternoon to strike down Lent's confessions. They say the statements were gained by "duress and coercion." Lent's lawyers further will argue that items seized from Lent's van and home should be ruled out because they were taken in improper searches.

Lent, 44, of North Adams, who has been held without bail, is accused of the attempted kidnapping of Rebecca Savarese of Pittsfield, as well as the murders of two other 12-year-olds, James Bernardo of Pittsfield and Sara Anne Wood of Frankfort, N.Y. Speaking at a hearing Tuesday in Berkshire Superior Court, District Attorney Gerard Downing for the first time released parts of the Bernardo confession.

The prosecutor said Lent admitted to investigators that he approached the Pittsfield boy with a knife outside a movie theater where Lent worked at the time on Oct. 22, 1990. He then confessed to threatening to kill the boy on the spot if he refused to get into Lent's vehicle, the prosecutor said.

Lent then allegedly admitted taking the boy to his apartment, taping him to a bed, cutting off his clothes, and assaulting him. "In his own words, he knew he would have to kill him. He knew Jimmy Bernardo would have to die," the prosecutor said.

He said Lent kept the boy in his home overnight and then took him to New York State, where the boy was murdered. His body was found in Newfield, N.Y., near where Lent grew up.

Lent stared ahead impassively through most of Tuesday's hearing.

■ haiti

continued from page 1

"Soldiers don't talk, only politicians," he said in a statement issued through his brother.

Francois, who as a precinct chief spearheaded the overthrow of Aristide in September 1991, had masterminded squads of "attaches," or army auxiliaries, responsible for many of the thousands of political killings since.

He, army chief Raoul Cedras and army chief-of-staff Philippe Biamby were to leave power by Oct. 15 under a last-minute agreement negotiated with former President Carter that averted a U.S. invasion.

It was not clear whether Cedras and Biamby would also flee, or simply quit their posts. Cedras has vowed not to leave his homeland.

"We have never insisted that the other two leave the country," said U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager. "We would hope they do. But they are only obliged to leave their posts."

At the United Nations on Tuesday, Aristide told the General Assembly he would be back in Haiti by the Oct. 15 deadline. "Eleven days from now, I shall be there, thanks to the determination of the Haitian people and our solidarity," Aristide pledged.

The Collegian

is seeking applications for

DEVELOPING NATIONS EDITOR

Applications Due By
5 p.m. Wed. Oct. 12
Stop by the Collegian Offices, 113 Campus Center
Talk to Managing Editor Arthur Stapleton Jr.

The Collegian is an Equal Opportunity Employer

HOW TO REACH CRUISING ALTITUDE.

Before you head off into the wild blue yonder, make sure you have a ground crew that can get you back.

A good pair of Timberland® boots with Trail Grip™ soles is all you need. They're rugged and slip resistant. And with the classic beauty of full-grain leather, you'll travel in style.

Timberland®

Mathews SHOES
30 SO. PLEASANT ST.
AMHERST, MA 01002
(413) 256-6374

Peace Corps on-campus at UMASS AMHERST

INFO MEETING: Wed., Oct. 05, 7:00 pm, Campus Center Room 804

ON-CAMPUS INTERVIEWS: By Appointment

For more information, call or visit the UMASS Amherst Peace Corps Office 12 Draper Hall

Call: 545-2105

Gain Valuable "Real World" Experience on Campus!

The Collegian Business Office is looking for ambitious, organized Sophomore SOM majors for the position of

Associate Business Manager

Direct supervision received from the Collegian business manager, as well as the assistant business manager. Applications may be obtained at:

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center (the basement)

Resumes and cover letters may be directed to:

Michael McRae, Business Manager

Application Deadline: October 17

The Collegian is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Cuttley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor
Chris Taylor Content Black Affairs Editor
Andrea Ferguson Business Editor
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Ada Michelle Lugo Multicultural Affairs Editor
Kelly Spang News Editor
Nathan A. Martin Photography Editor

Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Emily Marino Women's Issues Editor
Mario L. Heltner Editorial Production Manager
John Khabsbargan Finance Manager
Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Eric Abrams Subscriptions Manager
Maureen Marrow-ski Senior Bookkeeper
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Weaving reality into emptiness

E.C. Thomas

I walked out if my last class on Thursday in a complete frenzy. As I walked to the Campus Center, my teeth were clenched, but my lips and hands were fighting back the gestures that would make me look like I was talking to myself. I've never been one to handle frustration well, especially not the frustration of keeping silent when raging words are hidden under my tongue, and Thursday was a perfect example of this.

I had just sat through two classes where I was judged to be naive for having some faith in human beings and in the institutions that we live under. In fact, Thursday was basically the breaking point of three years of college level informational bombardment on how horrendous society is today, and if you think otherwise, you are an ignorant fool.

Well, I'm not ignorant and I'm not a fool and I'm not going to sit through another class period being lectured to about how evil will always prevail over good and believing in good is considered witless.

Upon reaching the Campus Center Basement, I cornered a fellow columnist who tends to see things the way I do — one of those over-thinkers. Noticing the fire in my eyes and the seizure my closed mouth seemed to be going through, he sat up from reading and patiently listened to what I had to say.

After I was through, he smiled and took a deep breath. That walk from Holdsworth is mighty long when you've got something aerobicising in your mind. But he understood that. And we chatted for a bit until I had reached some sort of calm. But to be honest, this whole notion of 'don't believe in anything' is still really bothering me.

Realism has pervaded every aspect of society so that the idea of faith has been suffocated into a world of folly. The White House, the Senate, the Supreme Court, our streets, our homes, our loves — our entire lives are now being drained.

It's really great how we've all become such powerful realists, no one's going to pull the wool over our eyes anymore. We're too smart, too hardened and too realistic for anymore of that faith-thing.

It's not that I think people don't need to be realistic. It's good to know and remember that all people are human, politicians, justices and friends alike. We all make mistakes, but don't we also need to have faith in these people all the same? Why is it so wrong to have, and hold on to, a belief that a Supreme Court Justice will protect our rights? Or that an interest group's important cause will eventually pass through the Senate? Or even that you could meet that one person who really likes you?

Why can't we believe in anything nowadays without being called naive?

I am not under any sort of disillusionment. It's not like when I was younger and LT of the New York Giants admitted to using cocaine, and I just didn't get it.

I went to my Dad pretty upset and rather confused over that. I didn't want to believe what they were saying about him, he was my hero, it's not supposed to happen. But heroes are also human, as I've now accepted. But, that also doesn't mean one can't believe in them. If we don't have people to look up to, be it the President, an athlete or a relative, what do we have?

And why is admitting to being a romantic equal to that of being a chump? Just because one may have some faith that someday they could meet the person of their dreams and live in a house with a dog in the backyard, doesn't mean they live in a world perpetually reliving Valentine's Day.

My life certainly hasn't been a game of ring around the rosy. And I admit to walking through the thorns of discontented youth, but if all my faith had been diminished I would never have made it this far. In fact, I don't believe any of us would.

Having faith in things, in humans, or in government or in love, is not equivalent to being ignorant or naive. You can still think of things realistically without losing all sense of hope. If we were totally devoid of faith, we'd have no reason for getting up in the morning. No reason for contributing to the political causes we believe in. No reason for talking to that cute person sitting next to us at the bar or in the classroom. No reason for anything.

All of it just makes me wonder if it's not them pulling the wool over our eyes, but ourselves who are hiding under the blankets.

E.C. Thomas is a Collegian columnist.

A psychedelic dream of kangaroos

Thomas Akyali

For the past few years I've been hearing quite a bit about the most recent super-party trend: the rave. As seen in trendy magazines and described on MTV, rave culture has been portrayed as a midnight to seven a.m. world of sex, drugs and deep acid grooves.

I'd always been somewhat envious of the seemingly carefree revelers who populated the underground world of full time ravers, bit it wasn't until this summer that I gained a first hand look at what I consider the youth movement of the nineties.

My first tentative steps toward getting up the courage to go to a real rave came when my buddy Nep invited me to Venus de Milo's Culture night on Lansdowne Street in Boston.

The 18+ crowd that night was about 50-50 rave types and non-ravers, judging strictly from dress, and I was stunned at how attractive the girls in pigtails and knee-high stockings were compared to those in more traditional nightclub attire.

There seemed to be a certain energy emanating from the ravers in sunflower glasses, overalls and skin tight t-shirts. They danced with their eyes closed, gyrating to the mind- numbing explosions of bass that filled the club.

While I didn't quite find the "groove" that night, I at least met a girl who informed me of a rave that was happening the following weekend in New Haven.

I spent the next week wondering what I should wear, if I should try to fit in, or just tag along as the rookie raver I was. Nep, a partyaholic with a Dr. J afro and funkadelic purple pants , assured me that raves were less about image than about mind-set.

> At one point I leaned against a wall and saw a hand reach over and grab at me, then fade back into the concrete. A dreadlocked girl's comment regarding the front pocket of my overalls had me convinced I was a kangaroo.

He said I should be ready to let myself go completely, that the only way I could really be part of a rave would be to just "cool out and have fun."

Thus warned, I bought a pair of 'Farmer Joe' overalls and borrowed some 3-D glasses from a friend. We fishbowled Nep's car for the two hour ride, and upon our arrival my mind was sufficiently numb for my initiation to the rave scene.

After dishing out 18 bucks a head we entered the cavernous warehouse filled with strobe lights, lasers, huge speakers and people dressed in Christmas lights, neon-striped shirts, blinking visors and enormously baggy jeans adorned with red and blue glowing bracelets.

The scene was unreal, and about an hour after my first encounter with a drug of the hallucinogenic sort I made my way to the dance floor. Swaying to the thump-thump-thump of the unyielding bass, I felt simultaneously alone and engulfed, paranoid yet content.

At times Nep and I were separated and I grew anxious, imagining that I was being stared at, judged, ridiculed for being an unknowing outsider.

At one point I leaned against a wall and saw a hand reach over and grab at me, then fade back into the concrete. A dreadlocked girl's comment regarding the front pocket of my overalls had me convinced I was a kangaroo.

Stumbling back to the swirling mob in my mind-altered state, I came to the conclusion that I was undoubtedly having fun.

I was dancing, laughing, listening to the sparks of music that filled my mind like a miniature light show. I concluded through my mental fog that there was no reason for me to be self-conscious. Nobody cared what I did or how I looked, so long as I left them to their own little groove, let them enjoy their temporary freedom.

I remember it as a wonderfully fleeting moment, free from thoughts of school, my future, my G.P.A. It may have been the drug, it may have been the hypnotic music, but I was at peace if only for a moment.

At around six-thirty a.m., sweat soaked but awake, Nep and I stepped out of our nocturnal dreamscape into the morning sun of downtown New Haven. We shared a carton of orange juice to "bring back the trip" and headed onto Interstate 84.

Ninety miles later we crossed into upstate New York, got pulled over for speeding, and realized we'd been driving in the wrong direction. After contemplating an impromptu visit to New York City, we opted to return to Boston.

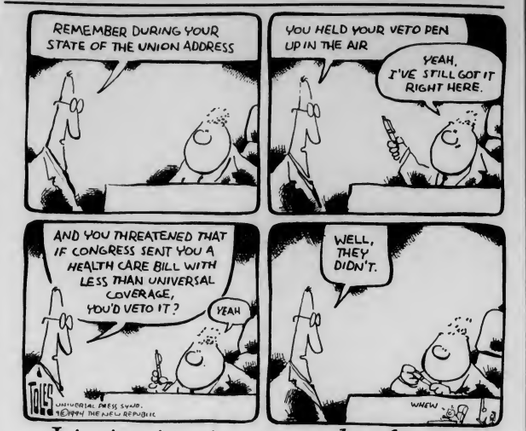
Eighteen hours and 500 miles after leaving home I collapsed on the couch, my mind still humming to a distant bassline; the rave itself a psychedelic dream skittering away through my subconscious.

Thomas E. Akyali is a UMass student.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

MOMMY, WHO'S THAT STRANGE LADY?
THAT'S ARIANNA-JOHNHUFFINGTON, HON!
SHE'S A MINISTER OF LIGHT IN JOHN ROGER'S MOVEMENT OF SPIRITUAL INNER AWARENESS, AND SHE'S GOING TO BAPTIZE YOU!
DEARLY BELOVED! WHO SEEKS TO ANOINT THIS CHILD INTO THE SOUL REALM OF THE MYSTICAL TRAVELER COEQUINESS?
WE DO. YOUR INSIGHTFULNESS!
AND THE CHILD'S NAME?
SAMANTHA-ROGER MOONBALL
HOLD IT.
GBP/Trudeau

Opinion/Editorial



REMEMBER DURING YOUR STATE OF THE UNION ADDRESS
YOU HELD YOUR VETO PEN UP IN THE AIR
YEAH, I'VE STILL GOT IT RIGHT HERE.
AND YOU THREATENED THAT IF CONGRESS SENT YOU A HEALTH CARE BILL WITH LESS THAN UNIVERSAL COVERAGE, YOU'D VETO IT?
YEAH
WELL, THEY DIDN'T.
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND.
©1994 THE DETROIT NEWS
WHEW

Limitation is not real reform

Stan Rosenberg

More than 200 years ago, as the Framers of the Constitution hammered out our system of government, New York's Robert R. Livingston delivered, perhaps, the first eulogy for term limits:

"The people are the best judge of who ought to represent them," Livingston declared. "...to tell them whom they shall not elect is to abridge their natural rights."

But the movement refused to die, resurrecting itself at times of greater voter frustration with government behavior.

Term limits advocates today say the problem is career politicians who lose touch over the years, becoming more concerned with winning re-election than serving the people. But their solution is to restrict voters' choice. And they have been successful in many states, despite the fact that the typical state legislator in America serves 10 years or less.

Now the term limits movement is coming to Massachusetts as ballot Question 4, which would limit ballot access for the state's constitutional officers, state legislators and U.S. Representatives after eight years and U.S. senators after 12. Beyond that, incumbents could run write-in campaigns and if elected at the state level would serve without pay. This provision would force western Massachusetts legislators to leave at the end of their terms in order to support their families. But legislators close to Boston could continue serving while working a paying job and, because of their seniority, lock up the powerful leadership positions.

Massachusetts voters this November may choose to impose these arbitrary restrictions, or to continue the self-regulating system of elections that recent statistics show has been working well. Between 1986 and 1992, less time than Question 4 allows, more than 78 percent of the state Senate and more than 70 percent of the House of Representatives turned over. Voters here obviously know when change is necessary.

Furthermore, limiting terms is not the panacea advocates say it is. It is a shell game that shifts power to the invisible bureaucracy — lobbyists, mid-level bureaucrats and legislative staff, government players who don't answer to voters. It creates the illusion of citizen empowerment, but does nothing to address the very real problems of government accountability and credibility.

A contemporary voice in this debate, political scientist Richard F. Fenno Jr., echoes Livingston's point of 200 years ago. "The solution is to produce choice at the ballot box, and not to enact some law to abolish choice," Fenno says. "The essence of what is democratic is that the voters choose in competitive elections."

The state legislature has recently followed this advice by approving two laws drafted by the Election Laws Committee. The motor voter law, much of it taking effect this summer, makes registering to vote easier, thereby improving access and encouraging greater participation. The campaign finance reform law, meanwhile, restricts the amount of private money in public policymaking and helps reduce the financial advantage incumbents hold over challengers. The Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group says this new law is arguably the toughest in the nation.

Real reform is best achieved by strengthening our democracy through competitive elections, not through the summary dismissal of elected officials without regard to the quality of their service. Encouraging voter participation by easing registration requirements, strengthening our two party system and promoting competition with tough controls on political contributions are the reforms that help make everyone equal partners in creating a better, more responsive government. And these reforms do so without handicapping western Massachusetts or undermining our Constitutional rights.

Senator Stan Rosenberg (D-Amherst) is Senate Chairman of the Legislature's Joint Committee on Election Laws.

What ever happened to Garanimals?

Derek Milosavljevic

Kudos to the masters of the William D. Mullins Center!

For those of you who among the uninformed, the bookers at our fabulous arena have scored quite the coup in bringing to Amherst one of the most eagerly anticipated tours this reporter can recall.

Not since Guns-N-Roses was scheduled to grace the home of the Minutemen has a tour date so captivated the UMass student body. Of course, I could be referring to none other than the amazing J. Crew.

I must admit that I don't own one of their discs. Hell, I've never actually even heard one of their songs, but everyone was raving and the ticket price was right, so I decided I couldn't afford to miss the event of the year.

So yesterday I headed to Mullins. I'll admit, I thought it a bit odd that such a big band would be playing an all-day concert for free on a Tuesday, but who am I to complain?

Here, the plot thickens. When I arrived, I found that there was no concert happening. Instead it looked as though Filene's basement was teleported from downtown Boston right here to Amherst. Clearly this was some bait-and-switch ploy being inflicted upon unsuspecting, naive, student concertgoers like myself.

Before I got the chance to dig in and get some answers, I was distracted by an unnerving sight. Students, my comrades, hundreds upon hundreds of them, were rummaging through these clothing bins like so many lost sheep. I tried to get the attention of one or two of them, but it was a hopeless cause. "Don't you see what they're trying to do to us," I screamed to one normally intelligent young woman.

She just stared trance-like into a bin, searching relentlessly for a barn jacket in her size. I left, beaten and dejected, but not before picking up a nifty little cotton sweater.

Take a look around your classes today. Notice what your peers are wearing. Button down shirts, rollneck sweaters, and barn jackets of every color in the spectrum will dominate the room. Let me make it clear, I have nothing against J. Crew. Instead, I think their merchandise is like eggs or french fries. Every once in a while it's okay, but too much is bad for the blood.

My uncle recently said to me when I was home for a weekend, "Have you noticed that every kid in this town looks exactly the same?" Apparently he tried to pick up my 13-year-old brother five times on the way to my house, only to find a clone in his place.

In Arlington, where my parents live, it appears young teen chic consists of jeans (always a nice start), a plaid shirt (J. Crew naturally), and a white baseball cap, emblazoned with the nickname of the college team of your choice (my brother currently fancies a Slugs cap, nickname of the University of California-Santa Cruz). Nike tends to be the standard footwear for the young Arlingtonians.

If this uniform sounds eerily familiar, it should. A three minute walk through the campus center and student union at midday will almost assuredly find you at least 30 UMass students sporting similar attire. So that's what it boils down to, we've become our little brothers.

In a way, buying clothes like this is like buying Geranimals. You remember the old clothes that had tags to show you just what shirt matched with what shorts?

It takes the guesswork out of it. I'm sure most people don't buy J. Crew because they think the clothes will make them cool. They wear the clothes because they blend in. If you wear J. Crew, you belong, you fit in.

As I left the Mullins Center yesterday, it felt a little bit warmer outside. The sun was shining, the sky was blue, and I felt the overwhelming feeling of social acceptance that only a lightweight cotton sweater can bring about.

Derek Milosavljevic is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Columnist choice defended

To the editor:

In a letter accusing Collegian sports writer Anthony Guido of racism in last week, David Wright asserts that Guido's exclusion of Black quarterback Steve McNair of Alcorn State from Heisman trophy contention is based on the color of his skin.

Guido never mentioned McNair's race, he criticized his skills and pointed to inferior competition as the reason for keeping him out of the running. Similarly, he leaves out UMass' own Rene Ingoglia, despite his impressive statistics in Division IAA.

Wright jumped to conclusions in failing to notice that in the September 13 issue of the Collegian, Guido lists Nebraska quarterback Tommie Frazier as a leading candidate for the Heisman. Like McNair, Frazier is Black, a fact that had no bearing on the choice Guido made.

Russet Morrow
Hampshire College

Arts & Living

A new TV Order Waterston

'I'll Fly Away' thespian finds new challenges in latest role

By Scott Williams
Associated Press

NEW YORK — There is a subtle slouch to Sam Waterston's shoulders when he stands on the set of NBC's "Law & Order," doing a somber scene in the character of Assistant D.A. Jack McCoy.

With nary a twitch or bobble, sad-eyed Waterston has taken over from Michael Moriarty in the critical prosecutor's role. His scene ends and Waterston strides off. The slouch is gone and Waterston's good cheer emerges.

Ah, THAT'S why they call it "acting."

"I thought what Michael did was perfect in this show," said Waterston, sitting back and relaxing in his dressing room. "I'm filling his position, but I'm not playing the character he devised and I'm not trying to be him."

"There's no competitive thing here, although I'm sure there will be small-minded and mean-spirited people in the press" — here he regards a reporter with merry twinkle in his eyes — "who'll say 'HE was better at THIS than HE was.'

"But I don't read reviews, so I won't see all that."

Reviews weren't the problem with Waterston's last series. He played another lawyer in "I'll Fly Away," one who lived in the deep South of the 1950s, when the civil rights struggle began in earnest.

"I'll Fly Away" was cherished by critics but doomed by its failure to deliver big ratings. In its waning days, Waterston personally lobbied reporters to build support for the show. Alas, in vain. He took it hard.

"Yeah, it was a hard thing. Stupid, too," he said. "Stupid that television is set up in such a way that it can't sustain these things. But it was great." To his great pleasure, the series later was rerun on PBS.

It's a long way from the emergent new South of lawyer Bedford Forrest in "I'll Fly Away" to the mean, Manhattan streets of ADA Jack McCoy's "Law & Order."

"In 'I'll Fly Away,' in this much more comfortable world, (Forrest) was very sober; where he could have gone along very easily with a very easy life, he put himself in the way of hard choices," Waterston said.

"In this case, (Jack) is assaulted from morning 'til night by hard choices."

Waterston said his challenge as an actor was to figure out how his character, or anyone, can perform an ADA's job over a long period of time.

"I figured that there must be some inner spring of optimism and some fund of merriment — otherwise you wouldn't be able to do it very long. You'd jump out a window.

"So how would a person survive and thrive in this place? That's where I began trying to figure out who this person would be."

Jack McCoy began to take shape as a fighter, someone who enjoys the conflict. "It's a nice marriage between an actor and a lawyer, because drama thrives on conflict and so does the law," he said.

"You don't have to look for morally ambiguous situations in this job. They're everyday," he said. "To survive, you need a clear vision of what you're up to."

Researching his character took him to the district attorney's office. He talked to the people who try cases. "I must have heard it a dozen times; people were saying it almost as a mantra: 'Do the right thing. Do the right thing.'

"To do the right thing is an enormously complicated deal to organize your life around," he said.

An interesting thing happens here. Waterston — who's never very far from any of his characters — starts letting McCoy come to the surface. It is almost eerie, because it's not an actor reciting lines.

"Once you're convinced that there's a strong case for the people, your job is to prosecute that to the very best of your ability, and if you're wrong, the system will stop you," he said.

"That doesn't happen all the time," he said. "And one of the things that's endlessly intriguing about law and courtroom drama anyway is the ideal of justice and the actual imperfectness of actual justice."

Elsewhere in television ...

AMC MARKS 10th BIRTHDAY: Cable TV's American Movie Classics marks its 10th anniversary Thursday with a full day of its critically acclaimed original productions on the Golden Age of Hollywood.

At 6 a.m. EDT, AMC offers "The Republic Pictures Story," followed at 8 a.m. by "Hollywood on Hollywood," presented by Ron Howard. At 9 a.m., its up close and personal with "Roy Rogers: King of the Cowboys."

Other offerings include AMC's paean to the train, "All Aboard: Riding the Rails of American Film," the family in "Homeward Bound" and baseball in "Diamonds of the Silver Screen."

Biographies from AMC's "Reflections on the Silver Screen" series include Jack Lemmon, Billy Wilder, Audrey Hepburn, Gregory Peck, Lauren Bacall and Angela Lansbury.

Check local listings to graze on this film buff's feast.

Pianist set to highlight Russian works

By Michael MacLean
Collegian Staff

Pianist Terrence Wilson has been praised by critics in regard to his outstanding technical ability and his pure instinct for the music he plays. Wilson will be sure not to disprove any of those critics Thursday night when he performs various selections of Russian works at Bowker Auditorium.

It has only been a little under two years since Wilson made his professional debut with the Philadelphia Orchestra, and he has already been hailed as a genius and built up a reputation as one of today's finest musicians. What makes these accomplishments all the more astonishing is that Wilson is only 18-years-old.

Wilson discovered classical music at the age of eight through a classical radio station. He would learn the pieces he heard on the radio by ear and was already performing them for his family before he was nine-years-old. At 11, Wilson won the Brooklyn Arts and Culture Appreciation Competition. Last fall he began attending the Juilliard School of Music.

The pianist has accomplished much in his short career, such as recital, television and radio appearances, as well as performances in the Cincinnati Symphony and the Buffalo Philharmonic. Most recently he appeared locally at Boston University's Tanglewood Institute.

Thursday night, Wilson's first half of the program will feature Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet: Ten Pieces for Piano, op.75, and Stravinsky's Petrouchka: Three Scenes for Piano. The second half of the program will feature Rachmaninoff's Sonata No.2 in B-flat minor, op.36.

Terrence Wilson is sure to only keep getting better from here, so catch his performance before Bowker Auditorium is much too small to house this gifted young artist.

Terrence Wilson will perform at Bowker Auditorium on Thursday, Oct. 6 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $15 and $10 and Five College students can obtain half price admission. For more information call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-2511.

"Show Boat" revival a smashing success

By Michael Kuchwara
Associated Press

NEW YORK — There's plenty of life left in the grandaddy of the modern American musical.

Nearly a year after its Toronto premiere, director Harold Prince's stylish, reworked version of Show Boat sailed triumphantly Sunday into Broadway's Gershwin Theater.

What Prince, director of The Phantom of the Opera, has accomplished with the Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein II classic is not just a restoration or a revival but a new look at an old friend.

And what a friend! The original 1927 production, produced by Florenz Ziegfeld, astonished a Broadway accustomed to much more frivolous song-and-dance extravaganzas. Its examination of such adult topics as miscegenation and the treatment of Blacks paved the way for the more serious musicals of the 1940s.

Yet much of "Show Boat" remained mired in the stock conventions of the day, something that subsequent revivals and several popular movie adaptations never really erased.

Prince has drawn on all these different versions, as well material cut from the musical and up-to-date stage technology, to change that. He has recreated a "Show Boat" that satisfies the demands of modern theatergoers for spectacle, yet lets them revel in its epic story filled with strong characters and one of the most glorious scores ever written for the musical theater.

More importantly, the director has clarified the story line, particularly in the cumbersome second act. The tale, based on Edna Ferber's popular novel, takes three hours to span 1887 to 1927, but the time moves with lightning speed.

Prince has said the musical is primarily about family, in this case the family of Cap'n Andy Hawks, owner of the Cotton Blossom, a floating theater traveling the Mississippi.

The musical focuses on the romance and doomed marriage of Hawks' innocent daughter Magnolia and the handsome gambler Gaylord Ravenal.

A winsome Rebecca Luker and a debonair Mark Jacoby sing the roles ravishingly. If any moment can define the show's romantic appeal, it is their soaring duet of "You Are Love," sung on the Cotton Blossom's top deck. A huge moon, the product of Richard Pilbrow's artful lighting, hangs in a nighttime sky filled with twinkling stars. You could hear the sighs from the lovestruck audience.

Except for John McMartin's oddly prissy Cap'n Andy, the other leading parts are exceptionally well cast. The gravelly voiced Elaine Stritch, thanks to Prince's generous enlargement of her role, makes Andy's cantankerous wife Parthy more than a shrew. She's comic relief with a purpose and a heart.

Lonette McKee is a tremulous and affecting Julie, the Cotton Blossom's racially mixed leading lady. She played the same role in the 1983 Broadway revival, and the intervening years have not diminished her power to deliver that great torch song "Bill."

Prince has stripped the show of most of its more obvious racial stereotypes, and that decision has strengthened the story's emotional impact. Michel Bell, who plays the Black stevedore Joe, brings a majestic and effortless bass voice — and great dignity — to "Ol' Man River."

This wonderful production has many striking moments, and Prince makes sure the audience leaves with the final image of family. At the end, three spotlights catch Gaylord and Magnolia, once young lovers, now grown older and maybe wiser; their effervescent daughter, Kim, and an aged Cap'n Andy and Parthy. Their stories — along with Prince's masterful direction — have made Show Boat a memorable theatrical journey.

The Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities

A Symposium on

"THE CUBAN REFUGEE CRISIS: CHANGE OR CONSTANCY IN U.S.-CUBAN RELATIONS"

Panelists will include:

Rafael Dausa
Director of Political Affairs, Cuban Interest Section, Washington, DC

Allen Sessoms
Executive Vice President, University of Massachusetts
Former Deputy Chief of the U.S. Embassy in Mexico

Flavio Risech
Professor of Immigration Law, Hampshire College

Andrew Zimbalist
Robert E. Woods Professor of Economics at Smith College

Wednesday, October 5, 1994
7:30 p.m.
Jones Library Large Meeting Room (downstairs)
Amity St., Amherst MA

This event is free and the public is cordially invited

This program is sponsored by the UMass President's Office, the Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities, the UMass Office of Third World Affairs, the UMass Office of the Dean of Humanities and Fine Arts, the Five College Latin American Council, PAWSS, the Hampshire College Law Program, the Hampshire College Public Service and Social Change Program, the American Friends Service Committee, Five Colleges, Inc., and the Elms College Spanish Dept.

YOUR FAVORITE BANDS ON
BEASTIE BOYS, BLACK SHIRT #6012
REM
STONE TEMPLE PILOTS, BLACK SHIRT #3043
REM, WHITE SHIRT, M, L, XL #3028
SOUL ASYLUM, WHITE SHIRT #3040
PANTERA, BLACK SHIRT M, L, XL, #4028
JAR OF FLIES
ALICE IN CHAINS
BUTTHOLE SURFERS, WHITE SHIRT #3014
ALICE IN CHAINS, BRICK RED SHIRT #3002
ALICE IN CHAINS, WHITE SHIRT #3004
PRIMUS
PRIMUS, OFF-WHITE SHIRT, M, L, XL #4033
INDIGO GIRLS, MAROON SHIRT #3021
CURE, BLACK SHIRT, OVERSIZED ONLY #1048
ALL SHIRTS ARE AVAILABLE IN L AND XL UNLESS OTHERWISE NOTED
USE YOUR VISA, MASTERCARD, OR DISCOVER CARD TO ORDER BY PHONE
WE HAVE TONS OF OTHER SHIRTS, CALL US!
(413) 746 6877
FROM THE FIVE COLLEGES AREA, DIAL 1 413 FIRST
TO ORDER BY MAIL...
• FILL OUT THIS FORM, DETACH, AND MAIL
• WRITE THE ITEM NUMBER, BAND NAME, AND SIZE YOU WANT FOR EACH SHIRT
• SEND CHECK OR MONEY ORDER FOR $13.00 FOR EACH SHIRT, OR USE YOUR CREDIT CARD
• INCLUDE $3.00 FOR POSTAGE PER ORDER
• MA RESIDENTS NEED TO ADD 5% SALES TAX
• MAKE CHECK PAYABLE TO C.S.I.
VISA, MASTERCARD, AND DISCOVER
CARD NUMBER
EXPIRES
SIGNATURE
SHIRT 1
SHIRT 2
NAME
ADDRESS
CITY
STATE
ZIP
CYPRESS SLOUGH, INC. 40 LINCOLN STREET SPRINGFIELD MA 01109 (413) 746 6877

Grad student explores bisexuality

By Emily Marino
Collegian Staff

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN
Clare Hemmings

Clare Hemmings said she wants to dance with Michel Foucault, but would sometimes like to take the lead last night during her lecture, "Becoming a Desiring Subject: Bisexuality and Foucault."

According to Hemmings, theorizing bisexuality has been a historically difficult challenge. A second year doctoral student at the University of York in York, England, she is attempting to adapt the methodology of French psychologist Michel Foucault to write a feminist genealogy that presents a better understanding of bisexuality.

Hemmings, who said she has been bisexual for 11 years, is spending this year furthering her studies in feminist theory and bisexuality at the Five College Women's Research Center at Mount Holyoke College.

"I am curious as to why it is that there are hardly any texts that address the issue of feminist bisexuality and even fewer that begin to theorize this position," Hemmings said.

Hemmings' lecture focused on the evolution of sexual identification through the psychological studies of scientists such as Sigmund Freud and Michel Foucault, feminist, lesbian and gay political movements, as well as the current emergence of bisexual organizations and several personal narratives written by bisexuals.

The research Hemmings has done has revealed a lack of understanding of bisexuality as something other than "in between" heterosexuality and homosexuality, or as simply a matter of sexual preference.

According to Hemmings, bisexuality has historically been wrongly defined three ways within the realm of psychology. Freud linked bisexuality to hermaphroditism, thus constituting it as a biological manifestation.

Other definitions of bisexuality have included a co- presence of female and male psychological characteristics in an individual, or the propensity of an individual to be attracted to both women and men.

Hemmings has noted that these definitions are limited, and even contradict each other when considered exclusively.

The fact that in all of her research Hemmings has never found a definition of bisexuality as an identity makes her uncomfortable.

While bisexuality is often described as a pattern of observable behavior, the gender lines drawn to define behavior as heterosexual or homosexual belittle the notion of a bisexual's identity. Hemmings hopes to break down gender opposition which is often confused with sexual opposition.

"I choose to be defiant," said Hemmings. "I am not gender instructed." Hemmings said that part of the problem in defining bisexuality is that knowledge of it is "constrained in discourse and expressed through the body."

Although extensive research has left her with many unanswered questions, Hemmings attempts to eliminate the idea that bisexuality is an ever-changing identity which is dependent upon spur-of-the-moment gender of object choice.

Foucault's studies on identity, power and the self have been helpful in drawing parallels to Hemmings' research. Though she has no clear-cut answers yet, her dance with Foucault promises to be interesting.

Luck of the draw

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN
Nick Hammer fills out a Minutemaniac lottery form in hopes of being one of the lucky students who will get basketball tickets earlier than the rest of the campus.

Bus rider demands end to segregation

By Kiley Armstrong
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Some have called her "the Jewish Rosa Parks" — a bus rider who refused, on principle, to give up her seat. Sima Rabinovicz wouldn't move to accommodate Orthodox Jewish passengers who wanted to pray apart from the women on the public bus they were riding from their suburban communities to their jobs in New York City.

She said one man told her if she didn't move "they'd stone me till I bleed. There were like 20 of them, and I'm by myself. I was scared — upset and scared."

Now Mrs. Rabinovicz is demanding an end to segregation on the bus, and the director of the New York Civil Liberties Union is representing her in talks with lawyers for Monsey Trails, the bus company run by ultra-Orthodox Jews.

"If I talked to somebody, they told me, 'Shut up, woman,'" she said. "The treatment of women always bothered me ... like you were second-class."

Monsey Trails is government-subsidized, and anyone can ride the bus. But the passengers are almost exclusively Orthodox and ultra-Orthodox Hasidic Jews who live in suburban enclaves formed in the 1950s by people who wanted to get away from the wanton ways of the city while keeping their jobs. Most work in Manhattan's diamond and garment districts.

Mrs. Rabinovicz, who is Jewish but not Orthodox, chafed at the centuries-old religious dictate observed by her fellow riders that men pray separately from women.

The men had hung a curtain, provided by the bus company, from the ceiling, down the center aisle. Men sat on one side, women on the other.

But the men's prayer group was so large on Dec. 8, 1993, that they needed part of the women's side, too. As sunset approached, the men needed to begin the evening prayers.

The group wanted Mrs. Rabinovicz to move forward, where the rest of the women were seated.

Someone barked, "'Move it!' — like I should obey," Mrs. Rabinovicz said. "I just ignored them." The 10 or 15 other women, she said, cowered silently in the front. The bus stopped. Mrs. Rabinovicz said the driver ordered her to move.

"I said, 'Only if the cops come.' He called the base and they said to move," she said. She still refused.

The men "got off and literally prayed in the street," said the bus company's lawyer, Kevin Hasson. "They were not just sent to the back of the bus, but kicked off the bus."

The driver took her home. But then, said Mrs. Rabinovicz, he "told me I shouldn't take the bus any more."

Norman Siegel, Mrs. Rabinovicz's lawyer, said he has no problem with prayer on a bus, but with segregation abetted by a public carrier.

"You have conflicting principles that are significant and serious: religious freedom and practices, and sex discrimination," he said.

Hasson said the bus line doesn't discriminate by providing such things as the curtain, and it doesn't care where passengers sit. "Whoever owned the bus company, if 99 percent of passengers wanted the simple availability of a curtain, any good businessman would provide it to them," Hasson said.

Funding cut for UMass water research

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Federal funding cuts may pull $100,000 of annual grant money from a water quality research center at the University of Massachusetts.

The UMass Water Resources Research Center conducts and facilitates different studies around the region, including those done to insure the quality of the state's water supply stored in the Quabbin reservoir, and others that support the local community, John R. Cole, assistant director of the water center, said.

"Most people have never heard of the program (that funds the center)," Cole said. "Congressmen just like to be able to say that they cut programs and expenses while they were in office."

Cuts in this type of research could lead to inefficiency and more spending in the long run, according to Cole. The kind of research that gets done at the center is done relatively inexpensively.

Last year the state withdrew $200,000 of funding, which led to the collapse of a 10-year-old study monitoring acid rain.

"A lot of the work we do is based on research of things that happen over time," Cole said. "It's hard to do our job when they cut us off right in the middle of it."

The center focuses on two or three major projects a year, Cole said. The work that is done is essential and the studies will be needed, regardless of the program's existence.

Work done by the cheap expert labor of graduate students could save the federal government hundreds of dollars.

The cheap cost of research through the University is also attributable to the large portion of volunteer support from the area, Cole said. Without that support and knowledge of the local environmental issues, research would cost millions more.

The federal government funds the program on a national level and gives out annual grants to a land-grant site in each state. Massachusetts gets grants for UMass and MIT, Cole said. There are a total of 54 grants given out annually.

"Each program gets an equal amount, and it's been the same amount each year, despite inflation," Cole said.

Now there is fear that federal budget cuts could lead to a 20 percent loss of funds nationwide, Cole said.

The federal government is working on a compromise between three budget proposals for 1995. The Clinton administration and the House of Representatives have both opted to scratch funding for the national program entirely, Cole said. The Senate has voted to continue to delegate 80 percent of the funding.

Cole said that they are "still hanging," but do not intend on letting federal cuts close the center down.

"We don't exist as a federal agency," Cole said. "We use money that we receive from other government and private agencies, such as Trout Unlimited and the Audobon Society."

The Massachusetts Water Watch Partnership, a non-profit organization set up as a resource for those conducting studies throughout the state on rivers and lakes, does most of their work through the center, Jerry Schoen, the partnership coordinator, said.

"We've had a strong collaboration with the center since 1990," Schoen said. "The research center provides us with office space, computers and furniture."

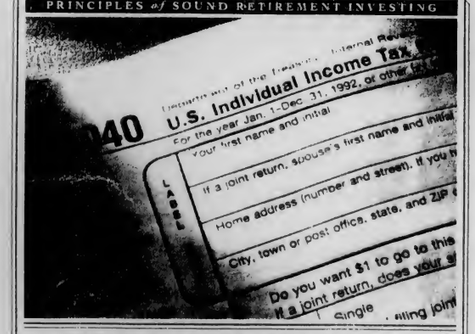
No one will know what is going happen to the national program until the budget is passed. The center will continue to receive federal aid until July 1995.

Thirty years of study abroad experience has taught us the meaning of service.

Service means giving you all the information and providing all the extras you need to make your study abroad experience as successful and hassle-free as possible. We offer a range of services that are both convenient and essential, including pre-departure advising, orientation and fully accredited transcripts at your program's close. At Beaver College, we believe that service is the hallmark of a quality organization. Ask your study abroad advisor about Beaver College programs.

Study Abroad with Beaver College
1.800.755.5607

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING



1040 U.S. Individual Income Tax
For the year Jan. 1-Dec. 31, 1992, or other tax
Your first name and initial
If a joint return, spouse's first name and initial
Home address (number and street). If you h
City, town or post office, state, and ZIP c
Do you want $1 to go to this
If a joint return, does your s
Single
filing joint
LABEL

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax-bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

TIAA CREF
Ensuring the future for those who shape it.®

TIAA certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016 for a prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

Hartford seeks professional help

Education Alternatives Inc. to manage city's public schools

By Brigitte Greenberg
Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn. — Desperate for a remedy for high dropout rates, low test scores and deteriorating buildings, Hartford has become the nation's first city to put a private company fully in charge of its public school system.

After contentious debate, the Board of Education voted 6-3 Monday to make Education Alternatives Inc. responsible for the education of 25,000 children in 32 schools.

"This marks a milestone in pursuit of academic excellence for our children," said school board member Ted Carroll. "Change is never easy."

But there were many dissenters among the 120 yelling, stomping, screaming and cheering parents and teachers at the board meeting. "What we're going to have left is nothing for the children. You treat them like so much livestock," parent Steven Fournier hollered at the board. "This is an invitation to corruption." Education Alternatives has promised to raise Hartford's test scores without spending more money by using a system it calls the Tesseract Way.

The name is from Madeleine L'Engle's children's book A Wrinkle in Time which describes a corridor for traveling to new worlds.

The system relies on computers and parent participation. Students help set their own goals and work in groups at their own pace.

Education Alternatives manages nine public schools in Baltimore and one in Miami Beach, Fla.

Another firm, The Public Strategies Group Inc., was hired last November by the Minneapolis school board as a consultant to help resolve financial problems and boost student achievement in a 79-school system. The head of the firm became school superintendent.

In Hartford, Education Alternatives will manage the school district, school board members said. In Minneapolis, The Public Strategies Group performs duties set out by the school board and is paid each time a specific task assigned by the board is completed, school officials there said.

In both cities, the management companies can be overruled by the school board. The Hartford contract has a provision for referring contract disputes to a mediator, although the school board could cast aside the mediator's decision.

In 1991-92, the last year statewide figures are available, Hartford's dropout rate was 17 percent, the highest in Connecticut. The figure represents the number of high school students from all classes who dropped out that year.

The district's fourth, sixth and eighth-graders have for several years scored lower than all other school districts in the state on tests in math, reading and writing.

Under the five-year contract, Education Alternatives will essentially control the schools' $171.1 million budget, as well as $29 million in state and federal grants. It will pay all bills, buy supplies and have a key role in union negotiations and hiring and firing school personnel in the city of 140,000.

The publicly held company can earn profits after all expenditures are paid.

Education Alternatives said it would invest $1.6 million in schools and about $14 million in teaching technology such as computers and school operations. The company plans $20 million in capital investments over the next five years.

The company will report to the superintendent, and the board can cancel the contract with 90 days' notice.

A lawsuit by the Hartford Federation of Teachers to block the contract was dismissed last month. Teachers' unions have contended the company has no data to back up its promises and is more concerned with profits than students.

The American Federation of Teachers has recommended a moratorium on contracts with Education Alternatives.

But teacher Jane Carroll, wife of board member Ted Carroll, favored the move.

"(My) morale as a teacher will climb considerably when I have a copy machine to use, when I have paper that I don't have to buy myself, when I have construction paper, when my child has a globe in her geography class," she said. "I will feel a lot better."

Education Alternatives is using the Tesseract system at the school in Miami Beach and in Baltimore, where it has operated eight elementary schools and one middle school for two years.

Instead of one teacher lecturing students, a master teacher and an associate are used. Together, they determine how each child learns best and individual learning plans are made.

Academic competition between children is discouraged and traditional grades are discarded.

Parents are required to attend four conferences with teachers each year, and the staff closely tracks each student's progress by computer.

Initially, Baltimore teachers complained they weren't trained enough in the system, and that teacher aides were replaced by better-educated but lower-paid interns.

Author discusses links of prejudice

By Stephen C. Campbell
Collegian Staff

Links between Jewish and homosexual oppression are far more common than most people think, according to an author taking part in the Brown Bag luncheon series.

Warren Blumenfeld, author of Looking at Gay and Lesbian Life and Homophobia: How we all pay the price, spoke last Wednesday afternoon in a discussion entitled "Homophobia and Anti-Semitism: Making the Links."

The discussion was presented by the office of Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns as a continuation of the Brown Bag series.

Blumenfeld began the discussion by saying that he got his name from his great-grandfather Wolf Mahler, a rabbi who was killed by the Nazis during World War II. Wolf Mahler was killed because he was a Jew. Being told this at the age of four, young Warren didn't understand why anyone would want to kill someone just because of being different. This is something that has stayed with him for his entire life.

Aside from dealing with anti-Semitism, Blumenfeld has had to deal with homophobia as well.

Blumenfeld showed the results of an Esquire magazine poll from April 1992 that asked, "If you would tell a hilarious but offensive joke about some minority, which group would you choose?" The highest group on the poll, receiving 70.9 percent from men and 44.7 percent from women, were gays. The next group was Jews with 58.8 percent of the men and 46.3 percent of the women respondents saying that they would tell a hilarious but offensive joke.

Blumenfeld began to draw parallels between gay oppression and Jewish oppression. The oppression is real, he said, but myths that pervade our society as truths are just that — myths.

Both groups receive religious condemnation often coming from Christian fundamentalists citing the Bible, especially the letters of Paul.

Both groups have been accused of abusing children and of recruiting them. Both groups have been called sexually depraved and been accused of spreading sexually transmitted diseases. Jews are considered to be the spreaders of syphilis across Europe, just as gay people are being held responsible for spreading AIDS.

Judaism has been called an immature, intermediate religion, a precursor to Christianity. Homosexuality has been called an immature, intermediate stage of human sexual development, a precursor to heterosexuality.

Both have been accused of trying to dominate and destroy civilized society by either owning and controlling everything from banks to the media, or trying to topple the government and make it Communist.

In the latter part of the 19th century the medicalization of gay and Jewish people gave even more reason for their oppression. The men in both groups, according to doctors, were feminized men prone to fits of hysteria.

Jewish men would be unfit for military service because they were smaller then the average non-Jewish man and could not carry as much equipment. Also, because of flat feet, they would slow down the rest of the troops.

The Roman Catholic Church has had policies against Jews for centuries. Pope Innocent III in 1215 ordered that all Jews had to wear yellow badges everywhere they went.

Pope Gregory the IX ordered in 1236 for the Talmuds to be taken from all the temples throughout Europe. The only Prince who complied was Louis I of France.

At the Second Vatican Council Pope John XXIII forgave the Jewish people for crucifying Jesus.

Blumenfeld said the Church's stance on homosexuality has always been stern.

Florida minister faces possible death sentence

By Bill Kaczor
Associated Press

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Acting as his own lawyer after another change of heart, a man accused of killing an abortion doctor warned the jury at the start of his trial Tuesday that those who countenance abortion "will answer to God."

"May God have mercy on us all," Paul Hill declared in his opening statement in federal court.

Hill then asked no questions of prosecution witnesses who said they saw him or a man looking like him outside a clinic at the time of the July 29 shotgun slayings of Dr. John Bayard Britton, 69, and bodyguard James H. Barrett, 74.

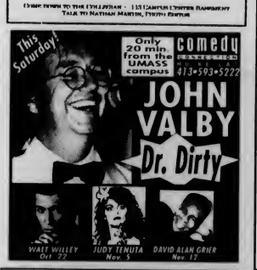
The 40-year-old former minister is the first person to stand trial under the federal law enacted earlier this year against injuring or otherwise interfering with anyone entering an abortion clinic. Conviction could bring a life prison term.

Hill is also awaiting trial in state court on charges of murder and attempted murder; if convicted there, he could get the electric chair.

Hill, a former pastor in the Presbyterian Church in America and the Orthodox Presbyterian Church, took over his defense after U.S. District Judge Roger Vinson refused to let him argue the killings were justifiable homicide.

Hill's lawyers had wanted to employ a necessity defense, arguing that Hill killed to prevent the greater evil of abortion. Before the slayings, Hill had openly advocated killing abortion providers.

SHOOT FOR THE COLLEGIAN
New photographers are always welcome at the Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England
COME DOWN TO THE COLLEGIAN • 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT
TALK TO NATHAN MARTIN, PHOTO EDITOR



LRC Learning Resources Center

- Our peer tutoring is absolutely free, and is certified by the CRLA Int'l Tutor Certification Program
- Computer-aided Instruction CD-ROM
- Video-aided instruction
- Study-skills workshops
- Popular software packages MS-Word, Excel, Page Maker, Word Perfect
- Trained & Experienced Peer Tutors

Convenient Hours:
Monday-Thursday 12-9, Friday 1-4
1020 Tower Library
545-5334

You believe in the Man in the Moon. You believe in the Tooth Fairy. Your mother tucks you in at night. And, to top it off, you have the Massachusetts Daily Collegian. Looks like you're gonna be alright.

BEE BOP — If you've got a good vibe you can jump your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum. Mass Daily Collegian tickls my tummy honey

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
for travel beginning November 1

	One Way	Round Trip
LONDON	$183	$345
PARIS	$214	$428
MADRID	$250	$500
SAN JOSE/ COSTA RICA	$224	$448
TOKYO		$749

Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Eurail passes issued on the spot.

Customs, immigration & departure taxes are extra. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student ID cards may be required.

PRISM TRAVEL
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*

Research Interviewers
Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Monday-Friday, 5pm-10pm. Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 1pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.

We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Interested candidates, please call between 9am-7pm, Monday-Friday: (413) 586-8615.

Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer

Abt

Eating Disorder Programs • 1994/95
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Call for more information 549-2671, Ext. 233.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phoneline for help around eating disorders - yourself, or someone you know. 549-2671, ext. 188.

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385

- Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
- State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
- Over 90 years staff experience
- Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
- Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems.
- We provide substitute transportation
- Users of Sikkens paint products

Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities

Shop Registration # RS1212

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
University Health Services
Amherst, MA 01003
545-2671

An open letter to the UMass Student Community from the Director of UHS Eye Care Program, Fall 1994

Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye CAre Program

My name is Frederick Bloom. I graduated from the University of Massachusetts in 1971 and the New England College of Optometry in 1975. I am very proud of the program and high quality eye care delivered to the over 80,000 individuals at the UHS Eye Care Program over the last 19 years.

I have been on the teaching faculty of the New England College of Optometry. Recently I co-authored an article with Dr. Abel, a UHS physician, that was published in a national optometry journal. I am also credentialed in diagnostic ocular pharmaceuticals by the Massachusetts Board of Optometry.

Services include:

- Complete optometry examinations
- Reduced rates on spectacle frames and lenses from local participating opticians
- Emergency eye care
- Comprehensive contact lens service

Our staff takes great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over the years has been consistently excellent.

"I invite you to use the eye services at UHS"

EYE CARE PROGRAM

Convenient Hours and Campus Location

CALL 549-2671 EXT 244

AfroBooks offers variety of rare texts

Worcester based bookshop to visit UMass Campus Center

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

The town of Amherst boasts many fine bookstores, but none quite like AfroBooks, a Worcester-based shop visiting the University of Massachusetts for the next few months.

At the helm of the operation are two Black men, Dr. Pius Eze and Thomas Simpson, who co-founded the business in April 1993.

One of the primary purposes of the treks made by Eze and Simpson is to service the large Afro-American department at UMass, said Eze. Materials from AfroBooks will be available at the Campus Center in the weeks of Oct. 17, 24, 31 and Mondays throughout November.

The pair are both Worcester residents who met at a Clark University minority youth conference. Eze, an economics professor, was teaching at Clark at the time.

Simpson is presently a senior at UMass who, like his colleague, is an economics major.

Eze said the two men developed an instant friendship.

The Nigerian-born Eze said he had wanted to make an entrepreneurial venture for some time, specifically in the central Massachusetts area.

"Culturally, there is nothing in Worcester," he said. "We knew that there was a cultural need for [the bookstore]."

Simpson said he agreed with Eze, and so the two began to visit elite Massachusetts and New York bookstores in addition to searching specialty catalogs.

The two men said they compiled a wholly diverse array of African, African-American and Developing Nations texts which Eze said may otherwise only be available via mail order. Eze said these types of books tend to go out of print quicker than their more popular counterparts.

Eze also said "most Black bookstores buy what sells. We want to be a full Black bookstore."

And so, AfroBooks commenced its fledgling business.

Both Simpson and Eze said business in Worcester is slower than their shops at Springfield and Amherst. They are the only employees, as well as the owners, of AfroBooks.

Simpson, who intends to pursue graduate studies in accounting, said he must limit his time at the shop with respect to his present schoolwork.

The entrepreneurs said their goals are to promote Black-owned businesses, service the discriminating reader, and educate minority youth.

And, like any small business, stay afloat.

AT&T gives students taste of big business

By Andrew Ferguson
Collegian Staff

For the seventh straight year, the AT&T investment challenge offers University of Massachusetts students a chance to spend millions of dollars on Wall Street.

The program, which runs Oct. 10 through Dec. 9, is an investment competition offered to high school and college students and educators across the United States, Canada and Puerto Rico.

The goal of the challenge is to turn an account into the highest value portfolio before the end of the competition.

Alan Weinfeld, the stock analyst for the Finance and Investment club at UMass, said he would like a good showing from UMass students.

"If we get more people involved, we have a chance of winning the whole thing," says Weinfeld.

Last year UMass placed 12th in the nation, and the year before it placed ninth.

In the university division, the scoring is an average of the top 15 percent of portfolios from the school, so the more people participating from a school, the better the chances of success.

"This type of recognition is a great resume booster for students and great publicity for UMass. The more people the better," said Weinfeld.

Players start with a $500,000 account and use a toll-free 800 number to trade the more than 8,000 stocks on the AMEX, NYSE and NASDAQ exchanges.

A staff of brokers provide real-time quotas and individual portfolio information which is the same information given to actual Wall Street brokers and includes up-to-the-minute stock quotes. This insures that the participants work in a real setting, but because it is not real money, the experience is stress-free.

USA Today provides weekly coverage and rankings of the top students, educators and schools.

There is also the opportunity to win over $50,000 in cash and prizes, which is awarded to the top participants. The grand prize is $10,000 cash and a trip for two to the Bahamas. Other prizes include cash, trips, t-shirts and Texas Instruments calculators.

The entry fee is $49.95, and this includes a game package with rules and instructions, an official stock listing guide, and a transactions ledger to help students keep track of their portfolios. Students using the AT&T Universal card to pay for the challenge receive a 20 percent discount.

Utley still in rehabilitation

Three years after his injury, the ex-Lion remains positive

By Hal Bock
Associated Press

NEW YORK — His handshake is firm, his attitude upbeat, his message simple. "Make something positive out of something negative," Mike Utley said. "Ask yourself to do something today that you couldn't do yesterday."

It's almost three years now, three years since Utley got tangled up blocking on a pass play for the Detroit Lions and fell on his head, three years since they wheeled him off the field at the Pontiac Silverdome, his sixth and seventh vertebrae crushed. Utley flashed the thumbs up signal that day to his teammates and the crowd to tell them that he was OK, that he would be back. Then he almost died.

A couple of times.

"The first nine days in the hospital, I didn't sleep a wink," Utley said. "I had more heart monitors than you can ever imagine."

On Thanksgiving, he was permitted to watch the Lions' traditional game. "That night I was back in the ICU," he said. "I threw a blood clot in my lungs. I should be gone. You throw a blood clot, there's nothing you can do about that. I should not be here."

Utley lived.

For some inexplicable reason, he survived.

In the months ahead, his weight would fall from 315 pounds to 215.

"I lost 100 pounds of muscle," he said. "Fat doesn't deteriorate. Muscle does."

His injury would challenge Utley, spiritually and physically. "Before I got hurt, I prided myself as being as physical and possible," he said. "There's no reason to stop that. It makes you feel better about yourself and more independent. You don't want to need help. You want to do things on your own as much as possible."

So Utley passes on the handicap ramp, aims his wheelchair and bumps his way down staircases. And the guy who couldn't lift four ounces when he got hurt now lifts 140-pound dumbbells.

"I've got movement," he said. "I can feel again."

The prognosis for spinal cord injuries improves almost daily and that excites Utley about the future. His foundation, located in Phoenix, raises funds for research, work he hopes will one day make his kind of injury less devastating.

When football was taken away, Utley missed the adrenaline rush of the game. For replacement, he's begun skiing on a specially designed ski and sky diving. It's something he never would have tried when he played.

"I didn't want to hurt my knees, my hips, my ankles," he said. "I didn't want to do anything to jeopardize football."

He admits that he did ride a motorcycle, though. "Hey, a guy's got to get around, you know."

He prides himself in zooming down the mountain, bowling over the gates instead of going around them. "I am an offensive lineman, you know," he said.

Next on his agenda is kayaking. "I want to learn how to do that," he said. "I want to enjoy life. I want to live my life. It's an 'I'll try' attitude. I didn't always win, but I never quit trying, and I'm not quitting now."

He is not a miracle man. Instead, he is an advertisement for intensity, for hard work, for believing in himself. When Dennis Byrd of the New York Jets broke his neck two years ago, Utley talked to him, not about the injury but rather other things like games they'd played in. Then, when it was time to leave, Utley told Byrd, "Get out of that chair. Throw it away."

Byrd succeeded. Utley remains in his chair. He believes that condition will change one day.

"I've still got some unfinished business at the Silverdome," he said. "I want to go back there and walk out."

The Mike Utley Foundation is located at 2425 East Camelback Road, Phoenix, Ariz., 85016.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 10

She has 10 points (4 goals, 2 assists) to go along with a team-leading 31 shots. And because of this, opposing teams have taken note by marking the Longmeadow, Mass. native. This past weekend in California, Santa Clara did just that, clinging to her with jersey-tugging, physical tactics.

"It was frustrating," said LeDuc of the tactics and the team's two 1-0 losses.

Yet she vows that the weekend's frustration will not carry on into the team's next game at Yale tomorrow (7 p.m.). "This weekend is in the past," she said. "I think it will only make us work harder to get back up for the next game. We won't be thinking about it at all."

What the team will be thinking about is a return trip to the Final Four. For LeDuc, that would be especially sweet.

"It was a great feeling to be able to go that far," she said. "I want that feeling again. But we have to take each game as it comes. Obviously, our main goal is to get back to the Final Four, but there is a lot ahead of us before that."

We pick up this first-round 1992 NCAA Tournament game against UConn in overtime. The score is tied at 1–1. A freshman forward, who later in her career will jokingly state she doesn't like overtime, is about to score the biggest goal of her young career.

With 5:39 to play, the feat is accomplished. A celebration breaks out, and Massachusetts soon sets its sights on the second round.

LeDuc was at it again, working her magic in overtime. The extra 30 minutes. Hey, even the big-game goal scorer makes an exception once in a while.

■ Sports Illustrated

continued from page 10

strike, they had a picture. They should keep the column and add another section for a picture.

Features: They need to go more in depth. The features and profiles have become more fluff than substance.

SI has tried to become to much of a wise-guy. There are too many stories that spend too much time trying to be witty and funny, instead of giving its readers quality stories.

The current NHL and impending NBA strikes are making things even worse. There may be very little to write about in the winter months.

*

It hasn't been all bad.

The pictures have been as good as they have ever been. In the "40 for the Ages" issue, the pictures were spectacular. Week to week the magazine still produces some of sports' best visuals.

The weekly "Turn back the clock" segments have been a positive as well. It has been interesting to look back at the legends from generations past, and to remember the people who have shaped sports into what it is today, but the new year will bring the end of these gems, and with 1995 approaching, SI needs something to fill the void.

What Sports Illustrated needs to do is return to the quality of the magazine that published those great articles. Put the best story of the week back on the cover, and produce quality, not comedy.

Return to greatness SI, it just hasn't been the same.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

WANTED
DEAD or ALIVE
(No, it's not just a cheesy Bon Jovi song)

The Collegian is always looking for interested writers, no experience is necessary. In fact, all you need is a pulse so come down to the Campus Center Basement and check us out.
We promise not to play any Bon Jovi for you either.

Collegian • 113 Campus Center 545-3500

MIKE'S WESTVIEW
Wednesday Night is Rolling Rock Night
Rolling Rock Bottles $1.25
Gin & Tonics $1.75
Free Appetizers from 9:30 on Wings, Mozzerella Sticks, etc.
Also Free T-shirts and Prizes
Don't miss our Friday Night Buffet for $1.00
MIKE'S WESTVIEW

Mental Health Groups
Fall 1994
Topic-Focussed Groups being offered by the Mental Health Division of UHS this Fall are:
- Eating Disorders Group — Tuesdays 4-5:30
- Exploring Gay, Lesbian, Bi-sexual Identities — Tuesdays 4:30 -6
- Building Self-Esteem — Wednesdays, 3:30-5
- Skills for Combatting Depression — Wednesdays 3:30-5

Groups are open to students covered by the health plan and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. Groups begin in mid-October. Pre-group interviews are required. For information or to sign up for a pre-group interview call 545-2337 or stop by 127 Hills North. We're open M-F, 8-5.

Northwestern College of Chiropractic is now accepting applications for its next three entering classes.
(April 1995, September 1995, January 1996)
General requirements at time of entry include:
- At least 2-3 years of undergraduate college in a health science or basic science degree program. (Inquire for a complete list of specific requirements.)
- A minimum G.P.A. of 2.5. (A more competitive G.P.A. is favored.)
- A personal interest in a career as a primary care physician.

Northwestern College of Chiropractic offers a rigorous four year professional education. Our focus on science, diagnosis, chiropractic methods, patient care and research provides our graduates with the tools they need to work as primary care physicians in the health care environment. NWCC is fully accredited by North Central Association of Colleges and Schools and the Council on Chiropractic Education.

Call: 1-800-888-4777 or 888-4777
Write: Director of Admissions
2501 West 84th Street, Minneapolis, MN 55431

We invite you to join us at CAREER DAY 1994
"Call for make a reservation"

HUGE SAVINGS AT THE NEW SALVATION ARMY SUPER THRIFT STORE
STUDENT DISCOUNT EVERY THURSDAY ON CLOTHING 50% OFF WITH ID
159 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA • 253-4747

D.P. Dough®
Delivers Calzones
call 256-1616
Now Open at 11:00 A.M.

READINGS BY ABBY
PALM TAROT & ESP READING
HELPS SOLVE ALL PROBLEMS OF LIFE. HELPS YOU THROUGH YOUR GOOD AND BAD CYCLES OF LIFE. TELLS YOU LUCKY DAYS AND LUCKY MONTHS. ONE VISIT WILL CONVINCE YOU THAT SHE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL READERS YOU HAVE SEEN BEFORE.
All readings Confidential and Results Guaranteed.
HOURS: 9 A.M. TO 9 P.M.
210 Russell Street, Route 9, Hadley, MA 01035
(413) 586-6711
Walk in's are Welcome

$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES
Exp. 8/30/95
One coupon per 2 calzones

2 FREE COKES
With Purchase of Any 2 Calzones
SAVE $1.50!
Expires 9/1/95 One Coupon Per 2 Calzones

U-MASS. vs BC
Game Ticket - Round Trip Bus
Sunday afternoon Oct. 30th Hockey Game at BC
Call Steve at Rock & Jock
(508) 877-6050

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

HOW COME YOU'RE THE ONE WHO GOES TO WORK, AND NOT MOM?
WELL, YOUR MOM USED TO GO TO WORK, BUT ONCE YOU CAME ALONG SOMEONE HAD TO STAY HOME.
YOUR MOMS JOB HAD A LOT OF STRESS AND AGGRAVATION SEE...
AND SHE WANTED TO QUIT?
NO, SHE'D GOTTEN USED TO IT. SO WE FIGURED SHE SHOULD BE THE ONE TO.
HEY!

Virtual Reality By Mark Warnat

Jim's Journal By Jim

Ruth wanted to go to Steve's today to look at his plant.
"Oh, it's dying," she said.
"I knew it would die," Steve said. "I have no luck with plants."
Ruth tried to think of a way to save it, but couldn't think of anything.

Without Perpoise By Kennet Dall

LET'S GO VISIT OLIVER. HE HASN'T BEEN SO GREAT SINCE HE BROKE UP WITH HIM OVER THE SUMMER, HE'S JUST TAKING IT ALL VERY WELL.
HEY OLIVER! COME ON OUT HERE -- IT'S A NEW SEASON, YOU'RE GOING RIDICULOUS.
HEH-HEH! I THINK OLIVER MAY STILL NEED HIS PRIVACY.

Jim's Journal By Jim

I went to McDonald's today.
Even though I used to work there, the only person I still knew was the manager.
He got me my food and exhaled really loudly.
He said, "It's not like it used to be, Jim."

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

1968 MUSTANG
Classic 68 Mustang Way Cool Wheels FOR SALE!!! Electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, 2 door, great way to pick up chicks and study also. Best offer call Bart at 6434

ACTIVITIES
NECKC Karate Club Shotokan style/Isshinryu Tomari 101 M-W 8-9:30 T 7-9 All levels welcome! Call Jessica at 549-6709

ANNOUNCEMENTS
International Students Association meeting on Wed Oct 5 7pm in Campus Center rm 162! All welcome. Free pizza!
Learn to bartend with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools right here in Amherst. Free info session Mon. Oct. 3rd. Lord Jeffery Inn or call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Phi Alpha Theta, the history honor society is now accepting applications for membership. For more information and an application please go to 612 Herter.

AUTO FOR SALE
1968 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Bart at 6434
83 Subaru wagon 116k mi. Excellent condition $1700 obo 665-6349
1986 Mercury Lynx wr3 92,000 miles good cond. 1.9 liter engine, 5 spd, 2 dr/HB $700 (B)545-5098
Oh boy! 1976 Dodge Aspen Coupe, auto, runs, thrivin, cheap! I wouldn't sell if I didn't have to. 398 5484679

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE
Do you need $$$ for college??? We have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service, 7 Dashurst Terrace East, N Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

FOR RENT
2 rooms in private home. $300/ mo. Kitchen priviledges. Kosher/vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished. 549-4853
Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery

FOR SALE
1984 Buick $1700/neg call 8-2031
Dorm fridge $70 call 6-2021
Atari 2600 Hardware and games. Eric 256-8150
Designer clothing for women. Thrift shop prices. Well deliver 413-323-8624
Dominica GE rating for sale $55/bo leave message call Corey S 3441
For sale sweaters, slacks, coats, dresses, suites etc from $3.75 to $20.00 Call 413-323-8624
IBM XT computers $168!!! Includes monitor, CPU, keyboard, (1) mag hard drive 5 1/4 floppy, ms dos. Printers $60 Call 256-8094
Large (33") high dorm fridge in great condition $60 or best offer Call eves 253-2104
Macintosh 4 sale Mac+ 20mb hd 2mb RAM, HP laserjet printer $400 obo call Jeff 545-1181
Papers at Pioneer Valley. Knife and Tool 549-7331
Rather shabby but comfortable oversized sofa and matching chair $150 call 253-7499
Shades for less name brand sunglasses 30%-50% off! Campus Center MWF 800-98SHADES
Sold on sight dresser Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354
Solid oak triple dresser Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354
Stereo cabinet, glass door + top, wheels, 4 shelves, 40" x 17" x 18". $75 or best offer. Call evenings 253-2104
Tandy computer system w/ drives, mon, printer Tons of software. Asking 325 or bo. Call Joe 6-7348
Watch batteries ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from glass to gold custom designed jewelry. Silverscape Designs 264 N. Pleasant St Amherst 253-3324

FOUND
Gold snake chain with two charms in parking lot nr Lewis on 9/30/95

HELP WANTED
$363.60 Earn funny college T-shirts! Profit $383.60 Risk free. Choose from 15 designs! Free catalog! 1-800-700-4250
Cross ships now hiring earn up to $700/wk month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary for more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext C50011
Earn $6/hr fight pollution. Work for political change with Clean Water Action environmental campaign staff! On bus lines. Paid training, F/T or career opportunity. Call 584-9830
International Employment— make up to $2000- $4000 +/ mo teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For info call 206-632-1146 ext J50011
Jobs for the environment. Grassroots political organizing. Earn $40-$60/day. Flexible hours/ casual atmosphere. Call Alex 256-6434
Kitchen help or delivery persons wanted. Must be able to work 20 hrs a week, apply at D.P. Dough.
P.C.A. for male quad Fri morn eve overnight. Ser overnight Call 586-0866
Recess up to 288,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6400 Mon-Fri 8am-5pm
Wanted! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips: Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel, fantastic pay 1-800-426-7710
We are in need of support personnel on an on-needed basis: tasks include packing and mailing test materials, large volume collating and other general clerical tasks. Some lifting may be necessary. Minimum commitment of three hours required. We are located on a bus route. Fill out application or mail resume to: Personnel, National Evaluation Systems 30 Gatehouse Rd. Amherst MA 01002

INSTRUCTION
Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools, right here in Amherst. Classes start Wed Oct 12th. Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX to register today!

PERSONALS
Gustav. I'm sorry I couldn't make it last night. I was too busy helping Father with his new invention. Meet me at the library tomorrow. I'll be in the human growth and development section. Bella
Tiger Holland - 5 down and millions to go!!!!

PINNOCHIO'S
Hiring drivers full or part time. Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Belchwood Walk. Ask for Bob

ROOMMATE WANTED
Female to share large bedroom in house. Great location/behind Dairy Mart uptown/ 250/mo + utilities. Move in immediately, lease ends May. No payments! Call Kristin 549-3997

SERVICES
"Balloon view" cartoon characterures Makes great gift! $75, full color. Satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 586-6417
Fundraising. Choose from 3 of Harvard fundraisers lasting either 3 or 7 days. No investment. Earn $$$ for your group plus personal cash bonuses for yourself. Call 1-800-932-0528, ext 65
Going away? Can't take Fluffy with you? Time's per sitting service. 549-0808. We'll bring the treats!
Madal search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues. Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Males, females, all categories welcome. 617-523-0067
Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906

SHAREWARE
Free!! Shareware listing hundreds of quality software programs only $3.49 each! Call 584-2282
Call the playground bbs! 256 6085 Mag basss, triss, online games etc. New boards welcome!

TRAVEL
 Spring Break 95 America's #1 spring break company! Cancun, Bahamas, Daytona & Panama! 110% lowest price guarantee! Organize 15 friends and travel free! Earn highest commissions! (800)32 TRAVEL
Campus representative Kodak products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S. Padre + Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1-800-727-4432

WANTED
Attn. Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer-jugglers, armourer to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. Billy Irvine 584-4302
Campus representative Kodak products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S. Padre + Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1-800-727-4432

Earn $$$ for your group! Fundraising opportunity for campus groups. Call Bill Bartlett for free fundraising info. 1-800-932-0528 ext 65

Daily Crossword
Edited byTrude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Type of cookie
9 Hard wood
10 Play the lead
14 Marble
15 — Luck
19 Sandwich, of a sort
17 Priests
19 Hodgepodge
20 Comic Sid
21 It's a no-no
23 Sailor
25 Sport for trapshooters
28 Unimpressed
30 Menu item
34 Impatient
35 29
38 Ferber
40 "Little Sir —"
41 Vacation accommodation
42 "— Little Buttercup"
43 Imitate Hoobs
44 Attire
45 English public school
46 Arrived at Kennedy
49 Vermon and — Castle
48 Part of a European peninsula
52 Droop
54 Place goal
56 Passes
63 High school competition
64 Spot for out-vote?
66 Teen problem
67 Down in the dumps
68 Chicago airport
69 Get up on hind legs
70 More than one or two
71 Domesticated

DOWN
1 WWII
2 samovar
3 Taj Mahal site
3 — the music
4 Letters of yore
5 Cash back
6 Overhead trains
7 Pale color
8 Found in bakeshops
9 Actor Russell
10 Tradesman
11 Webbed membranes
12 Come up
13 Perch
18 Savings acct.
22 NM to the Gulf direction
24 Tape
26 Make coffee
27 Spike
28 Late tennis great
29 Light-fingered consumer
31 Dame lead-in
32 Sleep
33 Depend
36 A Burmese people
37 Love is excess, with "on"
38 High time of day
29 "Ruse Britannia"
58 French composer Edouard
57 It takes a beating
59 Gov. health org.
60 This could be a task
61 Raised
62 Recess
65 Spelling contest

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

10/5/94

By Trudy L. Hamilton
©1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

The Far Side By Gary Larson

"Well, it came from your division, Sanders, and as you can see, it's covered with honey and molasses! ... You know what that makes this, Sanders?"

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A date or obligation may have you feeling uncertain now. Try not to take on more than you can handle, people will understand if you explain. Romance looks sublime this evening.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Communication is present that requires a high degree of personal commitment. You may be in the spotlight and teaching others! Neighborhood activities bring you closer to someone who could become important to you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Independence is an essential ingredient in a lasting relationship. You can be close as a couple yet still function effectively as separate people. Become more aggressive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be open to new ideas. A wonderful transformation is possible! Take a trip with your mate. Do not expect your mate to read your mind. You must speak out and share your innermost feelings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Intellectual stimulation on an ongoing basis is very important to you. Take a trip or attend a seminar with your mate. Your mate must learn to nurture each other. Have the vision for a happy future together.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may be pressured, such a job today. Proven methods and up-to-date information keep you on course. You are unlikely to have ends work. Romance holds a pleasant surprise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Secret plans can be expected now. Seek professional advice regarding a personal problem or physical limitation. It is doubtful that you can get away with deception. Dividends accrue from a business enterprise. Be and savvy!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An important decision lies ahead. Start marshalling pertinent facts and figures. You have some good ideas, all other romance is dazzling the best from you and others. Study your options for a long-term commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A financial opportunity or business trip could prove highly lucrative. Need an impulse to launch a new study or investigation? Romance keeps you guessing. It pays to be diplomatic in key relationships. Avoid squabbling.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Discretion is the better part of valor this week. Watch out for stumbles, literally and figuratively. Do not be quick to reject something you did not think of first yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Food and nutrition are sure-fire conversational subjects. Discussing calories and dietary regimens while serving refreshments will definitely break the ice. It may be time to take a cooking course. Talk with pen not before making changes.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friends can be a source of information, depending able or otherwise. Be on the lookout for financial tips you can turn to good account. Broaden your outlook by joining a community organization or support group.

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Ravioli Alfredo	Roast Round o'Beef
Grilled Duck Pucks	Shrimp & Scallop Creole
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Ravioli Mario	Savory Stuffed Pepper
Greek Style Skillet?	Eggplant Rolatini

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Tracy Monahan
Copy Editor.....Caleb Cochran
Photo Technician.....Nathan Martin
Production Supervisor.....Greg Iafrate
Production.....Kori B. Carter, Marni Helfner, Kevin Farrar

Quote of the Day

"Hey honey, wanna bite of my slice?"
—Intoxicated male outside Antonio's Pizza Friday night

BEE BOP
If you've got a good vibe you can snap your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum.
Mass Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

Candy Ford of FORD MODEL MANAGEMENT Presents
image resource, ltd
- Photography
- TV/film
- Makeup
- Runway
- Portfolio & Composite Development
- The Business of Modeling

A Two Day Modeling Workshop on November 5th & 6th in the Campus Center
Interviews will be held on October 13, 14, 19, & 20
Contact Suzanne to set up a consultation:
(617) 262-9300

THE PUB
26 YEARS FROM 1968
Fun, Food & Spirits
TONIGHT
THE ART STEELE BAND
BLUES
• "A DIFFERENT TYPE OF BLUES BAND." HOLYOKE TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
• "AN ECLECTIC PASSIONATE BLUES MIXTURE." "A MUST SEE." BRATTLEBORO TOWN CRIER
• "STEELE' YOURSELF FOR SOME GREAT BLUESY 'ART'" UMASS DAILY COLLEGIAN
15 EAST PLEASANT-AMHERST

The Boston Globe Offers UMass Students Delivery for 50% OFF

UMass/Amherst	Full Year 9/25 - 5/14	Fall Term 9/25 - 12/18
6 Days MON-SAT	$52.00	$25.25
5 Days MON-FRI	$30.00	$14.25
SUNDAY ONLY	$22.00	$11.00

To order a Boston Globe subscription ON CAMPUS ONLY mail payments to:
The Boston Globe
Campus Program, P.O. Box 2378
Boston, MA 02107
or call 1-800-858-4275 ext.0
If you're a student living OFF CAMPUS we have special discount rates for you too...
Just call 1-800-622-6631 ext.549

Sports

Women's volleyball streak stopped at fourteen

Team to hit the road with upcoming games against Atlantic - 10 foes Temple and Rutgers

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

"All good things must come to an end," said Massachusetts Coach Bonnie Kenny.

The 14-game winning streak of the UMass volleyball team was no exception. The Minutewomen dropped a tough match to the University of Rhode Island last night at the Curry Hicks Cage, 11-15, 13-15, 16-14, 9-15 for their first loss of the season.

"It's disappointing," said Coach Kenny. "We just didn't play well as a team. I don't want to take anything away from URI. They came out and beat us."

Outside hitter Giza Rivera led the team in kills with 17, but was a bit inconsistent as she also had 12 errors. Several of her attacks were thunderous shots, as volleyball fans at the Cage have come to expect from the sophomore, but her overall hitting percentage was a bit disappointing at .175.

Sophomore outside hitter Dionne Nash, who collected 15 kills and 14 digs, freshman outside hitter Lesley Nolan (12 kills and 14 digs) and junior setter Cass Anderson who led the team with 15 digs and 45 assists were the bright spots for UMass, now 14-1, 2-1 in the A-10.

"We should have enough weapons that when someone is not having her best game, like Giza tonight, we should be able to get it done elsewhere," Coach Kenny said. "You can fight, but somebody needs to step up."

Both teams started off strong in front of a season high and season loud 793 fans at the Cage. Game 1 was tied 4-4 before Rhody got going behind junior outside hitter Sabrina Pozzi and ran up five points in a row to jump up 9-4.

UMass would not go down easily, however, and when a Nash ace and Rivera block put them within two, 12-10, the fans started to sense victory. But it was not to be, as the WRams kept their composure and sealed game one, 15-11.

"They put a lot of pressure on us," said Nolan, "We need to do a better job on our team offense."

Game two was similar to the first, as the Minutewomen were very much in it the entire time. The teams battled to an 8-8 deadlock, when URI once again stepped it up, taking a 12-9 lead.

"We were having some trouble passing the ball," Nolan said.

Once again, UMass came roaring back. This time an ace from freshman Michelle Paciorek tied the score at 12, and UMass was able to take a 13-12 lead. This was as close as UMass could get, however, as the WRams once again silenced the crowd with a kill by Pozzi, ending game two, and putting the Minutewomen in a position they hadn't been in all season, down in a match 2 games to none.

"It was a new experience for us, but we didn't give up," said Nolan. "We were in the locker room talking about winning the next three in a row. We wanted this one to go five."

Game three saw UMass jump out to a 10-6 lead, but it just couldn't be that easy for the Minutewomen. URI (8-5, 3-0 A-10) would not accept defeat, and battled back to tie the game at 10. The teams kept the crowd on edge by matching points until the WRams had the lead, 14-13, and were one point away from taking the match in three straight.

Coach Kenny's squad then dug down a little deeper, and earned a sideout on a block from Nash and Paciorek. Then, with UMass up 15-14, Rivera delivered the final blow, blasting the ball to the floor to end game three and keep the Minutewomen's hopes alive.

The momentum started out on the side of UMass in game four, but with the score tied 3-3, URI went on a run behind senior outside hitter Sue Consavage (14 kills) and took the lead 8-3. The Minutewomen battled to within one, 9-8, but just could not keep it going as the WRams took game four by a score of 15-9 to win the match.

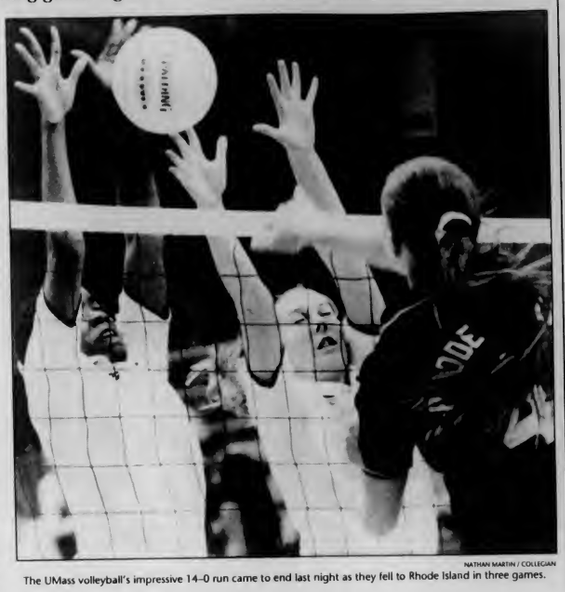
"We've got to put this behind us and learn from it," said Kenny, who tried several different combinations to combat the URI hitting game. "Our blocking was atrocious."

UMass got flashes of brilliance from their defensive specialists, freshman Maria Dueno and junior Beth Cabral, both of whom had some excellent digs, and outside hitters Kim Mizner, beginning to get more playing time after an early season knee injury, and Leigh Ready, who is showing steady improvement, but tonight, nobody could find the answer.

"A loss can really make you realize you need to work," said Nolan.

"We have no time to mourn," said Kenny. "We have two days to prepare for two tough matches this weekend."

UMass will face Temple and Rutgers on the road.



NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

The UMass volleyball's impressive 14-0 run came to end last night as they fell to Rhode Island in three games.

Sports Illustrated has turned into a disappointment

Forty years of Sports Illustrated.

America's most popular sports magazine turned 40 this year. The magazine has become a Thursday necessity in the life of almost every American sports junkie, and with virtually no serious competition, the publication has thrived over those 40 years.

Matt Vautour

In recent times however, that same lack of competition has hurt SI. With no rival to push it, the magazine's quality has clearly fallen and with it, the respect of its readers. Where has it gone wrong?

Predictions: It seems that SI has decided that making the unusual choice is the best move when it comes to making predictions.

Take the college football preview for instance.

Arizona at 1? Florida at 8? Florida State at 10? Boston College 19?

Nobody other than Sports Illustrated had the offenseless Arizona in the top three, and SI picked them as No. 1? Florida was clearly one of the top two teams in the nation, and they were all the way back at No. 8. The hapless Eagles should be nowhere near the Top 25, but they check in on SI's poll.

Now I can't believe that their writers are stupid, it just seems like they are trying to go for shock value.

Covers: Perhaps the biggest downfall is right on the front of the magazine. The content of the cover photos has declined considerably.

With all the talent in college football last year, it wasn't Marshall Faulk or Charlie Ward on the cover of the College Football Preview Issue, it was freshman kicker Scott Bentley.

On the cover of the hockey preview issue, there was a picture of a Phoenix Cardinal defensive back, with the caption "Is Chuck Cecil too violent for the NFL?"

Bill Clinton on the cover of the "NCAA Tournament Preview" issue was an absolute travesty.

On a more local level, UMass has gotten slighted in terms of the cover. Following UMass' upset of consensus No. 1 North Carolina, there was a small article buried in the Inside College Basketball section, while a faceless football player and the caption "10 Ways to Improve the NFL" made the cover.

Two weeks later however, when Indiana upset Kentucky (a questionable No. 1) at home, Damon Bailey was on the cover.

The Point After: This is Sports Illustrated's opinion column in the back of every issue. What used to be a thought provoking column every week is now replaced all too often by a picture. When baseball went on strike, instead of a writer's opinion on the

Turn to SPORTS ILLUSTRATED, page 8

Coming through in a pinch

Junior forward Rachel LeDuc rises in the heat of battle

By Mike Reiss
Collegian Staff

We pick this match up with under five minutes to play, as Massachusetts and Central Florida are tied at 1-1. Massachusetts has seemingly lost the momentum it had owned throughout the day, and it looks as if overtime will be called upon to help decide this one.

"I'm not thinking any differently in those situations," said a modest Rachel LeDuc. "I just don't like going into the overtime for the extra 30 minutes."

The clock at the far end of Garber Field continues to tick away, each second becoming more and more precious. Suddenly, a play develops and a through ball is sent up the right sideline.

"I just play hard every game, for the full 90 minutes," said the junior forward LeDuc. "I guess I just happen to be at the right place at the right time."

The defender is left defenseless, and with a lead step to work with, a high-lofting ball makes its way toward the goal. Tucking under the crossbar yet under the goalkeeper's outstretched hand, the ball ruffles the back netting and a celebration ensues.

Rachel LeDuc does not like overtime. Does not like the extra 30 minutes.

And Central Florida, along with a handful of other opponents, has found this out first-hand over the past three years. LeDuc's knack for scoring the key goal in pressure situations has earned her the title of "big-game" goal scorer, a well-deserved distinction.

Take last season's NCAA Tournament Northeast Regional match against the University of Connecticut, for example. Playing with a nagging calf injury, the junior collected the team's only goal of the game as UMass advanced to the Final Four via the 1-0 triumph.

"Rebecca Myers sent a perfect ball by the defense, which set me up with a one-on-one with the goalie," recalled LeDuc. "The goalie came out cleats first. I kicked the ball and after that I got hit [in the ribs]. I didn't know if it went in."

Everyone else at Garber Field knew, as the crowd erupted into a frenzy. Yet LeDuc remained down on the ground, the wind forcefully knocked out of her. Although Massachusetts would meet up with North Carolina in the Final Four soon after, LeDuc's season came to an abrupt end.

"It was upsetting to have made it all that way and then have an injury stop you from playing," she said. "The week before the [UNC] game I was having trouble breathing. I really didn't think I was going to be able to play. There was nothing I could do."

This season, LeDuc has shown there is very little she can not do.

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 8

UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Rachel LeDuc and the Minutewomen will try to get back into the win column Thursday at Yale.

Minutewomen hope for home success

UM looks to rebound from weekend loss today over Syracuse

By Mike Pinder
Collegian Staff

Orange ya' glad to be home?

This afternoon the University of Massachusetts field hockey team plays host to the Orangewomen of Syracuse University.

According to UMass Coach Megan Donnelly, the Minutewomen are very eager to return home against last year's Big East Champions.

"We play very well at home," said Donnelly. "We've been on the road a lot this year and we're very anxious to return to Totman."

UMass is coming off possibly their best all-round performance of the year in their first loss of the season to No. 4 Old Dominion. The Minutewomen will try to bounce back against Syracuse today at 3:30 p.m.

Donnelly predicts a very difficult match-up against a formidable opponent in Syracuse.

The main gun for the Orange is senior Julie Williamson, who has seven goals and two assists in seven games, for 16 points. For her career, Williamson has scored 26 goals while assisting on 23 others.

"Syracuse is a very good team," said Donnelly. "They have strong skills with passing and receiving the ball. They also have excellent speed."

Donnelly is hoping UMass plays with similar intensity and strength as they did against Old Dominion.

"We're going to try to play the way we did against Old Dominion," said Donnelly. "I think the main thing is that we slow them down."

If history holds true Donnelly need not be too concerned about the Orangewomen. UMass holds a commanding series record against Syracuse and the Big East. UMass is 9-0 versus teams in the Big East dating back to the 1992 season and holds a 3-0 lifetime record against Syracuse.

The strong UMass defensive core, led by sophomore goalkeeper Hilary Rose, will be called upon to quell the speed and skill of the Orangewomen.

Rose brings a .30 goals against average into the game against Syracuse, which is one of the best in the nation for the second straight year. The England native also has seven shutouts in nine games.

The rest of the UMass defensive squad has been equally impressive this year, allowing a very stingy three goals in nine games, as opposed to 15 scored by the Minutewomen.

In the net for Syracuse will be junior goalie Cheri Herr. Herr has had a tough year so far, registering an unimpressive 1.71 goals against average, giving up 12 goals in only seven games.

On the offensive side of the stick, UMass is led by two All-American Candidates, Danielle Borges and Natalie Hart. Borges leads the team with five goals and five assists for 15 points, while Hart is second tallying five goals for 10 points.

Syracuse comes into the game sporting a deceptive 5-4 record. The Orangewomen have lost to two national powerhouse teams, in Northeastern and Penn State.

UMass, like Syracuse, has battled against the Huskies earlier this year. The Minutewomen, though, had a better outing than the Orangewomen tying Northeastern 0-0 on October 28 at Totman Field. In that game the Minutewomen and the Huskies battled through two overtime periods.

The Minutewomen will face their biggest test of the season this Sunday when they face off against top-ranked North Carolina. Despite the obvious magnitude of the weekend game, UMass has stayed focused on Syracuse.

"We're just looking at this game [Syracuse] right now," said Donnelly. "We want to win this game and we can't afford to think ahead to the North Carolina game. We'll have plenty of time to prepare for them."

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

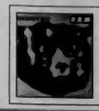
Field hockey will try to continue their dominance of Big East teams this afternoon against Syracuse.

Williams suspended by Calipari

Mike Williams was suspended for three games by UMass Coach John Calipari for academic reasons (See Sports, page 14).

Questioning gender, transsexuality myths

"Why does there have to be one or the other?" author Kate Bornstein asks at the GLB Studies Brown Bag Series (Story on page 3).



Fables of R.E.M.'s construction

With their new release, Monster, the band has reinvented themselves. But how did they get there? (See Arts & Living, page 5)

Extended Forecast

Considerable cloudiness giving way to sun today and highs near 60. Chilly temps in the low 40s tonight, and more sun Friday, highs in the mid-60s. Same story for Saturday.

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 57 LOW: 32	HIGH: 65 LOW: 40	HIGH: 70 LOW: 45

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 18 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, October 6, 1994

Officials search for solutions to bathroom misconduct

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

A men's bathroom in Thompson Hall is the site of extreme vandalism and sexual activity, leaving University of Massachusetts officials struggling to find a solution.

According to several sources, the notoriety of the bathroom in the low-rise academic building is the result of both written advertisements and word of mouth.

"These types of things happen," said Paul Page, vice chancellor of administration and finance. "It is an institutional and societal issue."

The advertisements are printed as newsletters and circulated to alert people of the location and services offered in the bathroom, according to Alvin Cohen, director of the Asian Studies Department.

Presently, the most controversial restroom is located next the Asian Studies Department in the basement of Thompson.

"It seems to be a hangout for some faction of the male gay community," Cohen said.

The activities put the health and safety of those who use, clean and have to work near the facilities at risk, Cohen said.

There are phone numbers and explicit messages written on the walls and bodily fluids on the floors, walls, fixtures and mirrors, Marie Parker, a former UMass custodian, said.

Parker now works as a UMass security guard after leaving her custodial job because of bad working conditions.

"I used to get embarrassed and angry," Parker said. "But my biggest concern was the health hazard." There is fear of catching diseases from the unsanitary conditions, she added.

An "orientation kit" given to custodians supplies the materials necessary to clean up bodily fluids and lists important rules and safety measures that should be taken, said Karin Sherbin of the University News Office.

According to Sarah Ives, building coordinator in Thompson, the problem has moved throughout the campus for years and once hampered in one area, it moves to another.

"It seems as if it's moved from Herter to the Tower Library to Thompson," Ives said, "and it will probably move from there."

The Thompson bathroom is located in a narrow corridor. The activities affect people in surrounding offices, Cohen said.

The majority of people who vandalize and abuse the bathrooms are middle-aged men who do not appear to be affiliated with UMass, he said.

"You work in a place year after year, and you can tell when somebody doesn't fit," Cohen said.

There was a meeting Wednesday afternoon between Public Safety, Environmental Health and Safety and Custodial Services to discuss means of prevention, Detective Lieutenant Mike Grabiec said.

"We put together a couple of plans to clean up the problem," Grabiec said. He declined to elaborate on the plans that were discussed.

The bathroom cannot be closed because it is the largest of two restrooms in the building and the most used, Ives said. There are three lecture halls above it and students and faculty need it to be accessible during the day.

Metal panels were installed in the

Turn to BATHROOMS, page 2

WARNING
The University has received complaints concerning inappropriate behavior and activity in this area. All persons using these facilities are warned that the University will take all necessary steps to insure that such behavior stops. Complaints will be reported directly to the University Police.
MEN'S RM.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Extensive vandalism and sexual activity in this Thompson Hall bathroom has persisted despite the continuing efforts of University officials to put an end to the problem.

Instances aren't 'gay' but 'societal' problems

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Heterosexual sex and affection is more widely accepted so there is no need for an underground system of release, said Lawrence Ali, political chair for the Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Alliance.

"The bathrooms [like the one in Thompson] serve as an outlet for people who can't find a lover, or people who can't come to grips with their sexuality," Ali said.

"For the most part, individuals engaged in sex in the bathroom do not define themselves as gay or bisexual," said Felice Yeskel, a representative from the LGBA task force.

"Two individuals may engage in the same kind of sexual activity, but define their sexual orientation quite differently. Sexual orientation identity is complex. It's not simply determined by one's sexual behavior," she said.

"I'm sure a lot of straight people take advantage of such a location," Ali said. "They have the ability to put holes through the partitions. It makes for a convenience factor; there's an escape route for feelings and sexual urges. It makes something like a public restroom real accessible."

When people have sex in these situations they put themselves at a health risk and a legal risk, said Kelly Hayes, an LBGA representative.

"A lot of people, especially straight men, don't understand the health risks and don't identify themselves as gay, so they don't feel it's a risk to them," she said. "People should be made aware of the dangers and the risks."

Similar activities can be found on other college campuses as well. At the beginning of last summer, Boston University ran into problems of the same sort.

"If you call it a 'gay problem,' the implication will be that this is the mentality of all gay people," Ali said. "It isn't a gay problem, it's a societal problem."

Override vote paves way for expansion of Amherst school

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — Amherst voters passed a property tax limit override measure Tuesday, paving the way for a $22 million renovation and expansion of Amherst Regional High School.

Voters agreed, with 2,786 ballots in favor and 2,169 in opposition, to override the state law called Proposition 2 1/2. The law caps the allowable yearly increase a town may assess in property taxes at 2 1/2 percent.

By overriding the property tax cap, Amherst will use the additional tax revenue to finance the debt the town will incur renovating and expanding the school.

Amherst voters rejected a similar plan in June by a 72- vote margin in a smaller voter turnout.

According to the proposal, the state will pay for two-thirds of the cost while the rest will be funded by Amherst and the other towns in the school district. The other towns — Shutesbury, Pelham and Leverett — all passed similar override measures last spring.

The cost for the town of Amherst is expected to be approximately $5.7 million.

"We were very pleased with the result and we were very pleased so many people turned out, regardless of how they voted," said Assistant Superintendent of Schools Ron Bell. "We think it will serve the kids in the community in the years to come."

Bell said the $22 million funding plan will be formalized at a town meeting Oct. 12, after which archi-

Turn to SCHOOL, page 2

Vending machines on campus replace Coke with Pepsi

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Correspondent

Over the summer, Pepsi replaced all the Coca-Cola vending machines in dorms and academic buildings as the choice of the University of Massachusetts soda-drinking consumers.

The reason for the change from Coke to Pepsi was simply financial, according to University officials.

However, the reaction from the campus community does not seem to be all positive.

"They [UMass] should have kept Coke because I like it," said Jeff Shumway, a departmental assistant in chemistry and UMass alum.

Wilkes said 75 percent of the commissions from all vending machines is used toward cultural enrichment funds.

Every five years the University allows soda vending companies to bid for exclusive rights to place machines on campus, according to Bernard Wilkes, assistant director of Campus Center.

The new contract with Pepsi will last for the next three years.

The University chose Pepsi because they offered a higher commission than Coke, according to University spokeswoman Kay Scanlan.

Pepsi offered the University 39 percent of the 70 cents for every can, while Coke offered only 33 percent of the 70 cents for every can, according to Scanlan. She said the four cent difference is significant.

Susan Strand, junior BDIC marketing and computer major, said she likes the change because she prefers Mountain Dew and Ocean Spray and both are offered in the Pepsi vending machines.

Ashoke Ganguli, director of Auxiliary Services, said the contract does not include the Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center, the dining commons or the Williams D. Mullins Center.

There are about 100 soda vending machines across the University campus, according to Wilkes. About 18,000 cases of soda were sold through vending machines in dorms and academic buildings from the beginning of July 1993 to the end of June 1994, he said.

Last year, the University made $87,000 from vending machine commissions. Wilkes said he expects the University will make more money from the vending machines because of the higher commissions.

Wilkes said 75 percent of the commissions from all vending machines go into the Student Automated Service Trust Fund which is used towards cultural enrichment funds. These funds are used for cultural events, including free lectures offered to the campus community.

Both Wilkes and Ganguli said they believed the change will not affect the number of cans of soda students will buy from vending machines.

"This will be the first time in a quarter century that Coke has not been in every campus building," Wilkes said.

Natanya Wachtel, a sophomore and an undecided major, said she was indifferent toward the change because she does not like carbonated beverages but prefers juice and water.

W.E.B. Du Bois Library now a reality

Trustees recognize campus diversity with tower naming

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts took a giant leap toward acknowledging diversity on campus yesterday when the Board of Trustees unanimously voted to change the name of the tower library to honor African-American scholar and civil rights activist W.E.B. Du Bois.

After a seven-month campaign by students, administrators, faculty, staff and Amherst residents, the first academic building on campus named after an African-American will be called the W.E.B. Du Bois Library.

The library, which was opened in 1973 without an official name, was known simply as the "tower library." It now bears the name of civil rights pioneer William Edward Burghardt Du Bois.

"The UMass library stands for a tower of learning on this campus," said Chancellor David K. Scott. "Isn't it fitting that it be named after a virtual tower of learning himself, W.E.B. Du Bois?"

The library houses the largest collection of material by Du Bois, containing more than 150,000 manuscripts of his speeches, published newspaper articles, fiction and non-fiction, pamphlets, petitions, plays, poetry, book reviews and approximately 700 photographs within its 26 stories.

"It is altogether fitting and proper that the library which houses the W.E.B. Du Bois papers should be named in his honor," said University President Michael K. Hooker.

The collection of his works was given to UMass by his widow, Shirley Graham Du Bois, in 1973 because of the efforts of former University Chancellor Randolph Bromery.

"UMass made a proposal to bring Du Bois' materials to the University, as well as other colleges and universities, including Harvard University," Bromery said.

"But Shirley wanted all of [Du Bois'] works to be accessible to the public; she wanted everyone to be able to see his work."

According to Bromery, the library houses the largest collection by a single individual in the country "and possibly the world."

Du Bois, a native of Western Massachusetts, was the first African-American to earn a Ph.D. at Harvard University and was a founding member of the Niagara Movement, which led to the establishment of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"During his lifetime, Dr. Du Bois, a native son of Great Barrington, Massachusetts, had a world-wide impact by virtue of his scholarship and his ceaseless efforts on behalf of freedom, justice, peace and racial equality," Hooker said.

"[Du Bois] demonstrated tremendous courage and conviction as he worked toward his vision of a truly just society," Hooker said.

Du Bois taught people that the problem of the 20th century would be the problem of the "color line," according to State Rep. Byron Rushing.

Student trustee Al Lizana said he believes the naming of the library after Du Bois will provoke the University, both students and administration, to "take a moral critical look at how we approach issues of diversity and multiculturalism on campus."

"The naming of the library after Du Bois is not the final step," Lizana said. "It is more a start for the administration at UMass to begin taking a hard look at how they view diversity on campus."

Turn to DU BOIS, page 3

COURTESY SPECIAL COLLECTIONS AND ARCHIVES, UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST LIBRARY

The name of African-American scholar and civil rights activist W.E.B. Du Bois will now honor the tower library after a seven-month campaign to name a campus building after a person of color.

Community praises long-awaited decision

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

The renaming of the University Library after prominent African-American scholar and civil rights activist W.E.B. Du Bois is the topic of much conversation within the Black community on campus.

On the whole, the event has received praise from Black students and faculty.

Here are some of their reactions to the news:

"I'm just wondering why it took so long."

— Junior Alton Byrd

"I feel that this is a major accomplishment for both the University and the Commonwealth because Du Bois was a major world figure who hasn't always been appreciated in this country."

— Afro-American Studies Professor Bill Strickland

"I think it's important that the University recognized a Black leader."

— First-year student Michael Smith

"Because of his contributions to the Black community and because he's from western Massachusetts, there is no greater honor."

— Collegiate Committee for the Education of Black and other Minority Students (CCEBMS) Academic Advisor Sidonio Ferreira

"It's important that minorities not only be represented on campus, but also feel welcome. I asked a friend how he felt about it and he said that one building named after a minority won't make much of a difference. However, it does make sense since most of Du Bois' books are in the library."

— Junior Manny Owens

"The University has reached a milestone in renaming the library after one of Massachusetts' most prominent sons. The renaming will help all students focus on contributions of all diverse peoples. It's fitting that the University of Massachusetts be at the forefront."

— CCEBMS Director Floyd Martin Jr.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Oct. 6

Give Blood — Blood drive at the Campus Center Basement, UMass, 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Film — Vampyr, Herter Hall room 227, UMass, free, 7:30 p.m.

Visual Art — Closing reception, France '94, Herter Gallery, UMass, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

French Club — Meeting at Cafe Di Carlo in Amherst, 7 p.m. All welcome.

Seminar — Chemistry seminar, Lederle Graduate Research Tower room 1634, UMass, 11:15 a.m.

Lecture — Feng Distinguished Lecture Series, Campus Center room 1009, UMass, free, 3 p.m.

Film — Go, Trabi, Go, Campus Center Theater, AC, free, Show times: 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Film — Jean-Michel Basquiat, Museum of Art in the Museum Lobby at MHC, 4 p.m.

Music — Terrence Wilson, piano, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, $8, 8 p.m.

Music — Chris Smither, Campus Center Theater, AC, $8 or $2 with Amherst College student ID., 8 p.m.

Group therapy — Grief survival group, a support group for those who have suffered a loss, Campus Center room 801, 7 p.m.

Friday, Oct. 7

Services — Shabbat service led by Professor Julius Lester, Hillel House, UMass, 7 p.m.

Lecture — Visiting Lecturer Series in Geology, Morrill Science Center room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Conference — "Negotiation Identities: What's Difference Got to Do With It?," Willits–Hallowell and Dwight Hall, MHC, 6 p.m. Information: 538–2653.

Community — Green Tara Meditation, Wright Hall Common Room, Smith College, 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Lecture — Free Friday Night Lecture Series, Jude Rozhon, Tarot: Fool's Gold and the Sacred Journey, 63 Main St., Amherst, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Conference — Williams College will be hosting a South Asian Student conference on Oct. 7, 8, and 9. Information: 546–0888.

Saturday, Oct. 8

Conference — Negotiation Identities, Willits–Hallowell and Dwight Hall, MHC, 8:30 p.m.

Film — Forgotten Tenor, Main Lecture Hall, Franklin Patterson Hall, HC, free, 7:30 p.m.

Music — Mozart and Macchia, Bezanson Recital Hall, UMass, 8 p.m. Information: 545–2227.

Other Activities and Upcoming Events

Auditions for UMass Theater Guild's production of Godspell — Oct. 6, 7 and 8. Call 545–0415 for more information.

Community Service — The Companion Program is looking for volunteers. Call 253–2591.

J. Crew Warehouse Sale — Mullins Center, UMass, Monday to Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

■ school

continued from page 1

tects will spend several months completing their designs.

The designs will be presented to the state Department of Education for approval and construction could begin as early as the summer of 1995, according to Bell, who said the job will take approximately two years to complete.

The override proposal has been the focus of a public debate in recent weeks between override supporters and members of the community who believe the measure is unnecessary and fiscally irresponsible.

Yesterday's vote has also been criticized because it comes just months after the defeat of a slightly more expensive measure in June.

"I wasn't surprised," said Wid Lyman of the anti–override group Amherst Citizens for Responsible Government (ACRG) in response to Tuesday's vote. "I suspected that our victory over the liberals last time was going to be met with a great amount of organization and hard work."

Lyman said holding another vote on an override after the failure of a similar measure in June was unfair.

"I'm out there fighting for those folks who are cash–strapped and hurting because of the tremendously high taxes around here," Lyman said. "If [President] Clinton had lost the election, would he get to say, 'There's a lot of people that would have voted for me and didn't, so let's have another election?'" said Lyman.

Former Amherst Select Board member and public critic of the override David Keenan said the ACRG is considering the possibility of legal action to reverse the result of Tuesday's vote.

Isabel Lyman, a member of the ACRG steering committee, said the ACRG is not at this time planning legal action in opposition to the passage of the override.

"At this point, there's nothing at all in the works," said Isabel Lyman.

The expansion of the high school will allow it to enroll ninth graders. Currently, the high school enrolls grades 10 to 12, while grades seven through nine are enrolled at Amherst Regional Junior High School.

Supporters of the measure point out that state mandates in the past have required space in the high school to be used for special education and language programs, thus reducing the amount of existing classroom space.

The creation of computer labs also reduced classroom space, bringing the school's enrollment capacity down by 150 students since space was diverted for other purposes.

The proposed renovations will also upgrade the school's foreign language facilities, library and science labs.

Material from the Daily Hampshire Gazette was used in this story.

■ bathrooms

continued from page 1

partition to block off drilled holes. Signs are posted and police guarded the door for a time but nothing worked to deter the situation, Cohen said.

"We've discussed locking the men's room and only having the key made available to clubs and organizations," Ives said. "We would leave the smaller men's room open for men, the large women's room open for women and the smaller women's room open for faculty and staff."

In Entry-Level Sales, You need to join a company known for its strength and innovation.

When it comes to entry-level sales, you need to align yourself with a leader, a dynamic company that sets the standard.

Founded in 1908, Wallace is an industry leader in the manufacture and distribution of consumable products for solving information processing problems. Our impressive list of Fortune 500 clients depends on a wide range of products including: paperwork systems; labeling products; commercial, promotional and direct mail printing; and computer hardware, software, accessories and supplies.

Our strength derives from the ability to respond to customers' needs and capitalize on changes in technology and the marketplace. It's a strategy for success that keeps our momentum going strong.

After completing our comprehensive field and classroom training program, you'll have the opportunity to develop your own leads, service major accounts and design forms and systems to solve customers' problems and increase their productivity.

Make your first move the right move! If you're an ambitious individual with a business related degree and a strong interest in sales, stop by our booth on Wednesday, 10/12, Campus Center during Career Day and attend our information session on Wednesday, 10/19, Campus Center-Room 803 at 7pm. To interview on Wednesday, 11/9, submit your resume to the Mather Career Center. S.O.M. students should submit resumes to the S.O.M. Placement Office for Thursday, 11/10 interviews. If you are unable to attend but would like information, send your resume to: Mike Patch, Wallace Computer Services, Inc., 144 Gould St., Suite 155, Needham, MA 02194. FAX: (617)449-3420. Equal Opportunity Employer.

WALLACE COMPUTER SERVICES, INC.

HADLEY TIRE AND BRAKE CENTER

439 Russell St., Hadley
253-9911 or 253-9054
Prices only with this Collegian Ad • Free Brake Inspection • Lube Oil Filter • Monroe Shocks/Struts

D.S.R. II 45,000 MILE
P155/80R13	$33.45
P165/80R13	35.69
P175/80R13	36.21
P185/80R13	38.18
P185/75R14	40.22
P195/75R14	41.34
P205/75R14	42.93
P215/75R14	45.61
P205/75R15	44.51
P215/75R15	46.10
P225/75R15	48.72
P235/75R15	50.82

DSR II

EXCELLENT GRIPPING ACTION FOR ALL WEATHER PERFORMANCE

ALL SEASON B/W DESIGN STEEL BELTED RATED TO 112 MPH

HERCULES MERIT A/S 45,000 MILE
155SR12	$37.82
145SR13	36.36
165SR13	39.77
185SR14	48.81
165SR15	46.12
175/70SR13	44.85
185/70SR13	46.49
185/70SR14	48.79
195/70SR14	51.17
205/70SR14	53.94

We've just developed a way to make Power Macintosh even more powerful.

(Buy one now, and we'll throw in all this software to help you power through college.)

ClarisWorks and the Apple Student Resource Set included when you buy the Power Macintosh computers to the right.

Power Macintosh 7100/66 8/250. Macintosh Color Display, AppleDesign™ Keyboard and mouse.

Power Macintosh 7100/66 8/250 with CD-ROM. Apple® Multiple Scan 15 Display, AppleDesign™ Keyboard and mouse.

Not only is the world's fastest Macintosh® computer available at special low student prices, but now it includes a student software set available only from Apple. For a limited time, buy a select Power Macintosh® and you get software that helps you through every aspect of writing papers, a personal organizer/calendar created for your student lifestyle and the Internet Companion to help you tap into on-line research resources. Plus you'll get ClarisWorks, an integrated package with a word processor, database, spreadsheet and more. Buy a select Power Mac™ with CD-ROM, and you'll also get a multimedia library of essential reference tools. It all comes with Power Macintosh — the computer that grows with you from college to the professional world. And now, with an Apple Computer Loan, it's easier than ever to own one. It's the power every student needs. The power to be your best.

Apple

through it.

UNIVERSITY STORE

CAMPUS CENTER 545-2619

M - F 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.
SAT 11 a.m. - 3 p.m.

Offer expires October 17, 1994, available only while supplies last. © 1994 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. AppleDesign, PowerMac and PowerMacintosh are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. ClarisWorks is a registered trademark of Claris Corporation.

Bornstein discusses transsexuality

By Stephen C. Campbell
Collegian Staff

Kate Bornstein, the male-to-female transsexual author of Gender Outlaw, questioned myths about transsexuals yesterday at the Lesbian Gay Bisexual Studies Brown Bag series in the Campus Center yesterday afternoon.

"Questioning Gender: the Cultural Construction" was the title of the discussion presented by the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns.

Bornstein read part of "Which Gender Outlaws," a chapter in her book, describing her youth as a young middle–class Jewish boy on the Jersey shore.

The chapter included transsexual visibility, how people who were transgendered didn't really seek out others who might be like them because of the pressures involved in coming out and being different. This pressure still exists to some extent today.

"We need to come out for each other, not ignore each other," says Bornstein.

Bornstein's reading also dealt with the medicalization of transsexuality and how it is treated as an illness when it really is not.

She talked about some the myths in and around the transgendered subculture like: We are normal men and women. Bornstein asked, "What is a normal man or woman?"

We are better men and women then those born men or women because we had to work harder at it, she said. To this, Bornstein says, "They have to work just as hard, we're just more aware of what it means to be a man or woman."

We have an incurable illness. Her reply, "It's not an illness."

We are trapped in the wrong body. "This is a metaphor used to describe something that exists in a binary world," says Bornstein. "It's easier to understand, and once we have a metaphor for something, we stop looking. We need more metaphors to describe the world around us."

Her refusal to accept the binary, not only of gender but of subjects like race, raises questions for the not only the gay community but all of society. "If your not a white middle–class man then what are you?"

"When you're the "other" you have to question who you are," said Bornstein. "Why do we have to assign an identity of who we are depending on who we are with?" She didn't only mean sexual orientation but also who an individual is in relation to those around them.

Bornstein considers herself neither a man nor a woman. "I have the body of a woman, but, I don't consider myself one. That's the difference between having an identity and being one," she says.

She said, "If we get rid of the binary way of looking at the world, there would be nobody left to fight the battles of the sexes. It would allow us to begin to dismantle all the shit that's built up over the years but, that it wouldn't rid us of the oppressions."

Bornstein followed with the fact that it isn't only the fight between man and woman, but Black and White and all races that would be affected by this change.

Bornstein said she feels that it is more important to ask questions then to get answers. "The more questions we ask the better," she says. She said she wants us to question why things are the way they are in society and why do roles we play out every day have to be so ridged.

The most important questions she want all of us to ask are "What is a man?," "What is a woman?," and "Why does there have to be one or the other?"

Bornstein will be performing "Cuts and Pastes" at Bowker Auditorium this Oct. 7 at 8 p.m. The event is co–sponsored by the Five College Women's Studies Research Center and the UMass GLB Student Organization.

■ Du Bois

continued from page 1

"Diversity is more than just recruiting students of color to come to UMass. It is also making the environment reflect something which the students can relate to."

Lizana said it is important for students to see a positive image of people of color depicted at the University and that naming the library after Du Bois will help improve that image.

"Du Bois probably contributed more than any other individual to the way we see race relations," Lizana said. "The Trustees have done the campus a favor by naming the library in honor of Du Bois."

At the executive meeting of the Board of Trustees on Tuesday, Scott announced that the Library Council had recently endorsed the renaming with the hope that it would help bring more funding to the building.

"With the renaming of the library, we should work on the increase of resources it houses," Scott said. "We should work in conjunction to raise private funds."

Scott has named Bromery as the chairman of funding for the library. The library is expecting a $10 million donation in response to the decision to name the building after Du Bois, according to Bromery.

Bromery will also contribute a large donation to the library to begin the capital campaign as a "challenge donation."

After Shirley Du Bois agreed to give UMass the works of her late husband, the state passed legislation which prevented the University from receiving funding from the state to house the materials.

Bromery worked on a campaign that brought in $400,000 in donations to help organize materials the University received.

The W.E.B. Du Bois Petition Coalition is planning to ask students for donations for a plaque with a quote from Du Bois to be put in the center courtyard of the library.

Gang way!

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN

Lauren Lobik ('97), Amy Lounsbury ('97) and Homer Rogers ('95) test drive a JetSki — on dry land — at the Sports Illustrated fair. Hopefully they'll learn how to balance before they hit the water.

Prof to discuss women of color in WWI

By Emily Marino
Collegian Staff

Today at Smith College, Professor Margaret R. Higonnet will discuss the way in which gender, race, politics and history intersected during the First World War.

Higonnet, a professor of English at the University of Connecticut and specialist in 18th century literature, will present "Part of the People? Women of Color in World War I."

Along with Higonnet's lecture, the presentation will feature slides and posters of campaigns calling women to participate in the war effort. Higonnet will especially focus on how the government's attempt to enlist the support of women of color was different from its call to white women.

"It [the lecture focus] is not just any women, it is women of color," said Ann Jones, chair of the comparative literature department at Smith. Jones said Higonnet will discuss issues of race in relation to women.

Jones also said that Higonnet will compare the promises made to women of color who were drawn into the war by the government compared to the social reality that these women faced.

Higonnet has been researching women's responses to war throughout Europe as well as the United States for an extensive period, according to Jones.

Having edited two books including Behind the Lines: Gender and the Two World Wars, Higonnet is well versed in this area of study. She has also been published in Arms and the Woman, a collection of essays dealing with war and gender in literary representation.

Higonnet's lecture will begin at 4:30 p.m. today in Seelye room 106 at Smith College. The presentation is sponsored by the Smith College Comparative Literature Program.

TOTAL FITNESS
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES • TREADMILLS • LIFESTEPS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • FREE WEIGHTS • NORDIC TRACK
FALL SPECIAL • '99 • 10 WEEKS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 WEST ST. ON BUS ROUTE OPEN 7 DAYS

Come Clean With Us!!
Speedwash
11 Pray St. Amherst • 549-1665
Open 24 Hours
Drop-off service available:
Mon. & Tues. 2 p.m. - 10 p.m.
Wed., Thurs. & Fri. 2 p.m. - 10 p.m.
Sat. 10 a.m. - 6 p.m.
South Towne Commons Laundromat
479 West St. South Amherst
Open 7 days/week, 7 a.m. - 10 p.m.
Triple Load Washers

IGU
INVITES ALL UNIVERSITY AND STOCKBRIDGE WOMEN TO OPEN RUSH
10/6 BBQ 5:30 - 7:30
10/11 SUNDAES 6:00 - 8:00
10/12 PIZZA 5:00 - 7:00
CALL KRISTEN @ 549-0243
406 N. PLEASANT ST.

VALLEY MOTORSPORTS
Rt. 5 Northampton, MA 01060
413/584-7303 • 800/649-9965
WINTER STORAGE AVAILABLE
Scooters • Generators
Snow Blowers • Jetmate
Motorcycles • ATV's
Lawn Mowers • Jet Skis
Snowmobiles
HONDA Kawasaki YAMAHA DUCATI

MOUNTAIN BIKE SALE
ONE DAY ONLY!
OCTOBER,12TH 9-5PM
U-MASS CAMPUS CENTER
ROOM 101
ACADIA BIKE RENTAL
FLEET LIQUIDATION
1-800-526-8615
GREAT SAVING$
ON USED MT. BIKES
COME EARLY

The Boston Globe Offers UMass Students Delivery for 50% OFF

UMas:/Amherst	Full Year 9/25 - 5/14	Fall Term 9/25 - 12/18
6 Days MON-SAT	$52.00	$25.25
5 Days MON-FRI	$30.00	$14.25
SUNDAY ONLY	$22.00	$11.00

To order a Boston Globe subscription ON CAMPUS ONLY mail payments to:

The Boston Globe
Campus Program, P.O. Box 2378
Boston, MA 02107
or call 1-800-858-4275 ext.0

If you're a student living OFF CAMPUS we have special discount rates for you too...
Just call 1-800-622-6631 ext.549

Stuck in an office? – learn woodworking
Carpenter? – learn creative writing or photography
DIVERSIFY!
Speak only English? – learn another language
Trouble with English? – learn English as a Second Language
Need a job? – learn bartending
Learn about yourself, about other people, other cultures, other languages, other times.
Nearly 100 noncredit workshops are offered this fall by the UMass Division of Continuing Education.
Call now for your free course and workshop catalog — 545-0474.
A quality education at affordable prices.
DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center

Bud Dry	$5.99 12pk $10.99 case	Captain Morgan 1.75l	$15.99
Miller Genuine Draft 12pk bottles	$6.99	Fleischmann's Vodka 750 ml	$5.99
Natural Light 12pk cans	$4.39	Fleischmann's Gin 750 ml	$4.99
Anchor (Steam, Liberty, Porter) 6pk Port	$6.99	Jagermeister 750ml	$14.99
Nantucket Finback Lager	$5.69/six	Bushmills 750ml	$14.99
All Prices Plus Deposit		T.G.I. Friday Cocktails	$4.99/4 pack

Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt.9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt.9E
VISA - MASTERCARD - DISCOVER Accepted

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Andrea Ferguson Business Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Maureen Magrowski Senior Bookkeeper
Evelyn A. Delesus Multicultural Affairs Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Kelly Spang News Editor Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Nathan R. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

A tour through Cliche Land

Welcome to the world of cheezy expressions.

I will be your tour guide through this disgusting ride into Cliche Land, where it's all right to vent out a corny phrase every once in a while.

As for me, I'm fairly experienced in this field. No, I don't use them myself but many people use them around me, and I pride myself on being there to bust on them. Oh, I have a field day with them, especially my mother.

In fact, while compiling my hideous saying list, I was at a loss. I then got my mother on the phone and she said she'd call me back because she was busy at work. When she did call back, she had a long list for me, filled with haggard phrases she has heard, as well as used, in the past.

So sit back, relax and be ready to read some of the most stale and ever-so-corny expressions you have heard. Here goes:

"It ain't over 'till the fat lady sings" — Poor lady who that was first said about. I wonder if she actually sang.

"He who laughs last, laughs best" — It's usually, though, the most clueless, despicable toolbox who didn't get the joke when it was first told.

Before I continue, I must give a shout out to one of my grade school mates, Scott Melo. We'd be in class, and someone would say something humorous. Everybody in the class would laugh — except for Scott Melo.

So, we'd go out to recess, play kickball or dodgeball [a.k.a. bombardment], and return to class. Minutes into classtime, we'd hear one Scott Melo break out laughing. Why was Scott Melo laughing? Because Scott Melo understood the joke told hours earlier.

"It ain't over 'till it's over" — Really?

Almost as complex an expression as, "you win some, you lose some."

"Nice guys finish last" — Maybe if people busted their asses to win instead of trying to be nice, they wouldn't be in last. Yeah.

And besides, you just can't be in last place and be a jerk. That's what being in first place is for.

"Winning isn't everything — it's the only thing" — Tell that to those wimpy nice guys.

"You made your own bed, now lie in it" — Does not apply to me because I haven't made my bed since I believed in the tooth fairy, when my parents said that if I didn't make my bed, I wouldn't get the cash flow underneath my pillow.

"If you can't take the heat, get out of the kitchen" — Another one that doesn't apply to me because I'm still residing in the dorms, and there ain't no kitchen in my z-room.

"No use crying over spilled milk" — Unless it's the last of a gallon and you need it for your cereal.

"Smoke 'em if you got 'em" — Even if they are Misty's.

"Stuck between a rock and a hard place" — If I'm stuck between rock and something else, anything is a hard place.

"Snug as a bug in a rug" — My parents used to say that when they tucked me into bed. Great rhyme scheme — and that's it. One of the more hideous sayings on this list.

"If life gives you a lemon, make lemonade" — Imagine if the only thing life gave you was lemons so you could make a thirst-quenching drink. That would be pretty sad.

"Let's not beat around the bush" — I prefer not to comment on this one.

"It's better than a sharp stick in the eye" — Getting a tire iron smashed against your face several times isn't. Neither is getting your skull run over again and again by a steamroller.

"A penny saved is a penny earned" — Correct me if I'm wrong, but that still leaves me with one cent.

"Bottoms up" — Nice.

"You can't make chicken soup out of chicken sh... crap" — Who said?

Well, the ride is over for today. These are just some of the many ridiculous phrases that people use in everyday conversation. They mean no harm, and yet they cause some.

Regardless, "keep your eyes peeled" for other cliches.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Random thoughts from the Basement

Parking meters. Restricted parking lots. Fifteen-minute loading areas. The Campus Center Parking Garage. Free lots.

One of these things does not belong when talking about the University of Massachusetts' parking situation for students who live on or off campus; those of you who have cars here at school know the answer, but for the lucky ones, it's free lots.

There is not a convenient place to park here at the University without coughing up some cash. If there is, someone give me a call to let me know because after four weeks, I haven't found one yet.

I really don't understand it, either. With so many out-of-staters attending this fine University, you would think the administration would try to make our trek to Amherst a lot easier by not charging us a quarter every time we try to park in the metered lots on campus.

Then again, if you're lucky, you could purchase a parking pass for any one of the numerous lots on campus — E lot, Lot 22, Lot 57... yet there is never a guaranteed spot for your car. If you snooze, you lose.

When you lose, you end up parking in the Campus Center garage, paying seven bucks a day unless you wait until after midnight to get your car out.

Putting it bluntly, the parking situation sucks and I'm angry. I park my car in a restricted spot in Southwest for two minutes so I can run up and get a book from a friend and the next thing I know, I'm paying a $10 ticket.

This University gives out tickets like people give out candy on Halloween. It gets even worse — I brought it to the parking office and it turned out that the cop who gave me the ticket forgot to take a copy. So, I paid for a ticket the parking office never had recorded.

Call me smooth, but...

* * * *

It's not too early to start thinking about Spring Concert, is it? After last year's debacle, during which I chose to stay in the Campus Center instead of playing in the mud and dancing to the Violent Femmes, I hope everyone on campus would pitch in and let UPC know that we would do just about anything to get a good, popular, recent band for 1995. Students could attempt to raise money by organizing bake sales, car washes, flea markets, marathon dances... O.K., maybe that's why we had the Violent Femmes last semester.

* * * *

Remember that crazy student with the loud mouth who was ranting and raving near the mini-store in the Student Union last week about getting students to register to vote? That was Matt Pavesi, former undergraduate student speaker turned concerned graduate student, along with the Commuter Area Government, urging students to register in Amherst and vowing that if they did, he would finally shut up.

There's one thing missing from the Student Union this week — that lunatic who was pleading with students to register. According to Pavesi, nearly 4,000 students registered to vote in Amherst.

Those 4,000 students did something that no one could in Pavesi's four years as an undergraduate — shut him up.

* * * *

The roller coaster has been temporarily shut down.

Last year, Massachusetts guard Mike Williams was benched against Holy Cross and Central Connecticut State by John Calipari for missing practice; people cried that Calipari would not have benched one of his starters against quality teams like Temple and George Washington.

Now that Williams is suspended for the first three games of this season because of team academic standards, some people are crying again that there is no way the Minutemen have a chance against pre-season No. 1 and defending national champion Arkansas in the season opener without him.

You can't have it both ways when you hit the big time. Maybe this suspension by Calipari will help the Minutemen remain more disciplined come tournament time and advance past the second round for the first time in three years. Keep it up, Cal.

* * * *

I was thrilled when I found out this week that every student who paid for tuition before Sept. 8 would receive a $53 rebate. All we had to do was go to the Bursar's Office in Whitmore and wait in a line which resembled that of past years for tickets to Temple men's basketball games.

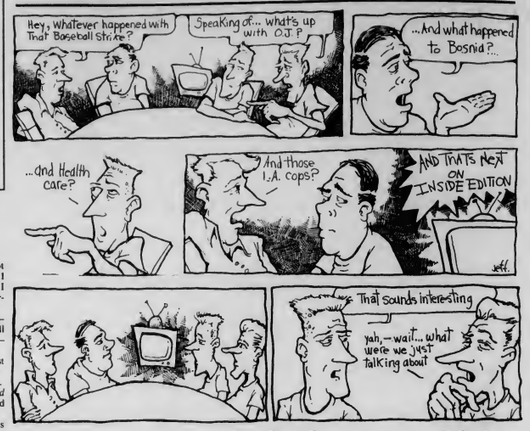
Just think, though — is it a coincidence that we weren't allowed to claim our money until after Oct. 1? Only a thought.

* * * *

With all of the hoopla next to the campus pond this week, I was hoping that next week we could install a ferris wheel, a log flume, a carousel and several roller coasters to truly give a campus a carnival atmosphere.

I'll sell 50/50 tickets and donate the proceeds to either UPC or the parking office, whomever calls first.

Arthur Stapleton Jr. is a Collegian columnist.



Hey, whatever happened with that Baseball Strike?
Speaking of... what's up with O.J.?
...And what happened to Bosnia?..
...and Health care?
And those I.A. cops?
AND THAT'S NEXT ON INSIDE EDITION
That sounds interesting
yah,—wait... what were we just talking about

Competition fuels the race of life

The black tar surface of the track is surrounded by concrete and steel stands for fans to watch from. Only today the stands are empty and there is only one person present at the stadium. The scoreboard's digital timer is flashing bright large numbers that keep track of the race.

Adam Scott Roberts

There usually are numerous contestants and at times, there may even only be one. This is competition. It is the race against others, the race against time and quite possibly the race against one's inner strengths and weaknesses to succeed, to do the very best that his or her abilities will allow. And when these abilities are put to the grand test, all possibilities reign.

In the capitalist society in which we Americans live, we are taught to be competitive with others and ourselves. Who makes the football team; who makes the cheerleading team matters; who is a member of the popular crowd; who goes to the best college that one can strive towards. We, as runners on the track of life, are competing to prove to our families and friends that yes, we can shine like a star; and there are those who compete within themselves, a battle that sometimes can't be won.

The capitalist society tends to be quite shallow where certain members of society feel that by stepping on others to get to the top is a good thing. Another member of that same capitalist society might say, "Always shake the person's hands on the way up that ladder because you never know when you are going to come back down."

The pressures Americans are faced with can often seem petty. Here, people get upset when their cable television isn't operating properly while a child in some Third World country is depressed because they have no idea where their next meal will come from.

The race to do one's best is a vigorous and stressful race. Is it the race against others? Is it the race against oneself? And is it even a race at all? Yes, the American society tells us. Yes, yes, yes! This is a nation where that Darwinian notion of survival of the fittest comes into play. This is a nation where people are constantly wanting more and more material objects to convince themselves that they are happy members of society.

The large house high up in the hills with the perfect membership to the right country club matters and still those who don't have this seem to get ostracized from society. In this nation, the reality is not that of which we see on daily television dramas. The reality is that provided 95 percent of this nation does not have that house high in the hills or the A-list friends that the Aaron Spellings of the world are telling us that America is.

As runners running around the track again and again in one gigantic circle, we can't stop to take in a deep breath and to enjoy the surroundings because we are so focused on getting to that finish line.

In trying to get to the finish line, people are not enjoying what they have because they are so busy trying to get more of something they don't have. The appreciation of the everyday things are gone. We warp our lives as we try to get to some unknown future while never actually living in the present in our quest for an imaginary ideal.

The competition that happens here in America can and is totally different from anywhere on earth. The ideals and competitive values that exist on our home soil may not necessarily work in the jungles of Southeast Asia.

Your shoelace has come untied; the clock is still ticking; the stands are still empty; and the risk of tripping on your shoelace is omnipresent and yet you continue to run, run, run to the finish. And then you fall, and you fall hard.

The blood from your knees is dripping; the clock is still ticking; and for the first time ever the desire to get up and try to finish that race no longer seems important anymore. Instead, the runner sits on that pavement and stares up at the clock and takes a deep breath while enjoying the moment.

Adam Scott Roberts is a Collegian columnist.

Life's decisions are not always easy

I met my sister's boyfriend this summer. The three of us met for dinner in New York City and went to a few bars afterward. When I first met him, I remember thinking he was cute. I remember feeling like I have known him forever (but that could be because my sister talks about him constantly).

Over dinner, the conversation was flowing and my sister looked happier than I have ever seen her. I was still laughing at the snide remark Gene made about our waiter.

And then I realized — Gene is Black.

This was the person that my parents called me crying about last semester. This was the person that my sister was seeing behind my parents' backs for months because they wouldn't accept him. To me, he was adorable Gene; to my sister, he was the man she loved; to my parents, he was a name with colored skin.

Here I was, attending the University of Massachusetts, learning about diverse cultures and how race should not be a barrier. I was taking classes such as "Man and Woman in Literature," "Social Diversity in Education" and African American history to learn about other people and their cultures, in order to learn more about me.

The first couple of semesters I would call my parents every day to tell them what I have learned, and to tell them about my accomplishments. I liked to hear their approval. It felt good to please them since they have given me so much my entire life.

But when I heard that my father was going to ignore my sister unless she stopped seeing Gene, everything changed. I already knew that my parents weren't perfect but I didn't know they were absolutely opposed to inter-racial relationships in our family, at least. I could not comprehend why my parents felt this way. I just couldn't "see it." But they "saw it," along with other problems down the road.

To me, he was adorable Gene; to my sister, he was the man she loved; to my parents, he was a name with colored skin.

Geri Sahn

I told my sister that whatever she decided, either being with Gene or respecting my parents' wishes, I would stand by her side, no matter what.

That night the three of us went out together, I felt like I was in a different world. We walked through the Village laughing, joking around. I looked at them thinking, "I hope they get married soon so they could have children and I can be an aunt."

Yet on the train ride home back to New Jersey, everything changed. My sister told me she was so happy that I got along with Gene. The only thing I could say was, "How could I not?"

But we both knew why she was really crying. We both knew that it could never happen, at least for now. And if she stayed with Gene, she couldn't bring him over for the holidays. It's not just our parents, it's the entire family. I remember Robin said, "What would Grandma say?"

It's not an easy decision to pick between your family and the person you love. Yes, people should lead their own lives and not the lives their parents want them to have. Your decision to do what you want is not an issue of what is right or what is wrong according to the morals of other people.

"It's your life," is not an easy phrase to live by, but as we become adults, taking responsibility for our own decisions is something we are going to have to do.

Geri Sahn is a Collegian staff member.

Letters to the Editor

Campus fair sells students out

To the editor:

Please, UMass, stop letting the middle of your campus be a big, sleazy commercial. I often feel I'm getting a bargain basement education here; I don't want to be sold anything else.

Coming to campus, my eyes and head ache from the corporate messages that are jackhammered into me daily from all directions. Ideas at school are pure, unfettered by the consumerism pushed on me almost everywhere I go. So I don't like to see obnoxious commercial circuses on campus. Do they think I don't know that they're trying to shove their magazines, candy and new cars down my throat?

What really annoys me is the role that the University plays in this soft sell-out. Who allows these corporate freak shows to pitch their tents by the duck pond? In the Campus Center they have been trying to push UMass credit cards that have pictures of the Chapel on them. All the better to buy my magazine subscriptions, candy and new car with. Right?

Dwayne Hoover
Amherst

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. Please type your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

AND NOW IN THE NAME OF JOHN ROGER, EMBODIMENT OF MYSTICAL TRAVELER, CONSCIOUSNESS...
YOU KNOW, THERE'S SOMETHING VERY FAMILIAR ABOUT ARIANNA JOHN
I THEE BAPTIZE SAMANTHA-ROGER MOONWALK!
WELL, SHE'S MARRIED TO ROY-MICHAEL HUFFINGTON JR., THE GUY WHO'S RUNNING FOR SENATE!
AIEE! MOMMY! SHE GOT ME ALL WET!
HE'S RIGHT OVER THERE... MINISTER?
HUFFINGTON'S MARRIED TO A CULT
FLY, MY LITTLE MYSTICAL TRAVELER, FLY!
YOU FLY! IT'S MY HOUSE!
IT'S GETTING TOO WEIRD TO BE A CONSERVATIVE
GBTrudeau

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Thursday October 6, 1994

Weekend Edition • Volume CIV Issue 18

TV this week: hits & misses

By Tracy Gavel
Collegian Correspondent

I watched Tracey Gold wither away before my very eyes on the made-for-television movie For the Love of Nancy She was good, but William Devane (from "Knots Landing") was woefully miscast as her slightly distressed dad. I say only "slightly" distressed because throughout the whole picture Devane seemed to be doing a reprise of his sarcastic, sinister nighttime soap character Greg Sumner. He says all the right lines about love and therapy and everything, but I kept expecting him to pull a shrewd double-cross on everybody, or something.

One of the old kids from "Saved by the Bell" was in the movie too — that blond guy, Mark-Paul Something. He looked glad to be working.

Speaking of night time soap operas, I managed to see "Melrose Place" for the very first time last week. Fortunately, I was with a couple of friends who were able to fill me in on the goings-on — like who had amnesia, why so-and-so was in the insane asylum, and so on. I couldn't have done it without them. Anyway, I decided "Melrose Place" is one of those shows that really is best appreciated within a group setting so everyone can laugh at Kathy Ireland's acting together.

The whole "Melrose" experience brought me back to my junior high days, when I used to watch "Dallas" and "Falcon Crest" religiously on Friday nights. That Larry Hagman and Jane Wyman — they're the greatest. Speaking of which, one of the best late-night infomercials is for the "Gravity Edge" exercise machine, starring none other than the muscular former "Falcon Crest" star Lorenzo Lamas. See, it's all about this dirt-bike racer who's got . . . potential. And with the help of the "Gravity

Turn to TV, page 6

R.E.M. monsters of POP

BY MATT AUDETTE
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Throughout rock n' roll history, dating as far back as its origins in the 1950s, there has always been a select few bands that somehow just click.

There seems to be some sort of underlying chemistry that makes all the aspects of a band's abilities as artists flow seamlessly, from songwriting to musical skill. The Rolling Stones had it. The Beatles were the undisputed masters of it. Less famous bands such as The Byrds and The Kinks had flashing moments of it — faulting as they headed on into the Seventies.

In the last two decades, many would argue that there has been a lack of musical talent worthy enough to be lumped in the same category as the aforementioned legends. Skeptics would rather turn an unknowing eye away from the current music trends since it is easier to look back to past generation's heroes/anti-heroes than trying to establish one's own.

So, if every generation appears to have at least one or more identify rock bands to signify their moment in the sun, who do we have to represent us now?

While the answer may seem baffling at first, in reality it is quite obvious: There really is no other defining band for our generation than R.E.M.

From their humble origins in 1981, when they played their first gig in an abandoned church in the college-mecca Athens, Georgia, it seemed unlikely that this odd concoction of introverted college students would ever amount to more than a few shows and some free beer.

But unbeknownst to the music world (who at the time was more infatuated with the white-bred soul of Hall & Oates and haircut fluff of Duran Duran) this band had all the right elements to make everything click: a charismatic and eccentric singer, an unsure yet steady guitarist and a no-frills rhythm section. From the beginning, there was almost a perfect blend of artiness and traditional rock formula, making the group stand out, but yet not enough to alienate.

While most of the attention given to R.E.M. is due in part to impeccable songwriting, their greatest musical asset may be their ability to change and continually reinvent themselves throughout their thirteen year career. Even U2, the most commonly associated kin to R.E.M. (they both came of age in the Eighties) has made a musical transition from "saviors of the earth" to some sort of bogus ironic statement on our culture. But while U2's transition has been a 180-degree about-face, R.E.M. has tastefully dabbled in different genres, always offering a challenge while consistently remaining true to themselves.

Now with the release of their ninth album, Monster, R.E.M. has once again thrown a curve ball to their unsuspecting audience by turning up the volume to previously unheard-of levels. So how did this one-time king of the "underground" rise up and single-handedly become one of today's most successful and respected rock n' roll bands? The journey is most interesting.

So how did this one-time king of the "underground" rise up and single-handedly become one of today's most successful and respected rock n' roll bands? The journey is most interesting.

The late Kurt Cobain was once asked in an interview: If he could model his band's career after any one, who would it be? It only took him a moment before he eagerly responded with R.E.M. Cobain explained how he wished he could find the balance between commercial success and artistic integrity that they so successfully achieved.

Seem surprising? Not really. If you look back to the band's beginnings and trace through their history, it is obviously apparent in the route the band has followed. It's safe to say that, like most things, the band has been undergoing a sort of maturing process that has slowly developed throughout each of their nine releases.

When the band first released their debut, Murmur, in 1983 it was a blast of fresh air into the more "hardcore" underground music scene. While they did borrow some aspects from their self-proclaimed heroes Pylon, The Velvet Underground and Patti Smith, their sound definitely transcended the boundaries of what was at that time available.

Mysteriously shrouded in obscurity, the band made a name for themselves by using cryptic cover art and having lead singer Michael Stipe singing mumbled lyrics that were incomprehensible in meaning when they were comprehensible at all. By straying away from "punk" stereotypes they managed to make probably the most punk album released during that time, influencing thousands of college art majors to pick up a guitar and jangle away.

By the time of Reckoning, their sophomore effort released in 1984, it was clear that these guys were no "one album wonders." Reckoning still walked in the footprints of Murmur but nurtured a more rootsy feel. Obviously these guys were not afraid to inject a dose of southern charm into the opaque mix — something that has permeated their music ever since.

While early genius is common with most of rock n' roll's greatest bands, there seems to be an inevitable dark period which looms over each's career. Throughout the mid-Eighties, R.E.M. withdrew even further from accessibility by creating Fables of The Reconstruction, a moody album that almost all but abandoned the pop structures they had previously toyed around with.

Critics were quick to employ the "build them up, smash them down" technique in reference to the new direction the band was taking. While it is true that the songs relied on a more down-beat style, there was a beauty that radiated from the darkness of the songs. This marked another turning point for the band.

By 1986, it was clear a new chapter was about to begin. After becoming the undisputed kings of alternative music, it was clear R.E.M. was going to shoot for a broader audience. The band began musically "the-idea of a bigger "rock" sound. The result, Life's Rich Pageant, was as far as the band had previously gone from the beaten track.

Fuller drum sounds and heavier guitars backed Stipe's now clearly audible voice. For the first time fans got a true taste of what he was singing about, although it was clear that he was not going to give a hint as to what the meaning was. The energy that runs through the record was in complete opposition to the gloomy folkiness of Fables. The band had finally made its "rock" record.

It was during this time that the first hints of the band's ability to change without compromise finally surfaced. In the past when a once-hailed underground band decidedly took a turn for the middle of the road, it was accompanied by shouts of "sell out." For R.E.M., this was, surprisingly, not the case. The band managed to juggle a growing mainstream tendency with the earlier sound they originated. Surely there were some sacrifices which would inevitably haunt them later, but, nevertheless, the transition was a smooth one.

By the time Document was released in 1987, it was obvious that the band had established their seat in the "mainstream rock band" category. Ironically, the song that catapulted them into the big time may actually be dismissed as one of their more frivolous ones. "The One I Love," written as a scathing tell-off, almost wasn't even put on the album, yet it went on to mislead thousands of people worldwide.

While they had touched on it before, Document seemed to wrestle with a more political vibe than had been heard on any of their previous releases. Songs such as "Disturbance At The Heron House" and "Exhuming McCarthy" were political in tone, but hard to pin-point due to Stipe's Indirect delivery and tendency to try to fabricate false meanings for a topic-hungry press.

After a much ballyhooed switch from their label I.R.S. (which they had recorded on since Murmur) to the corporate machine Warner. Bros., R.E.M. released Green. With its hip environmental message and the band's first major arena tour backing it up, it was apparent that this quartet was going to be rock stars like no other.

Amazingly, the album itself flew all over the R.E.M. stylistic map. From up-tempo rockers to delicate folky numbers, Green went from being the prophesied major-label disappointment to the band's most comprehensive piece of work, effectively displaying the range of the band's style and talent like no other album had.

As with any lead singer in a ground-breaking band, it didn't take long before fans began to look at Stipe as some sort of leader. Something about his boyish charm and nerdy mannerisms made fans relate to him on a more personal level. While other rock stars seemed larger than life, almost untouchable by everyday standards, Stipe represented what most people saw in themselves: a shy loner who was more the quiet boy in the back of the class then an MTV icon. Probably before he realized what had happened Stipe was thrust into the media spotlight, making him a very embarrassed-looking spokesperson for a gen-

Turn to R.E.M., page 11

SHORT CUTS

Edited by Tara MK Connelly

Best of weekend events

Thursday

Terrence Wilson, piano concert, Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m.

Alastair Moock, folksinger, Black Sheep Cafe, 8 p.m.

Vampyre, directed by Carl Dryer, 227 Herter Hall, 7:30 p.m.

David Lindley with Hannah Nasser, world music, Iron Horse. 7 p.m. $14.50 advance.

Maggie Estep, Pearl Street, 9 p.m. 18+.

Club XII, Oct. 6 to 23, play, Coyote Theater, Boston. For tickets and information call (617) 695-0659.

Friday

Ed Vadas Band, blues, Coolidge Park Cafe, Northampton. 7:30 p.m. Free!

Smith College Art Gallery, Noontime Talk, 12:15 p.m.

Ed Wood opens in select theaters with actor Johnny Depp, directed by Tim Burton.

Saturday

Maple Ridge, bluegrass band, Black Sheep Cafe, 8 to 11 p.m.

"Two Hands: a Dialogue Between Mother & Daughter," an exhibit opening at the Burnett Gallery at the Jones Library in Amherst. For more information call 256–1487.

Sunday

Savatage & Stuttering John, Pearl Street, 8 p.m. All ages!

Auditions for musical, Godspell, Student Union Ballroom, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sponsored by the UMass Theatre Guild.

Quote of Note

"It's interesting that waiting for someone to urinate in a public facility doesn't bother them."

—Comedienne and actress Rosie O'Donnell, on people who follow her into a bathroom waiting for an autograph.

People and Pop Culture in the News

Many apologies to the readers of last week's section who realized that Prince Edward didn't marry Fergie — in fact it was Prince Andrew. Edward is the Thespian of the family. Mea culpa.

Let's bow our heads in silence for a minute as we mourn the passing of supermom, Harriet Nelson. She passed away at age 85, outliving Ozzie by 20 years and TV son Ricky by almost a decade.

Heading to Boston this weekend? The Boston International Film Festival will be housed at the Bayside Expo Center Oct. 7 to 10.

Sad news for Trekkies, the movie Generations might not be released until the end of November. Dissention about the set caused director David Carson to chuck it all and rebuild the entire set again.

Retiring in January is cartoonist Gary Larson, creator of "The Far Side." His wackiness will surely be missed, but never fear — his coffee mugs, calendars and greeting cards will continue to live on.

John Mellencamp, who cancelled his concert in August, revealed that he had a mild heart attack. Hey, maybe it was because he smoked 80 cigarettes a day and had a cholesterol level over 300. His "wild nights" are over though, now he smokes four butts, is into meditation, diets, and exercises. . . can an exercise video be far behind?

Confused, puzzled or mystified by the whole O.J. Simpson case? Well, those clever writers at People Weekly magazine just came out with "The Complete Guide to The Trial of O. J. Simpson." Bloody socks and all!

Courtney Love has a new best friend, Drew Barrymore. You'll be happy to know her mad passionate marriage to bar owner Jeremy Thomas is over. So much for that everlasting love thing.

It's official, the new 007 will be Pierce Brosnan. Quite a step up from his role in Mrs. Doubtfire.

Ivana Trump makes the news again after announcing her engagement to three-year companion Riccardo Mazzucchelli.

Does it pay to declare bankruptcy? Not if you're Kim Basinger. She shelled out $8.1 million to Main Line Studios for backing out of an agreement to star in Boxing Helena to do quality movies like the Real McCoy and The Getaway instead. Smart move, you may have blemished your career with Helena (gasp!).

Duran Duran singer Simon Le Bon is once again a father. His wife, Yasmin (Victoria Secret model), gave birth to a healthy girl.

John Bobbitt just doesn't know when to quit. He was convicted in a Las Vegas municipal court for beating ex-fiancee Kristina Elliot, and sentenced to 30 days in jail but was released pending appeal. Hopefully, with his new adult film career, Bobbitt will be able to meet someone who truly loves him for all his parts.

Material in this section has been compiled by wire services and other periodicals.

Editors' Cuts

Music — Weird Al

For all of you wacky folks who just can't seem to get enough of the guru of pop parody, "Weird Al" Yankovic is set to release a box set of his most recognized work.

The four CD box set, entitled Permanent Record, will include many of the spoofs that have made Yankovic a household name.

The collection will also contain a 64–page color booklet, complete with about 200 pictures and liner notes penned by the king of wackiness and the man who gave Al his big break, Dr. Demento.

Some of the many "Weird Al" favorites featured in the retrospective include "Like A Surgeon," "Smells Like Nirvana," and his two spoofs of Michael Jackson songs, "Eat It" and "Fat."

These tunes will accompany Al's various originals and, of course, his trademark polka medleys to make this the definitive "Weird Al" collection.

—Mike MacLean

Video — Jurassic Park

The raptor and T–Rex live again in the long–awaited video release of Steven Spielberg's 1993 box–office champ Jurassic Park. Still packing discount theaters as recently as this summer, Park has a reduced sell–through price, trying to gain the slot as the all–time best selling video, presently held by Disney's Aladdin.

Despite the hype, Spielberg did deliver plenty of suspenseful jolts and awe–inspiring special effects, even though it's wrapped around a thin, unsatisfying script and some weak characterizations. It's a credit to Spielberg's talent that he can keep the plates spinning at such a furious pace that no one seems to notice. . . or care. It's also interesting to note that just a few months later, Spielberg released Schindler's List (in fact, he was editing Park via satellite while filming List in Poland).

Jurassic Park is available in a regular edition and a wide–screen letterbox version.

—Jon Lupo

Concert — World Music

Tonight at 7 p.m. at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton, the Valley will get to sample a slice of the rapidly growing genre of world music.

Arrested Development and Narasat Ali Khan (who helped add mystical flavor to Peter Gabriel's album So) have opened up the "western world" to exotic chants and crooning. David Lindley takes this one step further.

Lindley grew up around L. A. and the constantly metamorphosing music community there. He was exposed to every form of music. Lindley began to notice that a lot of the music he was drawn too had a common thread; he chose to follow that thread rather than let it limit him.

His quest has led him to places like Jamaica, Uzbekistan and Kazakhstan. His influences run the gamut from James Taylor to Emmylou Harris. This wide range of influences and tastes make Lindley a must see.

—Tara MK Connelly

■ TV

continued from page 5

Edge" and a groovy blonde chick, he's gonna win the big pro–class race! You just can't help rooting for him, over and over and over again.

Just to inform you eager Lorenzo Lamas fans, these days he has a pretty good syndicated show called "Renegade" about a fugitive who rides a motorcycle cross–country and works as a bounty hunter when he's not evading the cops. It's mindless fun, and I personally find it much cooler than "Acapulco Heat."

The best new show I saw this week was probably the CBS sitcom "Blue Skies." It's not a laugh riot but the characters are sort of lively and I'm willing to give it a chance.

At the other end of the spectrum, NBC gives us another reason not to watch television on Saturday nights with the sitcom "Something Wilder." I'm happy Gene Wilder found a job but seeing him even in mild sexual situations makes me a bit queasy. First of all, he's a bit old and crumbled– looking for that kind of stuff. Secondly, he's Willy Wonka, for crying out loud! And if there's one thing I had hoped never to see in prime time, it was Willy Wonka's bony, pale legs all over some actress. Ugh. Forget the trendy shorts, Gene. Pants would be an excellent idea from now on, Gene.

I'm really starting to get annoyed that my two favorite characters on "The Simpsons," Mr. Burns and Smithers, have yet to make an appearance this season. If this goes on much longer I'll have to start writing irate letters to the Fox Network, inquiring as to whether America's favorite cartoon couple have left television for the bright lights of Hollywood. Hey, if they could make a picture based on "Saturday Night Live's" Pat character...

Speaking of departing for greener pastures, I heard that Rob Morrow will be leaving CBS' "Northern Exposure" to (get this) pursue a film career. Can somebody please tell me what's wrong with these television actors who think they can just quit their jobs one minute and end up acting opposite Meryl Streep the next.

I have a theory: All these star–struck actors sit around thinking, "Hey, Tom Hanks started out on that 'Bosom Buddies' show, and he even had to dress up like a woman to get that job — so he had it much worse than I do. And now he gets to be a big shot in the movies, so why can't I?"

Sorry, Rob, but it doesn't usually work out that way. If you don't believe me just ask actor Jimmy Smits, who abandoned a lead role on "L.A. Law" a number of years ago for a shot at films. He finally got a major acting job this year — replacing David Caruso on "NYPD Blue." How's that for irony, eh?

AUDITIONS

FOR THE UMASS THEATRE GUILD'S PRODUCTION OF STEPHEN SCHWARTZ'S

GODSPELL

Thursday Oct. 6th 7 p.m.
Friday Oct. 7th 7 p.m.
Saturday Oct. 8th 11 a.m.
(Only one session needs to be attended!)
Callbacks: Oct. 10th 12 p.m.

For more information:
Come to the Guild Office, rm 423A in the Student Union
or
Call the Guild Office at 545-0415 for more details

READING BY ABBY
PALM TAROT & ESP READING
All readings Confidential and Results Guaranteed
HOURS 9 A.M. To 9 P.M.
210 Russell Street Route 9 Hadley, MA 01035
(413) 586-6711
Walk-ins are Welcome

10 year Birthday
20% off Storewide
Sale Oct. 7-10
Amherst Northampton
J•RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN

THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Person Meets the Future

CO-OPS COMING TO YOU!

Don't miss the companies that will be interviewing at the UMass Career Center for spring Co-op positions

Oct. 14th: Mass Department of Revenue Majors: SOM, ACCTG

Oct. 20th: & Nov. 9th Monsanto Co. Majors: EE, CSE, COINS, MATH, PHYSICS

Nov. 2nd: IBM Endicott Majors: SOM, FOMGT, ACCTG, ECON

Nov. 9th: Pratt & Whitney Majors: ME, IE, CSE, COINS

Nov. 18th: IBM Credit Corporation Majors: SOM, ACCTG, FINANCE, ECON

Dec. 2nd: CIGNA Majors: MATH/STATS

Check out more spring and summer co-op listings at the UMass Career Center/ Mather Building

Such as....

Arts and Sciences
Boston Globe
Newsweek

Natural Sciences
Uniroyal Chemical
Jackson Laboratory

Food and Natural Resources
Westvaco Forest Research

Call the Field Experience Office at 545-6265 to sign up!

Verbal assault to strike the Valley

Maggie Estep to bring spoken word performance to Pearl Street

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

Is spoken word the new punk rock? Well, that may be pushing it a little too far, but lately the art form does seem to be undergoing a sort of revival.

Aspiring poets/performers like post–punk legend Henry Rollins, the street–wise Reg E. Gaines, and King Missile frontman John S. Hall all seem to be leading the way for this new form of expression.

While all these artists have been making a name for themselves within the media, it has been acid–tongued queen Maggie Estep who has been causing the most racket.

Estep, who will bring her "ranting"–style poetry to Pearl Street tonight, has managed to ditch the New York coffee houses and unleash her work on an unsuspecting public. Thanks go partly to MTV, which aired two 30–second segments of Estep's stand–up poetry, featured her in their Unplugged series, and then finally made her part of the bill on their Free Your Mind spoken word tour.

After performances at this summer's Lollapalooza festival, and even an appearance at the highly–toted Woodstock '94 festival, Estep is finally settling down and hitting the smaller, more personal venues.

Estep is touring in support of her debut album No More Mister Nice Girl, a sometimes hilarious, sometimes biting commentary on a variety of social and personal issues. Song titles such as "The Stupid Jerk That I'm Obsessed With" and "Hey Baby," a harsh response to men's cat–calling, it is clear exactly what Estep's agenda is. The album is being released on Nu'Yo–Imago Records, a new label totally devoted to the spoken word genre.

Born in 1986 in New Jersey, Estep spent her teenage years denouncing a growing ballet career, flirting with punk rock and go–go dancing before landing with a drug habit. It was during this time Estep began to take up an interest in writing fiction.

It was soon after Estep packed up her bags and headed for Boulder, Colo., where she enrolled in the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poets (yes, this place really exists) where she took a class taught by the godfather of the beatnik movement, William S. Burroughs. She later attained a bachelor's degree at Empire State College in Manhattan.

"The very first reading I did was in Boulder at this cafe somebody dragged me to," Estep told The New York Times. "That was where I really started learning how to write. I could just tell what hit people and what didn't."

By the time she came back to New York in 1988, the spoken word/poetry scene was in full swing. Immediately getting caught up in the hoopla, Estep began entering poetry "slams" and competitions, often coming up a winner. Her big break didn't come until Estep was performing one night and was discovered by MTV talent scouts, who were on the lookout for budding performers.

Accompanied by her back up band I Love Everybody, Estep is known for her highly energetic live performances, where she shouts her verse and flails about the stage like a madwoman. If nothing else, Estep gives the art of spoken word a manic intensity that is rarely seen.

When she hits the Pearl Street stage Estep is sure to be in her usual rare form, making this one of the most offbeat shows to hit the Valley in quite some time.

Maggie Estep will raise the roof at Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton tonight. The show is 18+. The doors open at 9 p.m.

COURTESY FULL CYCLE MANAGEMENT
Spoken word artist Maggie Estep

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN
Author Batya Weinbaum shared stories last night about real life, sexuality and coming out from her book, The Island of Floating Women.

Short stories portray real life & sexuality

By Emily Marino
Collegian Staff

From crystal ladies to coming out, author Batya Weinbaum bombarded her audience in the Campus Center with vivid, often humorous images of sexuality and real life last night at the reading of her book, The Island of Floating Women.

Weinbaum's book is a collection of 13 short stories. A handful of them voice a lesbian perspective while the others deal with issues occurring before and after coming out.

"Every single moment in it was written from a real sincerity level," said Weinbaum, a professor teaching English courses at the University of Massachusetts through the Department of Continuing Education.

The first short story that Weinbaum read was called "Coming Out," a piece with poetic rhythm that tells the tale of one woman's experience coming out as a lesbian.

The story is a flurry of images, constituting sub–stories in verse. The scenes Weinbaum paints with words are of a passionless heterosexual relationship with a man named Joe. Incidents of talking herself out of her desire for women that she encounters every day leaves the narrator feeling only half alive. Finally, she packs up and moves to the Midwest to live a more free life as a lesbian.

Weinbaum said that "Coming Out" is a "very exaggerated experience" which resembles her own struggle to come out. She recalled days before proclaiming herself a lesbian.

"I would feel totally underwater and drugged," she told the audience, and said that writing surrealistic poetry (from which the story is adapted) was the only thing keeping her alive. The result is an enchanting collection of images that tell a touching story.

In the second of Weinbaum's stories, "Crystal Lady: The Education of a Healer," the author's stream–of–consciousness narrative tells the story of a Jewish social worker turned Buddhist crystal healer. The main character is based on the life of a self–proclaimed "shopping bag person" named Janis living in San Francisco in the 1960s.

Weinbaum's story is a whirlwind of release and self–discovery that ends when the crystal lady commits suicide by jumping off of a bridge. Rather than projecting her as a lost soul, Weinbaum distinguishes the healer as a free spirit.

"She was like a social worker of the street," Weinbaum said of Janis, who died in 1992. The Island of Floating Women is dedicated to Janis, "the real cosmic lady" according to Weinbaum.

The final, yet unpublished story was called "Rebreasting." This satiric tale is told from the perspective of Weinbaum's almost 2–year–old daughter, Ola. Through Ola's eyes we see her mother's dream to build a "rebreasting center," a place where university–goers can once again don diapers and experience breast feeding via plastic models, with their choice of beer, rum or chocolate.

With humorous political jabs at everyone from Hillary Clinton to UMass professors, Weinbaum's story comically embodies her legitimate desire to provide a place for infantile regression in the name of relaxation.

The Island of Floating Women is available at Food For Thought Books.

Accepting writing submissions

The Collegian is now accepting submissions for a new fiction and prose column, "A&L Fiction." We are looking for thoughful, intelligent, intriguing short fiction of 75 to 300 lines in length. Those interested may send works c/o Dave Polanzak, Collegian Arts & Living, 113 Campus Center, UMass. For more information, please call Dave at 546–0082 or Jon at 545–1361.

Pearl Street
WEDNESDAY
GAY NIGHT
MUSIC BY SPIN INC.
• Thursday •
18+ DANCE PARTY
HOSTED BY WHMP'S NICK DANGER
The Area's Biggest Dance Party
Music by Spin Inc.
Downstairs 18&/
Underground at Pearl Street
INSOMNIA
Alternative Dance Music
• Friday •
RETRO NIGHT
Dance Music From the Late 70s & early 80s with DJ Dennis
9:00pm-1:00pm
Free Admission With This Ad
Duran Duran, Wham!, Missing Persons, Bs'52, James, Blondie, Human League, Funkadelic
• Saturday •
TOP 40 DANCE PARTY WITH DJ LANCE
SATURDAY NIGHT DINNER & DANCE PROMOTION
Dine anywhere in Northampton on Saturday night, bring your receipt and receive free admission to the Dance Club
• Sunday - Oct. 9 •
UNDER 21 DANCE PARTY
8:00 PM - 11:30 pm
LIVE MUSIC
Thur., Oct. 6 - 9:00pm /18+/
Club Insomnia Presents...
MAGGIE ESTEP
Pirate Jenny
Sat., Oct. 8 - 8:30 pm
BLUES TIME
w/Magic Dick & Jay Geils
Sun., Oct. 9 - 7:30 pm /All Ages/
SAVATAGE
Slow Poke
Exhibit A/Visionary
Tue., Oct. 11 - 8:00 pm /18+/
DAVE MATTHEWS BAND
From Good Homes
Thur., Oct. 13 - 7:00 pm /18+/
LUCIOUS JACKSON
Ben Harper
Fri., Oct. 14 - 9:00 pm /18+/
THE LUNACHICKS
Angry Johnny & The Killbillies
Sons of The Corporate Dog
• Festival Louisiana •
Sun., Oct. 16 - 8:00 pm /18+/
THE RADIATORS
Synoesthesia
Mon., Oct. 17 - 8:00 pm
BUCKWHEAT ZYDECO
Coming ...
10/19 SLAVOOVIE /18+/ W/ THE TOASTERS
10/21 MAX CREVE /18+/
10/22 JOHN CAFFERTY & The Beaver Brown Band
10/23 DEE-LITE /18+/
10/25 ROKO TAYLOR
10/27 PRIVATE /18+/
10/31 BLAUSOLIER
11/12 PHYSICAL GRAFFITI
11/13 THE PROCLAIMERS
11/15 G. LOVE & SPECIAL SAUCE /18+/
All ages tickets available at the Northampton Box Office. For the Record in Amherst, Mystic Records and Tower Records in Manchester, CT.
10 Pearl Street Northampton (413) 584-0610

The Top "10" Reasons Why You Should Celebrate J•Rich's 10th Birthday:
1. Everything in the store is 20% off.
2. We won't make you wear a silly party hat!
3. Everything in the store is 20% off.
4. What else are you going to do, watch baseball?
5. Everything in the store is 20% off.
6. You won't have to stay up 'til 11:30 p.m. for Dave.
7. Everything in the store is 20% off.
8. It beats raking leaves!
9. Everything in the store is 20% off.
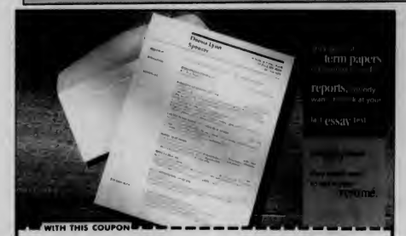
10. Because you deserve the best!
Sale is on for 4 Days Only! Friday-Monday, Oct. 7-10
191 N. Pleasant St Amherst 253-2013
J•RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN
22 Masonic St. Northampton 586-6336
Open 7 Days • Thursday nites in Northampton



WITH THIS COUPON
$29.95 professional resumé package
Bring this coupon into the Kinko's listed and receive a $29.95 Professional Resumé Package includes one page typeset and proofed to you on disk, 25 copies on fine stationery, 25 matching blank sheets (for cover letters), and 25 #10 envelopes. One coupon per customer. Not valid with other offers. Coupon good through November 15, 1994
kinko's the copy center
AMHERST: 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2543 Open 24 Hours
NORTHAMPTON: 34 Bridge St., 585-5000 (Across from the Post Office) HOURS: 6am to 12 midnight

Commander Johnny to Space Command
Hi. Yeah, it's me. Hmm, can you bring me and Lenny some Rollies and soda to the taxi? Oh, and a beer. Merci Beaky Extraordinaire!!!

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE FRIDAY, OCT. 21
GRANTS FOR:
• Visual Art & Design
• Literature, Theater, Performance Art
• Film & Video
• Music
•Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance & information:
Student Activities Office
or
the Arts Council
101 Hasbrouck
545-0202

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m. Tel: 549-2629
Scott's, Where Our Customers Are Special, So We Make Our Prices $pecial!
NATURAL LIGHT 24-12oz Cans $8.79 +dep
GENUINE DRAFT & G.D. LIGHT 24-12oz Bar Bottles $10.99 +dep
BUD "ICE", BUD, BUD LIGHT 1/2 Kegs $39.99
Captain Morgan Spiced Rum 1.75l $15.99 Mail in Rebate -$3.00 Final Cost $12.00
ZHENKA VODKA 1.75l $8.99 Mail in Rebate -$2.00 Final Cost $6.99
GILBEY'S GIN 1.75l $11.99 Mail in Rebate -$3.00 Final Cost $8.99
BUD DRY 24-12oz Cans $10.99 +dep
AMERICAN 24-12oz Cans $7.29 +dep
We Want To Be Your Favorite Liquor Store !
Tele-Check for your personal check
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
We now have all Mass Lottery games

'Burton's X-Mas' a new video release

By Dolores Barclay
Associated Press

New releases this week in home video:

Tim Burton's The Nightmare Before Christmas (Touchstone. $20. Rated PG)

Tim Burton (Batman) takes us to a cheerless but magical burg called Halloweentown in this delightfully original and extraordinarily entertaining work.

What a special animated treat this musical fantasy is for young and old alike. It is an artistic gem from Walt Disney that should become a seasonal classic just like The Legend of Sleepy Hollow.

It is an exceptional marriage of show music with operatic overlayers, and some brilliant stop-motion animation and special effects. Sets are three- dimensional; some animation is that glorious frame-by-frame technique Disney artists long have employed.

Our hero in this holiday fable is Jack Skellington, the Pumpkin King, who directs the town in its annual scare fest of ghoulish delights for Halloween. This time is like every other time: another successful year of scary people out of their wits.

But the praise doesn't sit well with the long and boney Jack. He's tired of being the master of fright. He feels an emptiness and longs for something else he just can't seem to identify.

There's plenty of action and one or two cliffhangers and a upbeat ending that will warm even the stingiest of hearts. Again, another parental warning: the movie might be too scary for children four and under.

The Wedding Banquet (FoxVideo. Priced for rental market. Rated R)

What a wonderful, wonderful gem from 38-year-old Ang Lee. Produced for about $1 million, The Wedding

Turn to VIDEO, page 10

Actor Paul Scofield finds answers in Quiz Show

By Matt Wolf
Associated Press

LONDON — Paul Scofield won an Academy Award for playing Sir Thomas More and was acclaimed as the greatest Lear of his generation. Only now, at age 72, has he made his Hollywood debut.

"It's lovely for me, absolutely lovely. I'm thrilled it seems to be doing well," he said of Quiz Show. Robert Redford's acclaimed new film about a real-life scandal in the TV game-show industry in the late 1950s.

Scofield traveled to London from his Sussex home one recent morning to discuss his career over coffee at Brown's Hotel, the quietly elegant stomping ground — decades ago — of Cecil Rhodes and Rudyard Kipling.

He appeared in autumnal browns and tweeds, a wavy mane of gray hair framing warm eyes. His honeyed rumble of a voice rolled through the lounge as he reflected on his career in a rare interview.

To many, that career has been as elusive as the actor himself. He defined Lear for the 1960s and yet surprised fans in 1989 by making a rare return to the stage in Exclusive, a down-market play by pulp novelist Jeffrey Archer.

Twice, he resisted the blandishments of Hollywood, preferring domestic life with his wife, the actress Joy Parker.

His performance as Salieri in Peter Shaffer's Amadeus seared London in 1979, but he turned down the same play on Broadway, despite a sweetened deal requiring no more than four performances a week.

Accordingly, it's no surprise that when Quiz Show colleagues gather across the Atlantic for one of the buzziest premieres of the fall, Scofield will be far from the media — in northern Scotland, visiting his daughter.

"What is done is done," he said of his career, "and there's always tomorrow."

"I don't have any retrospective view. I just know the things I've enjoyed — the things that have been exciting to do and have been satisfying — and I'm very grateful for them."

COURTESY BARRY WETCH

Paul Scofield (left) stars as Mark Van Doren, the father of game show contestant Charles Van Doren (Ralph Fiennes) in Robert Redford's Quiz Show.

Scofield finds a continued pleasure in acting in all its forms, whether on radio for the BBC, on television in adaptations of "Anna Karenina" or in small-scale, little-seen films such as Utz (1992).

"It just simply is no good doing something your heart is not in, that's all," he said.

"I've often found the really interesting scripts were smaller films. I didn't choose them because they were smaller. I wouldn't have minded being paid a bit more — but I did them because they interested me so much."

With Quiz Show, Scofield took pleasure in playing "a contemporary man after so many dear old things": the

Turn to QUIZ SHOW, page 10

Noontime talks at Smith museum make for interesting lunch

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

The Smith College Museum of Art is hosting a noontime series of talk on various exhibits to be shown in the gallery throughout the year. The 20-minute talks will be made by faculty, museum staff, students and others on the objects in the collections shown.

The first Noontime Gallery Talk will be held Oct. 7 at 12:15 p.m. Susan Heidman, artist and associate professor of art at Smith College, will present her talk, "Rustling of Molecules: Meditations on Mondrian's Chrysanthemum Drawings."

Mondrians's drawings are taken from direct observations of chrysanthemums. The drawings are can be linked to certain Buddhist principals. They are like a construction of the space between the forms of forms and much like nature, they breathe and flutter.

The schedule for the rest of the year's series go as follows:

Nov. 4: "Edwin Romanzo Elmer's Mourning Pictures, and Other Works," presented by Helen Hall, coordinator of the Mellon Project, Smith College Museum of Art.

Dec. 2: "Childe Hassam's Cab Stand at Night," presented by Nancy Noble, master of arts degree candidate in art history, University of Massachusetts at Amherst and graduate intern in museum education, Smith College Museum of Art.

From October through December the museum's hours for the main galleries are Tuesday and Friday, 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., and noon to 8 p.m. Thursday. The Print room is open Tuesday through Friday, 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., Thursday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and also by appointment.

The Northampton Center For the Arts and John Peters Present
THE SAINTS
TUES., NOV. 8 - 7:30 PM
$14.50 Advance General Admission
John M. Greene Hall, Smith College, Northampton
Advance tickets available at The Northampton Box Office, Strawberries Record Stores, For The Record in Amherst, Ahuul Music in Greenfield, and at Tix Unlimited in the U. Mass Campus Center. To charge by phone call 586-8686 or 1(800) TIX-TICK
Mt. Holyoke College and John Peters Present
ANI DIFRANCO
THURS., NOV. 3 - 8 PM
$12.00 Advance
General Admission
Chapin Hall,
Mt. Holyoke College
S. Hadley, MA
Advance tickets available at The Northampton Box Office, Strawberries Record Stores, For The Record in Amherst, Ahuul Music in Greenfield, and at Tix Unlimited in the U. Mass Campus Center. To charge by phone call 586-8686 or 1(800) TIX-TICK

HELGATS
JOIN THE PACK
RIDE WITH DEATH
THE COLLEGIAN
The wind and grease in your hair the grit in your teeth the rattle of trees. Scaring all your pal. The LLEYNCH

Reach for the Power
TEACH
RECRUITING NEW TEACHERS, INC.
Ad Council
A Public Service of The Publication
Reach for the Power
TEACH
RECRUITING NEW TEACHERS, INC.

BEE BOP
If you've got a good vibe you can snap your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum.
Mass Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

TOTAL FITNESS
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES • TREADMILLS • LIFESTEPS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • FREE WEIGHTS • NORDIC TRACK
FALL SPECIAL • '99 • 10 WEEKS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 WEST ST. ON BUS ROUTE OPEN 7 DAYS

This Saturday!
Only 20 min. from the UMASS campus
comedy connection
413•593•5222
JOHN VALBY
Dr. Dirty
WALT WILLEY Oct. 22
JUDY TENUTA Nov. 5
DAVID ALAN GRIER Nov. 12

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湖園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 p.m.
Sunday Brunch 11 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3 p.m. - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

JHP Northampton Center for the Arts present
THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS
Plus Frank Black Acoustic
TUE OCT 25 • 8PM
John M. Greene Hall, Smith College
Northampton
All seats $15.50 except...
Make a contribution of $20.50 or greater to The Center for the Arts and receive special front and center seating. For these seats only call The Center for the Arts at 584-7327 Mon-Sat 10-4pm
ALL TIX NORTHAMPTON BOX OFFICE 150 MAIN ST.
413-586-8686 • 800-THE TICK

WE'RE SERVING UP SOME GREAT SPECIALS AT...
LIQUORS 44
BEER WINE LIQUORS
Miller GENUINE DRAFT & GENUINE DRAFT LIGHT CASE OF 2-12 PACK BOTTLES $12.99 +DEP
BUSCH CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $8.99 +DEP
SAMUEL ADAMS BOSTON LAGER CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BOTTLES $16.99 +DEP
SPATEN 6-PACK BOTTLES OCTOBERFEST $5.49 +DEP
SCHMIDT'S ICE, REGULAR & LIGHT CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS $7.29 +DEP
1/2 KEGS ICE HOUSE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LIGHT, BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE & LOWENBRAU $39.99 +DEP
SANTA RITA CHARDONNAY & MERLOT FROM CHILE 750 ML WINE OF THE MONTH $3.99
PETER VELLA CHABLIS, BURGUNDY, RHINE, BLUSH, WHITE GRENACHE, CHENIN 5.0 LITER BAG-IN-A-BOX $7.99
BOLLA WINES VALPOLICELLA, PINOT GRIGIO, CHARDONNAY, BARDOLINA, SOAVE, MERLOT 1.5 LITERS $7.99
MOREAU BLANC & MOREAU ROUGE 1.5 LITERS $5.99
SEAGRAM'S COOLERS ALL FLAVORS 4-PACK BOTTLES $2.49
Crown Royal WHISKEY 1.75 LITERS $29.99
CAPTAIN MORGAN SPICED RUM 1.75 LITERS SALE $15.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 $12.49
CLUNY SCOTCH 1.75 LITERS $12.49
KENNEDY'S BLENDED WHISKEY 1.75 LITERS SALE $9.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 COST AFTER REBATE $7.49
POLAND SPRING VODKA 1.75 LITERS $8.99
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 10/6/94 THRU WEDS. 10/12/94
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Drummer legend Tucker to play Noho

By Michael Burke
Collegian Staff

A Velvet Underground reunion at the Iron Horse? Well, not quite, but half of the original band will be performing there this Friday as Moe Tucker leads a band that also features Sterling Morrison.

Moe Tucker was a member of the legendary Velvet Underground from 1965-71. In those brief six years the Velvet Underground completely changed the course of rock history and Tucker was one of the main reasons. Her minimalist drumming has influenced countless drummers since then. Many bands such as R.E.M., Nirvana, Wedding Present, Buffalo Tom, Cowboy Junkies and even Duran Duran have covered Velvet Underground songs.

After the Velvet Underground broke up in 1971, Tucker took time off to raise a family but 10 years later she returned to the music scene. Since then she has worked with many of today's popular indie artists including Half Japanese, Daniel Johnston and members of Sonic Youth.

She has also released five solo albums including her latest on Sky Records, Dogs Under Stress. Last year she rejoined the Velvet Underground as part of their reunion tour.

Surprisingly on her new album, Tucker doesn't even play drums because, as she says, "I never like to see a singing drummer. I hate how that looks." Instead on Dogs Under Stress, Tucker plays guitar, bass, alto sax and even a little percussion. The new album is a very impressive piece of work. It mixes the rawness of the Velvet Underground with the urgency of punk rock. Her song "Me, Myself and I" would fit right in on your average college radio station while other tunes show the diversity of her songwriting.

Moe Tucker is known to many as one of the greatest and most important female drummers. Although she never had the talent of Charlie Watts or Ginger Baker, Tucker played with great intensity and emotion. Tucker described her work best as she said, "The way I play began because I didn't know how to do anything and it remained that way because I still don't know how to do anything."

She's not exactly arrogant when it comes to talking about herself. One of Tucker's greatest accomplishments is that she proved to countless girls that they can play rock n roll just as good as any guy.

Moe Tucker's upcoming show at the Iron Horse should be one of the best rock shows to hit the Valley this fall. If you missed the Velvet Underground's reunion tour, this is probably the closest you will get to seeing them.

Moe Tucker will play at The Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton Oct. 7. The show is all ages. Admission is $10. Doors will open at 10 p.m.

COURTESY RUTH LEITMAN

Ex-Velvet Underground drummer Moe Tucker

COURTESY MOOZ ZAHEDI

The one, the only Barbra Streisand

Songbird Streisand soars on stage

By Jon Lupo
Collegian Staff

BARBRA: THE CONCERT
Barbra Streisand
Columbia/Sony Music

Imagine, if you will, my glee upon receiving Barbra Streisand's live, double-CD recording of her monumental concert in Madison Square Garden earlier this year. Not that I'm a fan or anything — I think Ms. Streisand is a horrible director, a raging drama queen with equal parts low self- esteem and uncontrollable ego and last but not least, a pretty-good singer.

Furthermore, I've always wondered why people adore her. . . I mean who would pay $300 to see anyone, much less an over-the-hill crooner with a honker the size of her vocal range. But I thought hey, at least I'd get a chance to have the fun of writing a scathing review.

I have been converted.

Well, not exactly. But after listening to just-under two hours of Barbra wowing the hometown audience, delivering her classic tunes — from "People" to "Evergreen" to "Happy Days Are Here Again" — with the kind of show-stopping fervor only Judy Garland could once muster, I am, to say the least, impressed. With her voice.

Streisand is the type of diva who wears her considerable ego on her sleeve, right next to her sentiments. Whether she's belting out the tailor-made songs "I'm Still Here" and "Everybody Says Don't" (re-written by Sondheim especially for her!!) as career anthems or, with a straight face, actually subjecting her audience to a Yentl medley, for chrissakes, Barbra has a way of making even her pre-scripted on-stage banter warm, intimate and heartfelt.

At her best moments, like her moving tribute to her son, "Not While I'm Around," a toe-tapping version of "Don't Rain on My Parade," or a witty "duet" with Marlon Brando for "I'll Know" from Guys and Dolls, Streisand conveys a classy sense of old-school showmanship. She manages to give old chestnuts like "My Man" and "The Man that Got Away" a resonance that eschews the lounge act sensibility while simultaneously rising above simple torch song emotions.

At her worst, she unveils her staggering conceit. In an ill- conceived set piece, she has a chat with three off-stage therapists, whereas she accounts her childhood and, um, sexual awakening with "Will He Like Me?," "He Touched Me" and "Evergreen." There's also the hideous, aforementioned Yentl medley as well as an overly-cute Disney trio, including "When You Wish Upon a Star." Barbra, leave it to the cricket, okay?

And yet, when Streisand finishes up the second CD with a rousing cover of "Somewhere" from West Side Story, it's apparent to any listener that they've gone through a audio- kitsch experience like no other. Anyone brave enough will have to concede that, despite a holier-than-though attitude that stretches the bounds of humility, this woman can sing. B

PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Open 7 Days a week
20 % OFF MEALS FRI. AND SAT. EVENING WITH COMEDY SHOW with this ad
Comedy Shows Friday and Saturday at 8:30pm with dinner
Monday -Thursday Dinner Buffet $5.99 Sunday Brunch $6.99
586-1202 FREE PARKING 北京園 ON RT. 9 HADLEY MASTER CARD VISA

THE TOC
SPORTS BAR & LOUNGE
11TH FLOOR CAMPUS CENTER
LARGE SCREEN T.V.
GREAT SPORTS ACTION
MUNCHIES
ICE HOUSE PINT $1.75
COMING UP OCTOBER 22ND . . .
LOOK FOR OUR SPECIAL
UMASS HOCKEY NIGHT!
the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION
OCTOBER SPECIAL!
MILLER
GENUINE DRAFT PITCHER $4.25
MUNCHIES
POOL TABLE

ACCENT
CAREER OPPORTUNITIES
in Information Systems
We're looking for a few highly motivated people with a strong background in computer-related disciplines who want a career in Information Systems.
If you're the kind of person who is interested in rotational assignments, exposure to senior management, classroom development, and you like the idea of having input into the direction of your career, the ACCENT Program may be the right opportunity for you.
We'll be on campus with Travelers' Financial Management Development Program (FMDP) for:
Undergraduate Business Club's CAREER DAY:
Wednesday, October 12, 1994
INTERVIEWS:
Thursday, October 27, 1994
Contact your SOM Placement Office with any questions you have on the ACCENT Program.
The Travelers Insurance Companies
An Equal Opportunity Employer

Student works highlight 'France '94' exhibit

By Amy S. Burns
Collegian Staff

Now through Oct. 7, the Herter Art Gallery is host to "France '94," an exhibit of works by students of the European Summer Art Workshop. This annual summer workshop is a 6 1/2 week program where students travel and study art in a relaxed atmosphere.

The group spent time in various regions of France, and finally made a brief sojourn to Italy. This year 42 students participated in the program, which is organized by the University of Massachusetts Art Department.

The exhibit consists solely of two-dimensional works. There are watercolors, charcoal drawings and pastels, as well as photographs and collages. One treat is that a few students have displayed sketchbooks chronicling their stay in Europe. It was extremely interesting to flip through the pages and follow them on their travels. It was fascinating to see what caught their eye at each famous sight — a staircase, a particular column or an ominous gargoyle. Many artists seemed captivated by the gargoyles; there were several scary charcoal representations.

The students spent the bulk of their time at La Napoule on the French Riviera. This sun-soaked, fertile region of France was an inspiration to the early 20th century painters Henri Matisse and Raoul Dufy.

In fact, some of the UMass students' works are quite reminiscent of the works of these artists. An intimate garden scene by Suzanne Scully strongly resembles the works of Dufy. Obviously the South of France has not declined in its ability to inspire artists.

It was nice to see some new twists on traditional artistic themes. Daniella Motta had an original image of a Madonna and Child. It almost looked like a copy of a Byzantine mosaic. However, instead of bits of colored glass, Motta uses bits of magazine paper to surround the Madonna, creating a modern effect. The bodies of works were quite diverse; no one else chose to treat this same theme.

Another example of the diversity of the exhibit is Amy Corey's series of three beach scenes. She chose to represent a common present-day Riviera scene, topless women and Speedo-clad men, though she added an unusual twist. Angels descend from the sky above the beach as the people point and stare. It's not easily explicable, but it gives you something about which to think.

Sam Simon had a serene piece which reminded me of a Puvis de Chavannes painting. Among a row of Greek columns, a thin, graceful woman stands perfectly still in front of a pool. This surreal night scene evokes a sense of cool calmness and a nostalgia for the Classical past.

The Herter Art Gallery is open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. The exhibit is free. A closing reception will be held this evening from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. for the "France '94" exhibit. The reception is open to the public and most of the artists will be in attendance.

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN

One of the many paintings featured in the "France '94" exhibit was Amy Corey's intriguing portraits of the French Riviera.

■ Quiz Show

continued from page 8

Ghost in Mel Gibson's Hamlet (1990) and the French king in Kenneth Branagh's Henry V (1989), among others.

He also was delighted, if a shade bemused, to find himself in acting an American alongside another Briton, Ralph Fiennes, who burst on the scene last year as the chillingly mesmerizing Amon Goeth in Schindler's List.

Playing the Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Mark Van Doren in Quiz Show, Scofield watches as Fiennes's Charles Van Doren is named in a scandal spelling the end of an age of American innocence.

One minute, father and son are trading Shakespearean quotations; the next, young Van Doren confesses his ethical lapses to his upstanding father in a scene that is already eliciting talk of Oscar nominations for both men.

"Young Charles was a very enigmatic personality, it seems to me," Scofield said. "He had this extraordinarily meticulous yet liberal upbringing. . . and yet obviously there lurked in him some desire not just to do what his father would approve of, which is to have an academic career as he had had."

Did the issues raised by the film seem particularly American?

"It's a dilemma which America had first, but I think it's pretty universal now," he said. "We are all inclined to accept what we see on TV as some kind of truth, and we mustn't."

As he gets older, this classical actor finds screen and TV work more and more pleasurable — and less the guilty pleasure, after a fashion, of his stage-oriented youth.

"When you're a young actor and your experience is almost totally with theater, the adjustment to film is not easy because you're not quite sure of what you're doing anyway," he said.

"Once you have been a performer for long enough, you can exercise with any medium. There was a time when it was a bit 'infra dig' for a theater actor to do film; not any longer."

While some colleagues would use a trip to London for networking, schmoozing and the like, Scofield had simpler plans for the remains of his day.

"I must go and get my hair cut," he said, "and then I shall go home."

■ Video

continued from page 8

Banquet went on to make more than $5 million in the United States alone, win the Golden Bear award for best film at the Berlin Film Festival and an Academy Award nomination for best foreign friend.

The story centers around a young, gay man who tries to appease his visiting parents by marrying a beautiful Chinese artist. But the marriage, arranged so the bride can get her green card, is a sham.

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Lunch and Dinner Buffet
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful newly remodeled facility including our Sunny Greenhouse.
"Largest Chinese Restaurant in Hampshire County"
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30 AM - 10 PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS TILL 11 PM
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte. 9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte. 9 & University Drive • 256-8800

THE SPOKE
The Spoke Amherst, Mass
A DRINKERY
TO MEET, RELAX AND ENJOY
Beer of the Month
16 OZ BUD BOTTLES
$2.00
Drink of the Month
JIM BEAM & COKE
$1.75
35 E. PLEASANT STREET

On the day of the apocolypse Gail finally revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her 'Mrs. Pressy' make-up kit in the 3rd grade.
Mass Daily Collegian
"Make Amends Now"

NRA BASIC PISTOL COURSE
NORTHAMPTON REVOLVER CLUB
CALL 268-3596 FOR DETAILS

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street
South Amherst

TOTAL FITNESS
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES • TREADMILLS • LIFESTEPS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • FREE WEIGHTS • NORDIC TRACK
FALL SPECIAL • '99 • 10 WEEKS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 WEST ST. ON BUS ROUTE OPEN 7 DAYS

Swiss Bank Corporation
...invites all interested students to attend our campus presentation.
Thurs., October 6th
7:30 pm
Amherst College - Converse Hall, Porter Lounge
SWISS BANK CORPORATION IS UNLIKE ANY OTHER LEADING GLOBAL FINANCIAL ORGANIZATION. HERE INTENSITY IS EQUALLED AND BALANCED BY INFORMALITY, AMBITION BY INTEGRITY, INDIVIDUAL CONTRIBUTIONS BY TEAMWORK.
WE HAVE ENORMOUS NEEDS TO STAFF OUR BURGEONING GLOBAL TRADING DEPARTMENT. WITH SWISS BANK CORPORATION, YOU'LL ACCEPT RESPONSIBILITY AS QUICKLY AS YOUR TALENTS ALLOW. REWARDS ARE BASED ON PERFORMANCE, NOT SENIORITY, WHICH IS REFLECTED IN THE YOUTH OF OUR TOP MANAGEMENT.
HUMAN RESOURCES - RECRUITING
141 W. JACKSON BOULEVARD
CHICAGO, IL 60604
e-mail: recruiting@il.us.swissbank.com
SWISS BANK CORPORATION IS AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER
Swiss Bank Corporation

■ R.E.M.

continued from page 5

eration.

So what do you do after making a string of rock albums which in turn make you the nation's hottest band? In R.E.M.'s case you take a detour into the world of acoustic guitars and mandolins. With Out Of Time and Automatic For The People, the band finally shed their alternative status, opening their music to a more intricate blend of musicianship, and confirming their coming of age in the Nineties. Oddly enough, the two albums that would have the widest ranging appeal ended up being the two quietest the band has ever done.

Stipe had opened his lyrics to touch on a more emotional level, putting more of a sense of loss and heartache into the delicate mix. Even though Stipe had previously been viewed as an eccentric-artist type, he now began to personify the pain and loss that seem to accompany today's generation. A sort of musical poet, he successfully captured day-to-day emotional strife. While artists such as Morrissey and Eddie Vedder seem to revel in some sort of nether-worldly depression, Stipe had a way of making "hurt" hit on a very personal level.

Even during the era of "grunge" when music's motto seemed to be stuck in a "louder, faster" rut, R.E.M. had the ability to capitalize on an album that had more in common with James Taylor than any punk-era classic. The band valiantly proved that even in the Nineties excellent songwriting will still triumph over hype.

The band valiantly proved that even in the Nineties excellent songwriting will still triumph over hype.

With Monster, R.E.M. has again managed to keep their fans guessing. They have made a conscious effort to pack up the mandolins and organs and return to the world of rock with a vengeance. In a way the album is almost a regression for the band, harking back to the bare-bones style and indecipherable lyrics of yesteryear.

But this time around, in true R.E.M. fashion, the band has abandoned much of the introspection in turn for the (gulp) sexiest album they have ever done. Somehow it is difficult to picture Stipe, one of the most ambiguous sexual rock stars in some memory, taking on the role of the raunchy "Joe rock star." He has freely stated that with Monster the band was looking to make a "loud, brash and sexy record." While this is one of the few avenues that the group has left unexplored, it does seem the next logical step in Stipe's growing conquests as a first-rate lyricist.

Once again traveling through undiscovered waters, the boys have come up with a winner. Monster may not indeed rank with the best of their works, the fact remains that after a decade-plus of producing quality music and staying artistically interesting they can still pull off an album that leaves much of the younger up-and comer's in the dust. This makes the band musical heroes alone. Also keep in mind the group is making their most edgy album during a time in their career where most artists are settling down to a fine life in the land of adult contemporary schlock (i.e. Sting).

Along with Neil Young, R.E.M. may be one of the few artists who time and time again continue to push the envelope, unafraid of change and public opinion. While Young is now a living relic held over from the Sixties (no disrespect intended), R.E.M has come of age in a time period that most young people can relate to. They proved that you didn't need the flash and hype in order to make it in the recording world, giving music the "regular guy feel" it hopelessly lost in the Seventies.

If Cobain hadn't so selfishly taken his life, maybe Nirvana too would have taken up this path toward generational definition. But alas, R.E.M. stands alone (although many would argue that Pearl Jam is closely leering over their shoulder), graciously accepting a title they might disagree with, but an honor nevertheless.

It is not too hard to imagine that in the distant future we will look back and view R.E.M. with the ranks of the greats — a band who was uncompromising in their ideals as well as definitive in their music. As we have learned from the past few decades, artistic integrity is something that is hard to come by. Even if R.E.M ceases to exist tomorrow they have earned their legacy — and most importantly, left their mark.

Write for Arts
Music
Film
Books Concerts
Lifestyles
Art
Dance
Theatre
We need your expertise in covering the communities of future conventions. Contact Jon Lupo - 545-1361

ST. THOMAS ORTHODOX CHRISTIAN MISSION
Meeting for Pre-Liturgy first and third Sundays of the month
Upstairs Lounge
Newman Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, Massachusetts
First Meeting October 16th
Divine Liturgy 11:00 AM
For more information, call Fr. Luke Mihaly (203)748-0871
A Parish of the American Carpatho_Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Diocese of the U.S.A. (Ecumenical Patriarchate)

Mental Health Groups
Fall 1994
Topic-Focussed Groups being offered by the Mental Health Division of UHS this Fall are:
- Eating Disorders Group — Tuesdays 4-5:30
- Exploring Gay, Lesbian, Bi-sexual Identities — Tuesdays 4:30 -6
- Building Self-Esteem — Wednesdays, 3:30-5
- Skills for Combatting Depression — Wednesdays 3:30-5

Groups are open to students covered by the health plan and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. Groups begin in mid-October. Pre-group interviews are required. For information or to sign up for a pre-group interview call 545-2337 or stop by 127 Hills North. We're open M-F, 8-5.

LRC Learning Resources Center
- Our peer tutoring is absolutely free, and is certified by the CRLA Int'l Tutor Certification Program
- Computer-aided Instruction CD-ROM
- Video-aided instruction
- Study-skills workshops
- Popular software packages MS-Word, Excel, Page Maker, Word Perfect
- Trained & Experienced Peer Tutors

Convenient Hours:
Monday-Thursday 12-9, Friday 1-4
1020 Tower Library
545-5334

Gain Valuable "Real World" Experience on Campus!
The Collegian Business Office is looking for ambitious, organized Sophomore SOM majors for the position of
Associate Business Manager
Direct supervision received from the Collegian business manager, as well as the assistant business manager. Applications may be obtained at:
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center (the basement)
Resumes and cover letters may be directed to:
Michael McRae, Business Manager
Application Deadline: October 17
The Collegian is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer

On the road again

COLLEGIAN FILE

The University of Massachusetts women's tennis team fell to Connecticut 4-3 yesterday. The Minutewomen (7-2) play at Rhode Island this afternoon.

Minutemaniac spots filled by hoop fans

By Jody King
Collegian Correspondent

Standing in line at six in the morning outside of the Curry Hicks Cage in the dead of winter for Minuteman basketball tickets just doesn't sit well for some true hoop fans.

Enter the Minutemaniacs, the University of Massachusetts' own student athletic booster club.

The club consists of 500 University of Massachusetts student members, and since returning Minutemaniacs get automatic renewal, there were only 230 openings for members for the 1994-95 season.

On Tuesday night, during the UMass-Rhode Island volleyball game, interested students thronged outside the entrance to the Cage.

Expecting close to 800 applicants for the 230 new spots, Mark Wilson, marketing director for the UMass Athletic Department, estimated the turnout at more than 1400.

"The demand is growing at an unbelievable rate. Last year we only had to turn down about 200 people," he said. "This year, we are trying a more organized and hopefully more efficient method. Because of the lines, we decided the only way we could manage would be with a random computer selection."

The club was formed four years ago to be a group of students acting as an ambassador to get other University students to support UMass athletics. The biggest goal of the Minutemaniacs is to get people involved with the athletic department so that when they leave Massachusetts, they will want to remain involved.

"Aside from the benefits that Minutemaniacs receive, it is an excellent way to get students involved and donating money to the athletic fund now. Many of us will continue to donate money and stay involved in UMass athletics when we graduate," said two-year veteran Minutemaniac Doug Reiss. "I think it is the best thing ever."

For a fee of only $25, Minutemaniacs receive a free T-shirt, a membership card and The Maniac newsletter keeping them up to date with Massachusetts athletics.

But that's not all. The Maniacs also get game receptions hosted by the club at the VIP room in the William D. Mullins Center for both hockey and basketball and a hosted tailgating party at a UMass home football game.

All of these benefits for $25 — not to mention the advance ticket pick-up of the tickets themselves.

"I consider myself so lucky to be a Minutemaniac," said Carly Beauvais, one of the lucky few on Wednesday's new member list. "I can remember standing in line for the last game in the Cage. I stood in line from 10 o'clock at night until 6 o'clock in the morning, and it could've been my most exciting night at UMass.

"I totally learned of the school spirit surrounding the Minutemen. It was overwhelming, and ever since then, I've wanted to be a Minutemaniac."

Hoping to be picked in the random lottery, eager students filled out applications in the lobby of the Cage Tuesday night and dropped them in the box.

"I hope my friends and I get picked — it's going to be a long night waiting to find out. I'll be gritting my teeth," said junior Trina Sutera. "But if we're not picked, we'll still wait in line for tickets like every other Joe Schmoe."

That must be the school spirit Beauvais was talking about.

■ football

continued from page 14

for the 'Canes, keeping FSU off the field, Coach Dennis Erickson can outfox Bobby Bowden and beat him at home. It all comes down to a Scott Bentley field goal attempt with seconds left. Wide right sound familiar?

Texas 26, Oklahoma 21 — This classic rivalry should produce another dandy. The Sooner wishbone against the speed of the Longhorns. Oklahoma has long been overrated; however, OU has re-vitalized the wishbone the last few weeks. Texas lost a heartbreaker to Colorado last week (the Buffs are making that a habit). If gutsy Texas QB Shea Morenz is as recovered from a strained knee as he says he is, the Longhorns roll.

Anthony Guido is a Collegian columnist.

■ offense

continued from page 14

Sabella recalls a promise Ingoglia made to the starting offensive line last season, Ingoglia vowed to take them out to dinner if he ran over 1,000 yards. Ingoglia ran for 1,284 yards, and captured the YanCon rushing crown. Has the line received their reward?

"Not yet," Sabella said with a laugh. "Dan and I are still waiting."

"This year, we were promised breakfast at Seasons by Frank after his 115-yard game against Maine, and we're still waiting for that," said the grinning Shalala.

Dinner for five, please.

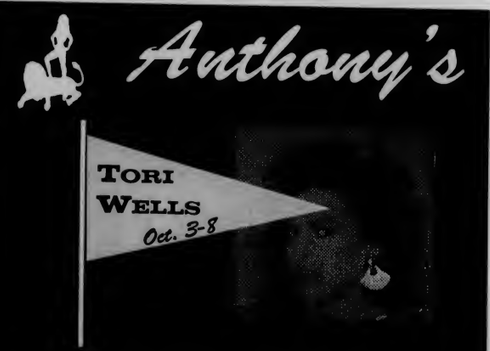
The best shoes your parents' money can buy

It's back-to-school time, and while you're out spending someone else's money, you might as well stock up on some decent shoes. After all, your parents worked hard for their money. Spend it wisely.

Dr. AirWair Martens

strut DESIGNER SHOES FOR LESS
197 Main St., Northampton, MA

Anthony's



Tori Wells, The Legend Continues...
Her only New England Appearance!

Next Week: Nina Hartley! Oct 11-15

Special Seating for 18+ Over ! Positive ID Required

Now Hiring New Entertainers "Join the best team around for BIG $$$"

MON - WED: 4pm-2am
THURS - SAT: 12pm-2am
CLOSED SUNDAYS

500 New Ludlow Rd., South Hadley
Exit 5 MA Pike to 33 North. Take right at Jiffy Lube, 1/2 mile on left.
413 536-0502

We Deliver to UMass
Kai Chi
Chinese - American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
LATE NIGHT DINNER SPECIAL!
UP TO 30% OFF!
Friday, Saturday & Sunday • 9pm - Closing
No other promos apply / Not available for Take Out
Entrees Starting at $4.50
Kai Chi Restaurant
MT. FARMS MALL • RT 9 • HADLEY • 586-2774
Open Sun. - Thurs. 11:30am - 11:00pm
Fri. - Sat. 11:30am - midnight

Book NOW for the holidays!
LONDON $173

AMSTERDAM	$215
PARIS	$229
MILAN	$239
TEL AVIV	$369
CARACAS	$215
BANGKOK	$468

Fares are each way based on a round trip purchase from Boston. Student or Faculty ID may be required. Taxes and surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.
Travel CUTS
79 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-1261

How to interview with the Fortune 500 without even getting out of bed.

OK, graduate-to-be. You can get up early or you can get Career/NET™. It's simple: You give us your resume in a personal profile on the disk we provide. And we guarantee to deliver it to 10,000 employers (including the Fortune 500) in exactly the form they're looking for. Your Career/NET enrollment kit—a preprogrammed disk and a booklet of step-by-step instructions—is $99.95*. To be in the next nationwide distribution to employers, order today. Call 1-800-682-8539.

Career/NET

*Plus $4.95 for shipping and handling

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

CALVIN, WOULD YOU LEAD THE CLASS IN THE PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE?
NO!
WHAT DID THE SUPREME COURT DECIDE ABOUT THAT? IS THIS A PRAYER? DON'T YOU HAVE TO READ ME MY RIGHTS? I DON'T KEEP UP WITH THIS STUFF! I'M JUST A KID!
I'M ONLY HERE BECAUSE MY PARENTS MAKE ME GO! I DON'T WANT TO BE A TEST CASE! I DON'T EVEN KNOW WHAT COURT DISTRICT I'M IN! CALL ON SOMEONE ELSE!
CALVIN?
HOBBES
I CAN'T BELIEVE ITS NOT EVEN 8:15 YET.

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Get off the swing or I'll punch your lights out
What a sissy. Hmm.
YEARS FROM NOW, WHEN I'M SUCCESSFUL AND HAPPY, AND HE'S IN PRISON... I HOPE I'M NOT TOO MATURE TO GLOAT.

Vinyl Scratches By Bill Porter

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today I got some stamps.
I got the kind with "love" written on them with the picture of the puppy.
LOVE
The postal worker gave them to me and smiled.
"Those stamps are cute, aren't they," he said.

Jim's Journal By Jim

I went for a walk today and saw a dog.
For no reason, she came up to me and barked at me like crazy.
I wondered if there was something wrong with me that the dog could sense.
But after the dog left I realized I was probably okay.

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

1968 MUSTANG

Classic '68 Mustang Way Cool Wheels FOR SALE!!! Electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, 2 door, great way to pick up chicks and studs alike. Best offer call Beth at 6-4434.

ACTIVITIES

KGU invites all University women to open rush. Come and see what we're all about! Oct. 6 5:30-7:30 Oct 11 8-8 Oct 12 5-7 406 N. Pleasant St. For more info call Kristen 549-0743

NECKC Karate Club Shotokan style-coed. Tomen 101 M-W 8-9:30 F 7-9 All levels welcome! Call Jessica at 549-4729

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Drive to Aarland with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools' night here in Amherst. Free info session Mon. Oct. 3rd. Lord Jeffery Inn or call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX.

Phi Alpha Theta, the history honor society is now accepting applications for membership. For more information and an application please go to 617 Herter

AUTO FOR SALE

1968 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Beth at 6-4434.

1986 Mercury Lynx XR3 92,000 miles Good cond., 1/8 to engine. Stpd. Zetrho $2500 @ 546-5698

83 Subaru wagon 118k mi. Excellent condition $700 obo 665-0349

Mazda CRX Si AT, AC, sporty black Blaupunkt stereo 108K miles Jeff 253-0866 or 575-2010

BOXING LESSONS

Recreational & competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Guiza Burrguss. 549-5752

BUSINESS OPP.

Two unique food vending carts for sale 549-5088 Good

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? We have the solution. Guaranteed results! Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service, 7 Dashurst Terrace East, N. Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

FOR RENT

2 rooms in private home $300/ mo. Kitchen priviledges. Kosher/ vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished. 549-4853

Fridge rentals 253-9747 free delivery

FOR SALE

1984 Buick $1500/obo call 6-2031. Dorm fridge $70 call 6-2031

Bashful designer's clothes for women, sizes 5 to 24 1/2. Very reasonable. 413 323-8674

Brother Word Processor WP-2200 Spell and grammar check, spread sheet. Excellent for papers $200 Debbie 253-0967

Dorm fridge - excellent condition - includes all trays and shelves $70 call 549-5514

IBM XT computers $100!!! Includes monitor, CPU, keyboard, 10 meg hard drive, 5 1/4 floppy, ms dos. Printers $60. Call 256-8094

Macintosh 4 sale Mac+ 20mb hd 2mb RAM HP laserjet printer $400 obo call Jeff 545-1181

Pagers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549-7331

Reihar chubby but comfortable oversstuffed sofa and matching chair $150 call 253-2498

Shades for less - name brand sunglasses 30%-50% off. Campus Center MWF 800-96SHADES

Solid oak triple dresser Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354

Tandy computer system w/ drives, mon, printer. Tons of software. Asking 325 or b/o. Call Joe 6-7348.

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from glass to gold, custom designed jewelry. Silverscape Designs 254 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3374

FOUND

Gold osaka chain with two charms in parking lot near Sheehan call 6-5620

Indian metal pin call 5-1975 to claim

Wamaca Seika watch with leather band on Oct 26. Call 665-3627 and describe.

HELP WANTED

$363.60. Sell funny college T-shirts. Profit $363.60. Risk free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs 1-800-700-4250

Cruise ships now hiring - earn up to $2000+/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary. For more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext. C50011

Earn $$/hr high pollution. Work for political change with Clean Water Action environmental campaign staff. On bus lines. Paid training. P/T or career opportunity. Call 584-9830.

P.C.A. - for male quad. Fri. morn. eve. overnight, Sat. overnight. Call 549-0886.

Receive up to 288,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413 525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am-5pm

Wanted!! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel, fantastic pay 1-800-426-7710.

We are in need of support personnel on an as-needed basis. Tasks include packing and mailing test materials, large volume collating and other general clerical tasks. Some lifting may be necessary. Minimum commitment of three hours required. We are located on a bus route. Fill out application or mail resume to Personnel, National Evaluation Systems, 20 Garfield Rd., Amherst MA 01002

INSTRUCTION

Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools, right here in Amherst. Classes start Wed. Oct. 12th. Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX to register today!

PERSONALS

Aladdin + Bubbles, find your way back to Pierpont; we miss u and love u guys! Rock on luv, Bubbles + neen

Gaseon - I'm sorry I couldn't make it last night. I was too busy helping Father with his new invention. Meet me at the library tomorrow. I'll be in the human growth and development section. Belle

Rana the princess of prince. Happy Birthday. John

PINNOCHIO'S

Hiring driver; full or part time. Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Bothwood Walk. Ask for Bob.

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to Long Island 10/6 or 10/7. Will share expenses call Mara 549-5166

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female to share large bedroom in house. Great location behind Dairy Mart uptown. 258/mo. + utilities. Move in immediately, lease ends May. No payments! Call Kristie 549-3992

SERVICES

"Balloon-view" cartoon characterures. Makes great gift! $25. full color. Satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 586-5447

Call the playground bbs! 256-6085. Mac bases, Unix, online games, etc. Now you are welcome!

Going away? Can't take Fluffy with you? Emeralee pet sitting service. 549-0838. We'll bring the treats!

Medal search: The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues. Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Males, females, all categories welcome. 617-523-0367

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906.

SHAREWARE

Free!! Shareware listing hundreds of quality software programs only $3.49 each. Call 564-2782

TRAVEL

 Spring Break 95  America's #1 spring break company! Cancun, Bahamas, Daytona & Panama! 110% lowest price guarantee! Organize 15 friends and travel free! Earn highest commissions! (800)32-TRAVEL

WANTED

John, Drama and medieval performers? UMass alumnus seeks medieval performer suggests armourer to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. Billy Irene 584-4303

Campus representative Kicker products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S. Padre + Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1-800-327-6432

Cruise ships now hiring - earn up to $2000+/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary. For more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext. C50011

Earn $$/hr high pollution. Work for political change with Clean Water Action environmental campaign staff. On bus lines. Paid training. P/T or career opportunity. Call 584-9830.

P.C.A. - for male quad. Fri. morn. eve. overnight, Sat. overnight. Call 549-0886.

Receive up to 288,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413 525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am-5pm

Wanted!! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel, fantastic pay 1-800-426-7710.

We are in need of support personnel on an as-needed basis. Tasks include packing and mailing test materials, large volume collating and other general clerical tasks. Some lifting may be necessary. Minimum commitment of three hours required. We are located on a bus route. Fill out application or mail resume to Personnel, National Evaluation Systems, 20 Garfield Rd., Amherst MA 01002

INSTRUCTION

Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools, right here in Amherst. Classes start Wed. Oct. 12th. Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX to register today!

PERSONALS

Aladdin + Bubbles, find your way back to Pierpont; we miss u and love u guys! Rock on luv, Bubbles + neen

Gaseon - I'm sorry I couldn't make it last night. I was too busy helping Father with his new invention. Meet me at the library tomorrow. I'll be in the human growth and development section. Belle

Rana the princess of prince. Happy Birthday. John

PINNOCHIO'S

Hiring driver; full or part time. Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Bothwood Walk. Ask for Bob.

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to Long Island 10/6 or 10/7. Will share expenses call Mara 549-5166

SHOOT FOR THE COLLEGIAN
New photographers are always welcome at the Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England
Stop down to the DPHAW 113 Campus Center Basement or Call 545-3500 Ask for Nathan Martin, Photo Editor

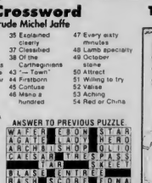
"The freshest in town." "Ambiance galore." "The waiters are always friendly." "Best I've ever had."
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Fresh news, friendly service

Daily Crossword

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Autumn pear
5 Raised
10 Footless
14 On — with
15 New Zealander
16 Met star
17 "Nautilus" skipper
18 Pineapple drinks
19 Sign
20 Tennyson poem
23 Store
24 Mine find
25 Charge
26 Columnist Barrett
27 Burden
28 "— tam tutte"
29 Cad
30 To be, to Brutus
31 Receipt word
32 Norwegian river
33 Con game
34 — buco: veal dish
35 Exclaimed cleanly
37 Classified
38 Of the Carthaginians
42 "— Town"
44 Firstborn
45 Confuse
46 Manio a hundred
47 Every waky minutes
48 Lamb specialty
49 October stone
50 Attract
51 Willing to try
52 Valise
53 Aching
54 Red or Chuna

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE



DOWN
1 Judicial seat

© 1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 10/6/94

The Far Side By Gary Larson

Marv remained calm. No matter how thoroughly they searched, the agents never discovered his "secret" pocket.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Curb a tendency to turn sarcastic when asked silly questions. A good-natured response can win you valuable good will. Strengthen relations with family members when you give your fortunes a boost. Bring home flowers.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The emphasis today is on handling people's egos with kid gloves. Be conservative when considering new investment opportunities. A sense of humor will help you through any ordeal.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An ideal day for trying something new. Be creative and take a chance! Diplomacy is the key to avoiding a tiresome disagreement with a member of the opposite sex. Resist pointing out a loved one's faults.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your persistence will draw attention to your talents in Sega video games. Discover material to learn is you, and not some. A career in sports management somewhere in Illinois could be yours if you play your cards right.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Guard against wishful thinking. It is time to make a decision you have been postponing. Trust your intuition. Be aggressive. Be careful of those who propose secret meetings. Practice will improve your backhand or golf swing or channel surfing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your versatility is a definite asset in the business world. Get the best professional advice available before tackling a credit problem. Find a loner basis for a promising relationship. A friendship could turn romantic.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Idle boasting will make you vulnerable to criticism. Share your seriousness, compliments. Buying an inexpensive gift is fine so long as the item is durable. Spice up your love life with a surprise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Something new could be added to the equation at work. Cooperate, brainstorming and you will be a beneficiary, not a victim. Your intuition can strengthen ties to a loved one and boost.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Impersonation keeps you a step ahead of someone who may want your position. A touch of humor proves helpful in resolving a financial situation. A home improvement project requires your personal attention. Check credentials.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You perform a service with such flair that even those who were skeptical applaud your efforts. Embrace ourselves. Nurture a relationship with someone whose views contrast with your own. Complete old projects before tackling new ones.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Taking loved ones for granted would be a mistake. Invest more energy into artistic and creative endeavors. Curl the red out of your chai blonde by limiting spending. Move full steam ahead with a business venture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The world of real estate or high finance holds tremendous appeal. Learn more about stocks, bonds and banking. Showing greater sensitivity to a partner's needs will make romance happier for both of you.

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Fish Munchies	Veggie Lasagna
Burgers	Chicken a la Chinita
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Fish Munchies	Veggie Lasagna
Goatburgers	Korean BBQ Tofu

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Darienne J. Hosley
Copy Editor.....Art Stapleton, Jr.
Photo Technician.....Rebecca Peterson
Production Supervisor.....Andrew Davidson
Production.....Gleeson, Mark Mitchell, Olmy Rosenstock, Bob Marley

Quote of the Day

"I want her naked on a bed of wings."
—Jay Raymond

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring Busch bar bots. $9" case
M.G.D. $6.99 12/PK BOTS
Icehouse $12.99 case bots.
Capt. Morgan $15.99 1.75L
Bud Light 16oz. cans $13.99 case
Rolling Rock bar bots. $12.99 case
Oldenberg "Bock" $12.99 case bots.
Lionshead $7.99 case bots.
American Beer $7.99 case cans
Sam Adams & Catamount $9.99 12/PK
S.S.P. Vodka $8.99 1.75L
Visa/Mastercard accepted on Keg Deposits
Many More In-Store Specials (especially on wines)
All Beers Plus Deposit
-Delivery Available-

classé cafe'
Burrito w/ homeade salsa & get a free order of our famous fresh cut fries!
Sunday Brunch 7-3
Mon-Sat 7-10pm
READY IN MINUTES -AND SO THRIFTY
168 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-2291

University Barbers
(Campus Center)
549-0123
Hours:
Weekdays 8 a.m. - 5:45 p.m.
Sat. 8 a.m. - 1:45 p.m.
No Appointment Necessary

BUY BEER & WINE on SUNDAYS from Noon to Six
Montague Mini Mart
•30 Packs of Budweiser Available
•Discounts on Quantity Purchases
•Only 10 Miles from UMASS
• Reasonable Cigarette Prices •
from Amherst: 10 miles north on Rt. 63 to Rt. 47N
from Northampton: 14 miles I-91 north to Rt. 116 to Rt. 47N
(Follow signs to Montague Center • Proper ID Required)
Open 7 Days from 9-9 • 367-9551

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
for travel beginning November 1
One Way Round Trip
LONDON $183 $345
PARIS $214 $428
MADRID $250 $500
SAN JOSE/ COSTA RICA $224 $448
Roundtrip
TOKYO $749
Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Eurail passes issued on the spot.
Customs immigration & departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student ID cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
143 Main St. (at Pi Kit)
800-272-9676
212-986-8420

Sports

Minutewomen tie Syracuse in OT

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts field hockey team registered its third tie in the last three weeks with a 1-1 draw in double overtime against the Syracuse Orangewomen at Totman Field yesterday.

The unranked Orangewomen looked like they might pull off an upset, as they led 1-0 with just over five minutes remaining in the contest. Facing a potentially damaging upset, Danielle Borges stepped up.

The senior co-captain moved around Syracuse defenders and slipped a pass to a wide open Streya Volla, who drove it home to force the extra period. The goal was the first of Volla's career.

The game started out in a hauntingly familiar way for the Minutewomen. Playing against a less talented opponent, the Minutewomen came out flat. With nothing to lose, Syracuse came out fired up and took control of the play.

"We put ourselves under the hammer all the time," said UMass goalie Hilary Rose. "We don't play well in the first half. When things don't go well right away, we back off. Then we have five minutes of madness, and that's when they score."

That madness came about halfway through the first half. With 16:48 remaining, Julie Williamson flipped a shot from in the crease that sailed over the head of Rose to give Syracuse a surprising 1-0 lead.

UMass	1
Syracuse	1

"If we played the first half we probably would have won," said UMass Coach Megan Donnelly. "We just did not play the first half. That's been our problem all year. I'm going to start telling them to play like we're down 1-0."

"That was the first time I ever scored on a shot like that," said Williamson, who practices the shot regularly.

"It was a very well-shot goal on the stick flick," Rose said. "There was nothing I could do."

Down 1-0 at halftime, Donnelly berated her team for their lack of intensity. Something in what she said was effective as a very different-looking UMass team came out for the second half. They dominated the play, keeping the ball in the Syracuse end for the majority of the half. They had several opportunities but could not capitalize until Volla's goal.

"A lot of scoring is confidence," Donnelly said. "We're beating the defenders, but goal scoring is just being confident that your going to score."

UMass continued to dominate the play during overtime, with several scoring opportunities. They appeared to have the game won five minutes into sudden death when SU goalie Cheri Herr was caught out of position, but Kerry Metelski's shot hit the post.

UMass got a scare midway through the first overtime, when Rose went down after being hit in the left knee with a shot. Despite her obvious pain, Rose finished the game.

"I'm feeling pretty beaten up right now," said Rose, who limped off the field following the game. "I think its just going to be a bruise with a little bit of swelling for the time being."

"Hilary has exactly the kind of guts and intensity that the team needs," said Donnelly. "I think everyone should look at what she did today and take a lesson from it."

The midfield turned in one of their best performances of the season yesterday afternoon, as Kyle Rothenberger, Colleen Duffy, and freshman Courtney MacLean turned in strong games.

"Kyle played great. She just played great for 100 minutes," Donnelly said.

The Minutewomen return to action this weekend as they face off against the No. 1-ranked North Carolina Tar Heels Sunday at Westfield State.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Junior Streya Volla (pictured) scored the only goal for the Minutewomen as the University of Massachusetts field hockey team tied Syracuse, 1-1.

Williams out for three games

Minuteman fails to meet team standards

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's basketball team will be without starting shooting guard Mike Williams when it opens the 1994-95 season.

Coach John Calipari announced that Williams will be suspended for the first three games of the season due to academic problems. Calipari emphasized the fact that Williams is not academically ineligible by NCAA guidelines but by team standards.

"Let me emphasize that Mike is not academically ineligible by NCAA or institutional guidelines," Calipari said.

"But the standards we have for the team are higher than those required by the school and the NCAA, and it is important for the players in our program to understand that."

The included games are the Nov. 9 and 17 exhibitions against Marathon Oil and the Turkey Junior National Team, and more significantly the matchup with defending national champion Arkansas in the 1994 Tipoff Classic.

"We had a good team last year and we were expecting to well in the NCAA Tournament," Williams said in an interview with the Hartford Courant.

"It got to me. I put basketball first and it was hard to balance it. I know I can handle it, I just have to try harder."

> "It got to me. I put basketball first and it was hard to balance it."

Williams has been a key player in the Minutemen's success in recent years. The 6-foot 1-inch senior was the Most Valuable Player of the 1994 Atlantic-10 Conference Tournament. He was second on the team in scoring with 14.6 points per game and assists with 89.

Most of Williams' reputation, however, has come on his ability to hit clutch shots. Williams had game-winning shots in both regular season victories over Temple, and hit key shots in the overtime upset of No. 1 North Carolina in last year's preseason NIT.

Despite his impressive play on the court, this is not Williams' first off-the-court problem.

Williams was benched against Central Connecticut State and did not start against Holy Cross for missing a day of practice last season while he was catching up on school work.

In the final regular season game of the year against Duquesne, Williams was involved in an altercation with UMass Assistant Coach Bill Bayno. No action was taken for the incident.

Williams' suspension will mean more playing time for a the rest of the UMass backcourt. Senior Derek Kellogg could see time at shooting guard, as well as at the point.

Sophomores Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso could see more minutes and freshman Andre Burks might also get additional playing time early in the season.

Powerhouses look for revenge this weekend

Anthony Guido on College Football

Revenge will be the order of the day come Saturday in the world of college football.

Notre Dame and Miami, two of the most storied football universities, both are looking to avenge last season's shocking losses.

Everybody remembers (with joy) the last-second field goal by Boston College's David Gordon to upset the Irish in South Bend. Neither team is nearly the same, or as good, but BC had better show a lot more than they have so far this season.

On their way to a national championship season, Florida State dismantled Miami, its longtime nemesis. After playing second fiddle to the 'Canes for years, the Seminoles finally ruled the state of Florida and the nation. FSU's winning wasn't the shocker, but the ease of victory was. This year the battle is in the Orange Bowl.

You have to feel for Tommie Frazier. The star quarterback for Nebraska has been discovered to have a second blood clot behind his right knee. Frazier spent most of last week in the hospital and it was thought that he was recovered.

This recent development will most likely keep Frazier out of action for the rest of the year. Not only does this damage Nebraska's title hopes and his Heisman chances, but this is a problem without a cause or a treatment. The blood thinners he has been taking haven't worked and can cause internal bleeding; no game or award is worth the risk of getting hit and chancing things further.

Injuries have just crippled college football's stars this year, from wideout J.J. Stokes to runner Tyrone Wheatley. Now it's Frazier and Ki-Jana Carter (dislocated right thumb).

Why is ESPN's Thursday night game always a terrible match-up? We've seen Army-Duke, Auburn-Kentucky and now Kansas-Kansas State. KSU is somehow ranked at No. 19 and tonight sports fans can watch them in a great in-state rivalry if you're playing basketball, but not on the gridiron. The Thursday night game of the week could dominate the ratings right now but you have to be really bored to watch some of these games.

Speaking of ESPN one more round of congratulations has to go out to Massachusetts running back Rene Ingoglia (313 yards rushing). You'd think the premier sports network would focus on his stats and standout talent, not his name (which they couldn't even pronounce right). Unfortunately for Rene, Colorado's Rasheen Salaam piled up 317, catching SportsCenter's top billing in its college football stars of the weekend segment.

On to the matter of picking three big contests for the upcoming weekend: The season tally (2-4) is woeful, as my ability to predict games is on par with Dan Henning's coaching abilities.

Notre Dame 27, Boston College 6 — "It would be immoral for a coach from a Catholic school to talk about revenge," Lou Holtz said. Come on, Lou, you have been dying for a rematch all season and will stop at nothing to run the score up.

BC has no quarterback and will not be able to run the ball on offense. The Irish defense will win the game; it had better with the starting backfield out due to injuries. Both Lee Becton and Ray Zellars will sit out, so look for Holtz to unleash QB Ron Powlus a little more. A three-touchdown, 300-yard day is in the cards for young Powlus.

Miami 29, Florida State 27 — Could be the best game of the season to date. It seems impossible for the Hurricanes to lose twice in the same season at home. Both squads' usual stellar defenses have shown some holes this year.

If erratic QB Frank Costa plays a composed game

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 12

Javier Gonzalez emerging from Engin's shadow

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

In the game of water polo, the aspect that stands head and shoulders above anything else is the team concept. Individuality is left aside as the squad's goals for a successful, winning season emphasize and incorporate team defensive and offensive strategies.

But once in a while a certain person arrives on the scene that has an effect that can not be denied. Someone who, by their natural skill for the game, casts a presence that enshrouds all phases of the game.

The University of Massachusetts men's water polo team has a player that fits that description in senior co-captain Javier Gonzalez. Leading the team in points scored (76) and assists (28) in 47 quarters played this season, Gonzalez has begun to emerge from the shadow of last year's All- American and this year's assistant coach, Tasan Engin.

Swimming competitively since the age of six, the native of Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico, began his first club water polo team with his local friends at the age of 10.

By his senior year in high school, the last thing on his mind was attending a university, never mind in the cold Northeast.

But with the advice of a friend who went to UMass and a talk with a visiting swimming team coach named Russ Yarworth, he chose the intimate confines of the Pioneer Valley to further his education.

Four years and the number one position on the all-time UMass scoring list with 300 points (up to last weekend's action) later, Gonzalez has cast a unique, distinctive impression. Even with the apparent strangeness that comes with adapting to new surroundings, he has adjusted well.

"When you play water polo, it all depends where you play," Gonzalez said. "For example, when I played in Puerto Rico, for clubs and the national team, there was a lot of good scorers and we could compliment each other."

"Here, I need to score more than back home, because its just my role on the team. Especially with Juan Carlos (Limardo), Luis (Limardo) and Adolfo (Oliete)."

> "His talent is that he is very creative and very experienced. With that creativity he makes all the other players around him better," said Yarworth.

As the season has gone on, and the attention he creates has doubled, other opportunities for production have steadily arisen. Now that teams know his scoring touch, double teams from opposing defenses have given Gonzalez a chance to open up and start to deal the ball off. A new role on the team is no problem for the co-captain.

"Now I got the role of passing the ball to teammates when they are open," said Gonzalez. "Pretty much, I'll drive the hole and Luis (Limardo) will pass the ball to me. Because a lot of times the defense will switch over, I'll get the ball back to him with a cross-pass for the scoring opportunity."

All this extra attention has not missed the astute eye of Yarworth. Like the examples of Larry Bird and Michael Jordan in basketball, the coach said he sees the special effect that a player of his caliber can produce. Now only if he can channel it in the right direction.

"His talent is that he is very creative and very experienced. With that creativity he makes all the other players around him better," said Yarworth. "He is a little bit gun happy, but you can't take the shot away from the shooter."

At the beginning of the season, Gonzalez was in the top five all-time in eight different water polo categories. He has achieved rare status in being in the top five in goals, attempts, shooting percentage, points, steals, penalty shots and ejections drawn, and blocks.

Combined with being in the past a member of the Puerto Rican junior national team, a teammate on five Puerto Rican championship teams in swimming and water polo, and future aspirations for the Pan-Am Games (and hopefully the Olympics), Gonzalez has set a precedent that forever will be shown in the Minuteman record books.

But that has still not gone too far to his head. Confidence is one aspect, and a commitment to the welfare of the team's progress with co-captain Adolfo Oliete is a larger, and more important, one.

"We've been improving a little bit each game, each week, trying a couple of different things on defense to see which one will be the best at the end of the year," Gonzalez said. "We lost T (Tasan Engin) from last year. So, once we get that hole filled and find that right person, we'll be fine."

Offensive line providing holes for Minuteman backfield

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

Credit is given where credit is due — except, of course, for the offensive line of a football team.

The running backs rack up yardage on the ground, and quarterbacks throw for big-play touchdowns. The defensive fronts record the sacks, and the defensive backs pick off the passes. Statistics pile up and accolades are given.

As for the offensive line, there are no basic individual statistics that can rate performances. No spotlight to shine, no glory to bask in.

And that suits the University of Massachusetts offensive line just fine. They rate themselves not on their individual effort, but on their teammates' outputs. Keeping QB Andrew McNeilly protected. Providing the holes for running backs Rene Ingoglia, Frank Alessio and Ron Brockington, among others.

"The individual honors come as a result of team success," said Coach Mike Hodges. "And the offensive line is a perfect example."

"Just to see Rene and Frank and Brock running, that's enough right there." said left tackle Dan Markowski, "knowing they have the ability to find the holes. They make us look good. If it wasn't for them, we wouldn't look so good either."

The running backs have done their share to make the Minutemen look good. Ingoglia has outgained all four opponents on the ground the last four weeks by himself (including a Massachusetts and Yankee Conference record 313 yards last weekend against Rhode Island) in rushing for 765 yards. The tailback Alessio has amassed 294 yards on the ground, giving the Minutemen 1,223 rushing yards.

And they have done it behind guys like Markowski, left guard Mark Zych, center Mark Shalala, right guard Todd Tinker and right tackle Joe Sabella.

Last year saw three All-Yankee Conference offensive linemen graduate in All-American OG Bill Durkin, C Andy LeBlanc and OG Phil Hallard. An experienced chunk was taken out of the offense, one that caused some concern at the beginning of training camp.

But now, three wins into the first four games this season, including a 2-0 YanCon record thus far, the line has improved since the first snap of the fall scrimmage.

"They have progressed tremendously," said Coach Mike Hodges. "They have come long, long ways since the first scrimmage. After last week's game [against Rhode Island], they are starting to look like guys from last year. And that's a compliment."

Hodges sees the comparison with last year's graduated crop as a motivational tool.

"During pre-season, everyone was asking about the three graduated seniors, comparing them to this year's line. I think they are using it as a means for motivation — and it's worked. So far, they are out-producing last year's group," Hodges said.

As far as the running game is concerned, this year's Massachusetts team has averaged 305.75 yards per game on the ground, while at the same point last year, the Minutemen averaged 276.5. Production, indeed.

As for the offensive line, there is noticeable unity between them. Besides getting down and dirty, blocking opposing defensive lines, they all have a fun time with each other. "I like to think we're all like a bunch of brothers. I'm the older brother, and they're all my young, fat brothers," said Sabella.

"I like to think of him as a big fat Santa Claus," countered Shalala.

Turn to OFFENSE, page 12

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

OG Mark Zych [73] and OT Dan Markowski [79] help to form the strong offensive line of the University of Massachusetts football team.

Minutemen to face UNH

Yankee Conference Defensive Player of the Week Justin Reimer [pictured] and the UMass football team travel to UNH tomorrow (See Sports, page 8).

Rappin' about campus issues

Want to hear what your fellow students have to say? Check out our new feature, "Campus Rap" (See page 3).

Matthews band to rock Pearl St.

The Dave Matthews band brings its eclectic brand of rock and funk to Pearl Street on Tuesday, Oct. 11 (See Arts and Living, page 5).

Weekend Forecast

Today should be sunny and unseasonably warm with the highs near 70. Clear overnight, remaining sunny and warm throughout the weekend, highs in the low 70s.

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 70 LOW: 44	HIGH: 73 LOW: 40	HIGH: 65 LOW: 40

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 19 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Friday, October 7, 1994

Students walk to raise money for cancer research, treatment

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Walking at an average speed of eight miles an hour, a team of University of Massachusetts students will take part in the fourth annual Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk on Sunday. There is an expected turnout of 5000 people.

The marathon is held along the route of the actual Boston Marathon, and all the money raised goes to the Dana–Farber Cancer Institute for research and treatment.

"It'll probably open their eyes to how many people this affects and they'll be able to see real patients," Dave Fontaine, a UMass student whose cancer is presently in remission, said. Fontaine took this semester off so he could work with the Jimmy Fund in Boston.

Bonnie Hanson, a Resident Assistant at UMass and close friend of Fontaine's, is the captain of the UMass team. She got a late start at organizing the team, but has a good ten to 15 people ready to put on their walking shoes, she said.

"It's probably going to be tough, but it's not supposed to be pleasant," Shulamit Gershenson, a UMass senior management major, said. "Anything to show my support."

There are two different options for walkers: one follows a 26.2 mile route from Hopkington to Boston, and the other picks up the same route in Wellesley and only runs for 13 miles.

It costs $10 to participate in the walk, and $100 worth of sponsored funds, Hanson said. The goal for the 1994 walk is $1.5 million. Many students are doing their part by donating and raising funds, Hanson said.

Most of the participants on the UMass team found out about the event through a talk Fontaine gave in Albey Reiner's "Microbiology of Cancer and Aids" class last week, Hanson said.

"We had a sign-up sheet at the end of the class, and 60 people said they were interested in getting involved," Hanson said.

They received $40 worth of donations from the class, Hanson said. Donations ranged from 37 cents and some pocket lint to checks for $15.

"He seemed like a nice guy, and he's obviously going through some hard times. We figured we'd get together and help him out," Mark Galloway, president of the Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity, said. He and his fraternity are contributing funds to the cause.

Hanson will lead the group starting in Hopkington at 7 a.m., and Vicky Vitale, a UMass sophomore psychology major, will lead the group opting for the "half–marathon" route that will start at 11 a.m.

Vitale and her fiance will be walking the half–marathon because they are both suffering from sprained backs, and she from a few extra broken ribs, as a result of a car accident last spring, Vitale said.

Vitale believes she owes it to Fontaine because his speech incited her to redirect her career goals toward counseling of cancer patients, she said.

"It's really weird. I was never really sure of what I wanted to do," Vitale said. "He inspired my whole life."

If you're interested in participating in the walk, donating or raising funds, contact Bonnie Hanson at 546–3107.

Chaaa–ching

GORDON FENNIMORE / COLLEGIAN

University of Massachusetts students have been lining up all week at the Bursar's Office in Whitmore Administration Building, awaiting the chance to show identification and pick up a $53 rebate check.

Senate demands for removal of troops as soon as possible

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate told President Clinton Thursday it wants a statement from him within seven days on the national security objectives of U.S. troops in Haiti and called for their withdrawal "as soon as possible."

The 91-8 vote on the Senate resolution came after weeks of partisan bickering over the administration's Haiti policy with Republicans criticizing the operation the most.

In Norfolk, Va., Clinton told troops just back from the Caribbean that things were going well. The Pentagon said Defense Secretary William Perry would visit Haiti and the refugee camp at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, on Saturday.

The Senate resolution, worked out by Senate Democratic Leader George Mitchell of Maine and Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas, specifically avoids setting a date for the withdrawal of U.S. troops in Haiti.

It admonishes Clinton for not seeking support of Congress before sending them there, but praises him for lifting U.S. economic sanctions against Haiti and working to lift U.N. sanctions. Voting against the resolution were Sens. Max Baucus, D-Mont., Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., Russell Feingold, D-Wis., Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., Larry Pressler, R-S.D., Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo. Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, did not vote.

Debate was expected to go late into the night on similar resolutions pending in the House. A Democratic-backed measure calls for pulling the troops out by March 1 unless Congress votes next February to let them stay.

House Republicans were offering their own version calling on Clinton to immediately commence an orderly withdrawal. If all U.S. troops are not withdrawn by Jan. 3, the resolution says Congress should vote on requiring Clinton to remove them within 30 days. In addition to seeking a statement from Clinton on the national security objectives of the Haiti mission, the Senate said it wants detailed reports on it on a continuing basis until it is over. It also directs the secretary of state to report by Jan. 1 on human rights violations by both the Aristide government and the military-led regime that overthrew him in 1991.

"Let's face it this thing has worked," Mitchell said before the vote. "Not a single American has been killed and we are going to have a democratic government restored."

But Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said returning soldiers may not receive a heroes' homecoming because "a majority of people do not believe our vital national security interests are threatened in Haiti."

"American troops should not be used on missions that cannot be achieved in places where America has no vital interests," added Dole.

Survivors meet to share their stories decades later

By Laura Schmidt
Collegian Correspondent

The Holocaust.

This historical event occurred nearly a half a century ago, and in present day society, people are still affected by its powerful outcome.

"It's been fifty years after the Holocaust, and there are still a large number of survivors who would like to be noticed and validated," says Dr. Eva Metzger Brown, a psychologist.

Brown, who is a child of Holocaust survivors, is inviting other students and other children or grandchildren of survivors, to attend her general meeting in which people share stories and explore possibilities that could eventually lead to monthly self-help groups or weekly groups facilitated by Brown.

These groups were originally started because Brown said she felt people who were affected by the Holocaust needed to ventilate feelings in order to start the healing process.

Brown said it is necessary to "heal the trauma so it won't be transmitted again."

The ultimate goal of the meetings is "always to create dialogue, to teach and to heal."

These meetings are an opportunity to "allow participants to connect and meet each other." Brown said the general feeling in the meetings are that "participants enjoy being able to talk with other Holocaust survivors, after sometimes being hesitant at first."

"People are always happy they connected and talked," said Brown.

Brown told a story of a participant's father who was in the Polish Underground. Once his father emerged, there was hardly any survivors. Most had died in the war.

Because the situation involved his father, and not himself, Brown said the participant did not believe he was a survivor.

According to Brown, after talking with this man, he eventually

Turn to HOLOCAUST, page 3

Great Chicago Fire remembered

Fire Prevention Week highlights awareness and prevention

By Henry Brier
Collegian Staff

Fire Prevention Week begins Sunday, Oct. 9, and ends Oct. 15, said Officer David J. Beaudin from the University of Massachusetts Division of Environmental Health and Safety, spearheading the effort to inform the campus community regarding fire hazards.

It is a nationwide effort to increase awareness, commemorating the anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire of 1871, in which 300 people died, 22,000 were left homeless, and damage to property was estimated at $200 million, according to World Book Encyclopedia.

According to legend, and the World Book, a cow kicked over a lighted lantern in southern Chicago, and winds fanned the flames north and east, jumping over rivers and leaving trails of destruction.

Officer Beaudin spoke of the events to occur on campus, including training for all Residence Directors and Assistants in their respective dormitories, information tables for the hall residents and tables with brochures and videotapes set up each day on the Campus Center Concourse.

"It's an opportunity to talk to residents and involve students in the halls," said Beaudin. "Students are receptive and have questions."

Officer Beaudin commented that, in the past, people have many questions, a lot of which circle around Backdraft and Towering Inferno, two movies about fighting fires.

The campus activities are not only sponsored by Environmental Health and Safety, but also Dining Services and The University Store, two auxiliary services, said Beaudin.

"They have been very supportive of us and our efforts", said Beaudin.

Brochures on the concourse tables will concern the correct usage of a fire extinguisher, the effectiveness of properly functioning smoke alarms, electrical fire safety, and fire safety for the disabled, to name a few.

"Forty to fifty percent are dysfunctional," said Beaudin, referring to smoke detectors. "The batteries are dead, or they're taken out of place when cooking. Remote control batteries are replaced the next day, but detectors save lives."

Fire safety stickers will be available for children, said Beaudin, and firefighters in regalia will visit campus day-care centers, an effort to familiarize children with the dressed individuals who just may have to save their life. Coloring books and plastic fire helmets will be handed out, efforts to orient children's attention towards fire safety.

Also appearing on concourse tables, said Beaudin, will be "boomboxes," now destroyed after causing fires. Officer Beaudin also cited toaster ovens and, especially, candles which may seem like harmless items, but have proved to be perilous.

Beaudin mentioned a common case scenario for fires starting is when a lit candle is left on the sill of an open window and the curtains, blown around by breezes, become engulfed in flames.

"A lot of fires are not intentional," said Beaudin, "It's like everything else people forget about. This is a chance to focus on fire safety."

Superior Court judge teaches civil rights course at UMass

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Superior Court Judge Judd Carhart is splitting time between a courtroom and a classroom; Carhart is teaching a civil rights class here at the University this semester.

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts professor and Superior Court Judge Judd Carhart educates students in civil rights at his alma mater.

After graduating from UMass in 1971 as a government major, Carhart went on to Suffolk Law School. He then served as assistant district attorney in Norfolk County, and assistant U.S. attorney until 1988 when he became the district attorney for Hampshire County.

It was April of 1993 that he was appointed to the Massachusetts Superior Court as a judge.

A legal studies professor since fall of 1993, he is currently teaching "Individual Rights and the Legal Process."

According to Grant Ingle, director at the Office of Human Relations, Carhart was interested in teaching after a racial incident that took place in 1992 where a black resident assistant was attacked.

"He was the DA in that case," said Ingle. "He made an offer to the chancellor for a civil rights course. We got it to happen the first time."

Ingle said Carhart is especially useful because of his working knowledge of civil rights and the judicial system.

"People don't know much about their civil rights," said Ingle. "[Carhart] deals with it day in and day out . . . a wonderful resource."

Carhart said he designed his curriculum around the constitutional amendments and current events to illustrate civil rights.

"I want to give people a working knowledge of what their rights are," said Carhart.

A main ingredient to his class is interaction between him and the students, he said. He encourages them to express their opinions, not take his.

"I like the give and take," said Carhart. "I tell the students to question me; what I say is not the gospel."

Carhart also said there is a gap in the student-teacher relationship.

"It seems like yesterday I was a student here," he said. "I still try to understand the function of a student coming to get an education, and to take something from the university."

Working as a Superior Court judge during the day, Carhart said it is not easy to juggle two jobs, but said he wants to give something back to the students.

"I think it's great," he said. "These people are going to be making the decisions in the future."

Currently working out of Springfield, Carhart said that judges of the Massachusetts Superior Court move to different districts just about every month.

"It's basically to keep things fresh in the system," he said.

Carhart said he has been assigned to work in Worcester, making the commute and teaching even more difficult.

"Luckily I have never worked Boston," said Carhart. "I'd rather not."

According to Carhart, he is in the courtroom just about everyday, making it difficult for students to get in touch with him, but he has worked around that.

Turn to CARHART, page 2

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Friday Ticker

Market Closes as of 4pm Thursday, Oct. 6, 1994

Index	Close	Change
Dow Jones Industrial Average	3775.56	-11.78
Standard & Poor's 500	452.36	-1.16
Nasdaq Composite Index	744.19	-2.09
AMSE Index	453.60	+2.49

Market Reports

Compiled by Andrew Ferguson

Dollar value rises against European currency

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against most other key currencies in European trading today. Gold prices fell. In Tokyo, the dollar fell to 99.55 yen from 99.58 late Wednesday. In London, the dollar was quoted at 99.62 yen, up from 99.45. At midday in New York, the dollar was changing hands at 99.62 yen.

Other late dollar rates in Europe compared with late Wednesday: 1.5446 German marks, up from 1.5425; 1.2805 Swiss francs, up from 1.2785; 5.2772 French francs, up from 5.2708; 1,566 Italian lire, down from 1,569; and 1.3467 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3473. The British pound was quoted at $1.5875, up from $1.5860. At midday in New York the pound was worth $1.5896.

Other dollar rates at midday in New York included: 1.5422 marks, 1.2785 Swiss francs, 1,565 lire, and 1.3477 Canadian dollars. Gold closed in London at $391.50 per troy ounce, down from $392.50 late Wednesday. In Zurich, the metal fell to $391.40 from $392.25.

Trading is slow as Dow falls late

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks ended lower after spending most of today's session in neutral gear ahead of the release of September jobs data.

The Dow Jones industrial average traded in a narrow 26-point range all day but headed sharply lower in the last 30 minutes of trading, closing near the session's lowest point. Broad market indexes outperformed the blue chip benchmark for most of the session.

Trading volume was light, as most investors were reluctant to commit much to the market amid mounting fears of higher interest rates.

Analysts expect government reports on Friday to show that nonfarm payrolls increased by about 250,000 in September, and that the nation's unemployment rate stayed steady at 6.1 percent. A larger payroll number or big drop in unemployment could send a signal to the Federal Reserve that the economy is growing too fast, analysts said. A report of a strong labor market could offer more incentive to the central bank to increase short-term interest rates for the sixth time this year, they added.

Government forecast low, crop prices fall

CHICAGO (AP) — Corn and soybean futures prices weakened Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade after a private firm predicted larger U.S. production of those crops than the government has forecast. Farmers Commodities Corp. of Des Moines, Iowa, pegged this year's corn crop at 10.14 billion bushels compared with the Agriculture Department's September estimate of 9.26 billion. It estimated soybean production at 2.57 billion bushels compared with the USDA's forecast of 2.32 billion.

Other private firms will release harvest estimates this week ahead of the USDA's October crop report Wednesday. The USDA report will contain new government production forecasts.

The cautious USDA is unlikely to predict crops as large as those forecast by Farmers Commodities, even though early yields favor the Iowa firm's forecast, said John Kleist, agricultural research director for Quantum Financial Services Inc. in Chicago.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Oct. 7

Services — Shabbat service led by Professor Julius Lester, Hillel House, UMass, 7 p.m.

Lecture — Visiting Lecturer Series in Geology, Morrill Science Center room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Conference — "Negotiation Identities: What's Difference Got to Do With It?," Willits-Hallowell and Dwight Hall, MHC, 6 p.m. Information: 538-2653.

Community — Green Tara Meditation, Wright Hall Common Room, Smith College, 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Lecture — Free Friday Night Lecture Series, Jude Rozhon, Tarot: Fool's Gold and the Sacred Journey, 63 Main St., Amherst, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Conference — Williams College will be hosting a South Asian Student conference on Oct. 7, 8, and 9. Information: 546-0888.

Saturday, Oct. 8

Conference — Negotiation Identities, Willits-Hallowell and Dwight Hall, MHC, 8:30 p.m.

Film — Forgotten Tenor, Main Lecture Hall, Franklin Patterson Hall, HC, free, 7:30 p.m.

Music — Mozart and Macchia, Bezanson Recital Hall, UMass, 8 p.m. Information: 545-2227.

Event — Masspirg is hosting a streamwalk to survey the water and clean the waste in Puffers Pond, North Amherst, 1 p.m., meet at the Masspirg office, 423 B, Student Union, UMass.

Monday, Oct. 10

Community — Women's Gathering in honor of Rosh Chodesh Cheshvan, Chabad House, 6:30 p.m., Information: 549-4094.

Activities and Upcoming Events

Auditions for UMass Theater Guild's production of Godspell — Oct. 6, 7 and 8. Call 545-0415 for more information.

Community Service — The Companion Program is looking for volunteers. Call 253-2591.

J. Crew Warehouse Sale — Mullins Center, UMass, Monday to Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Fundraiser — The 1994 Newman Center Phon-a-Thon will be held Oct. 9 to Oct. 27, Sunday through Thursday evenings, 6:45 p.m. to 8:45 p.m., Volunteers needed, Information: 549-0300.

Kevin G. Carroll Jr., 21

Kevin G. Carroll Jr., 21, of 1010 North Pleasant St. died Thursday at home.

Carroll, formerly of Lowell and Reading, was enrolled at the University of Massachusetts from fall 1992 to the spring 1993 as a School of Management major, according to the University Registrar's Office.

William R. Wallace, a junior mechanical engineering major and former roommate of Carroll said Carroll died of complications from mononucleosis. Wallace said Carroll had had mono about four or five days before his death. Wallace said Carroll had gone to the hospital a couple of times and had complained of a sore throat.

Wallace said Carroll was part of the Army ROTC on campus after going through basic training in Fort Benning, Ga.

Carroll dropped out of the University due to financial reasons, according to Wallace. He was working in West Springfield as a spa salesman at the time of his death to raise the money to come back to the University.

Carroll is survived by his father, Kevin G. Carroll Sr. of Lowell; his mother, Nancy (Kelley) Carroll of Reading; his brother, Peter Carroll of Lowell; his sister, Anne K. Carroll of Reading.

The wake will be held today at Doherty Funeral Home at 11 Linden St. in Reading from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m.

The funeral will be tomorrow at 8 a.m. at the funeral home. A mass will follow at St. Athanasius Church on Haverhill Street in Reading.

— Kelly Spang

Farm hosts second annual fall festival

By Marnie Thamel
Collegian Correspondent

Ever try to press cider or milk a cow? If not, tomorrow is the time to try your talent.

The Farm at Smith Vocational and Agricultural High School will hold its second annual Fall Harvest Celebration and Open Farm Day.

The farm will be "open" and working throughout the day so visitors can get a taste of farm life and its daily activities.

There will be many demonstrations during the festival in which visitors may participate, such as cider pressing, cow milking, and wool carding.

Farm manager Ed Maltby said, "The festival is geared toward the family, and there will be many activities for children to enjoy." These include visiting with the various barnyard animals, pony rides, face painting or painting a pumpkin in time for Halloween.

The Graffiti Grill of Northampton will be at the festival selling tacos, hamburgers and hot dogs.

Fresh farm produce, flowers, t-shirts and sweatshirts will also be for sale to benefit the self supporting farm.

Proceeds from a raffle and bake sale boasting the farm's home-made apple pies will all go to the farm.

Farm staff will be available to answer any questions regarding the farm and their Community Supported Agricultural Project. There will be an ongoing composting demonstration, which is part of this project.

According to Maltby, the farm's last festival was in the spring and drew about 4,000 people.

"Being in the center of Northampton, we should have a reasonable crowd made up of returning and new visitors," Maltby said.

The Harvest Celebration will be held tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. rain or shine at the farm, located at 80 Locust Street in Northampton.

Daily Collegian

We at the Collegian are always looking for new and innovative students to join our staff. Join our newsroom staff and add your voice to the largest college daily in New England. Not a writer? The workings of a paper demands creative talent at many levels: business, graphics, photography, advertising.

All you need is initiative.

The Collegian is located 113 Campus Center Basement.

Carhart

continued from page 1

"The legal studies department has been very good to me," said Carhart. "Especially at getting me my messages."

"It's not uncommon for a judge to be at a law school," said Ronald Pipkin, head of the Legal Studies Department. "But it is the first time we have ever done it."

Pipkin would not comment if Carhart could stay in the department as professor, except that it all depended on the budget.

"The course has been extremely successful," said Pipkin. "We have a lot of students that wanted to enroll in it."

"It's really an enjoyable experience," said Carhart. "But I don't think I am any more qualified to teach than anyone else, I just have experience to tell."

Gain Valuable "Real World" Experience on Campus!

The Collegian Business Office is looking for ambitious, organized Sophomore SOM majors for the position of

Associate Business Manager

Direct supervision received from the Collegian business manager, as well as the assistant business manager. Applications may be obtained at:

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center (the basement)

Resumes and cover letters may be directed to:

Michael McRae, Business Manager

Application Deadline: October 17

The Collegian is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer

Campus Rap

Compiled By Ben Geman • Photos By Nathan Martin

How do you manage to balance a job and a course load?

LEAH BENINATI Freshmen, environmental science, 18. Works 9 hours/wk, Worcester Munchy Store.

"I haven't had any tests yet, I'm far behind on my reading, but that's okay. I work one hour here and there between classes, but I have my nights free to study."

CHRIS TARANTINO Sophomore, 19. Mechanical Engineering. Works between 4 and 11 hours/wk., security receptionist.

"The receptionist job is good because I can do my homework while I work. It depends how busy a night it is at the dormitory. You've got to give up a little social life to maintain the job and maintain the grades."

MONICA TAN Biology, Junior, 18. Works 12 hours/wk., canvassing, Masspirg.

"I've done it for a long time, so it's not that hard. Work doesn't start until 2 p.m., so I get some studying done before that. I don't get home until about 10:30, so I study until about 12 a.m. I took out a loan and I'm coming here from out of state. I'm trying to pay it off so I don't have a big debt when I get out of school."

HEATHER CUTHBERTSON Junior, Psychology, 20. Works 15- 20 hours/wk. as a RA in Brown Residence Hall and lab assistant in Morrill.

"It's hard, but I've found that being an Residence Assistant helps me keep my grades up. The extra pressure makes me work extra hard. It's hard to find time during the day, but in the evening my schedule is free, which is better than having an off-campus job where I'd be working at night."

TEMISTOCLES FERREIRA Legal Studies, Junior, 20. Works 15 hours/wk., administrative assistant, Afro-Am Studies Dept.

"I'm working more hours this year because I'm living off- campus and I have more bills to pay. Sometimes I have to say 'today I can't come in at that time, can I make the hours up later on?'"

BRIAN STROHL Pre-med, freshmen, 18. Works at Health Services.

"It's not that bad. I stay up late studying when I have to work. My school work comes first - the job is just something on the side."

JILL BECKER Undecided, junior, 20. Works 15 hours/wk., Building Services Scheduling Office.

"The hard part is making you're schedule around work. On snow days, when everyone does nothing, I've got to go to work. I can't be a lazy student like I want to be."

The Collegian

is seeking applications for

DEVELOPING NATIONS EDITOR

Applications Due By
5 p.m. Wed. Oct. 12
Stop by the Collegian Offices, 113 Campus Center
Talk to Managing Editor Arthur Stapleton Jr.

The Collegian is an Equal Opportunity Employer

Holocaust

continued from page 1

realized he was a survivor. "This incident is a part of his identity forever, which makes him a survivor."

General meetings began over a year and a half ago, and are held every six months in Brown's Amherst home.

Brown said she has these meetings on both a "personal and professional level to open up barriers" for herself and for her participants.

October 12 will be the third general meeting, where children and grandchildren of Holocaust survivors will have the opportunity to listen to each other and most importantly, to begin the healing process.

Brown is not only based in Amherst, but also has connections in Boston, Chicago, New York and Israel.

CONGRATULATIONS
AD REPS

Ethan Bloomfield	Kara Kilduff	Rachel Haselkorn
Elist Thomas	Pete Jaffe	Craig Brody
Eric Korins	Tracey Katzman	Jean Ferriera
Cindy Connolly	Alex Adesley	Eric Abenaim
Jennifer Geagan	AD MANAGER	Lisa Tannenbaum

ALL WERE AT OR ABOVE QUOTA!

#1 LIGHTSHOW IN THE AREA
at KATINA'S
nightclub

•MONDAYS• GAY PRIDE 18 +
•FRIDAYS• COLLEGE DANCE PARTY HOSTED BY UMASS' FRATERNITIES AND SORORITIES
•SATURDAYS• SELECTROCUTION 18 +
•THURSDAYS• SELECTROCUTION 18 +
•SUNDAYS• LIVE SHOWS ALL AGES

NO WHEELS? NO PROBLEM!
Buses Thurs., Fri., & Sat., leaving from Haigis Mall every 15 min. starting at 9 p.m.!

ROUTE 9, HADLEY 586-4463
IN THE HEART OF THE 5-COLLEGE AREA

KLEIN'S ALL ★ SPORTS
COLUMBUS DAY SALE
October 6-11, 1994
SKI & WINTER SPORTS
COMPLETE SKI PACKAGES
ELAN CR 6.1 Ski $279.99
ATK DYNASTAR ADV 4.1 Ski $349.99
Packages Include: Salomon 577 Binding • Choice Of Nordica, Salomon or Raichle Boot • Pole • Mounting
K2 Select 7.2 Ski $319.99
K2 Select 7.9 Ski $359.99
SNOWBOARDS
HC-152 Snowboard With Freestyle 4x4 Binding $389.99
JUJU-149 Snowboard With Freestyle 4x4 Binding $539.99
SKI RACK SPECIAL! Barrecrafter SX11 $109.99
SKI BOOT SPECIALS Starting at $139.99
Tune-Up Special Coupon $14.99
HOCKEY
Stick Specials
Skate Specials
Helmet/Accessories
Columbia Bugaboo Youth $89.99 Adults $99.99 Big & Tall $119.99
SCOTT CB 20% OFF ALL 1994-95 SKI CLOTHING
Ski Jackets $69.99 KIDS $49.99
KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS HAMPSHIRE MALL HADLEY, MASSACHUSETTS

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gurley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Chris Taylor Content Block Affairs Editor Emily Marino Women's Issues Editor
Andrew Ferguson Business Editor Maura E. Hefner Editorial Production Manager
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Maureen Mastrowski Senior Bookkeeper
Ada Michelle Lugo Multicultural Affairs Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Kelly Spang News Editor Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Reality makes life more beautiful

Mark McGrath

I used to be a dreamer, but that is no longer true. Within me, there was a fountain of hope which would never run out, but it has disappeared. I used to think that she might like me, but now it has become painfully clear that she never even knew my name. Every raffle ticket I ever bought could have been "the one," but it never was. I was absolutely sure the Red Sox were going to win the World Series back in 1986, but then fate stepped in. All my dreams of the past lay shattered, like broken vases on a hardwood floor. I believed reality was the one to blame, but it wasn't. I was to blame.

In the course of human experience, reality has acquired the reputation of being one of the harsher, more bitter aspects of life. Whenever hardships, mistakes or misfortunes arise, it is easy to say "life sucks" or "reality bites," but is it correct to do so? Reality has unjustly earned the title "Smasher of Dreams."

It should come as no surprise that those who accuse reality of being such a dastardly thing are dreamers, the ones who have no concept of what it really is. A dreamer sets himself up for disaster, and when it comes, puts the blame on reality, something not of his world.

Don't get me wrong. A dreamer isn't a bad thing to be. Remember, it was a bunch of dreamers who founded this great country of ours. It was a dreamer who said we might go to the moon. Most of humanity's progress is the result of dreams come true, but it is important to realize that each and every dream will not come true. When one goes awry, reality should not be blamed, false hope should.

Reality isn't always pleasant. Sometimes it is a slap in the face. If one can accept the bad, there is plenty of good to be found in it.

Love is real. It is not a thing imagined. Many people try to imagine it, but never really find it. Those dreamers can't possibly understand it. One must experience love in the real world to recognize its significance.

Sometimes we don't take the time to appreciate our own existence as something real. Of all the possibilities, what are the chances that we, as humans get to live, and think, and experience all there is around us. That concept in itself is a miracle. It is real and it is definitely fair.

Reality is a beautiful thing. Everything around us in the world is real, and in it can be found some beauty. The autumn is a perfect time to see reality. Reality is the cool air of an autumn night, the sight of the moon making its way through a stack of billowy clouds, the sound of rustling leaves, and the smell of someone not far away burning a pile of those very same leaves. Reality is the feel of that soft, fuzzy sweater, the warming taste of spiced apple cider, and the ability to see one's own breath. These are things which could never have been dreamed or imagined, had they not already existed.

The next time the cards don't quite fall your way, when it seems nothing is going right, when you think that life just sucks, consider examining your hopes. Could you really have expected your dreams to come true? Don't just blindly put the blame on reality. Instead, take a walk on one of those cool autumn nights, and consider how lucky you are to be part of this reality.

Mark McGrath is a UMass student.

Filling the empty bellies of campus

Caleb Cochran

I'm hungry. Hungry, that is, for some changes in the food service here at the University.

As far as I can see, the four regular dining commons on campus are certainly adequate. The food, while obviously not gourmet, is generally tasty and always plentiful. The service is as quick and courteous as could be expected, and the dining areas are clean and well taken care of.

My problem is not with the DCs, but with the other dining options on campus. Our University is behind the times as far as providing options for students who are not on the meal plan, as well as for those who simply want to grab a quick bite.

The Hatch, the Coffee Shop and the Bluewall are the three main places to eat in the Campus Center. For students who have not visited other universities, these may seem like fine facilities. If one does venture off of our Amherst campus, however, it becomes painfully obvious that these UMass mainstays are poor in comparison to what the University could, and, more importantly, should, be offering to its students.

After spending a semester at a large southern university last fall, I came to see the UMass food service situation in an entirely different light. Before I left UMass, I figured that most other major universities offered basically the same types of generic coffee shops and no-name fast food joints. I was pleasantly surprised, then, when I received a brochure in the mail detailing the food service at the university at which I was about to attend.

Aside from the usual all-you-can-eat dining commons, I would have the choice of eating at two on-campus Pizza Hut locations, a full-fledged (though still no-name) fast-food restaurant, a Chinese place, a sub shop and a TCBY. To say that UMass pales in comparison is a vast understatement.

When I came back to visit UMass last fall, I noticed that Taco Bell had set up a little tent in the corner of the Hatch. Finally, I thought, UMass was at least starting to catch on. Granted, this tent was not a major step, but it was at least an attempt to upgrade the campus dining options.

Well, when I returned to campus this fall, there was nothing left of the Taco Bell tent but a big grease spot and a few tortillas left on the floor where the tent had once stood. So much for progress.

I cannot understand the hesitation to upgrade the food options on this campus. It is an issue that has come up before, apparently only to be brushed aside by the administration. Why? I'm sure everyone is by now aware that UMass is the second most expensive public university in the United States. Why don't the facilities in the Campus Center reflect this?

One reason, I'm afraid to say, lies on the shoulders of us, the students. Every day at lunch time I pass through the Hatch and see an enormous line of students waiting to order such wonderful dishes as tuna melts and grilled cheese sandwiches, always accompanied by an order of fries that always, by law, have a freshness date somewhere on the packaging.

Why do we put up with this? The reason is not, as the University would love to believe, because students enjoy the food. It is because there are virtually no other choices. The students of this University are ready for better dining options. Feed us.

Caleb Cochran is a Collegian columnist.

Looking up brings a pleasant view of the world

Jacob W. Michaels

I can't help but wonder, as I watch them, what the problem is? Is there something fascinating there that I just don't see? Looking down, all I see is one worn sneaker being put in front of the other, time after time, as I climb up the hill to my dorm, to home.

I look back up and see someone else coming down the hill. His head is down, staring at the ground. I don't even know if he knows I am there as we pass, each headed to our own destination.

But that isn't even the worst thing. My mind flashes back to a class I had the other day. Someone sat down next to me, and trying to be nice, I gave him "the nod." A strange invention is the nod, but useful. A quick bob of the head, given to strangers as you pass. It seems like just a random head movement, but in that movement comes not just recognition of someone else's existence but a whole conversation. The nod includes "Hi, how are you? Glad to hear it. Nice talking to you, but I gotta move on now." All this without having to even open your mouth.

The stranger next to me didn't respond to my nod however, so I tried the next level — a smile. Still, there was no response, so I just gave up and returned to the fascinating world of physics. Later, I heard my neighbor talking to himself. . . Maybe I just wasn't good enough for him.

A smile, much less a nod, is such a simple thing, but it's so rare as I walk around campus. And that's surprising when it can do so much to brighten someone's day.

Now, I'm not trying to say my entire existence is based on the approval, or even recognition, of others. It's just something that makes me feel good, to know that there are other people that are friendly out there.

Hey, you never know — if you look up enough, you might get to know someone. We get into the same routine and start seeing people over and over. Then it's just a simple step to screw up your courage, and ask the question: "Hey, umm, what's your name, by the way? I keep seeing you around and I thought it would be cool if I, well, knew." Granted, it doesn't make you seem that smart, but it's a friendly gesture. Then you might even become friends.

Of course, keeping your head up sometimes gives the ultimate reward — seeing someone you know. You always see it happening to other people: "Oh, my gawd, how are you? I haven't seen you in so long! How was your summer?" Sure, sometimes you can't remember someone's name, but that's not the point. Even talking to someone for just a few minutes can make them feel good, especially if they're having a lousy day.

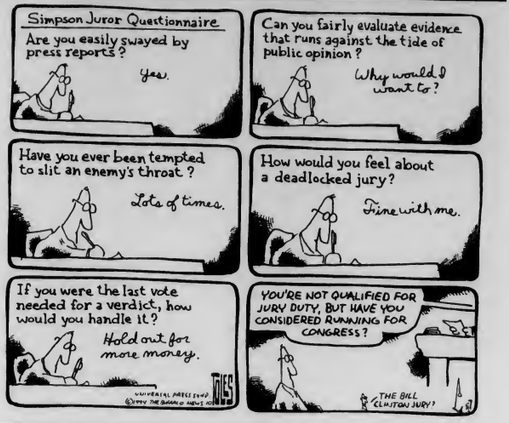
So anyway, fellow students, the point is keep your head up and be friendly. You never know what you'll see, and you could just make someone's day. After all, it definitely can't hurt.

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian staff member.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

SID, I'D LIKE YOU TO MEET ARIANNA-JOHNS HUSBAND, ROY-MICHAEL HUFFINGTON JR.
HUFFINGTON?
YOU'RE THE GUY SPENDING $20 MILLION OF FAMILY MONEY TO GET A SENATE SEAT, RIGHT?
WHY, YES! YOU'VE HEARD OF ME!
KIND OF UNAVOIDABLE. YOU MUST REALLY WANT THE JOB IN A BAD WAY, GUY!
WELL, I'VE NEVER REALLY DONE ANY-THING. I'M TRYING TO PROVE MYSELF TO MY FATHER.
HEY, BEEN THERE. BUT THE OLD COOT DIED ON ME.
THEN I'VE GOT YOUR VOTE!
GB Trudeau

Opinion/Editorial



Simpson Juror Questionnaire
Are you easily swayed by press reports?
Yes.
Can you fairly evaluate evidence that runs against the tide of public opinion?
Why would I want to?
Have you ever been tempted to slit an enemy's throat?
Lots of times.
How would you feel about a deadlocked jury?
Time with me.
If you were the last vote needed for a verdict, how would you handle it?
Hold out for more money.
YOU'RE NOT QUALIFIED FOR JURY DUTY, BUT HAVE YOU CONSIDERED RUNNING FOR CONGRESS?
THE BILL CLINTON JURY?
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND.
©1994 THE BALDWIN NEWS INC.

Happiness comes from within

David K. Chan

Everyone has a need and we all need something. This something is essential to your life and I feel very strongly about it. This something that helps you get up in the morning (I'm not talking about alarm clocks.) This something pulls you through each day. It's what you turn to when you need to be lifted. It puts the smile on your face and laughter in your heart. That something fulfills your life. We're all looking for this something because we know that we need it. Folks, we're all looking for happiness.

Everyone needs a personal happiness. Once you realize what your own personal happiness is, you'll always have inner peace and satisfaction. This realization will keep you content. Take for example what a respected philosopher once said:

"There is no disaster greater than not being content; Hence in being content, one will always have enough."

You will always be satisfied with the past, present and future because you will always feel that you have enough. Your happiness is in fact a truth. It is always right and you believe it unconditionally as a truth. You're assured that whatever happened in the past is done, whatever you have now is enough and whatever happens will be.

Now isn't that a great feeling? Doesn't that make you want to just run out and search both ends of the earth for your happiness? Well you don't have to look any further than where you are right now.

You don't find this self-happiness. It's not something that is searched for. Instead, this happiness has always been there in your life. Until you realize what it is, you'll always be discontent and unhappy with certain areas of your life.

In case you're wondering, this happiness is one thing. Remember what Billy Crystal said in the movie, City Slickers? He said that the answer to life was one thing and that he had to base everything in his life on that one thing. Just like what Crystal said, you have to base everything on that one thing, and that one thing is your personal happiness. Your decisions and goals are all influenced by it, that way you'll always be appeased with your decisions.

So now you may wondering: How do I know what my happiness is? Like I said, you don't search for it. Your happiness will reveal itself to you; we all have different ways of opening our eyes to it.

I guess I'll briefly explain how I saw my happiness. There's no need to provide the details because we'll have our own individual experiences. Well here's what happened to me.

Last year, I thought I was happy. I thought that I had finally found it. I saw myself changing and I was a person that I never was before. But I wasn't content. I always wanted things. When I realized that I couldn't be satisfied, I was unhappy.

Then I had a revelation. I knew that I didn't have to search for happiness. I started thinking about everything in my life. I thought about my past, present and future. I thought about my family, friends and enemies. I wondered if they knew my true feelings for them. Then I wondered what influenced my decisions. I wondered if I would ever get everything that I ever wanted. I wondered how I would utilize the short time that I have on this earth. Then I wondered if that short time was really important. Finally, I asked myself if I could always be happy. I evaluated many other aspects, and I saw it. My happiness revealed itself to me and I finally saw it.

So what's the moral of the story? What's the writer trying to say? Is he just chewing the fat because he has a deadline? Does he think that he's some revolutionary thinker or something?

Folks, don't worry about questions like that. Our time is short. It's important to be happy, otherwise you never will be.

Keep smiling.

David K. Chan is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Library renaming applauded

To the editor:

October 5, 1994 will be remembered as a landmark date in history of education at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. The decision to name the University library in honor of Dr. W. E. B. Du Bois was made at the Board of Trustees meeting held today.

It is indeed fitting that an important symbol of an academic enterprise, the library, should be named for one of the greatest intellectual minds in history, Dr. W. E. B. Du Bois. The presence of Dr. Du Bois' collected works in our library has served to enhance one of the primary missions of the University — to promote intellectual discourse in a free and diverse environment on issues of primary importance to society.

It is a great honor for the University to join these millions of individuals and organizations around the world for whom the legacy of Dr. Du Bois has served as a guiding light in their quest for equality and social justice.

We owe a special thanks to those on this campus who strove hard over the past twenty years to make the University recognize the importance of Dr. Du Bois' legacy. Their efforts serve to underscore the need to move towards a campus that is socially just and culturally diverse.

Prasad Venugopal
Graduate Student

Campus festival draws ire of campus

To the editor:

We, as undergrads from all areas of the UMass community, would like to express our disgust and outrage at the recent "College Fairs" that have been overrunning the mall in front of the student union. It is our feeling that these "fairs" have no place on the campus of an institute for higher education. It is degrading to our intelligence to have to come out of classes where we have been debating the adverse effects of advertising on our culture, only to have to side step a huge pair of blow up Levis and a hair spray bottle. Yes, advertising is an intrinsic part of our society, but is the campus really the place for us to test drive a new GEO? We are being taken advantage of.

The students are being lulled into the dream of free goods and flystick walls. Where are the public debates? Where are the loud and diverse voices that clutter the student union steps every semester? We have been able to hear few over the din of the Fruitopia Love Truck. "Fruitopia 101 – this class has no books" or the whiny voices of new Sony stars. This is more than free candy bars, deodorant, and the Toyota mazeathon. This is capitalism consumer crap being spoon fed our "Generation X" wide open mouth. This is the university selling us out.

Stacy Horne
Twenty-one other students signed this letter.

To the editor:

So far this semester we've had 3 predatory and dangerous 'advertising carnivals' occupy the south lawn of the student union. Seeking to take advantage of student boredom or well deserved relaxation time, these pseudo-real manifestations of 'college fun' are designed to create and strengthen loyalty to specific products, from fake food to TV channels. I'd rather see real human gatherings with real substance, but, in lieu of censorship, I recommend the University lower our fees by at least $300 for each one of these industrial intruders we allow to obstruct learning. After all, in a total free market system shouldn't we be selling the right for large commercial companies to have a shot at distracting us from the present and influencing our future behavior?

Michael Mauri
Deerfield

Students help out woman in distress

To the editor:

I had just started my car after the UMass/Maine football game when a campus police officer pointed out a very flat tire on my car. He said he was really busy and couldn't offer too much help other than calling for a tow truck or asking some fine UMass students for some help for a "lady in distress." These students were playing in a field across from the parking lot. Without any hesitation, two of them ran over to help.

My car jack was not in working order, so before I knew it one of them ran to another car in the lot to see if he could borrow their jack. In a matter of 10 minutes or so, my spare was on, the flat put in my car and I was on my way. I just wanted to publicly thank these great students. Thanks again guys.

Donna M. Dimino
West Springfield

Arts & Living

Matthews brings world flavor to NoHo

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

The David Matthews Band will grace the Pearl Street stage Tuesday, Oct. 11 at 8 p.m. with opening band From Good Homes.

Straying away from the fast hype of mainstream music and a creative current sprung from the grass roots, the quintet blends many genres making them one of the biggest draws on the eastern seaboard, filling clubs, theaters and arenas.

The band began three years ago when David Matthews, a South African expatriate settled in Charlottesville, Virginia after his leaving his homeland as a teenager.

"It's been a very natural, very low-key progression," says Matthews. "I feel like we've had this drastic overnight success. It's basically been a matter of word-of-mouth, people liking what they've seen and bringing friends with then next time around."

This "tell a friend" method of advertising led the band to record their self-released debut album, Remember Two Things. The album was snapped up by devoted listeners, so much so that 1000 copies a month have been sold since it's fall 1993 release, an astounding figure for any self-released work. Their sophomore release, Under the Table and Dreaming came out on the RCA label and was produced by Steve Lillywhite who also has worked with U2, Talking Heads, and the Rolling Stones.

Singer/songwriter Matthews has a voice similar to that of Sting, yet with his band (reedman Leroi Moore, violinist Boyd Tinsley, bassist Stefan Lessard and drummer Carter Beauford) they have created a smorgasbord of rock styles. The band throws together elements of folk-rock, blues-based funk, and their own special talents to make the band an eclectic whole.

Matthews believes that although he is the lead singer per se, the audience really hears all five members "singing" solo.

"The way I look at it, we have five lead voices in this band," Matthews explained. "I may be the first thing people notice, since I do the singing, but there are times when LeRoi's sax is the voice, and times when Boyd is at the front. And in Carter and Stefan, we have something that goes far beyond a simple rhythm section. There are very few times when the audience has just one thing to listen to."

The Dave Matthews Band COURTESY JOHN FALLS

Under the Table and Dreaming contains twelve songs that reveal the bands sophistication, smooth sound, and wily ways. Tracks like "Satellite" and "Jini Thing" sour over dreamy grooves. The other tracks are littered with oodles of funk and fusion-style breaks. Matthews didn't let anything block his creativity. Dreaming is a result of creativity run amuck among a bunch of artists.

Living in South Africa made Matthews rather disdainful when it comes to rules. He's absorbed a variety of cultural influences from the Celtic music of his ancestors to the region's indigenous music. His comment on South Africa: "It was difficult there, but in a lot of ways, South Africa is just a more extreme version of what goes on everywhere in the world."

The Dave Matthews Band plays at 8 p.m. at Pearl Street on Tuesday Oct. 11. The show is 18+ Tickets are available at For The Record, Tix Unlimited, The Northampton Box Office and all Strawberries Record Stores.

Murder by Misadventure, plays on Springfield stage

By Sue Goncalves
Collegian Correspondent

Stagewest kicked off its eleventh season in downtown Springfield last Saturday with a new thriller by British playwright Edward Taylor. Murder by Misadventure opened to a full house on Oct. 1 and is the first of nine productions booked for the 1994-95 season. The play will continue its run through Sunday, Oct. 23.

The "mystery play" always sells tickets at Stagewest and Edward Taylor follows in the footsteps of the great British mystery writers such as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Agatha Christie. These masters of the "who dunnit" have kept audiences on the edge of their seats in theaters everywhere. Their stories also kept many a reader up late at night turning the pages of their newest thriller. This element of suspense and surprise is all too often over looked by authors, screenwriter, and directors alike. Yet, Murder by Misadventure captures the feeling perfectly holding an enthralled audience throughout the performance.

Murder by Misadventure asks the question common in most mysteries: is it possible to commit a perfect murder? The plot revolves around an award winning writer Paul Riggs and Harold Kent as they match wits in their pursuit of the perfect murder.

A condominium overlooking the English Channel sets the scene for a game that turns deadly as fiction blends into reality. There are enough twists and turns in the plot to keep even an avid Hitchcock fan guessing right up to the thrilling conclusion.

Murder is directed by Fredrick King Keller who also directs for television. His recent television directing credits include "Columbo" for ABC and FOX's brand new youth orientated cop show, "New York Undercover."

Keller also has directed theater and film and usually specializes in mysteries. This is Mr. Keller's second outing on Murder by Misadventure, he previously directed the production at the Studio Arena in Buffalo, N.Y.

Murder is further fueled by a talented and seasoned cast. Alison Edwards, who has worked in theater all over the country, portrays Emma Kent.

Playing her husband, Harold Kent, is Julian Gamble, who has appeared on television's "L.A. Law," "Perry Mason," and "General Hospital." He also appeared in the Buffalo production of Murder.

T. Ryder Smith returns in the role of Paul Riggs, Kent's competitor, following last season's production in Buffalo, N.Y. Mr. Smith also appeared in the recent movie Brainscan as "The Trickster" (this probably explains why he's back in theater.) Inspector Egan is played by Shakespearian actor Kenneth Ransom, who has appeared in "A Different World," "Jack's Place" and "China Beach."

Performances of Murder by Misadventure are Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday at 7:30 p.m.; Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and matinees at 2 p.m. Saturday, Oct., 15 and Wednesday, Oct. 19, and on every Sunday. Tickets range in price from $12 - $30, but students, senior citizens, and subscriber discounts are available. For more information call the box office at (413) 781-2340 and for group and student sales call (413) 781-2340.

Augusta Savage Gallery displays multicultural "Stories & Dreams"

By Amy Paradysz
Collegian Correspondent

As one enters the New Africa House looking for the Augusta Savage Gallery they will notice to their right a myriad of bright colors, brighter than in one of those "Vivid" commercials.

The source of all those colors was Frank Diaz Escalet's acrylic exhibit, "Stories and Dreams," on display now until Oct. 16. The paintings are almost cartoon-like in style, depicting crude human figures of every race doing ordinary things like selling snow cones, standing on a street corner or working in a factory. They take a compassionate look at the joys and struggles of working class people. The themes range from the festive to the painful: families, street scenes, marketplaces, dances and field labor.

One of the most prominent works is "Navidad de Ayer" (1994). The most prominent image is the living room rug, which is bright and busy with designs. What is not rug is mostly blue wall. In the center of the blue wall is a crucifix, and to the right of the crucifix is an old-fashioned photograph of an old, balding man, looking rather like that farmer who stands in front of his house with his pitchfork and wife. Below the crucified Christ is a group of people celebrating his birth. It is the "Christmas of the year." The funny thing about the people is that they are different sizes. The guitar player is very large, and the dancers very small. The people are of different ethnic origins, but their size has nothing to do with the color of their skin.

"It's always been stories that I make up. Everything to me is spontaneous," says Escalet. "So from one day to the next, when I go to my workbench and start a new work, I don't know what I have in mind until I sketch it. And when I start sketching, it just takes off. It's having a completely open mind and not being influenced. So I don't know what I'm going to come up with. It could be Peruvian, Indian, it could be Jamaican, Mexican, the Caribbean."

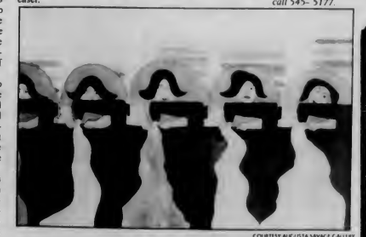
A painter of all types, Escalet believes that most artists concentrate on their own type of people and their own experiences. He, however, tends to stray from that particular mold. "I was born on the other side," said the Puerto Rican artist, "and I remember all the different things: getting off the boat and the sugar cane fields. But I invent other stories."

"I'm what you consider a late bloomer," says Escalet. "I'm almost like those runners who used to deliver mail in the old west. You know how they'd go maybe 15 miles and run a horse practically to death and switch just in time to jump onto another horse again."

In 1990, 135 pieces of Escalet's work traveled through seven countries and numerous museums behind the former Iron Curtain in a World Peace Art Tour. At the age of 64, Escalet's works are featured in the collections of such famous individuals as Ronald Reagan and Jacques Cousteau. His works have also been on exhibit in the National Gallery of Art and Smithsonian Institution in Washington D.C.

Information is available at the exhibit on how to order Escalet's prints from "House of Escalet" in Kennebunkport, ME.

The exhibit "Stories and Dreams" is free and open to the public. The Augusta Savage Gallery is in the New Africa House near University Health Services in Central, and is open Mon-Tues 1-7 p.m., Wed-Fri 1-5 p.m. The gallery is accessible to the physically challenged with an entrance at the rear of the building. For more information, call 545- 5177.



"La Factor" by Frank Diaz Escalet COURTESY AUGUSTA SAVAGE GALLERY

"Sure I feel a little bad...He was my neighbor. And I guess that was I was neighborly. But look, he was standing seven stories to the grill. And well... hey! You can't blame a guy for making one of an opportune moment... can you?!?" Daily Collegian...make sure of every opportunity!

Ahh...the smell of the entre coming out of the oven. Steam rising, and now to la...can you smell that lovely odor? This will be my finest culinary creation. Pays to know people at the emergency room. Daily Collegian
Yum, yum, yum!!!

at zanna...loggers

ZANNA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 N. Pleasant St. • Amherst
413.253.2563

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
...Denotes SPECIAL ENGAGEMENT
MT. FARMS 6 ROUTE 9 HADLEY 584-9153
Call Theatre For Showtimes
The Specialist* R
Three Cop R
Princess Caraboo PG
Ed Wood* R
The Scout* PG-13
Little Giants* PG
HAMPSHIRE 6 NORTHAMPTON MALL ROUTE 9 HADLEY 586-7550
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Natural Born Killers R
Forrest Gump PG-13
The River Wild* PG-13
Terminal Velocity PG-13
Quiz Show* PG-13
Only You* PG

They hot Andy wiped the rangtonian spare glaze from his nose. "Well! What a rush!" "Rush?!" cried Brad over the commentator as their bodies accelerated through the atmosphere, careening toward the centers of planet Amalita under great gravitational pressures, at a speed of 2700 gazillion kilo-blips and heating to a temperature of 9989 degrees. Sure it was better than being in NYC gastastic prison...But much better?"
Daily Collegian
see you later big city rights!

YoungLife
INTERESTED IN RENEWING YOUNG LIFE CONNECTIONS HERE IN HAMPSHIRE COUNTY?
CALL DAVE
549-3991

Book NOW for the holidays!
LONDON $173
AMSTERDAM $215
PARIS $229
MILAN $239
TEL AVIV $369
CARACAS $215
BANGKOK $468
Fares are each-way based on a round trip purchase from Boston. Student or Faculty ID may be required. Taxes and surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.
STA TRAVEL
79 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-1261

BUY BEER & WINE on SUNDAYS from Noon to Six
Montague Mini Mart
•30 Packs of Budweiser Available
•Only 10 Miles from UMASS
• Reasonable Cigarette Prices •
from Amherst: 10 miles north on Rt. 63 to Rt. 47N
from Northampton: 14 miles I-91 north to Rt. 116 to Rt. 47N
(Follow signs to Montague Center • Proper ID Required)
Open 7 Days from 9-9 • 367-9551

South Asians jumpstart club

Students attempt to increase involvement with community

By Michelle Lugo
Collegian Staff

The countries Bangladesh, India, Pakistan, Nepal and Sri Lanka are all represented in the South Asian Club (SAC) at the University of Massachusetts. The club is a social, academic, and peer support group for South Asian students.

The SAC was created two years ago. This year, changes are being made by returning members who were unsatisfied with the club's organization last semester, and who felt unwelcome as first-year students. The staff started off the semester by calling first-year South Asian students and telling them about the club, offering help, and advising them on issues of the University.

Because of the freshman orientation, most of the new members are first-year students; three-quarters of the staff are sophomores. The SAC meets every two weeks. Former president Sanjay Jain is the an advisor for the organization and Harsh Shah is the current president of the SAC.

"The South Asian community is not divided. . . It's a huge campus; we are just spread out. When I see a person from South Asia I want be able to recognize them and smile, instead of looking the other way," said Meenakshi Marwaha, vice-president of the club.

Five countries are represented in the SAC but most members are from India. There is another South Asian representative organization on campus exclusively for students from Pakistan, who are predominantly Muslim and hold different religious and political interests. Graduate students also have their own South Asian organization.

"Our culture is different. I miss the food, the music, the language, the movies," said Mitali Shah, treasurer of SAC.

The club offers social events, too. Activities from last year include a charity dance, dinners, and sponsored movies. Marhawa said, "[We have] different customs and entertainment. For example, in India, movies make up a big part of our entertainment. India has Bollywood, the largest movie production company in the world.

"A major part of the Indian culture is going to the theaters to see those movies. The soundtracks from those movies are the American equivalent of Top 40 pop music. It's the one thing the lower class and the higher class have in common — the movies."

The next activity for the SAC is the South Asian Student Association Conference, this weekend at Williams College. From Friday to Sunday, there will be workshops on issues related to the South Asian community. Williams College hosts the largest Indian art exhibition on the East coast.

There will also be a display of the religious history of India through photographs. Ranjna Devi who teaches classical Indian dance at UMass, and has a dance group called Natraj will dance at the conference. South Asian students from the Five Colleges and other universities will participate.

■ Bryce

continued from page 8

was just amazing. Sitting in the press room immediately following the game, we reporters had a chance at hearing a Rhode Island defensive tackle Lou D'Agostino give his overview of Ingoglia's Massachusetts and Yankee Conference record 313-yard performance.

"It was just the three runs," said the frustrated D'Agostino, "We made him look better than he really is."

Here's a guy who, along with his defensive mates, got run over by an opposing back for over 300 yards on 28 carries just minutes ago, and he can't give an ounce of credit to Ingoglia.

It actually made me laugh to myself when D'Agostino said that, because everyone in that room, including Big Lou, realized Ingoglia's performance was one to remember — or one Sweet Lou and his teammates want to forget.

• Midnight Madness is just a week away . . . and what a year it could be for the Minutemen.

• Felipe Lopez is supposed to be the real deal.

• I am once again residing in the dorms, and I still find it hard to believe that a cable deal can't be worked out. Here we are, a state university, especially with a basketball team of Massachusetts' stature, and the school can't work out a deal with ESPN.

Figuring that the Minutemen will be featured on ESPN five times, something must be able to be done to get it hooked up to the University's cable system. I can't imagine it being a big cost for the school.

• Just a couple years ago, former tight end Marv Cook led the AFC in receptions. Now, the Patriots have an even better tight end in AFC leader Ben Coates.

Not to mention a little help from the AFC's leading QB Drew Bledsoe. Could be the best connection in the NFL.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

■ Soccer

continued from page 8

"UMass keeps coming at you," McGrath said. "They seem to like high pressure, so we're going to have to deal with that."

UMass' opponent Sunday has dealt with more than its share of high pressure. It has been a grueling beginning to the 1994 campaign for the Colonials [2–7–1], whose anemic offense has produced but 16 goals while allowing 34. GWU is not high and dry in the A–10, with a 1–1–0 record [tied for fourth], but is winless away from D.C. (0–5–0).

Despite his newfound offensive awareness, Bremke still does what he does best: marking. His assignment Sunday may well be Marcelo Valencia, who despite missing a game, leads the Colonials in shots (37), assists (6), points (14), and corner kicks (43).

"We can be the best team in the [Atlantic 10]," UMass Coach Sam Koch said. "But we haven't proven it yet on the field."

■ Women's Crew

continued from page 8

dom order.

Because of injury, the starting boatings for the UMass team are still somewhat in transition. Co–Captain Amanda Krauss is expected to be cut for most of the fall head races.

Also on the injury list are stroke Nancy LaRocque and stroke Emily Turner, who both have been battling injuries and have been in and out of the varsity eight boat.

Other than the few injuries to the UMass starters, the team's spirits are high as they make the road trip to Middletown, Conn.

"After last weekend, we were totally psyched for this regatta," said UMass rower Liegh Twarog. "I think we're ready and I think it is going to be fun.

"There is a whole new attitude on the team and it is adding to our confidence in ourselves as a team."

Twarog attributed this new team attitude not only to the change coming from the Minutewomen's elevation to varsity status, but also from the new coaching staff and team spirit.

"Even though we had a pretty successful season last year, it seemed as if everyone just started getting down," Twarog said. "There is an unbelievable difference between last year and this year, we seem to have changed as a team, and that is good. I am really enjoying myself."

The varsity [open] eight race will take place at 3:20 p.m. at the Cromwell Boating Area on Sunday.

STRAWBERRIES' LOWEST PRICES EVER!

3 CD's for 25.99

Look For The Special In-Store Display

All budget/midline CD's reg. priced $10.99-$12.99, 3 for $25.99 or $9.99 each CD.

Sugar — File Under Easy Listening — Sugar's potent, high-octane 3rd release, fronted by Ex-Hüsker Dü - man Bob Mould. Now available at a special sale price! 9.99 CD 6.99Cass

Beastie Boys — Licensed To Ill

Orchestra Of The Americas — Sex And Seduction — Choose from 6 "Magic Of The Movies" titles including "War Is Hell", "Wild, Wild Westerns", "Music For Murder", "Final Frontier" & "The Great Epics" 9.99 CD 7.99Cass

Natural Born Killers Soundtrack 11.99CD 7.99Cass

Dinosaur Jr. Without A Sound 10.99CD 6.99Cass

Not Just The Hits! EVERYTHING ON SALE! ONE DAY ONLY! FRIDAY OCT. 7TH!

The Cranberries — No Need To Argue 11.99CD 7.99Cass

Rolling Stones — Voodoo Lounge 11.99CD 7.99Cass

Indigo Girls — Swamp Ophelia 11.99CD 7.99Cass

Sounds Of Halloween — 4 Other Titles Available 5.99CD 2.99Cass

Carole King — Tapestry 24.99CD 18.99Cass Box Set

Frank Sinatra — "The Voice" 1935-1952 — 24.99CD Box Set

Bryan Ferry — Mamouna 10.99CD 6.99Cass

Every CD On Sale • Thousands 10.99 or less! Bargain Compact Discs Just $5.99 Each!

ALL ACCESSORY ITEMS 25%-50% OFF • ALL VIDEO ON SALE!

Fuji T-120 HQ 1.99 ea. VIDEO TAPE

Napa Valley 96 CD or 100 Cass. Storage Case YOUR CHOICE 11.99 ea.

Laserline FDP 12 Flip Disc 12 CD Carry Case 2.99

The Nightmare Before Christmas 14.99 VIDEO

Pet Of The Year 25th Anniversary

Girls Of The Ivy League

Penthouse Video 14.99 ea. VIDEO — All Penthouse Video On Sale

NOT JUST THE HITS...NOT JUST THE NEW RELEASES! EVERY ARTIST, EVERY TITLE NOW ON SALE!

Featured Titles On Sale Thru 10/16!

Strawberries MUSIC AND VIDEO STORES

Check Out The Newly Remodelled and Expanded Music Store in Hadley! Located in the Campus Plaza, Russell St & Rte 9, Hadley!

HADLEY, Russel St. & Route 9 (413)256-3160
HOLYOKE, 2275 Northampton St (413)536-2222
PITTSFIELD, 241 North St. (413)499-0357
SPRINGFIELD, 1600 Boston Rd. (413)543-1517
W. SPRINGFIELD, Memorial Ave. (413)737-4128
ENFIELD, CT., Rte. 190 Hazard Ave. (203)741-3030

LISTEN AND SAMPLE OVER 40,000 TITLES BEFORE YOU BUY! iStation Strawberries, home of the iStation Springfield-Enfield

U Mass Chi Alpha Christian Fellowship

Weekly Meetings
Friday Evenings at The Campus Center Room # posted by the elevators

Jennifer Rochette
Happy Birthday to the almost 25 year old I love you! Peter

The Boston Globe
Offers UMass Students Delivery for
50% OFF

UMass/Amherst	Full Year 9/25-5/14	Fall Term 9/25-12/18
6 Days MON-SAT	$52.00	$25.25
5 Days MON-FRI	$30.00	$14.25
SUNDAY ONLY	$22.00	$11.00

To order a Boston Globe subscription ON CAMPUS ONLY mail payments to:

The Boston Globe
Campus Program, P.O. Box 2378
Boston, MA 02107
or call 1-800-858-4275 ext. 0

If you're a student living OFF CAMPUS we have special discount rates for you too . . . Just call 1-800-622-6631 ext. 549

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Jim's Journal By Jim

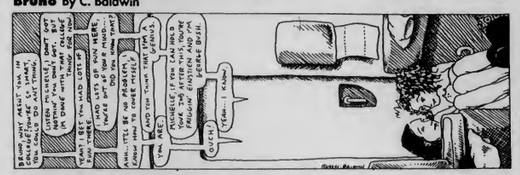
Today I was walking around and saw a penny.
I just walked past it without picking it up.
Afterwards I was thinking it was weird to just pass up free money, even if it's just a penny.

Big Man On Campus By Dave Schneider

MAN, THIS SUCKS! I CAN'T WAIT TO GET THE HELL OUT OF HERE!
SITTING HERE FOR HOURS AND HOURS ALL DAY WITH NO FREEDOM. IS A REAL PAIN IN THE BUTT... LITTER ALLEY. THANK GOD IT'S ALMOST CONTROL TIME!
AT LAST! I CAN FINALLY GO HOME...TO FREEDOM!
SCHNEIDER

The Day the Dollar Dio By Gleeson

Bruno By C. Baldwin



BRUNO, WHY AREN'T YOU IN COLLEGE?
I'VE BEEN THERE, I'VE DONE THAT, I'VE GOT THE T-SHIRT.
I'M HERE TO LISTEN TO CUSTOMERS' PROBLEMS, DON'T GIVE ADVICE.
NOTHING I'VE SAID SO FAR.
I'VE BEEN TWO YEARS SINCE I'VE BEEN TO COLLEGE!
I HAD LOTS OF FUN HERE, BUT I'M GLAD I'M NOT THERE ANYMORE.
I HATED THOSE TIMES!
I KNOW, RIGHT?
AHH... IT'LL BE NO PROBLEM. I'LL JUST TELL THEM I'M A GENIUS.
PSYCHOLOGY IF THE CAMPUS IS YOUR THING.
I'M GOING TO BE A PSYCHOLOGIST BEFORE BUSH.
QUICK!
YEAH! I KNOW!

Daily Crossword
Edited byTrude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Dutch cheese
5 Health resorts
9 Abbr. at LAX
12 Settle a debt
14 Knights' contest
15 Early boomer
16 Friend, in old Roma
17 Dermoloah, in Devon
18 Playmates, usually
19 Something essential
21 Britian gun
22 Annul
23 Dairy case selections
25 Melodious
29 Secondhand
30 Handel highlight
31 Reo maker
34 Sheds pounds
38 Exchange vows
40 Hams and Aaron
41 In a direction from pole to pole
42 Sharp sounds
43 Sentence must
44 "—la Douce"
46 Eldritch
48 Certify
50 Core group of experts
52 From a distance
54 Move along the apron
55 Clean slate
61 New York canal
62 Coach — Alonzo Stagg
63 Prickly plants
64 Energy source
65 "— a cockahorse..."
66 Stage direction
67 Los Angeles player
68 Act
69 Doctrines

DOWN
1 Memorable periods
2 Actress Moore
3 Idi
4 Mickey and Minnie
5 Valuable violin, for short
6 Concert instrument
7 Moreover
8 Note takers
9 Poet's muse
10 Mah-jongg counters
11 Part of NEA
13 The chef's la pianc
15 Assertion without proof
20 "Do — others..."
24 "— and the Swan"
25 Water barriers
26 Russian range
27 Money in Milano
28 Enjoy the present
29 Soviet letters
32 Impose a tax
33 D-Day initials
35 Green land
36 Scots' caps
37 Mattress support
39 River of France and Belgium
44 Ancient Semitic deity
47 Slow down
49 Small amount
50 Magna —
51 A self-evident truth
53 Dwelling
53 Melted together
54 Lacrimal drop
56 Friend, in Paris
57 Sari wearer
58 Play parts
59 Part of a tulip
60 Broadcasts

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

10/7/94

The Far Side By Gary Larson

"Hey hey! ... Before you go, pack up this depressing garbage of yours and get it out of here!"

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

1968 MUSTANG

Classic '68 Mustang Way Cool Wheels FOR SALE!!! Electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, 2 door, great way to pick up chicks and mods alike. Best offer call Beth at 6-4436.

ACTIVITIES

RSO invites all University women to open rush. Come and see what we're all about! Oct 6 5:30-7:30 Oct 11 8-8 Oct 12 5-7 406 N. Pleasant St. For more info call Kristen 549-0243

NECKC Karate Club Shotokan style - coed. Totman 101 M-W 8-9:30 F 7-9 All levels welcome! Call Jessica at 549-4229.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Learn to bartend with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools right here in Amherst. Free info session Mon. Oct 3rd. Lord Jeffrey Inn. Call 1-800-CAN-MIX

Phi Alpha Theta, the history honor society is now accepting applications for membership. For more information and an application please go to 612 Harter.

AUTO FOR SALE

1968 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Beth at 6-4434

1986 Mercury-Lynx XR3. 92,000 miles. Good cond., 1.9 lt engine. Sspd, 2dr/ho $2500 @ 549-5898

83 Subaru wagon 116k mi. Excellent condition $720 obo 665-0349

Honda CRX Si AT, AC, sporty black Blaupunkt stereo. 108K miles. Jeff 253-0906 or 529-2019

BOXING LESSONS

Recreational & competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Dana Bumpus. 549-5752

BUSINESS OPP.

Two unique food vending carts for sale 549-5099 Drew!

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? We have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service, 2 Oakhurst Terrace East, N Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

FOR RENT

2 rooms in private home. $300/ mo. Kitchen priveledges. Kosher/ vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished. 549-4853

Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery

FOR SALE

1984 Beich $1200/neg. call 6-2031

Dorm fridge $70 call 6-2031

Brother Word Processor WP 2700 Spell and grammar check, spread sheet. Excellent for papers $700 Debbie 253-0967

Dorm fridge - excellent condition includes all trays and shelves. $70 call 549-5014

IBM pc 386SX 40 meg hd 4m RAM includes Windows, MS DOS, new printer, VGA monitor. 586-9877

Macintosh 4 sale. Mac+ 20mb hd 2mb RAM HP laserjet printer $400 obo call Jeff 545-1181

Mac Plus, Imagewriter printer, mouse, Microsoft program $295.00 367-0357

Pagers at Pioneer Valley Knits and Tool 549-7231

Rather shabby but comfortable overstuffed sofa and matching chair $150 call 253-2499

Shades for less- name brand sunglasses 30%-50% off Campus Center MWF 800-980-MAGS

Solid oak triple dresser

Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354

Tandy computer system w/ drives, mon, printer, lots of software. Asking $75 or bo. Call Joe 8-7348

Watch batteries ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, cast stainless, gifts from glass to gold, custom designed jewelry. Silversmiqe Designs 264 N Pleasant St Amherst 253-3324

FOUND

Gold anaka chain with two charms in parking lot near Silvan call 6-5820

Indian motif pin call 5-1915 to claim

Wanna' a Seika watch with leather band in lot 28. Call 865- 3827 and describe

HELP WANTED

14 openings due to expansion local company has part time openings. $8.00 up to $15.00 to start. No experience necessary, training provided, advancement potential, flexible schedules, scholarships possible. For application details call 413 733 0057

$363.68. Sell funny college T-shirts. Profit $383.68. Risk free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs 1-800-700-4250

Computer Staff of New Hampshire is looking for sales reps for UMass/ Amherst area. Call Daniel at 548-9947

Cross ships now hiring earn up to $2000+/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary. For more information call 1 206 634 0468 ext C50011

Earn $$/hr fight pollution. Work for political change with Clean Water Action/ environmental campaign staff. On bus lines. Paid training. P/T or career opportunity. Call 584-9830

P.C.A for male quad fri morn eve overnight, Sat overnight. Call 546-0866.

Receive up to 768,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am- 5pm

Start own cash business, turn straws into dollars, money while you sleep, public service machine - raises people's awareness. Minimum investment $1,795. Serious inquiries only. George 617-837-0939

Wanted!! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel, fantastic pay 1-800-476-7710

We are in need of support personnel on an as-needed basis. Tasks include packing and mailing test materials, large volume collating and other general clerical tasks. Some lifting may be necessary. Minimum commitment of three hours required. We are located on a bus route. Fill out application or mail resume to Personnel, National Evaluation Systems 30 Gatehouse Rd. Amherst MA 01002

INSTRUCTION

Have fun! Make money! Aerobic instructor training begins October 15. Call 413-774-6351. Accredited by American Council on Exercise.

Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools, right here in Amherst. Classes start Wed. Oct. 12th. Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX to register today!

LOST

Seika watch- Mother gave it to me before she died of cancer last year. Gold and silver band, round face, lost at Berger's 10/1. Heartbroken. Please call 253-3134

Shoes 3 foot ball python from Pierpont. Reward if returned/ found. Has small scar on neck. I just want my pet back. please! Any info call Jay @ 6-3741

PERSONALS

Bella I've been lost without you. I realize I had let my goddess habits deteriorate but I have changed my ways. I have been to the hairdresser, gone to charm school, and am doing even more to get you back. I love you, Belle. Please come back to me. Beast

BF Hope you enjoy the gift. Love The Crush

Fa' iha raccard! The white house on Phillips Street are the best neighbors. Love JSJ+!

Grouchy brunch boy- the other night was nice, but where's the beef? love ice cream girl

Michelle Bolger- How's Friday?? Liz Richmond "supermodel". Kim definitely. No more Kim's cake! Amy Hansen. Oh my God! Baybank is 2000000 your MIA roomie

PINNOCHIO'S

Horseg drivers full or part time. Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Barnwood Walk. Ask for Bob.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female to share large bedroom in house. Great location/behind Dairy Mart/ uptown/ 258/mo + utilities. Move in immediately, lease ends May. No payments! Call Kristin 549-3957

SERVICES

"Balloon view" caricature charicatures. Makes great gift! $75, full color. Satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 586-5447

Call the playground ball 256-8085. Mag bases, fries, online games etc. New bbs'ers welcome!

Going away? Can't take fluffy with you? Ernie's pet sitting service 549-0838. We'll bring the treats!

Model search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues. Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Males, females, all categories welcome. 617-623-0367

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906

SHAREWARE

Free!! Shareware listing hundreds of quality software programs only $3.49 each. Call 584-2282

TRAVEL

 Spring Break 95 America's #1 spring break company! Cancun, Bahamas, Daytona & Panama! 110% lowest price guarantee! Organize 15 friends and travel free! Earn highest commissions! (800)32-TRAVEL

WANTED

Attn. Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jugglers, armourer to oversee games of skill and mopra guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. BAV Irene 584-4203

Campus representative Kodak products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S. Padre + Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1-800-222-4432

Campus representatives to sell great student vacations for Target Sport Adventures. Earn free trips, commissions. Call 1-800-822-4242 ext 310

Designer wanted for cafe menu board in Amherst. Portfolio a plus. (413) 253-9441

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Turkey Divan	Sweet and Sour Pork
Hot Corned Beef	Chicken Hoagie on Roll
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Turkey Divine	Sweet and Sour Tofu
Bean/Rice Provencal	Chickn' Hoagie

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Art Stapleton
Copy Editor ..... Jacob W. Michaels
Photo Technician ..... Gordon Fenwick
Production Supervisor ..... Sandy Bogage
Production ..... Michael "Fleaboy" Stern, Joshua Grey

Quote of the Day

"Journalism, terrorism, what's the difference?"

—Claire 90210

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You will be happier once you are in a position to make independent judgments. An emotional flap with your financial resources can get a new financial resources in order.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A get-together of old chums will light up your life. Invite them all to lunch or dinner. A relationship you want to maintain could be on shaky ground. Open new lines of communication.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Cultivate people who have your interest in humanity and social progress. Your artistic talents receive new attention. A childhood dream could come true.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your goals seem to be in nearly with someone's plans. A partnership will not be as productive as hoped until late in the fall. Group activities are an attractive way to go this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Overhaul the way you conduct business. Ignoring recent high-tech developments could prove costly. Consult experts who will make everything more efficient. Friends have an interesting proposition. Avoid investing money you cannot afford to lose.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You can confidently make a new beginning now. Put past professional disappointments out of your mind. Your performance when under a tight deadline is better than expected. Lavish affection on your loved ones while conserving your financial resources.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You and an influential person may be on opposite sides of the fence today. Flexibility and a cooperative spirit are essential to smoothing matters over another halfway. Play the role of hostess this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Renewed belief in your work helps you accomplish a great deal. You seem to be on the right track. Creative solutions are forthcoming. A legal ruling will give you added motivation. Treat mate like royalty.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Collaborative efforts enjoy highly favorable influence today. You and your partners find answers to difficult questions in a relaxed setting. Keep strictly to the topic at hand. Read a good book this weekend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Taking an unconventional approach today could help you reap a financial windfall. People who opposed you in the past are suddenly supportive. Remember who your real allies are. Family and friends cheer you on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Putting your positive words and feelings into action will melt the heart of your toughest critic. Regular exercise helps you stay fit while releasing you the mental cobwebs. Get involved in meaningful charity work.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Do not kid yourself short. The bulk of most people's pain and ridicule is not good person reputation be your friend work and wise choices are the keys to success. Stay flexible when making social plans.

Daily Crossword

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

10/7/94

PANDA EAST
CHINESE & JAPANESE RESTAURANT

"Best Chinese food in the Valley"
Lunch Special Daily Start at $3.95

AMHERST 101 N. PLEASANT STREET, AMHERST, MA 01002
TEL: (413) 256-8923, 256-8924

BEE BOP

If you've got a good vibe you can snap your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum. Mass Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

This Saturday! Only 20 min from the UMASS campus Comedy Connection 413•593•5222

JOHN VALBY Dr. Dirty

WALT WILLEY Oct 7-9 JUDY TENUTA Nov 3 DAVID ALAN GRIER Nov 10

Florence
An Academic Year Abroad in the Arts and Humanities

Spend a year or a semester immersed in the life and culture of Florence. Study at the University of Florence in private tutorials and seminars. Students of the arts work with Italian artists and musicians.

For information and an application
Sarah Lawrence College in Florence
Box UMAF
Sarah Lawrence College
1 Mead Way
Bronxville, NY 10708-5999
(800) 873-4752

SARAH LAWRENCE COLLEGE

Get Ready for MAY now!

ATTENTION: UMASS GRADUATING SENIORS
Learn more about our exciting Executive Training Program!
Join Filene's executives and recent UMass Alums at our upcoming events...

Resume Day, Friday, October 14th, from 10 to 4 pm in the School of Management Faculty Lounge

Student Reception, hosted by Filene's Chairman, Joe Malvin
Monday, October 17th, at 7 pm in Memorial Hall

We look forward to seeing you there...Bring your friends!!

FILENE'S
The May Department Stores Company

Sports

Minutemen on the road against New Hampshire

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

Now on to the hard part.

The University of Massachusetts football team has run through its early season schedule virtually unscathed, with only a one-point loss at Richmond in four contests. Now it gets a lot more difficult, with three straight tough Yankee Conference road games.

It all starts in Durham, N.H., tomorrow afternoon. UMass [3-1] puts its 2-0 conference record on the line as they square off with the [3-1, 2-0 in conference] New Hampshire Wildcats. The early season lead in the New England Division is up for grabs.

"There will only be one undefeated team left in the division after Saturday; it's either them or us," Massachusetts Coach Mike Hodges said.

New Hampshire features a balanced offense led by senior quarterback Jim Stayer. Stayer has a versatile backfield at his disposal with running back Avrom Smith and fullback Lee McClinton. Smith ranks fourth in the conference with a 91.3 yards per game average as well as five rushing touchdowns. McClinton, at 5-foot 11-inches and 250 pounds, is the bruising blocker.

"They are multi-dimensional, very balanced. Avrom Smith is as good a back as there is in the league, he can do it all," Hodges said.

The UMass defense, the top unit in the conference, simply dominated Rhode Island last weekend, piling up 10 sacks while allowing just 31 yards rushing. The coaching staff will continue to rotate the linebacking corps, with several LBs playing key roles.

Justin Riemer was named Yankee Conference Defensive Player of the Week in his first ever start. Riemer totaled 13 tackles, 3 pass breakups, and two sacks. Outside linebackers Roger Kotlarz [10 tackles, one sack] and Trejo Rust [8 tackles, one sack] both had big days against URI.

The Wildcat defense will throw different alignments at the UMass offense. A pair of standout seniors will lead the 'Cat defense. Defensive tackle Joe Fleming leads all YanCon pass rushers in sacks with seven through four games. Linebacker Warren Armes is tied for seventh in the league in tackles, averaging 10 tackles per game.

"They do some unique things, we have to be prepared for their different fronts," Hodges said.

The Minuteman offense, tops in rushing in the conference, will once again be led by junior running back Rene Ingoglia. Ingoglia outgained URI on the ground last week with a conference record 313 yards. It marked the fourth straight game in which he out-rushed the opposing team. Ingoglia averages 191.3 yards per game, over 100 more than UMass opponents (89.8).

Quarterback Andrew McNeilly suffered a hip pointer in last weekend's win over URI. The junior QB has practiced the last few days, and will get the start tomorrow.

"Andrew is fine, he's close to full speed. He missed the first two days of practice this week. We expect him healthy and ready to go.

"The history of the UMass-UNH rivalry are tight contests. A turnover here or a big play there, I expect a something like that to decide it," said Hodges.

After UNH, UMass has road contests at William & Mary and Delaware, arguably the best two teams in the conference.

"Our goal right now is to beat UNH, it's very immediate and very urgent," Hodges said. "It's a unique situation to string three road games in a row, but good football teams don't let that bother them."

The game can be heard on WMUA, 91.1 FM. The pre-game show begins at 12:15, kick-off at 12:30.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

All-America candidate Rene Ingoglia [19] and the University of Massachusetts football team heads to Durham, NH, tomorrow afternoon to take on New Hampshire.

Tennis wasn't this boring in the 1980s

Andrew Bryce

• Bring back Johnny Mac.

I can honestly say that I have not watched an entire professional tennis match, nor devotedly followed a tennis tournament since the mid '80s. I spent some time trying to figure out why that was, why I change the channel each time tennis is on. It's simple...

The sport lacks personality.

Guys like Pete Sampras, Jim Courier and Michael Chang have the talent to play tennis, no question about that. As for the uniqueness, there is none. No qualities that seperate the individual players from one another. The only semi- flamboyant personality in the tennis world is Andre Agassi, who has that because of his good looks and the his flourescent, Nike attire.

Who can forget the '80s with the John McEnroes and the Jimmy Connors?

McEnroe screaming expletives at the line judges, Connors flipping off the net judge. And that's not to mention the classic confrontations between the two on the court. Simply unforgettable.

I was disgusted by McEnroe's antics — since I was a Connors fan, so it was alright when Connors chucked the bird. That says something. I chose a hero and a villain when I watched tennis. I got into it.

The old flavor is now gone. I can't choose between guys like Sampras and Courier. What separates them from each other? Maybe distinct playing styles, but not much else.

When McEnroe yelled at the officials, and when Connors made vulgar hand gestures, it was the competitiveness shining through — along with the understood importance of putting on a show for the fans. And they both had their share of victorious moments, an ingredient for a true rivalry.

The men's tennis world needs something. And in may not be another John McEnroe or Jimmy Connors, and it may not include fits of rage given to the court judges.

It just needs someone to stand out.

• The show Rene Ingoglia put on was last week

Turn to BRYCE, page 6

Women to row in Conn

By Jody King
Collegian Staff

Starting tenth out of 24 schools, the University of Massachusetts women's crew team is ready for a challenge entering the Head of the Connecticut Regatta Sunday, only it will be a little different from their last two races.

"In the first two races we were either started first or so far back that we were really only racing against the clock, we weren't really racing against people. Sunday's race should involve a lot of passing," said UMass Coach Jim Dietz.

The Women's Open Eight boat will be starting behind Smith College and ahead of Temple University. The 24 boats will be passing through the starting mark 10-15 seconds apart. Dietz said he is hoping for a quick start to pull away from Temple right in the beginning.

The Minutewomen are looking to pass Wellesley [2 boats ahead of UMass] in the race, a feat which seems quite possible after UMass' 39 second lead in last weekend's race at the Head of the Textile.

This regatta should be helpful to the Minutewomen in evaluating the young team's progress so far this season.

"It will be a good opportunity to see our boat speed in comparison to the other boats in this race like Dartmouth, Brown and Radcliffe, who we will be racing against in the spring," said Dietz.

The Minutewomen are looking forward to Sunday's race. They are looking forward to the challenge.

"This race should be a lot more fun. From a racing standpoint, this is going to be real fun. We will be racing rather than doing a timed run," said Dietz. "I think the incentive will be there for us to pull away from Smith, and from Yale, who have been rowing very well."

The Minutewomen will face top Ivy League teams in the Head of the Connecticut. Massachusetts will come through the mark as the first non-Ivy starter at the tenth spot.

The teams are seeded as to the positions they've taken in the past few years of the regatta. The first seven or eight boats are most likely the schools that finished in the beginning of last year's race. After those eight, the boats are in a ran-

Turn to WOMEN'S CREW, page 6

Minutewomen look to knock off UNC

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The No. 9 University of Massachusetts field hockey team will have its toughest test of the season when it takes on No. 1 North Carolina at Westfield State Sunday afternoon at 1 p.m.

How good is UNC?

The Tar Heels enter the game with a record of 10-0-0. In those ten games, they have outscored their opponents 40-3 including eight shutouts.

"It's always tough to be No. 1," said UNC Coach Karen Shelton. "We'll make everyone's season if they beat us. We just try to ignore the poll and concentrate on each game."

"They [Tar Heels] are outstanding," said Donnelly. "They are by far the best. They deserve to be No. 1. Karen is one of the best coaches in the country."

"We know what we have to do," said senior midfielder Colleen Duffy. "We just need to step up. We all believe in ourselves."

One year ago, the two teams met at Chapel Hill late in the season. In one of the most exciting games of the UMass season, the Tar Heels came away with a 1-0 victory in double-overtime. Shelton said she expects another highly- contested game this year.

"I'm really nervous about this game," said Shelton. "We played UMass last year to a 1-0 overtime win last year. It was a really hard fought battle. We expect a great battle this year too. We think they are much better than their rank. It will all straighten itself out by the end of the season."

Donnelly said she also expects a good game.

"It's a great challenge," said Donnelly. "We're up for it. We've been looking forward to it. There is no better challenge."

When the game was originally scheduled, there was speculation that there would be turf at UMass in time for this season. When it fell through, the game was moved to Westfield State, due to contractual agreement that it would be played on turf.

"Obviously it is good for us to play on turf," said Shelton. "We are a turf team, and we really haven't played on grass in three years."

Both Shelton and Donnelly look to the same three Minutewomen as important factors in the game.

"Natalie Hart proposes a tremendous problem," said Shelton. "We know Hilary Rose will be tremendous in goal. Kyle Rothenberger is a force to be reckoned with. I just hope we execute the fundamentals."

"Our players would prefer to play on turf," said Donnelly. "It's a truer test of field hockey skill. Hilary is better on turf. Our corners, specifically Natalie, are better on turf, and Kyle's skills improve on turf."

Kyri Sparks will have her toughest marking assignment. Center forward Cindy Werley, who is a member of the US National Team, leads the offense with 10 goals and 10 assists on the season.

The No. 1 ranking has brought talk of a National Title to Chapel Hill. Shelton said she is optimistic, but cautious about her team's chances.

"We're very strong, but we're also very vulnerable," said Shelton. "We have a chance, but there are 20 teams that have a chance."

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

The University of Massachusetts field hockey team will "host" No. 1 North Carolina at Westfield State on Sunday afternoon at 1 p.m.

Roberts lights up win at Yale

By Candice Flemming
and Mike Reiss
Collegian Staff

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — After losing two 1-0 games in California last weekend, the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team was looking to light it up against Yale University under the lights last night.

Massachusetts	1
Yale	0

The Minutewomen did just that, coming away with a 1-0 win.

"Yale had a very good game plan," said UMass Coach Jim Rudy. "The coaching staff is shrewd and sharp. They reduced our playing area and it almost worked for them despite our overwhelming superiority."

"We played a low pressure defense because Massachusetts is fast," said Yale Coach Felice Duffy. "We tried to open up against that and counter. You can tell from their one goal that they had speed."

The first half was scoreless, but both teams had opportunities to score.

With 24:20 left in the first half, Yale senior forward Amy Busch slipped by the defense and went one on one with UMass goalkeeper Danielle Dion. But the shot missed as Busch did not get all of the ball.

The Minutewomen had a chance with 17:13 left when sophomore Erin Lynch shot the ball from 18 yards out, but hit the near right post.

Yale had another opportunity two minutes later with 15:56 left. There was a scramble in the goal mouth and the ball went to the left side. Then the ball was lofted to the far post, where it hit the post and bounced out.

The game would remain tied until the 54:49 mark. Julie Magid sent the ball to Melissa Mitchell who made a couple of nifty moves, then passed it to Nicole Roberts. Roberts got past the defense, went one-on-one with the Yale keeper and then sent a low roller into the left corner for the score to make it 1-0. The goal by Roberts was her fifth of the year and tied her for the team lead in total points [13] with Rebecca Myers.

With 34:29 left in the game, Yale had a good chance when sophomore forward Amy Porter shot the ball from 20 yards out, but Dion made an outstanding save by tipping the ball over the cross bar.

Immediately after that chance, UMass almost scored again. Off a Yale corner, Lynch kicked the ball to the 35-yard line of Yale's territory. Roberts controlled the ball and used her quickness to bolt all the way down to the top of the box. She took the shot from 20 yards out, but just missed wide.

UMass' next game is Sunday at 1 p.m. at Garber Field against Colgate University, who is ranked fourth in the Northeast Region with a 7-1-2 record. According to Rudy, they are the "new kids on the block."

"[They are] really pushing to gain recognition," said Rudy. "A win against one of the top four teams in region would do their program wonders. I'm expecting a tooth and nail dog fight."

Sports Notice

Tickets for Midnight Madness will be available beginning Tuesday, October 11. Admission is free, but tickets must be picked up in advance.

There will be a short meeting for all Collegian sports writers next Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Collegian office.

Anyone unable to attend is required to contact Andrew Bryce or Matt Vautour at 545-1851.

Men's soccer plays two over weekend

Minutemen back in action, clash with A-10 foes WVU, GW

By Ted Kottler
Collegian Staff

A well-rested University of Massachusetts men's soccer team (5-3-1) passes through the Mid-Atlantic this weekend, making stops tonight in West Virginia and Sunday in the nation's capital for two Atlantic-10 matches with the Mountaineers and George Washington.

UMass has not seen action since Saturday, when it trounced St. Joseph's, 4-1. A-10 Player of the Week Karsten Bremke scored two goals on the hapless Hawks, giving the German stopper four in his last two games. That victory brought the Minutemen's conference mark to a mint 3-0-0, good for first place.

COLLEGIAN FILE

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team will travel to West Virginia to take on the Mountaineers tonight, and will continue on to Washington, D.C., to take on George Washington on Sunday afternoon.

The last time West Virginia took a two-game road trip, it was brutally pounded by an aggregate score of 14-2 in the Cleveland State Tournament by the hosts and Miami-Ohio.

The Mountaineers then gave a much better effort in the Coastal Carolina Tournament, which they won by defeating Southern Indiana 3-2 and blanking the hosts, 3-0. WVU shares a three-game roll with UMass, having won its last contest from Robert Morris, 3-2, in Morgantown.

Some prominent local coaches speak of senior leadership, but Mountaineers Coach John McGrath relies on a much younger man: freshman striker Andy Leardini. In his brief career, this Youngstown, N.Y., native has made his presence felt, garnering the latest A-10 Rookie of the Week award and leading the conference in scoring, with seven goals, two assists and sixteen points.

"He's just a freshman, but when he gets his chances, he finds the back of the net," McGrath said.

On the other end of the field, there is little doubt who will tend the West Virginia nets, as fellow freshman Danl Braga has played 914 of 917 minutes in goal. He, too, has impressed immediately, not allowing a goal until the fourth game of the season, then recording a fourth shutout to capture the CCT crown. [Braga and James Sabin combined to hang a goose egg on St. Bonaventure, 3-0].

"Since the younger guys weren't used to playing Division I ball, it took them a while to understand what it takes to win," said McGrath, whose team starts only one senior. "But we're on the right track now."

Leardini leads a balanced attack featuring Travis Furbee [five goals], Scott Lamb and Koble Wilburg [four goals each], but McGrath is more concerned with containing the Minutemen.

Turn to SOCCER, page 6

Rose shines again

Sophomore goaltender Hilary Rose turned in one of the finest performances as the Minutewomen upset No. 1 North Carolina 1-0.

Teachers help to broaden young minds

The Student Teacher Education Program wants to help students get their teacher certification and move on to a career (Story page 3).

Ed Wood* is no B-grade flick

Tim Burton's latest film, Ed Wood, which opened nationwide this weekend, gets reviewed in today's Arts and Living section. (page 5)

Extended Forecast

An overnight frost warning is in effect. Today will be clear and cold. Wednesday will bring much of the same, with a little sun. Thursday will be fair. Bundle up.

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 40	HIGH: 60 LOW:55	HIGH: 60 LOW: 40

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 20 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, October 11, 1994

Iraq troops pull back while forces continue to move into Kuwait

By Eileen Alt Powell
Associated Press

KUWAIT — America's determined effort to protect Kuwait appeared to pay off Monday: Hours after U.S. soldiers landed, Iraq declared an end to its menacing five-day buildup and said its troops were pulling back.

The tens of thousands of Iraqi soldiers sent to the border had revived memories of 1990, when Iraq swept aside Kuwait's army and seized the oil-rich country. It was seven months before a U.S.-led coalition ousted the occupiers.

This time, Washington was determined to send a firm signal — invade Kuwait and the United States will respond. Washington began amassing a force of nearly 70,000 in the region, 54,000 already assigned plus 15,000 on standby.

The first contingent of 300 U.S. soldiers arrived in Kuwait City on Monday.

Hours later, Iraq's ambassador to the United Nations, Nizar Hamdoon, said Iraqi forces would withdraw from the Kuwaiti border and "are already on the move." He said they would be sent to a site north of Basra.

In Baghdad, Foreign Minister Mohammed Saeed al-Sahhaf said troops would be deployed to "other locations in the rear" to finish military exercises.

He told the official Iraqi news agency the withdrawal was ordered in response to appeals from "friends" and "in view of the fact that the troops' presence might be used as a pretext to maintain sanctions."

The crushing U.N. sanctions were imposed after Iraq invaded Kuwait in August 1990. Iraq has aggressively sought to have the sanctions eased, particularly a 4-year-old oil embargo that has devastated the economy.

Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein may have conceived the buildup as a warning that he could still cause trouble if the sanctions were not lifted.

The United States and Kuwait reacted cautiously to word of a withdrawal.

"I haven't seen anything like that, no," said Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Kuwait's information minister, Sheik Saud al-Sabah, said there was no evidence Iraq had begun pulling back any of the estimated 80,000 soldiers on the border. "We will believe it when we see it," he said.

Vesselin Kostov, spokesman for the 1,100-member U.N. observer mission on the border, told The Associated Press he could not confirm that Iraqi troops were moving but said "the situation within the DMZ remains calm." The 9-mile-wide demilitarized zone was set up after the 1991 Gulf War.

Pentagon officials have not said to what extent Iraq would have to pull back before the United States ended its buildup.

U.S. forces continued to arrive Monday to confront the Iraqi force, which includes 20,000 Republican Guards. An estimated 700 Iraqi tanks and other armored vehicles also were believed at the border.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

The Minutewomen celebrate after their stunning upset of the No. 1 North Carolina Tar Heels.

Senator Rosenberg answers ballot questions

By Kelly Spang
Collegian Staff

Student voters in the upcoming election will be faced with several ballot questions, in particular a question regarding student-run organizations collecting money on tuition bills.

State Sen. Stan Rosenberg (D-Franklin/Hampshire counties) said he is against Question 3 regarding a change in the law on student fees. He said he is in favor of Question 6 and 7 which together would grant a graduated income tax and Question 1 which would regulate spending on ballots question campaigns.

There are a total of nine ballot questions.

Question 3 is of particular interest to groups like MASSPIRG, a student run group which lobbies for environmental preservation and consumer rights, because it involves checking a box on students' tuition forms to donate money to a particular group.

Rosenberg said he is opposed to Question 3 because it automatically makes the student body members of a political organization without a conscious decision on the part of students to join the group.

As it stands now, students must deduct a fee from the tuition bill in order to avoid contributing money to a group.

At issue, according to Rosenberg, is not the right for student groups to collect money, but the structure of the collection process.

Question 3 is "fundamentally undemocratic" according to Rosenberg because he said students should take an affirmative step to join a group.

"The referendum takes this process and suggests something undemocratic becomes democratic," he said.

Rosenberg said he would support a positive check-off on the tuition bill where students must check a box to donate money.

Question 1 is also a MassPIRG initiative to limit the amount of money business and non-profit corporations can contribute to ballot questions.

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN

State Sen. Stan Rosenberg

Rosenberg said he supports the referendum in general because he said corporations can effect the outcome of a vote if they spend a large sum to influence how voters answer.

The measure would deny the use of any funds from a corporation's treasury to contribute to a referendum. In order to make contribution, corporations must raise separate funds.

Rosenberg said while he agrees with Question 1, there are some issues of limitations on freedom of speech which should be addressed, if the measure passed.

Question 6 would change the Massachusetts constitution to allow for a graduated income tax and Question 7 would create a plan for implementing the graduated income tax.

Rosenberg said 92 percent of all residents' income taxes would go down and the wealthiest residents would pick up the remainder of income taxes.

"[Question 6] is not about raising or lower taxes," Rosenberg said. "It is about changing the constitution."

New task force hoping to help fund education

By Andrew Ferguson
Collegian Staff

As a University of Massachusetts alumni, Sen. Stan Rosenberg (D-Franklin/Hampshire counties) is working with his alma mater for increased funding and a voice in the state.

As a legislature, Rosenberg said a key to the University gaining more state appropriation is for students registering to vote.

Rosenberg said the state is attempting to improve the quality of higher education, similar to its plan for K-12 education. However, he said it is necessary for college students to help in the fight.

Rosenberg said he urges students to register to vote, which is now easier because students can mail in their registrations. By registering to vote, he said students have electoral power to keep candidates in office who are willing to work for improvements and funding towards higher education.

In addition, registering to vote will allow the voice of students to be heard in lobbying the State House.

"It is important for students to register to vote, but you must also do your homework [on the candidates and the issues] and cast intelligent votes," Rosenberg said.

Rosenberg said the voice of student lobbyists is much more clear and effective today than past years because students are working together for common goals.

A "fair-share" task force is currently in the works to revamp the funding system for public higher education and to divide funds paid from the students and the state, according to Rosenberg, who was one

Turn to ROSENBERG, page 2

More grant money gives science dept. added opportunities

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts will receive $1 million grant from the Howard Hughes Medical Institute (HHMI) to support undergraduate education in the biological sciences.

This grant is part of the nation's largest privately funded endeavor to keep American students competitive in mathematics and the sciences.

"[The grant's] probably in the mail," said University spokesman Art Clifford.

The University is one of 62 institutions sharing the total of $96 million in four-year grants from HHMI.

"The bulk of this money is going to further undergraduate educational purposes," said Bruce Byers, undergraduate academic coordinator for the University.

The Massachusetts Institute for Technology, Tufts University and Boston University are the other Massachusetts institutions receiving part of the grant.

This grant is an expansion of an initial program that the institute started two years ago.

The University received a $1.2 million five-year grant which is still being used and will be used in conjunction with the current grant.

In total, the University has received $2.2 million from HHMI.

Part of the money enriches the Undergraduate Biological Sciences Program, and will be used to attract more women and minority students into the biological science fields.

"One of our continuing objectives has been to attract more undergraduates to the biological sciences," said Rodney K. Murphy, the principal investigator of the HHMI grant and a biology professor at the University.

"We want to open students eyes to the opportunities in biotechnology and the bio-sciences," Murphy said.

The grant will fund additional improvements in lab equipment, installing computer facilities used for course work, and to provide stipends to undergraduates who work in research labs, according to Byers.

Additional programs will include summer sessions, bringing talented minority high school students on campus to foster an interest in the sciences, Clifford said.

"This funding will help us continue to attract talented high school students to campus in the summer, and for students who come to UMass as undergraduates," Murphy said.

"We will have a top notch academic support system in place for them," he said.

Working with University staff, students will conduct their own research and experience "some of the adventure and the excitement of actual science," Clifford said.

"We want them to see that research is fun as well as hard work," Murphy said.

High school students in previous programs have done such experiments as studying the behavior of monkeys, investigating the phenomenon of programmed cell death, and the developmental biology of mangrove trees.

Most of the students going through this program have gone to college, and many to UMass. The point of the program is to identify talented students and present them with options, Murphy said.

"The students we've had come through during the last two summers have responded well to the challenge," Murphy said.

"They do it all and they love it," he said.

Minority recruitment plan awards scholarships

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

Insuring rights for students of color at the University of Massachusetts is a main goal for those involved in ALANA (African American, Latino, Asian and Native American students).

"The students of color in ALANA represent a variety of backgrounds and different cultures," said Dorris Clemmons, director of the ALANA honor society.

A request by ALANA to have a 20 percent minority student representation in the first-year class by the fall of 1995 has not yet been fulfilled, but is still a target said Director of Admissions Arlene Cash.

Cash said a minority recruitment plan is underway to increase the number of minority students at the University.

Providing students scholarship opportunities and financial aid packages are key methods in this plan, Cash said.

Forty new minority scholarships totalling $200,000 have been provided for undergraduate students at the University.

Cash said students presently attending the University can play a major role in helping to recruit minority students by visiting local high schools and hosting students at the University for a day.

"We at admissions are a small group," Cash said. "We need students to help in the recruitment process."

"This is a student empowered process," she said.

For the fall of 1993, students of color were 15.1 percent of first-year students who were U.S. citizens: 3.9 percent African American, 4.2 percent Hispanic, 6.7 percent Asian, and 3 percent Native American.

Twenty-four percent of first-year students did not return in the fall of 1993. The percentage of non-returning students by racial and ethnic groups were: 23 percent Caucasian, 32 percent African American, 30 percent Hispanic, and 24 percent Asian.

The creation of the Future Scholars of America (FSA) during the spring of 1993 has provided additional means to recruit minority students. Funding in the amount of $750,00 has been set aside for this program for three years.

As part of the FSA program, academic enrichment programs of at-risk high school and junior high school students will be held on Saturdays as well as during school vacations.

A six-week academic summer program has been designed to improve students' academic skills and to expose students to programs at the University.

In an effort to keep students returning to the University and to help make the experience of learning a more pleasant one, a learning center located in the University Library, recently named the W.E.B. Du Bois Library, has been created.

Here, trained undergraduate students offer tutoring sessions for all University students, said Deputy Provost Norman Aitken.

Aitken said a revision of academic regulations, passed by the Faculty Senate in the fall of 1993, has allowed for new efforts to be made encouraging students to repeat courses they may have done poorly in.

A request to improve the percent of minority faculty on campus by ALANA is a goal. Provost Patricia Crosson said this goal is extremely important at the University.

"As a community, we have to pay attention to who we are in terms of who we have as faculty at the University, at all levels," Crosson said. "It is important that we have diversity in our faculty for our community of scholars."

Crosson also said a new program known as the Special Opportunities Fund will be a mechanism used to assist in minority recruitment at the University.

"When we have new faculty positions, we have to pay attention to affirmative action, including minority faculty," Crosson said.

As of the fall of 1993, 21 new faculty members, who

Turn to ALANA, page 2

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Oct. 11

Meeting — GLB grad student organization, 12:30 p.m., Graduate Student Lounge, Student Union, Information: 545-1560.

Film — Not at the Mall: A Series of Film Experiences You Won't Find Anywhere else, 7 p.m., Bartlett Hall Auditorium, UMass, free.

Music — Faculty Recital: Music for Twos and Threes, Bezanson Recital Hall, UMass, 8 p.m.

Wednesday, Oct. 12

Meeting — Children and grandchildren of holocaust survivors, share stories, 541 Station Road, Amherst, 7 p.m., Information: 253-2153.

Meeting — UMass College Bowl Team, 8:30 p.m., Cape Cod Lounge, Student Union, Information: 546-2614

Another meeting — Debate Union, 6 p.m., East Machmer lobby.

Meeting — Alana Christian Alliance Gospel Choir, 7 p.m., Campus Center, Information: 546-3215.

Speaker — "Clinton and Europe: A View From Brussels" Therese Raphael, deputy editor of the Wall Street Journal Europe, 1:25 p.m., 204 Tobin Hall, UMass.

Fair — Study Abroad Fair, Campus Center Concourse, UMass, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Special Event — Onawumi Jean Moss, 101 New Africa House, UMass, 7 p.m.

Film — Jean The Terrible, Part 1, 202 Dwight Hall, MHC, 7:15 p.m.

Lecture — Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Studies Lecture Series — Coming to light: Doing Gay and Lesbian History, Campus Center room 904, UMass, noon to 1:30 p.m.

Thursday, Oct. 13

Lecture — Professor John H. Bracey, Jr., "African Americans and the Higher Learning in America," 4 p.m., Memorial Hall, Memorial Lounge, UMass, free.

Fair — Career Opportunities, Undergraduate Business Club's Career Day, contact School of Management office at UMass for more information.

Seminar — Chemistry seminar, Immunosuppressive Boronic Acid Dipeptides, Lederle Graduate Research Tower room 1634, UMass, 11:15 p.m.

Film — Fantastic Cinema: Legends, Myths, Adventures, Herter Hall room 227, UMass, 7:30 p.m., free.

Music — University Jazz Ensemble and Chapel Jazz Ensemble, Bowker auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m., Information: 545-2511.

Friday, Oct. 14

Lecture — Tim Miller will be speaking, Bowker auditorium, 8 p.m.

Lecture — Visiting Lecturer Series in Geology, Morrill Science Center room 131, UMass, 3:30 p.m., free.

Theater — Coatlicue Las Colorado present Open Wounds on Tlalteuctli, Hampden Theater, UMass, 8 p.m. Ticket Information: 545-2511.

Just For Fun — Contra dance with George Marshall and Wild Asparagus, Dining Commons, Holyoke College, 8p.m. to 11 p.m.

New moon celebration honors Jewish women

By Lisa Greenfield
Collegian Staff

Candlelight glowed in the small, book-lined room. Five women sat in a circle sharing personal stories. It was a Rosh Chodesh ceremony.

Rosh Chodesh honors the new moon and is a holiday observed by Jewish women. It is literally translated as "head of the month."

Oct. 5, (30 Tishrei in the Hebrew calendar,) marked this month's Rosh Chodesh.

Five women gathered in the Hillel house library for the first Rosh Chodesh of the year.

Hillel program director Yehudit Heller explained the long history of the holiday and led the group in discussion.

Although the holiday dates back thousands of years, it went uncelebrated for decades. An apparent resurrection of the holiday occurred about 15 years ago, and women around the world now celebrate the new moon.

The cycles of the moon are significant in Judaism. The moon is the basis for the Jewish calendar and is a symbol for the cycles of the seasons and life.

Women have always had a special relationship to the moon.

Stories in the Talmud and in Midrash (Jewish legend) tell of the connection.

The Talmud tells the story of the moon's destiny after indicating to God that the sun and moon cannot rule as equals. God tells the moon to shrink herself. The moon questions this unfair punishment for a legitimate claim, and God responds by letting the moon rule by night and promising that the calendar of Israel would be determined by her.

A Midrash tells a different story. When Moses went to Mt. Sinai to get the Ten Commandments, the men lost faith and created an idol of a golden calf. The women refused to offer their jewelry for the golden calf, and because of their devotion, God rewards the women with a connection to the moon and promises them that in the next world they will be renewed like the new moons.

At the celebration, each woman lit a candle that burned for the length of the ritual. The candle itself has historic symbolism in women's rituals. Putting out the candle at the end of the ceremony signified going into the new month.

Rosh Chodesh for this month had special meaning. It fell on the fourth day of the week, and as the story of Creation goes, the fourth day is when the sun and the moon were created.

The Hebrew month of Tishrei, seventh in the Jewish year, also made this Rosh Chodesh special. It contains the most holidays and rituals, marking the time of the year when Jews reflect on the past 12 months and begin a new year.

Heller said each Rosh Chodesh group takes on a unique personality, reflecting the women involved. No set format is used every month, as each woman will take a turn at leading with her own theme and design.

During this celebration, the women sat crossed-legged on the floor and focused on positive thoughts, rejoicing in womanhood and honoring the new moon.

Police Log

Compiled by Justin Doyle from University reports

Sept. 30

Injured Person

Police were called to the lobby of Crabtree residence hall to aid an individual who was assaulted earlier at a party. The victim was taken by ambulance to CDH where he was treated and released.

Suspicious Activity

Three subjects allegedly "casing" vehicles in Lot 44 on Sylvan Drive were reported to Police by a witness. Police located them, and after investigation, issued trespass notices.

Oct. 1

Assault & Battery

Geoffrey J. Russel, age 23, of 33 Baker Rd., Plymouth, was charged with: Warrant for arrest (#9359CR4679), violation of protective order, illegal possession of a class B and Class D substance, and assault and battery (domestic) in Pierpont residence hall.

Assist Citizen

Two individual reported someone broke their room window in Knowlton residence hall.

Disturbance

Police responded to a fight in progress on the 3rd floor of Cashin residence hall. After quelling the disturbance, they placed a subject, age 19, into protective custody.

Drug Law Offenses

Police investigating an odor of marijuana on the 3rd floor of John Adams residence hall, confiscated a bong.

Adam J. Dole, age 20, of 51 Gifford St., Falmouth, was charged on Stadium Drive with: Minor carrying alcoholic beverage.

Richard M. Evanko, age 18, of 14 Warwick Ln., Stamford, Ct., was charged with: Illegal possession of class D substance and minor carrying alcoholic beverage.

Intoxicated Person

Mark T. Scanlon, age 18, of 176 Uxbridge Rd., Sutton, was charged on Infirmary Way with: Minor Transporting/Carrying Alcoholic Beverages.

A subject, age 23, was found in the roadway on University Drive and placed into protective custody for his own protection.

Larceny

An individual reported that someone entered his locked room in Pierpont residence hall and stole his three foot pet Python snake. Police found jimmy marks on the entry door. Other valuable property in the room was not stolen. Value of the snake is $300.

Lot 22

An individual reported a license plate stolen from his vehicle.

Motor Vehicle Traffic Stop

Donald M. Sullivan, age 18, of 27 Monarch Rd., Wareham, was charged on East Pleasant Street with: Operating after license or right to operate suspended, operating a motor vehicle without current inspection sticker, operating a motor vehicle without a license in possession, operating a motor vehicle without registration in possession, and violation of the Seat Belt Law by the operator of the motor vehicle.

Andrew W. Sergio, age 19, of 12 Rush Pond Rd., Lakeville, was charged on University Drive with: Minor transporting of alcoholic beverage and impeded operation of a motor vehicle/ 8 in the vehicle.

Oct. 2

Alarm–Fire

A glass placed in a microwave oven in Cance residence hall exploded, and the plastic inside of the oven burned. Estimate $150.

Motor Vehicle Traffic Stop

Scott P. O'Reilly, age 25, of 39 Wilder Rd., Norwell, Ma. was charged on North Pleasant Street with: Operating under the influence of the initiators of the task force.

■ Rosenberg

continued from page 1

A special task force would be formed by the amendment to use a formula to fill the gap between what is needed and what is allocated by the state to public higher education and also to account for inflation and faculty pay-raises.

Rosenberg said the gap is currently $125 million.

Over a five year period, Rosenberg said the goal is to have the state pay 2/3 of the students bill and 1/3 to be paid by students.

Students currently contribute 40 percent of the necessary funds, according to Rosenberg.

The task force will also attempt to fully fund all need based financial aid.

A plan for a two year budget for public higher education is also being considered, according to Rosenberg, so students would know in advance what they would be paying the next year. This plan is modeled after the plan used for K–12 grades which operate on a seven year budget.

Rosenberg is running unopposed, and this allows him to travel to Russia with an eight-member Landscaping Architecture and Regional Planning team from UMass.

The team received a grant for the trip and will return eight days before the election.

■ ALANA

continued from page 1

are of color were hired, bringing the total of tenure track and tenure faculty of color on the campus to 12.6 percent. Four more faculty of color were hired during the remainder of the academic year.

The number of faculty members who are of color, relative to all faculty, and the percentage of faculty members who are of color over the past four years, counted for the fall semester was: 11.1 percent in the fall of 1990; 11.4 percent in the fall of 1991; 11.2 percent in the fall of 1992; and 12.6 percent in the fall of 1993.

An additional request made by ALANA to restore a classified apprentice program is now underway.

Peter Wozniak, director of the Physical Plant, said he is presently working on reconstituting the program which was stopped due to budget constraints in Physical Plant funding during the fall of 1992.

Wozniak said the program assists students to training in careers such as plumbers and electricians.

Four students will be selected to participate in the $80,000 program, according to Wozniak.

Distinguished Teaching Award Nominations

Deadline: Monday November 14, 1994

If you know a faculty member or Teaching Assistant/Associate who is truly outstanding and deserves recognition, submit a nomination in writing with a brief description of why your nominee deserves the Award.

Alumni and current undergraduate/graduate students may nominate.

For more information contact:
Lori Baronas at 545-5278
or E-Mail lbaronas@dcp.umassp.edu

Send Nominations To:
Distinguished Teaching Award Committee
Office of the Graduate Dean
514 Goodell Building
University of Massachusetts

These sneakers are made for walking

SUZANNE GABE / COLLEGIAN

About 5,500 people participated in Sunday's Jimmy Fund Walk, raising $1.5 million that will go towards cancer research and treatment. The walkers followed the 26 mile Boston Marathon route which stretches from Hopkinton to Boston.

Panel examines U.S. govt. blockade on Cuba

By Hernan Rozemberg
Collegian Corresponent

The University of Massachusetts President's Office recently sponsored a symposium to address the current political situation between the United States and Cuba.

The symposium, "The Cuban Refugee Crisis: Change or Constancy in U.S./Cuban Relations," was also co-sponsored by the UMass Institute for the Advanced Study in the Human Studies and the Office of Third World Affairs, among others.

Participants included a moderator and four panelists, William Strickland, professor of Afro–American Studies at UMass, acted as the moderator. Panelists were Rafael Dausa, director of political affairs at the Cuban Interests Section in Washington, D.C., Allen Sessoms, executive vice–president of the UMass President's Office, Flavio Risech–Ozeguera, professor of law and ethnic studies at Hampshire College, and Andrew Zimbalist, professor of economics at Smith College.

The focus of the discussion was based around the issue of the 34–year–old embargo, or blockade as some call it, of the United State government on Cuba.

Dausa opened the session by saying not just the Cuban people think the U.S. embargo has been an unfair and unjust act.

Speakers Risech–Ozeguera and Zimbalist also affirmed that many American misconceptions of the Cuban President Fidel Castro and the Cuban people negatively affect relations between the two countries.

From a political–economic perspective, Zimbalist said, "[The embargo] is not a policy that is good for the US economy," Zimbalist said. "It's not a policy that would produce democracy even under our own terms."

He said one of the consequences of the agreement between the two delegations in September was that President Bill Clinton "saw the necessity in Florida to shut the door to the Cuban refugees with the aid of the Cuban–American Foundation."

Closing the discussion and adding a different dimension to the debate, Sessoms spoke about the realities of U.S. interests and policies overseas.

Sessoms said Clinton should keep in mind the votes of the American public when it comes time to make foreign relations decisions.

"Politicians are successful only when they get elected," Sessoms said.

The real problem with Cuba lies in the image of Castro and the apparent threat and discomfort that he instills in the U.S. government, according to Sessoms.

"If Castro cares so much about the Cuban people, then he can do something for them — step down."

Carmen Deere of the UMass economics department described the makeup of the modern struggle for survival in everyday Cuba, and sent out a wake–up call for everyone to try to be fair and open–minded when it comes to examining the lives of the Cuban people.

"[The United States] can negotiate and keep an opening with North Korea and with China, but we still always have this difficulty with Cuba," Strickland said.

STEP in the right direction

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Correspondent

Students interested in becoming a teacher can receive guidance through a group at the University of Massachusetts called the Secondary Teacher Education Program.

STEP is an academic advising program on campus which helps students interested in pursuing a career in education to obtain their goal.

"Criteria for acceptance includes grade point average, recommendations, and a personal statement on your desire to teach," Czajkowski said.

The program is a good way for future teachers to plan their career. STEP is led by three advisors: Jack Czajkowski, Lori Walk and Malia Hwang–Carlos.

"Our job is to provide information on what the University offers to meet state requirements in order to become a teacher at the secondary level," Czajkowski said.

He said the state wants a higher quality group of teachers. This goal will entail a good deal of planning by the students to make sure all of the requirements are met, according to Czajkowski.

Massachusetts has two levels of certification. Newly certified teachers at any level (undergraduate or graduate) receive provisional certification after completing a required curriculum.

Within five years of receiving provisional certification, a masters degree in the area of study the person wishes to teach, is also required to receive standard certification.

The three STEP advisors direct students in the right direction, making sure the proper requirements are met in order to receive the certification.

"We work to educate students interested in becoming teachers at the secondary level, grades 5–12. We review their backgrounds and transcripts, talk about what subject area they want to teach, and help them decide which courses they need to take," Czajkowski said.

Out–of–state students at the University, who want to become certified teachers but teach outside of Massachusetts, are still encouraged to enroll in the program.

"Massachusetts certification has reciprocal agreements with 37 other states in the continental United States and Guam," Czajkowski said.

This allows Massachusetts certified teachers to teach outside of the state. Some states may have additional requirements.

Students interested in the STEP program should submit applications to Furcolo Hall by Oct. 20. Czajkowski said space is limited.

"We get between 20 to 70 inquiries per week. Many of these students are motivated by great teachers they have had in their past, while others want to help future students or begin a second career," Czajkowski said.

"Students will find that the STEP program offers a helpful faculty interested in creating thoughtful, capable

Build Your Future With BLACK & DECKER and DEWALT
•Excellence •Innovation •Integrity •Teamwork •Leadership within Sales and Marketing
Visit our booth at the Career Fair, tomorrow, October 12
We will be accepting resumes

EVERYBODY HAS AN ANGEL
EVERYBODY IS PSYCHIC
• Discover your angels and psychic power!
• Establish a clear 2–way communication with your angels!
FREE INTRODUCTORY LECTURE ON ASTRO-SOUL
SPRINGFIELD HOLIDAY INN 7 P.M. TUESDAY, OCT 11
For information: 1-800-336-8008

TOTAL FITNESS
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES • TREADMILLS • LIFESTEPS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • FREE WEIGHTS • NORDIC TRACK
FALL SPECIAL • '99 • 10 WEEKS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 WEST ST. ON BUS ROUTE OPEN 7 DAYS

Gain Valuable "Real World" Experience on Campus!
The Collegian Business Office is looking for ambitious, organized Sophomore SOM majors for the position of
Associate Business Manager
Direct supervision received from the Collegian business manager, as well as the assistant business manager. Applications may be obtained at:
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center (the basement)
Resumes and cover letters may be directed to:
Michael McRae, Business Manager
Application Deadline: October 17
The Collegian is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer

Come down to the Collegian...
We're waiting for you.
Come down to the Collegian,
we like to write the news. We want you to join us,
the Collegian and you. Your new campus home.

113 Campus Center Basement 545-3500

Tomorrow at the
Hampden Munchies & More Snackbar
(At the top of the horseshoe in Southwest)
The Grand opening of TCBY Frozen Yogurt!
3:00 P.M. – 7:00 P.M.
T-Shirt Raffle
Balloons
&
The Country's Best Yogurt!
The Hampden Munchies & More Snackbar is open until 1:00 A.M. everyday!

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Emily Martino Women's Issues Editor
Andrew Ferguson Business Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Maureen Mazurowski Senior Bookkeeper
Ada Michelle Lugo Multicultural Affairs Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Kelly Spang News Editor Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Collegian Editorial Board now in place

On Sept. 19 the staff of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian voted to implement a constitutional amendment for conveying our views to the campus.

The policy creates a five-member editorial board to meet daily and discuss issues of importance to the campus community. The members are made up of the editorial editor, the editor-in-chief and one member each from the departments of news, graphics and business.

Policy editorials are important to the newspaper because they allow us to take an active role on campus. In our news coverage, we strive to be as objective as possible, but we feel it is important to take a stand on issues affecting students, faculty and the University community.

The editorial board votes on the policies that will run, but not every staff member's opinion is necessarily reflected by the editorial. Even though we have decided to use our voice in this way, our news coverage will remain unbiased.

Editorial board meetings are open to staff members only. If you have a concern or a particular issue you think we should address, feel free to drop a note in the editorial editor's box with your name, phone number and brief explanation of your position.

Quiet voices through shattered glass

Nathan Crick

Through the glass was a parking lot, cracked and dirty with the fingers of grass grasping upwards from the ground. Music echoed in the room from my radio tucked in the corner. I stood atop a desk, plastered in dust and paint, scraping the window frame and silently humming to the song, whatever it happened to be.

Outside there might have been snow falling, or the rain pelting the ground as it did me once, somewhere. Scrape. Chip. Trees swayed in the breeze, glimpses of familiar friends waving.

The right side of the window refused to push open, making it hard for me to get all the old paint off the inside. I pulled the handle, wedged in my scraper, pushed on the wood, and kicked the wall, cursing.

There might have been a heavy wind, whipping through my jacket as I walked alone to a friend's. Then he was gone, and I remembered my last coffee, waiting as we descended. The song played, I waved, she disappeared, people lied and laughed and continued to fade. I might have closed my eyes.

Something gave in front of me, and in a moment I thought I felt the window swing open easily. Yet shattered glass fell outside, breaking on the pavement, my arm extended through an empty frame. A twinge of motion, blood running down my wrist. The song played, soundtrack to my shock, grasping tightly my arm, running out the building, calling to a man at the nearby bank to help me, please, help me.

*****

I was alone in the hallway, lying on my back waiting for the x-rays, staring at the ceiling. Footsteps down the hall approached, turning into the face of one of my brother's old friends from school. Hello George...He's doing okay, getting married next year, going to seminary. George smiled, shaking his head, saying he'd never have pictured it. Good luck, he said, and look at it this way. You got a scar now. Scars are cool. He gave an emphatic thumbs up, and then turned back into footsteps, walking away.

*****

I awoke with a heaviness across my stomach, this huge white cast extending beyond my elbow. I moved my arm and felt much like a cyborg. My stomach felt sick. The walls were blank and echoed only the slurred questions of the drunken man outside who kept asking how long it takes alcohol to leave your system.

******

How'd you hurt your arm?

I put my hand through a window.

Oooooooh....drink that much or were you just that mad?

No, I was just stupid.

I began to think I should wear a cape with a big C on the back. Cast Man. The superhero with the ability to begin friendly conversation with anyone. I'd be sent into hostage situations and talk people down by getting them interested in how I hurt my arm until the swat team could come in behind them as they asked to sign it.

"Stay out or I'll blow his head off!" Enter Cast Man.

"I SAID STAY....hey man, how'd you hurt your arm?"

People asked me in checkout lines. People asked me at bus stops. People asked me in bookstores. A Gulf vet spontaneously told me about how guys in Saudi would try to go home by playing volleyball so intensely that they broke their wrist. A girl started asking me about my sling while I was dancing around in a bar.

Everyone loved me. I was different, I embodied friendly, harmless and polite conversation. I was the cure to boredom.

*****

Now my skin can breathe in the air again.

My form draws no looks. My greeting draws only a nod. I walk through crowds and it is like I am walking through trees. Eyes cast downwards on the pavement or the ground, or smile quickly and disappear in a curtain of hair.

No more excuses.

"Do you pay for that or does your daddy?" smirks some strange man behind me as I use my VISA card.

I walked for a while in a world of people. I lived within another self in a reality of diminished illusions, letting me see a glimpse of maybe something noble and desperate within us all. Smile because we can. Speak because we desire it so much. Feel part of something because we are so often alone.

Without my cape, the words of greeting stay within, or reduced to a nod and a smile. Then only the empty ones remain; shouting, scoffing, lying and cluttering the air with their words. Scarring us all slowly, until we shatter something more to escape them.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

The truth needs to 'come out'

Wendy Darling

"So, wait — there are only like 40 people out on this entire campus?

The question took me by surprise. As an out and active member of the campus gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender community, I had come to be somewhat content with the number of UMass students who were out of the closet and active in the community. After all, living on the 2 in 20 Floor for GLBT Students and Their Heterosexual Allies, I felt like I was surrounded by queer people all the time. And, goodness, look at the LBGA and all those people in Northampton! There are plenty of out and active queer people at UMass. Or so I thought.

My freshman friend was right, however. There aren't many of us, at least not many that we know about, just think about it. There are 11,000 UMass students living in residence halls. Around 40 of them live on the 2 in 20 Floor. All of them are out to some degree; if they weren't, they wouldn't be living there. I know maybe 20 other queer people living on campus. So that makes 60. Sixty people out of 11,000. Can you say closet?

Even considering students who live off campus — and I know 20 or 30 who do — it's ridiculous that there are so few of us up and active and visible on campus. I'm not going to pull any of that 10 percent business here, but there is no way that the 100 queer people I know constitute all the queer people at UMass. No way. Not after seeing all those closet-cases at the Eurohouse dances. Not after seeing all those eyes lingering on the LBGA table set up during Southwest Week last spring. Not when I see all those lonely people at the DCs, the ones who eat by themselves, who feel like they can't talk to anyone, who feel alone even in a crowd.

In any case, today is not a day for closets. It's National Coming Out Day. It's always a good day to come out, but today is especially good. Wear a button. Visit the LBGA office in the Student Union. Go to the rally on the steps at noon. Talk to your roommate. Talk to your parents, your brothers and sisters, the people at work. Call 5-2632 and get connected to the campus community. Start living your life and stop living the one everyone else wants you to live.

Coming out isn't easy, but it does have its perks. You can stop lying all the time, for one thing. You can find friends, for another. You wouldn't believe how many queer people you meet once you come out of the closet. And once you get out, you can start to live the way you want to live. By coming out, you let people know that you exist. If they like you, but have thing against lesbians or gays or bisexuals or transgender people, then maybe it's because they don't know any. Let them know at least one. It will make life easier for you — and for all of us.

Wendy Darling is a Collegian staff member.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

SIDS STILL SCHMOOZING WITH SENATE WANNABE MICHAEL ROY HUFFINGTON.
PEOPLE ASK ME WHAT I'VE ACCOMPLISHED IN MY 21 MONTHS IN CONGRESS...
WELL, THE ANSWER IS LOTS! I PLANNED MY SENATE CAMPAIGN, I LINED UP MY ADVERTISING TEAM, I RETURNED PHONE CALLS, I RESTED UP!
INTERESTING. YOU KNOW, MICHAEL ROY, THE CLOSER I LOOK AT YOU AND YOUR RECORD, I... I...
YES?
NEVER MIND. I'M SURE IT'S JUST ME.
WHAT? WHAT?

Opinion/Editorial

QUESTION BOX
Q. Would term-limit legislation apply to all incumbents ?
S.C., Buffalo
Not to the permanent incumbent.
THE ONE THEY ALL TURN TO FOR GUIDANCE.

Fed policy needs a new direction

Few issues in Washington gather as much attention as presidential appointments, which is why Clarence Thomas and Ruth Bader Ginsberg have become household names. Bill Clinton will soon name someone to one of the nation's most powerful positions, and if you blink, you might miss it.

The chairman of the Federal Reserve Board has an enormous amount of power. He is the overseer of a board which can independently control the money supply and the rate of interest, and the only check Congress has to this power is the threat to take away that independence.

Current chairman Alan Greenspan's second four-year term is set to expire in January 1995, and the person Clinton nominates to replace him could have a profound effect on the direction the economy takes for the next four years.

When Ronald Reagan announced in July of 1986 that Greenspan would replace former chairman Paul Volcker, the markets took a dive. Since then, however, Wall Street has considered Greenspan a savior; indeed, the Dow Jones blue chips saw an unprecedented rise under his tenure which all but erased the ill-fated October Tuesday in 1987 from investor's minds.

But Greenspan was unable to cushion the 1990-91 recession, or do much about the unprecedented stagnation which followed. Tight money and slow, incremental cuts in interest rates prevented the Fed from meeting its money supply growth targets (see graph). Moreover, Greenspan's trigger-happy responses to inflation fears, which include five increases in interest-rate so far this year, is evidence that the Fed's policy direction needs a facelift.

To understand the Fed chairman's role requires an understanding of the make-up of the Federal Reserve system itself. The Federal Reserve act of 1913 established an independent central bank which could adopt monetary policy untethered by "short-term" congressional concerns. In fact, the only control elected government has on the Fed is over the appointments of the governors and chairmen.

The reason that the Fed is independent is not to create a behemoth governmental organization which is beyond the reach of the people; Fed independence is actually something which benefits the nation. If the Fed were required to report directly to the voters, as is Congress, then the long-term health of the economy would be forsaken for short-term political gain. As it is, the Fed can make decisions it feels are in the nation's best interests, even if they might not serve immediate political gains.

But just because the Fed is not tied directly to public opinion does not mean it is not ultimately accountable to the people which it serves. This is something which Wall Street investors and Washington conservatives often overlook.

The role of the Fed has somehow been narrowed to be the "watchdog of inflation." However, monetary policy is supposed to affect not only the money and financial markets, but should steer economic growth as well — to forsake one for the other is one-dimensional policy, and we should expect more from the Fed.

Under Greenspan's command, the Fed has narrowly focused its objective on inflation and the money supply, not on economic growth. In fact, when Greenspan tightened money on Feb. 4 of this year, his only objective was to curb "inflationary expectations." And a 25 point rise in short-term rates ultimately led to a 50 point rise in long-term bonds, proving that raising rates had two negative effects: slowing growth by increasing the cost to borrow money, and inducing a frenzied paranoia over inflation.

Harvard economist James Tobin calls these moves "at best premature and, arguably, based on spurious evidence of inflation in the making." Greenspan later announced that, since conventional monetary measures were no longer reliable, he began to turn to gold as a means to gauge monetary policy. Further increases in short-term interest rates were designed, according to the Fed, to stabilize the markets and to quell the fears of investors.

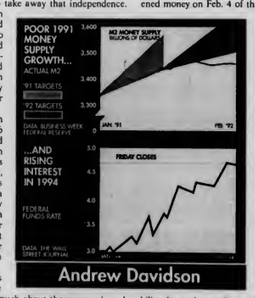
As it was, a certain increase in interest rates was necessary this year. As the economy grows and as labor markets begin to tighten, reigning in the money supply is necessary to combat the threat of wage pressures which could potentially lead to inflation.

Alan S. Blinder, the recently appointed Fed vice-chairman, and a man who conservatives rail for being a "self-confessed dove on inflation," agreed with this thinking and did something his conservative predecessor, David W. Mullins, hadn't done in three years: vote to raise interest rates.

Conventional wisdom has it that Blinder is the man Clinton will choose to succeed Greenspan, which apparently has markets in an uproar. But to write him off as "soft on inflation," as the dogmatic idealogue Paul Craig Roberts has done, is to subscribe to one-sided monetary policy. Blinder has already shown that he is committed to fighting inflation — the difference is that he is not willing to fight it at all costs.

James Tobin astutely notices that "the markets just aren't sophisticated about economics." So maybe the markets may suffer a little bit if the Fed takes a new direction under Blinder; we might very well see another "correction" (market lingo for a small crash) in the Dow. But maybe we can afford to pay that price, if it means that monetary policy will affect those of us not making our living on Wall Street.

Andrew Davidson is a Collegian columnist.



Andrew Davidson

Letters to the Editor

30-hour work week not recognized

To the editor:

This letter is concerning the October 7 "Campus Rap" by Ben Geman which was about balancing a job and a course load. All the students he interviewed work 15 hours or less. What about the students here who work more? Mr. Geman should have considered finding a wider variety of working students.

I am a junior in the Communication Disorders major. I live off-campus and work 30 hours a week and maintain a 5-course schedule. I'm a cook at an extremely busy restaurant.

I bust my ass over a hot grill for 4 days a week to pay my bills to attend this University. The least Mr. Geman could have done was to acknowledge my hard work and others like me.

Jody Warrington
Amherst

Library renaming applauded by chair

To the editor:

I believe Dr. Du Bois would be delighted at the unanimous decision of the Trustees to invest our library with his name. He, I think, would be quite pleased at the unanimity of the decision and at the steadfast pursuit of this goal by Chancellor David K. Scott's administration.

What would certainly also please the doctor even more is the recognition that the association of the library with his name (which in any case, needs no further "honoring" at our hands) will be accompanied by an upgrading, enhancing and restoration of the library.

The knowledge that, as a result of the association, the library in the public university of his native state will once again be worthy of the institution and of the students, faculty and the people of the Commonwealth would bring him great satisfaction.

But, the doctor would absolutely be most delighted and gratified that this development was the consequence of a disciplined, serious, well-organized and responsible student initiative.

He would, as we do, commend the members of the student coalition and their leadership. He would see their work and their accomplishment as justification of the principle of "education for service, education for action, education for leadership" to which his life was devoted.

Well done, young folk. The doctor would have been proud of you.

Esther M.A. Terry
Chair for the W.E.B. Du Bois
Dept. of Afro-American Studies

Arts & Living

Body Count tops weekly reviews

BORN DEAD
Body Count
Virgin Records

Body Count burst on the scene as a novelty, helping the Lollapalooza generation come of age. The band's charismatic leader, Ice-T, stirred things up when things needed to be stirred. Now it's 1994 and times have changed.

Without the surroundings of controversy and media hype, Body Count's sophomore release, Born Dead, is about the music. Unfortunately, the record gives way to any kind of innovation. The Zep and Sabbath inspired riffs are there as much as their debut album, yet, it's the incorporation of Slayer-like rhythms into the band's repertoire that keeps Born Dead abrasive and, most importantly, in your face from start to finish. From speed metal ditties like "Killin' Floor" to songs like "Who Are You," the music hits from all angles forcing itself to be heard.

Lyrically, the songs rush through a perception of reality most have never experienced. "Street Lobotomy" talks about drug abuse and "Drive-By" addresses the issue of gang violence. The title track discusses racial inequality. The words prove to be insightful to the somewhat jaded public of what's out there.

For what it's worth, Born Dead offers a lot of itself. The metal cliches can prove to be tiresome and lyrical intentions can be questioned, but in Body Count's case, it's all about attitude. And they have plenty of it. B- (Wayken Shaw)

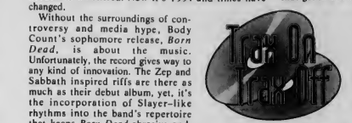
STONED AND DETHRONED
The Jesus and Mary Chain
American Recordings/Warner Bros.

In the present post-grunge/neo-punk popular music climate where every band within earshot seems to be cranking their amps up to 11 just to keep up, leave it to the Reid brothers to release the quietest, most listenable album of their careers.

Stoned And Dethroned is a complete 180 degree turnaround from 1992's Honey's Dead. The ominous walls of noise and industrial clatter have been replaced by stripped down accoustic arrangements, complete with slide guitar and even the occasional harmonica.



COURTESY CHRIS CUFFARO

By placing the emphasis on their often beautiful melodies and characteristically obscure, moody lyrics, the Reid brothers have created an album which is strikingly sincere in its simplicity.

Songs such as "Save Me" and "Sometimes Always" (Jim's much publicized duet with Mazzy Star's Hope Sandoval) are minor pop masterpiece's, accessible yet intelligent without ever seeming artificial.

Another high-point of the album is "God Save Me," which features ex-Pogue Shane MacGowen on lead vocals. It is exceedingly rare that a guest singer so earnestly portrays the emotional content of someone else's lyrics. This unlikely collaboration works so well that it is a shame that MacGowen isn't a full-time member of the band.

While the JAMC may not be exactly re-inventing pop music as we know it, it is refreshing to see a band do so well what so many others try (and fail) to do so often. B+ (Matthew Justin Faerber)

BUCKSHOT LEFONQUE
Buckshot LeFonque
Columbia Records

Buckshot LeFonque, Branford Marsalis's attempt at hip- hop is at best just that, an attempt. The album is a perfect example of how trying to be too much ends up producing way to little. The jazz is washed down, the rap is washed down, and the mixing is just plain awful.

The inside cover claims that Buckshot is a pioneer in the brilliant and complex process of combining jazz and hip- hop. If this were truly the case, then maybe the album would not be so bad. But alas this genre has already been done.

Native tongue groups such as A Tribe Called Quest and De La Soul have been laying down their intricate rhymes over classic jazz loops since the late 80s. Digable Planets designed the blueprint (one Marsalis obviously did not read) for how to successfully combine jazz and hip-hop and still go for mainstream appeal.

Just in the past year alone Guru's Jazzmatazz and Us3's Hand On The Torch were created under the concept of rapping over live jazz musicians. Marsalis and his Buckshot gang are anything but pioneers. They are not much more than the ultimate musical cross-over conformists, leaving the listener with nothing more than an indistinctive mess of sound, and a burning feeling that 15 dollars was wasted. D (Dan Friedman)

Burton charms with heartfelt Ed Wood

By Daniel Pellegrini
Collegian Staff

ED WOOD
Directed by Tim Burton
With Johnny Depp, Martin Landau, Sarah Jessica Parker, and Bill Murray

Dark yet optimistic, twisted yet heartfelt. The story of a man with a fetish for angora sweaters and flannel skirts and whose passion for ultra-trashy B-movies was the strongest in Hollywood. This is the story of Ed Wood.

Tim Burton's (Batman I & II, Edward Sicorhands) latest, most personal, and to say the least, greatest achievement is Ed Wood, the biopic of the legendary "all-time worst" director whose two modes of escape were film and cross-dressing.

Johnny Depp plays the compassionate young filmmaker during his early days as a third-rate stage director up until the opening night of his sixth film, the film in which Wood proclaimed would be "the one they're gonna remember me for," entitled Plan 9 from Outer Space.

COURTESY SUZANNE TENNER

Bill Murray, Sarah Jessica Parker and Johnny Depp in Ed Wood.

But don't let this rudimentary plot summary fool you into thinking that this is a straight-forward movie. In fact, there isn't much of a narrative at all — which is the beauty of it. Ed Wood is a hauntingly hysterical and immensely weird look at a man whose passions and love for life and virtue were so powerful, that his reasoning and motivation for his odd behavior is rightfully never known. Edward D. Wood Jr., as he was formally known, was like an icon for American self-esteem. No matter how harsh or negative his reviews or critical responses may have been, he continually believed he was doing the right thing. Why? Because that's what made him happy.

The film also chronicles the symbiotic relationship between the director and a broken-down, morphine-addicted Bela Lugosi, wonderfully played by Martin Landau. Lugosi, (the star of the early Dracula movies plus numerous others,) was a childhood idol of Wood's, yet their friendship is formed in the darkest of ways — Wood needed a star to promote his film and Lugosi needed money for drugs. Nevertheless, Wood overlooks Lugosi's weaknesses and four-lettered vocabulary and simply takes him for who he is — a theme that director Burton weighs heavily throughout the entire film.

Ed Wood is patented Burton-style filmmaking. The film opens in the traditional Tim Burton manner. A long, sweeping tracking shot running behind the credits and presenting some dark, eerie landscape. (You remember the openings of Beetlejuice or Batman Returns.) Shot beautifully in black and white, the cinematography stretches from the basic and direct composition of the late twenties and early thirties pictures, to some stellar depth-of-field shots that look as if they were pulled right out of Citizen Kane. Wood makes several comparisons between himself and Orson Welles throughout the film. This is no doubt Burton's way of paying tribute to the old Hollywood of 50 years ago, as well as to Wood himself.

The comedy, however, may be a little too Burton-like for the average filmgoer to digest. The laughs are not derived from the spoken word, and the film is certainly nowhere near the realm of situation comedy. Instead, the humor is based on the general ridiculous nature of the whole film, which you will find a lot funnier if you have any affection for the movie-making process.

Aside from prominent direction, Ed Wood is also allowed to rest itself on a strong, firm cast of actors — all of whom appear perfectly larger than life. Depp is joyous as the squeaky, game show host-like Wood, and it's a pleasure to see the talented young actor break away from the usual alienated, morbid outcasts he plays in his other films.

But the standout here is Landau as the ruined Bela Lugosi. He's a perfect contradiction to the suave, screen vampire that he and Wood watch on the television in his den. In reality he's a burned-out grump who spends his time cursing at the T.V. and eyeing younger women. This performance could gain Landau the academy award he missed in his nominations for Tucker: The Man And His Dream and Crimes and Misdemeanors.

To sum, Ed Wood is a must-see for movie lovers or for people who can appreciate the demented, unpredictable and uncanny vision that is easily identified as Tim Burton's. It is a charming, uplifting film that represents Tinseltown's last innocent years. A

We've just made this 6-pound computer even easier to pick up.

(Buy one now, and we'll throw in all this software to help you power through college.)

ClarisWorks and the Apple Student Resource Set included when you buy the PowerBook on the right.

Apple PowerBook 150 4/120.

When you weigh the options, it's quite possibly the best deal available for college students. For a limited time, buy a select Apple® PowerBook® at a special student price and get a unique new student software set available only from Apple. It's all the software you're likely to need to breeze through college. You'll get software that takes you through every aspect of writing papers, the only personal organizer/calendar created for your student lifestyle and the Internet Companion to help you tap into on-line research resources. Plus ClarisWorks, an integrated package with a word processor, database, spreadsheet and more. All with the portable computer you can use anytime, anywhere you happen to be. Apple PowerBook. And now, with an Apple Computer Loan, you can own one for less than a dollar a day. It's the power no student should be without. The power to be your best. Apple through it.

UNIVERSITY STORE

CAMPUS CENTER 545-2619

M - F 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.
SAT 11 a.m. - 3 p.m.

Offer expires October 17, 1994, available only while supplies last. © 1994 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the Apple logo, PowerBook and "The power to be your best." are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. ClarisWorks is a registered trademark of Claris Corporation. "An estimate based on an Apple Computer Loan of $1,592.17 for the PowerBook 150 shown above. Prices and loan amounts are subject to change without notice. See your Apple Campus Reseller® representative for current system prices. A 5.5% loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount. The interest rate is variable, based on the commercial paper rate plus 5.35%. For the month of August 1994, the interest rate was 10.10%, with an APR of 11.86%. A one time loan term will be prepayment penalty. The monthly payment shown assumes no deferment of principal or interest. Students may defer principal payments up to 4 years, or until graduation. Deferment will change your monthly payment. The Apple Computer Loan is subject to credit approval.

Scenery can't save sappy melodrama

COURTESY EMILIO LARI

Marisa Tomei and Robert Downey Jr. star in Only You

By Tara MK Cannelly
Collegian Staff

ONLY YOU
Directed by Norman Jewison with Marisa Tomei, Robert Downey, Jr., Fisher Stevens, and Billy Zane

Only You has a lot of the elements needed to become a money making romance. With a cast composed of actors like Oscar bearing Marisa Tomei (My Cousin Vinny) and Oscar nominated Robert Downey, Jr. (Chaplin) paired with Fisher Stevens and Billy Zane, there is a substantial amount of talent that director Norman Jewison could have worked with. The film also has extensive shots in romantic Italy with scenes in Venice, Rome and other beautiful coastal areas. Unfortunately all this talent and beautiful setting is wasted on a super melodramatic plot full of sappy cliches and lagging action that makes the audience squirm uncomfortably in their seats throughout the duration of the film.

The gist of the plot revolved around Faith Corvatch, (Tomei) a grade school teacher who longs to find that mythical other half everyone is supposed to have. When Faith was a teenager, full of hope and fairytale dreams, she asked a Ouija board to reveal the name of her significant other, who turns out to be Damon Bradley. Filled with girlish dreams of Prince Charming, Faith is convinced that Damon Bradley, whoever he is, is meant to be THE ONE. This belief is further compounded by the same prediction a gypsy makes at a fair Faith attends with her friends. But wait, little does poor Faith know that it was her brother Larry (Fisher Stevens) who formulated the name and bribed the gypsy with two bucks to confirm it, leaving Faith to pine after a man who is really some punk Larry knew.

Years later, and ten days before her wedding tragedy strikes again as Faith receives a call from (you guessed it!) Damon Bradley, explaining he is a friend of her fiance and can't make the wedding because he is flying to Italy. Faith, still very much a believer in fate, takes this as a sign and drops everything to fly to Italy with sister-in-law Kate (Bonnie Hunt) and meet Damon.

Does this sound familiar? Didn't Meg Ryan and Tom Hanks do something very similar in Sleepless in Seattle. In fact, if it wasn't for the movie South Pacific instead of An Affair to Remember that Tomei and gal pals go ga-ga over, I'd think it was the same movie.

The film drags on and on as we follow Faith through Italy as she and Kate meet up with one wacky misadventure after another. The quest for Mr. Bradley eventually leads her to bump (literally) into Peter Wright, Robert Downey Jr, who pretends to be Bradley just to get to know her. Ironically, Peter is the real thing for Faith, but she is so bent on finding the real Bradley, that she throws away an evening of romantic bliss to fulfil her search. Once again, like in Sleepless, Tomei and Downey recreate the scene from a Hollywood classic. The scene in Roman Holiday with Gregory Peck and Audrey Hepburn at the Bocco della Verita (the Mouth of Truth) is worked in to try to recreate romantic nostalgia.

Instead it comes off as yet another sappy rip-off.

Throughout the movie, the notion of "another half" is beaten into the viewers head, along with the word destiny (just in case you lapse into a coma and forget). It is almost as if Jewison is trying hard to create the perfect storytale romance, that he goes above and beyond the call of duty.

His shots of Downey and Tomei staring at each other whispering nauseating lines like, "I was born to kiss you," become redundant because they are repeated so often. The audience never feels the same rapport for the couple that Bogart and Bacall or Anthony and Cleopatra garnered. You are so overpowered by the sheer cheesiness of the two that you lose any empathy for the them. Perhaps the only mildly interesting plot twist, if you could call it that, involved actor Billy Zane (Dead Calm) who is hired by Peter to pretend he's Bradley in order to prove to Faith that he truly is the one for her.

Downey is adorable as the persistent shoe salesman and Tomei makes a very good little girl lost. Joaquim De Almedia (Clear and Present Danger) is a great Latin lover who pairs up with Kate. The sunsets are beautiful and so are the shots of Venice. There are a few noteworthy antidotes and a bunch of mildly amusing scenes, but in the end it isn't enough to save Only You. In fact, it's almost fitting that the movie closes (finally) with another sappy Bolton remake as the two star crossed lovers jet off into the cheesy technicolor sunset, making you sigh, not with satisfaction, but with profound relief. C-

Legendary ex-Velvet Underground drummer shines on Iron Horse stage

By Michael Burke
Collegian Staff

MOE TUCKER
Iron Horse Music Hall
Oct. 7

NORTHAMPTON — It was a historic event at the Iron Horse last Friday night as half of the original Velvet Underground performed together. While not quite exactly a "reunion," it was probably the closest western Massachusetts will get to seeing the legendary band play.

Although there were five musicians gracing the stage, the spotlight was constantly on Moe Tucker and Sterling Morrison, both of whom were original members of the Velvet Underground. Tucker sang and played rhythm guitar while Morrison handled lead guitar duties.

While the whole evening proved to be exceptional, the highlight of the concert was Moe's renditions of two Velvet Underground classics, "After Hours" was one of the few Velvet Underground songs that Moe Tucker ever sang the lead vocals on.

The band also did a on the mark version of "Pale Blue Eyes" which was originally sung by Lou Reed. Thankfully Moe's version captured every bit of emotion as the original.

Everything else that the band performed came from Moe Tucker's numerous solo albums. Unfortunately it seemed the majority of the people were there to see her rehash old Velvet Underground songs, something that Tucker was obviously weary of doing.

The majority of her solo songs played were taken from her excellent new album, Dogs Under Stress. Among the highlights was the catchy new tune "Me, Myself, and I" which was co-written by Tucker and Morrison.

Even though no one expected Tucker to play drums, it was still disappointing that she didn't pick up the sticks for at least one song, since she is best known for being one of the most influential female drummers ever. Still, Tucker proved that she can also play the part of lead singer.

Tucker enthusiastically played before the modest sized crowd who consisted of older folks that could have seen the original Velvet Underground and college aged students who wanted their chance to see a rock legend. It seemed as if everyone knew the two Velvet Underground song's by heart but few unfortunately seemed to know her solo songs.

The band Marcy opened up the show with a loud but short set. Their female vocalist pulled off a nifty imitation of Kim Deal of the Breeders and the rest of the band would have made a great Pixies cover band.

COURTESY RUTH LEITMAN

Moe Tucker

Come visit CALDOR at the UMass Career Day '94.

Margaret Theodore
Assistant Buyer-
Childrens
UMass '94
Marketing Major

Robert Murray
Assistant Buyer-
Automotive
UMass '94
Marketing Major

Corporate Headquarters Executive Training Program

In fact, our future is the future of our people. They're the kind of people who know where they're going and want to get there fast. Creative, ambitious and smart. Self-starters who seize opportunity and run with it.

Our Executive Training Program gives you that opportunity. It is designed for college graduates who want to stand out in big business and excel. Caldor prizes individuality, applauds diversity and recognizes achievement.

*The following opportunities are available at our Caldor Corporate Office located in Norwalk, CT. Assistant Buyers, Merchandise Distribution Analysts, Financial Analysts, MIS Programmer Analysts and more.

Join us and make the transition from the academic world to the business world with the Northeast's fastest growing retailer.

Career Day, Wednesday October 12, 1994, 1-5pm Campus Center Auditorium

We will be accepting resumes for our on campus recruiting date scheduled for Thursday, October 20, 1994 in the UMass School of Management.

Caldor is an equal opportunity employer.

CALDOR
Our People Make the Difference

SYRACUSE ABROAD

Looking for a good exchange rate to study abroad next semester?

3.75 GPA and up=$1,500 Scholarship

3.50 GPA and up=$1,000 Scholarship
Study abroad grants based on need also available.

Syracuse University sponsors study abroad sites in Florence, Italy London, England Harare, Zimbabwe
Madrid, Spain Strasbourg, France

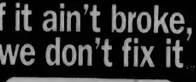
SU credit ■ Field trips/Traveling seminars ■ Internships ■ Study for a semester, year or summer
Courses taught in English and in host country language

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY
DIVISION OF INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS ABROAD ■ 119 Euclid Avenue, Syracuse, New York 13244-4170
1-800-235-3472 ■ 315-443-3471

If it ain't broke, we don't fix it

MONRO MUFFLER/BRAKE



mufflers • brakes • shocks • springs • alignments
tires • front wheel drive experts

Hadley: 360 Russell St. 586-0892
Northampton: 326 King St. 586-3266
Chicopee: 461 Memorial Dr. 594-9161
Wilbraham: 1971 Boston Road. 543-8027
W. Springfield: 777 Riverdale St. 739-3860

90 days same as cash!

Coupon Specials

Monro Muffler Brake
Oil, lube & filter $16.99

Includes up to 5 quarts Kendall motor oil, new Kendall oil filter, chassis lube and free undercar inspection. Available for most vehicles. Please call for an appointment. Additional charge for filters on some vehicles.
Coupon valid through 10/22/94
7777

Monro Muffler Brake
$20 off wheel alignments

Take $20 off our regular price on any 2-wheel or 4-wheel alignment service with this coupon. Coupon cannot be used in conjunction with any other offer. Please call for an appointment.
Coupon valid through 10/22/94
7778

40,000 mile limited treadwear warranty from $37.95 per tire

Free brake inspection any time!
With no obligation on your part. We only make repairs with your permission. We only recommend repairs if they are necessary.

Reporter shares her experiences

Lecturer gives first-hand account on covering int'l affairs

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Therese Raphael, deputy editor of The Wall Street Journal Europe, will speak at an open forum tomorrow in Tobin Hall.

The forum entitled "Clinton and Europe: A View from Brussels" will expose students to U.S. relations with Europe from the perspective of someone who reports on it from Europe, Eric Reinhorn, from the political science department, said.

"It's an opportunity for students who study journalism and political science to get a good, first-hand account of a career dealing directly with international affairs," Sean Kay, a graduate student and teacher of American foreign policy, said.

Raphael has been based in Brussels since 1990 and deals primarily with issues directly related to Europe, such as NATO, Russia and European integration. She is presently traveling the United States conducting interviews, Kay said.

"The discussion on Wednesday will relate to her direct experiences with officials throughout Europe with current affairs within the context of Clinton's public policy on NATO, Russia, the European Union and Bosnia," Kay said.

Raphael has recently interviewed such key officials as the Russian Foreign Minister, the Prime Minister of Turkey and the former Prime Minister of Poland, Kay said.

Raphael serves as the deputy editor to the editorial page of The Wall Street Journal Europe, one of the two largest newspapers in circulation in Europe, Kay said.

The forum is being sponsored by the Department of Political Science and the Modern European Studies Program. It will take place at 1:25 pm Wednesday at 204 Tobin Hall.

Bike towing clears campus ramps

By Kathryn Silver
Collegian Correspondent

According to the University's Division of Environmental Health and Safety, parked bikes have been blocking the entrances of campus buildings preventing easy access.

David J. Beaudin, fire prevention officer at EH&S, said throughout this semester there has been an increase in the number of complaints received.

Beaudin said the problem has effected both students and other people in the campus community, especially the handicap who have had wheelchair ramps obstructed by parked bikes.

"This scenario is kin to parking in handicap parking spaces, when there is no right to do so," Beaudin said.

EH&S will begin issuing warnings to those parked illegally and bikes will be towed, according to Beaudin.

Beaudin also said that bike removal is a last resort and they will only be removed without warning in emergency situations.

"Only about four bikes are usually removed per semester," Beaudin said.

Bikes are a major form of transportation at the University of Massachusetts. Julie Allegro, a sophomore at UMass, said, "bike racks on campus are often filled, leaving her no choice but to park elsewhere."

Christopher Barry, also a sophomore at the University said, "reminders to move my bike would not be likely to stop me from parking illegally if more racks did not become available."

Beaudin said EH&S is working on getting more space for bicycles, and is researching ways in which other colleges deal with the problem.

"People should be concerned with not blocking doorways and stairways. We want to get the message out. It's really an educational message," Beaudin said.

Here she comes...

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Miss America was one of many celebrities who attended Sunday's Jimmy Fund Walk. Others included speed skater, Dan Jansen and Red Sox first baseman Mo Vaughn.

"If I am virtuous and worthy, for whom should I not maintain proper concern?"

CONFUCIUS

"The first point of courtesy must always be truth."

EMERSON

"A zero dialer is a zero indeed."

POLITENESSMAN

1-800-COLLECT®
Save the People You Call up to 44%.

Dear Diary,
Last night when I was up in my favorite tree stargazing I began to ponder my life. I realized that some of my favorite things were no longer part of the new pop culture, and that many of my best loved activities were out of style. I enjoyed Pac Man and now there is Mortal Combat II. My one Barbie was fine for all seasons, but now there is a Barbie for every month and special event. I used to think rollerskating around my neighborhood in my neon, shiny jacket with my name on the sleeve was fun, but now everybody has rollerblades and they can go much faster. I used to enjoy trips to the grocery store with my mom until she told me it was wrong to eat candy from the big bins. The more I sat and thought about how my interests were different than most others I remembered that I had read The Daily Collegian that morning, and I knew that it was the hip thing to do because everybody was reading it. Wow! The Daily Collegian saved me from an identity crisis! I climbed happily down from the tree.

WHEN WAS THE LAST TIME YOU TESTED YOUR SMOKE DETECTORS?

Last month? Last year? Can't remember? If you're not sure your smoke detectors are working, then how can you be sure you'll be protected if a fire breaks out?

Don't gamble with your life and assume your smoke detectors are working. Test each one, every month, so you'll know they'll be ready to protect you and your family if there's a fire.

Test your detector for life.

American Red Cross
NFPA National Fire Protection Association

THE DEANS LIST

One of the University's highest priorities is its commitment to provide opportunities for academic growth. I am pleased, therefore, to recognize those of you who earned Deans List status for the Spring Semester 1994.

This level of achievement - 3.5 or higher semester average with twelve or more graded credits - is attained by fewer than 20% of the undergraduate student body. Such outstanding performance is a source of pride to the faculty, staff, your student colleagues, and, of course, your parents.

Thank you for the credit you bring to the University through your achievement.

David K. Scott, Chancellor

PRESS RELEASES

To publicize your achievement, the University News Office will be issuing a press release to your hometown newspaper if you are a Massachusetts resident. Out of state students are requested to pick up a press release form at 200 Munson Hall (second floor). For further information, please call 545-0444.

ADDITIONS/OMMISIONS

The Spring 1994 Deans List is based on grades received and recorded by the Registrar's Office as of August 17, 1994. If you had a grade change after that date (including making up an "Incomplete", or had a missing or late grade recorded after that date), and believe you now qualify for the Deans List, please fill out a form available at the Information Data Bank, Whitmore 2nd floor lobby counter, attach Registrar's Office verification, and return it to 236 Whitmore.

REMINDER: ONLY GRADED CREDITS ARE CALCULATED IN DETERMINING DEANS LIST ELIGIBILITY. PASS/FAIL CREDITS ARE NOT INCLUDED.

The Deans List is prepared for publication and paid for by Student Affairs Special Services as a service to the campus community. The cooperation of "The Massachusetts Daily Collegian" is acknowledged and appreciated.

• ARTS AND SCIENCES – HUMANITIES & FINE ARTS •

NAME	CLASS	MAJOR
ABIZAID,DANA T.	96	JOURN
ACKERMAN,JENNIFER M.	96	ENGL
ADAM,KRISTIN E.	94	BFA
ADAMS,IAN CHRISTIAN B.	94	ENGL
ADAMS,JOHN	96	ENGL
ALBERT TUDOR,MICHELE S.	96	ARTHIS
(H) ALEX,KATHERINE M.	97	THEATR
ALLEN,JENNA	96	MUSIC
ALLSHOUSE,ERIC P.	96	BFA
ALMONTE,MATEO	96	JAPAN
(H) ALSOP,PAMELA J.	95	HIST
ANDERSON,HEATHER A.	96	ENGL
ARGAY,ANDREA E.	97	ARTHIS
(H) AUBART,CAROLYN	94	ENGL
BAILEY,ALLISON	96	JOURN
BAKER,ERIN L.	95	THEATR
BANDLER,JOSHUA J.	96	JOURN
BARTON,JOANNA C.	97	BFA
BASS,JENNIFER	96	ENGL
BATES,THOMAS J.	95	ENGL
BATTISTI,STEPHEN M.	95	CMPSCI
BAUM,BENJAMIN H.	96	MUSIC
BAXTER,TODD J.	95	MUSIC
BEAUDOIN,JENNIFER M.	96	ENGL
(H) BENSON,JULIE L.	95	MATH
BERGER,ERIC M.	96	ENGL
BISHOP,KELLY A.	95	ENGL
BLOOM,TODD E.	95	MUSIC
BOCK,BETH N.	96	ENGL
(H) BOORSTIN,DAVID J.	97	MATH
BOSLEY,JENNIFER L.	96	ENGL
BOUTILLE,JONATHAN B.	95	ENGL
(H) BRENNAN,CHRISTOPHER D.	97	MUSIC
(H) BRENNAN,CHRISTOPHER S.	97	VISUA
(H) BUNTING,HEATHER L.	94	MUSIC
BURLING,BRADFORD S.	96	MUSIC
BUSH,JOHN E.	96	ENGL
BUSSERT,TERESA D.	96	JOURN
CAIN,SHAUNA J.	96	ENGL
CALLAHAN,CAROL A.	96	ENGL
CANZER,JONATHAN H.	96	ENGL
CAPPELLI,BRIAN D.	96	ENGL
(H) CARNELL,CHRISTOPHER O.	96	MUSIC
CARROLL,JOHN J.	96	ENGL
CASE,ELIZABETH	96	ENGL
(H) CAVALLARI,JENNIFER M.	97	THEATR
CAYTARD,ERIC J.	96	ENGL
CHAPOUS,DAVID A.	95	MUSIC
CHARLTON,ELIZABETH A.	96	ENGL
CHRISTENSEN,STEVEN E.	96	ENGL
CIASCHINI,MATTHEW T.	96	ENGL
CLIFTON,LUCIENNE A.	96	ARTHIS
COFFIN,MARGARET D.	96	CMPSCI
CONNOLLY,JENNIFER A.	96	ENGL
CORBIN,DIANE L.	96	ENGL
CORTBELL,LAMISHA T.	94	JOURN
(H) COWEN,CHRISTOPHER S.	96	ENGL
(H) CRONIN,PATRICIA M.	96	ARTHIS
CUMMINGS,JENNIFER L.	96	ARTHIS
DACHOSKI,MIA I.	96	ENGL
DAIGNAULT,ERIC	96	ENGL
DAMON,ANGELA D.	96	ENGL
DARTISH,REGINA M.	96	DANCE
DARTIS,JOHN J.	96	MUSIC
DAVIDSON,ANDREA M.	96	PHIL
DAVIS,ANNE	96	ENGL
(H) DAVIS,CHRISTOPHER J.	96	ENGL
DAVIS,DAVID	96	ENGL
DAVIS,JOSEPH	96	ENGL
DAVIS,MICHAEL A.	96	ENGL
DAVIS,SARA L.	96	ENGL
DAWSON,CHRISTINA L.	96	ENGL
DEANGELO,DAVID A.	96	ENGL
DEANGELO,JOSEPH	96	ENGL
DEANGELO,MARIA	96	ENGL
DEANGELO,MICHAEL	96	ENGL
DEANGELO,MICHAEL	96	ENGL
DEANGELO,MICHAEL

• MANAGEMENT •

NAME	CLASS	MAJOR
ADDERINO, MICHAEL J.	'95	FINMGT
AMO, MICHAEL A.	'96	SOM
ANDEWELT, JEFFREY B.	'96	SOM
ALBERT, DANIEL P.	'94	ACCTG
ALLONGTH, ROBERTO G.	'96	SOM
ALIX, PENELOPE E.	'96	SOM
ALPERT, MARC ANTHONY	'96	SOM
ALPOGAN, SELEN	'95	SOM
AMEEN, LIZA A.	'95	SOM
APPEL, EMILY A.	'96	SOM
APPEL, SETH D.	'97	SOM
ARTEAGA, RAFAEL A.	'95	FINMGT
BACKER, STUART R.	'95	FINMGT
BAER, DAVID J.	'96	MGT
BAKALIS, COLLEEN A.	'96	MGT
BANG, PAUL	'97	SOM
BARONE, JOHN M.	'95	FINMGT
BARRETT, NORMAN F.	'95	FINMGT
BASS, DAVID J.	'96	SOM
BEALS, TROY A.	'95	FINMGT
BEAUDOIN, MICHELLE L.	'95	MKTG
BEEMAN, CHARLOTTE E.	'95	MGT
BENNETT, HARRO A.	'95	MKTG
(H) BERNHARDT, TANIA L.	'95	MGT
BERNAD, AMY B.	'95	MGT
BERNSTEIN, ROBERT M.	'95	MGT
BOBOT, JEFFREY B.	'96	SOM
BRADLEY, MARK E.	'94	ACCTG
BRODSKY, PAUL D.	'96	SOM
BRODY, CRAIG J.	'97	SOM
BROWDES, DAVID W.	'96	SOM
BROWNELL, DANIEL R.	'97	SOM
BROWN, ANDREW P.	'96	SOM
BROWN, ANDREW P.	'95	FINMGT
BROWN, GREGORY K.	'95	FINMGT
BURDSTEIN, MONICA C.	'95	FINMGT
BURR, MARK	'95	FINMGT
BURROWS, KEITH G.	'95	FINMGT
BUSTIN, ERIC P.	'95	FINMGT
(H) BUTLER, JULIE	'95	FINMGT
CALDERON, LUIS F.	'96	SOM
(H) CAPONE, MICHAEL A.	'96	SOM
CARBONE, JENNIFER D.	'95	ACCTG
(H) CARPENTER, NEIL P.	'95	FINMGT
CARR, JOSEPH	'95	FINMGT
(H) CARTMAN, BRANDEN A.	'95	FINMGT
CERVANTES, MARIA	'95	FINMGT
CHAISSON, BRIAN K.	'95	FINMGT
CHAN, HEISUM	NC	ACCTG
CHAN, VERONICA EZU TAN	'96	SOM
CHEA, NAPSON	'97	SOM
CHEN, JIAN WU	'96	SOM
CHENG, YEVLIN	'95	MKTG
CHIANG, CHIA Y.	'95	MKTG
CHIU, EASE K.	'95	ACCTG
CHOUDHARD, PAULINE I.	'94	MKTG
CHU, CHI MING	'95	FINMGT
CILIBERTO, JENNIFER L.	'95	SOM
COHEN, STEVEN J.	'95	SOM
COLLINS, BRIAN G.	'95	SOM
COLLINS, TODD W.	'95	MGT
COOK, TIMOTHY E.	'93	FINMGT
COSNER, DEREK	'95	SOM
COPE, DARIAN	'95	SOM
COSTANTINO, JONATHAN C.	'95	SOM
COYLE, MICHAEL G.	'95	SOM
CRAPSTER, REBECCA A.	'96	SOM
CRONELL, LAURENN J.	'96	MKTG
CUMMINGS, MICHAEL P.	'95	MGT
CUMMINGS, THOMAS J.	'95	MGT
(H) CURRO, KRISTEN S.	'95	FINMGT
DAHL, ERIC	'95	FINMGT
DANIELS, MATTHEW A.	'95	FINMGT
DAVIDSON, ELAINE F.	'95	ACCTG
DELEO, SUSAN	'95	ACCTG
DELANEY, JASON D.	'94	FINMGT
DELLA-PIETRA, JOHN	'95	FINMGT
DELUCA, JEFFREY M.	'95	FINMGT
DELUTA, JULIANN	'96	MKTG
DEPAUW, MELISSA R.	'95	SOM
DETRO, ANDREA D.	'94	MKTG
DEVER, SEAN D.	'95	ACCTG
(H) DEWAR, MARK	'95	MGT
DIAMOND, ALFRED BRUNO	'95	FINMGT
DOMACHOSKI, MICHELLE D.	'95	SOM
DOSCHER, MICHELLE C.	'94	MGT
DOWD, THOMAS J. JR	'95	FINMGT
DOWLING, GREGORY P.	'95	FINMGT
DOYLE, LAURIE A.	'95	SOM
DRAKE, JOHN	'95	SOM
DWYER, SHAUN M.	'95	FINMGT
DWYER, WINTHROP J.	'95	FINMGT
(H) ENDL, JEFFREY T.	'95	FINMGT
ERICKSON, JASON C.	'95	FINMGT
(H) ETTARAPRA, JAMES B.	'95	SOM
(H) FAHEY, MICHAEL J.	'95	FINMGT
(H) FARIA, KELLY-SUE	'95	SOM
(H) FEINBERG, KAREN G.	'95	SOM
FELDS, PAUL J.	'95	SOM
(H) FINLAYSON, JULIE E.	'95	SOM
FIORENTINO, TIMOTHY P.	'95	FINMGT
FITZGERROR, DIANE M.	'94	MKTG
FLYNN, JOHN	'95	SOM
FOTOS, KAREN L.	'95	SOM
FOX, GLORIA Y.	'95	MGT
FRATALLO, MATTHEW G.	'95	MKTG
FRENCH, DANIEL J.	'95	FINMGT
FULMER, ELISA L.	'95	SOM
GAFFEY, DANIEL J.	'97	SOM
GAGNON, JEFFREY	'95	FINMGT
GENTILE, RUSSELL J.	'95	FINMGT
GERSHONG, JAMES N. IV	'94	MKTG
GETEL, MICHAEL S.	'95	FINMGT
GOMES, MELANIE L.	'95	SOM
(H) GONZALEZ-PERES, JAVIER	'95	FINMGT
GOODMAN, BRYAN P.	'95	SOM
GOTTLIEB, JULIE G.	'96	SOM
GRADY, ERIC J.	'95	SOM
(H) GRIFIN, DANIEL	'95	SOM
GRIENENBERG, DAVID A.	'95	MKTG
GUARDI, GERARD P.	'95	SOM
GUEST, ERIC	'95	SOM
GUTHENBERG, KAREN	'95	SOM
GUTIERREZ, JUAN D.	'95	SOM
(H) HALE, ALLEN E.	'95	MGT
HALL, EDWARD G.	'95	FINMGT
HALLORAN, MARIE	'95	FINMGT
HAMILTON, CHRISTINE	'95	FINMGT
HAMMOCK, MICHELLE L.	'95	SOM
HANNAN, SEAN M.	'95	MGT
HANNIGAN, MICHELLE A.	'95	FINMGT
HEANEY, MICHELLE L.	'94	ACCTG
HEAVERN, SUSAN	'95	MGT
HERNANDEZ, CARLOS A.	'95	SOM
HERRICK, JEFFREY	'95	SOM
HILL, MAUREEN P.	'95	SOM
HIDERATA, NORA	'95	SOM
HOFFMAN, MELISSA R.	'95	SOM
HONKAN, SUSAN J.	'94	FINMGT
HOWERTON, BONNY E.	'96	SOM
(H) HURLEY, DARA L.	'95	SOM
HUTCHINSON, JOHN	'95	SOM
ITEIN, TAFFAR	'95	SOM
JACOB, DANIEL D.	'95	FINMGT
JANULEVA D.	'95	SOM
JARRELL, ALLISON M.	'95	SOM
JENNER, STEPHANIE D.	'95	MGT
JI, HUI	'95	SOM
JORDAN, ANTHONY C.	'95	SOM
JORDAN, MATTHEW P.	'95	SOM
JOY, KIMBERLY A.	'94	FINMGT
JUNEAU, STEPHEN M.	'95	SOM
KAM, IRENE LAP-MAN	'95	ACCTG
KAMINSKI, JOHN P.	'95	SOM
(H) KHAN, ATIF M.	'95	SOM
KIGHT, HEATHER M.	'95	SOM
KIM, JEEUN	'95	SOM
KLEBOWSKI, JILL	'95	SOM
KNUDSEN, JENNIFER	'95	FINMGT
KORESSU, ALIRAE	'95	ACCTG
KOSTAS, JOHN	'95	SOM
(H) KRZYNA, GREGORY J.	'95	SOM
(H) KRENDEL, DAVID R.	'95	FINMGT
KUC, YONGIN A.	'95	SOM
KURVILLA, THARUN J.	'95	ACCTG
KWATT, KEERN R.	'95	SOM
LABONTE, KATHERINE L.	'94	MKTG
LAFLEUR, JOHN P.	'95	SOM
LAGHLAN, TARA L.	'95	SOM
LAPHAM, MICHAEL P.	'95	SOM
(H) LAU, PATRICK C.	'97	SOM
(H) LE, VIET Q.	'97	SOM
LEFEVRE, JUSTIN C.	'95	SOM
LEGER, ALISON	'95	SOM
LERNER, ALEXANDER L.	'95	ACCTG
LEROUX, JEREMY M.	'95	SOM
LESPERANCE, BRETT J.	'95	SOM
LEUNG, VICTOR KING-CHUNG	'95	SOM
LEVY, TIFFANY J.	'95	SOM
LIEW, JOSEPH	'95	SOM
LING, ROBERT M.	'95	SOM
LISTER, LEVANN	'95	SOM
(H) LIPNER, MICHAEL	'95	MGT
LITVINOV, RICHARD P.	'95	FINMGT
LOHR, PETER P.	'95	FINMGT
LONGSTREET, MARION M.	'95	FINMGT
LONGWELL, SCOTT R.	'97	SOM
LOW, MATTHEW J.	'95	MGT
LUTZ, CARLENE M.	'95	FINMGT
LUVSANG, JOHN J. III	'96	SOM
MACDONALD, MICHAELA M.	'95	SOM
MACE, LAURA	'95	SOM
MACHIZ-ROSA, SHELLY M.	'95	MKTG
MACKIN, CHRISTOPHER J.	'95	SOM
MACKIN, ERIN E.	'95	SOM
MAGOR, KRISTEN M.	'95	SOM
MAGNUSCOK, DEBRA J.	'95	FINMGT
MAHONEY, MARY JEAN	'95	SOM
MAHONEY, STEPHEN M.	'96	SOM
MAIER, JENNIFER	'95	SOM
MARTIN, STACY L.	'95	SOM
MARZULLO, NICOLINA	'95	FINMGT
MASSARELLI, JENNIFER	'95	SOM
MCDONALD, DARREN A.	'95	FINMGT
MCGINNIS, JENNIFER L.	'95	SOM
MCGUIRE, HEATHER	'95	SOM
MCKENNA, CAROLINE M.	'95	SOM
MEIK, ALEXANDRA B.	'94	FINMGT
MERRELL, JOSHUA J.	'95	SOM
MESSITER, MARCUS P.	'95	MGT
MILLER, CHRISTINE	'95	SOM
MILLER, HEATHER C.	'95	SOM
MITCHELL, JENNIFER	'95	SOM
MITCHELL, STEPHEN K.	'95	SOM
MODI, SONALI	'95	SOM
MOGILA, JEFFREY M.	'95	FINMGT
MODY, DARSHA K.	'95	SOM
MOSKOWITZ, DANIELLE C.	'95	SOM
MOSS, ANDREW	'95	SOM
MOTAMARRI, RAM J.	'95	SOM
MOTAMARRI, ROHITH V.	'95	SOM
MORIN, SHELLEY A.	'95	SOM
MULLANY, LISA M.	'95	SOM
MULLEN, KRISTA M.	'95	SOM
MURPHY, CHRISTOPHER	'95	SOM
MURPHY, KATHLEEN E.	'95	SOM
NAISHTIN, ROBERT G.	'95	SOM
NAUGHTON, KELLE A.	'95	SOM
NEWMAN, LISA L.	'95	MGT
NEYLON, EILEEN C.	'95	FINMGT
NGO, LANG	'95	FINMGT
NICHOLAS, DONALD B. JR	'96	MKTG
NICOLAIDES, ANNE	'95	SOM
NIEMPOUL, JASON R.	'96	MGT
NOH, TIMOTHY T.	'97	SOM
NOWACKI, KEVIN J.	'95	FINMGT
OBRIEN, JULIANNE M.	'94	MKTG
O'NEIRE, DAVID J.	'95	SOM
(H) ORKIN, DAVID A.	'95	SOM
ORLANDO, ANTHONY	'95	ACCTG
OROURKE, JOHN E.	'95	SOM
OSNY, MARK A.	'94	FINMGT
(H) PALTER, JOSHUA E.	'95	SOM
PANG, SONGHU	'94	FINMGT
PANCANI, FELICIO A.	'94	FINMGT
PEDE, RICHARD A.	'95	FINMGT
PEREIRA, JOSEPH C.	'95	MGT
(H) PETRUNIA, JOSEPH M.	'95	SOM
PEREALTA, MARK J.	'95	ACCTG
(H) PHILLIPS, JENNIFER L.	'95	MGT
PINARO, MICHAEL D.	'94	MKTG
PLOTKIN, ERIC	'95	SOM
POMERLEAU, KAREN J.	'95	ACCTG
POLAK, DANIEL J.	'95	MGT
POMPTOM, MATHEW	'95	FINMGT
RAJAGHATAKSA, ASHISH D.	'95	FINMGT
RAMKIN, SCOTT R.	'95	FINMGT
REED, AMY E.	'95	FINMGT
REGAN, JENNIFER	'95	FINMGT
REGINALDO, DARREN A.	'95	FINMGT
REISMAN, CHRISTINE A.	'95	SOM
REISMAN, HERSHEY	'95	SOM
RESNICK, JEFFREY	'95	SOM
RIZZA, CHARLES JR	'95	SOM
RICK, STEVEN R.	'95	SOM
RIVERA, JOSEPH A.	'95	SOM
ROBERT, PIERRE	'95	SOM
RUSSO, KAREN J.	'95	SOM
RUTHVELD, MARK G.	'95	SOM
RYAN, JENNIFER J.	'95	SOM
(H) SAAD, OMAR B.	'95	SOM
SAARI, JASON W.	'95	SOM
SAHA, ANITA	'95	SOM
SAOKE, PAUL R.	'95	SOM
(H) SAN MIGUEL, MANUEL F.	'95	SOM
(H) SARAIDI, ARVING	'95	SOM
SCHNEISS, EUNICE A.	'95	FINMGT
SELLERS, DAVID D. JR	'95	SOM
SELTZER, LAURIE A.	'95	SOM
SHAH, ANKUR	'95	SOM
SHEE, STEPHANIE	'95	SOM
(H) SHORT, GREGORY E.	'97	SOM
SIDDIQUI, LISA S.	'95	SOM
(H) SLACK, JULIE E.	'95	SOM
SMITH, CHRISTOPHER J. IV	'95	SOM
SMITH, MICHAEL A.	'95	SOM
SOHNEY, SANDEEP S.	'95	SOM
SOKES, SUSAN V.	'95	MGT
SOUSA, JAMES A.	'97	SOM
SPACONE, CRISTINA M.	'95	ACCTG
(H) SPINELLI, JAMES P. JR	'95	FINMGT
(H) ST. JEAN, BRIAN J.	'95	SOM
STAPEL, MICHELLE E.	'95	ACCTG
STEBBINS, MARK E.	'95	SOM
STEWART, BENJAMIN R.	'94	FINMGT
STOCKER, ERIC J.	'95	SOM
SUKERMAN, JULIE C.	'95	SOM
SULLIVAN, KRISTEN	'94	MGT
SURETTE, DONALD V.	'95	SOM
SUSANTO, HANDAYA	'95	SOM
(H) SUTHERLAND, AMY L.	'95	SOM
SUTHERLAND, CARRIE J.	'95	SOM
(H) SWANSON, CHRISTOPHER T.	'95	SOM
SWARTZ, DAVID E.	'95	SOM
SZCZESKUL, EILEEN M.	'94	FINMGT
SZASCH, GEOFFREY	'95	SOM
TAM, CHIA MAY	'94	ACCTG
(H) TATA, JASON A.	'95	SOM
TAU, PETER	'95	SOM
TAYLOR, JOHN	'95	SOM
THEER, JOSEPH T.	'96	MKTG
THEODORE, MARGARET M.	'94	MKTG
THOMAS, MARJESE J.	'95	MGT
TILDEN, PAMELA J.	'94	MGT
TIMMONS, PAUL J.	'95	SOM
TONG, MARIA REBECCA E.	'97	SOM
TRAVERS, NICOLE A.	'94	MKTG
TRAVERS, NICOLE R.	'94	MKTG
TSANG, CHING WING K.	'95	ACCTG
(H) UGWUEGBU, NZIDIKA F.	'95	SOM
VARGO, ERIC J.	'95	ACCTG
VEITIA, VICTOR D.	'95	ACCTG
VOLOSHIN, TANYA J.	'95	ACCTG
WAGNER, JOHN P.	'95	SOM
(H) WAGNER, JOHN R.	'95	SOM
WAHLSTROM, TODD W.	'95	MGT
WALKER, DANIEL A.	'95	SOM
WALSH, THOMAS C.	NC	FINMGT
WANG, JIANMIN	'95	SOM
WEINTRAUB, ALAN H.	'95	ACCTG
WESTON, ERIN M.	'95	SOM
(H) WESTNER, JAMES D.	'95	SOM
(H) WESSING, JENNIFER A.	'95	SOM
WELLINGTON, STEVEN G.	'94	MKTG
WERTZER, JILL G.	'94	FINMGT
WHITE, CHRISTOPHER J.	'95	SOM
WONG, LUNNEY	'95	SOM
WONG, WINNIE	'95	MKTG
WOOD, JEFF A.	'95	SOM
WRIGHT, STEPHANIE C.	'96	MGT
(H) YEKER, MARK P.	'95	MKTG
YEE, MEI MEI	'95	SOM
YEUNG, CHUN WAH	'95	SOM
YILMAZER GOLEN,	'95	SOM
YIN, TIANK	'95	ACCTG
(H) ZANCHI, NICOLE	'95	ACCTG
(H) ZANI, BRIAN E.	'95	SOM
ZILKA, JOEL J.	'95	SOM
ZINGWIRTZER, CHERPIN M.	'94	MKTG
(H) ZILKA, KRISTOPHER D.	'95	SOM

• NURSING •

NAME	CLASS	MAJOR
BARRETT, SUZANNE M.	'95	NURSE
BELANGER, JOY E.	'95	NURSE
BIDDLE, SHIA L.	'97	PRENUR
BITTLE-CARDOSO, MARINA E.	'95	NURSE
BRANOWICKI, WENDY A.	'95	NURSE
BRUNELLE, ANNE	'95	NURSE
CABRAL, FRANCIS E. JR	'95	NURSE
CASHMAN, JENNIFER L.	'95	NURSE
CHAISI, ESTEE S.	'95	NURSE
(H) CHEUNG, WENDY H.	'97	PRENUR
CLEARY, MARGARET M.	'95	NURSE
CUNNINGHAM, LORI C.	'95	NURSE
(H) CORDWELL, STACEY M.	'95	NURSE
CURRIE, LISA M.	'95	NURSE
CURRY, LORETTA D.	'95	PRENUR
CURTINE, MARY E.	'95	NURSE
DEAN, LESLEY N.	'95	NURSE
DEL CASTILLO, DANIELE O.	'95	NURSE
DUNN, SHANELL J.	'95	NURSE
DYMENT, MICHELLE L.	'95	NURSE
(H) GEORGE, KRISTEN I.	'94	NURSE
GOULET, MICHELLE L.	'94	NURSE
GRIFFITH, JEANNE M.	'95	NURSE
HAMLOW, CHRISTINE A.	'95	NURSE
HARRISON, SARA J.	'95	PRENUR
HEALY, MARGARET E.	'95	PRENUR
JOHNSON, TRACY L.	'95	PRENUR
JONES, BRENDA K.	'93	NURSE
(H) KITTREDGE, PATRICIA L. A.	'95	NURSE
LANGONE, LINDA M.	'95	NURSE
LAVALLEE, JOSEPH G.	'95	NURSE
LEITE, LORI A.	'95	NURSE
LOMBARDI, CATHERINE E.	'95	PRENUR
LOWE, JULIE B.	'95	PRENUR
MACKENZIE, KRISTENA L.	'95	NURSE
MARTINEZ, MARGARITA J.	'95	PRENUR
MCDONNELL, CHRISTINA J.	'95	NURSE
MCGRATH, MARGARET M.	'95	NURSE
MORRISSEY, JENNIFER L.	'95	NURSE
NOBLE, KRISTEN E.	'95	NURSE
NOLAN-O'REILLY, BERRY N.	'94	NURSE
O'BRIEN, MEGAN E.	'95	NURSE
O'CONNOR, MARY E.	'95	NURSE
O'DONNELL, KATHLEEN M.	'95	NURSE
PARKER, MARYBETH	'95	NURSE
PEARSON, HARRIET D.	'95	NURSE
PELTON, M. VARICE JEV	'95	NURSE
PICARD, ELIZABETH K.	'95	NURSE
REMENTILLA, JOY	'95	NURSE
ROSARIO, JENNY	'95	NURSE
SAMPSON, MARY E.	'95	NURSE
SCHNEIDER, ANNE	'95	NURSE
SHEEHAN, MARY E.	'95	NURSE
SHEPARD, ELIZABETH	'95	NURSE
SHOLAR, JEAN	'95	NURSE
SKINNER, ANGELA	'95	NURSE
SMALL, ELIZABETH	'95	NURSE
STEWART, BENJAMIN R.	'94	FINMGT
STOCKER, ERIC J.	'95	SOM
SULLIVAN, KRISTEN	'94	MGT
SURETTE, DONALD V.	'95	SOM
SUSANTO, HANDAYA	'95	SOM
(H) SUTHERLAND, AMY L.	'95	SOM
SUTHERLAND, CARRIE J.	'95	SOM
(H) SWANSON, CHRISTOPHER T.	'95	SOM
SWARTZ, DAVID E.	'95	SOM
SZCZESKUL, EILEEN M.	'94	FINMGT
SZASCH, GEOFFREY	'95	SOM
TAM, CHIA MAY	'94	ACCTG
(H) TATA, JASON A.	'95	SOM
TAU, PETER	'95	SOM
TAYLOR, JOHN	'95	SOM
THEER, JOSEPH T.	'96	MKTG
THEODORE, MARGARET M.	'94	MKTG
THOMAS, MARJESE J.	'95	MGT
TILDEN, PAMELA J.	'94	MGT
TIMMONS, PAUL J.	'95	SOM
TONG, MARIA REBECCA E.	'97	SOM
TRAVERS, NICOLE A.	'94	MKTG
TRAVERS, NICOLE R.	'94	MKTG
TSANG, CHING WING K.	'95	ACCTG
(H) UGWUEGBU, NZIDIKA F.	'95	SOM
VARGO, ERIC J.	'95	ACCTG
VEITIA, VICTOR D.	'95	ACCTG
VOLOSHIN, TANYA J.	'95	ACCTG
WAGNER, JOHN P.	'95	SOM
(H) WAGNER, JOHN R.	'95	SOM
WAHLSTROM, TODD W.	'95	MGT
WALKER, DANIEL A.	'95	SOM
WALSH, THOMAS C.	NC	FINMGT
WANG, JIANMIN	'95	SOM
WEINTRAUB, ALAN H.	'95	ACCTG
WESTON, ERIN M.	'95	SOM
(H) WESTNER, JAMES D.	'95	SOM
(H) WESSING, JENNIFER A.	'95	SOM
WELLINGTON, STEVEN G.	'94	MKTG
WERTZER, JILL G.	'94	FINMGT
WHITE, CHRISTOPHER J.	'95	SOM
WONG, LUNNEY	'95	SOM
WONG, WINNIE	'95	MKTG
WOOD, JEFF A.	'95	SOM
WRIGHT, STEPHANIE C.	'96	MGT
(H) YEKER, MARK P.	'95	MKTG
YEE, MEI MEI	'95	SOM
YEUNG, CHUN WAH	'95	SOM
YILMAZER GOLEN,	'95	SOM
YIN, TIANK	'95	ACCTG
(H) ZANCHI, NICOLE	'95	ACCTG
(H) ZANI, BRIAN E.	'95	SOM
ZILKA, JOEL J.	'95	SOM
ZINGWIRTZER, CHERPIN M.	'94	MKTG
(H) ZILKA, KRISTOPHER D.	'95	SOM

• EDUCATION •

NAME	CLASS	MAJOR
ADAMCZYK, JULIE G.	'95	EDUC
AMADEA, KARA M.	'95	EDUC
ANDERSON, MEAGHAN K.	'95	EDUC
BECKER, MELISSA A.	'95	EDUC
BELL, SARAH E.	'95	EDUC
BOMBER, CYNTHIA A.	'95	EDUC
BOYLE, JENNIFER L.	'95	EDUC
COLLINS, MARY	'95	EDUC
CONNOLLY, KATHLEEN S.	'95	EDUC
CONNOLLY, LAURA	'95	EDUC
CORMONE, MELISSA C.	'95	EDUC
DEGESSE, DIANNA L.	'95	EDUC
DUPAU, MARCELLA A.	'95	EDUC
ELLIOTT, MEGHAN	'95	EDUC
HAMPSON, MELANIE A.	'95	EDUC
HOCHBERG, MIRIAM L.	'95	EDUC
(H) KEANE, KAREN	'95	EDUC
(H) KHALATNIKOV, FELIX	'95	EP
KYLE, KELLY B.	'95	EDUC
MACLEOD, LISA H.	'95	EDUC
MANCUSO, MICHAEL	'95	EDUC
MANELLA, DIANE M.	'95	EDUC
PUDELKO, KAREN M.	'95	EDUC
RICCITELLI, BARBARA S.	'95	EDUC
SCHNEIDER, RAJEEH H.	'95	EDUC
SMITH, MEGAN E.	'95	EDUC
SOLOMON, ANNE	'95	EDUC
STEVENS, ELIZABETH	'95	EDUC
SULLIVAN, MARY E.	'95	EDUC
TAYLOR, JENNIFER L.	'95	EDUC
TOMASZEWSKI, ANNE M.	'95	EDUC
VAN DEUSEN, JOHN C.	'95	EDUC
WEBSTER, ANDREA L.	'95	EDUC
WILLIAMS, KRISTEN	'95	EDUC
WOLFSON, BARBARA N.	'95	EDUC

• PUBLIC HEALTH & HEALTH SCIENCES •

NAME	CLASS	MAJOR
ANDERSON, CASSANDRA M.	'95	EXERCI
AUERNOLL, DAVID B.	'95	EXERCI
BAUM, ERICA B.	'95	EXERCI
BEECHER, TAMRA S.	'95	EXERCI
BENOIT, BENJAMIN K.	NC	EXERCI
BERNARD, JOSEPH A.	'95	EXERCI
BERMAN, LISA M.	'95	EXERCI
BERWICK, JAMES P.	'94	EXERCI
BIELEN, LEE A.	'95	COMDIS
BLANCHETTE, ADAM B.	'95	EXERCI
BURNHAM, ZACHARY D.	'95	EXERCI
BYAN, SCOTT W.	'95	EXERCI
CAMPO, JOHN	'95	EXERCI
CHURCHILL, TODD T.	'95	EXERCI
CLEMENTE, DIANA	'94	EXERCI
COHEN, JONATHAN	'95	EXERCI
CORRALLER, KATTIA M.	'95	HUMNUT
COURCHAINE, ADAM J.	'95	EXERCI
DAB, DHARMELI P.	'96	PHILST
DAI, CHARLIE	'95	EXERCI
DAVEY, CHRISTINE A.	'95	EXERCI
DEMARCO, ANTHONY	'95	EXERCI
DE, ARUP	'95	EXERCI
DELABARE, SARA L.	'97	MATH
DELABARE, SARITA D.	'95	EXERCI
DELANEY, CHRISTINE	'95	EXERCI
DEMAN, MARK	'95	FOREST
DEMPSEY, MICHAEL	'95	EXERCI
DEMPSEY, MICHAEL	'95	EXERCI
DEMBRE, CHRISTOPHER J.	'96	MATH
DEMBRE, CHRISTOPHER J.	'96	MATH
DOMAN, DANA L.	'95	ANTH
DORMANDY, CHRISTINE M.	'95	EXERCI
DORMANDY, JAMES T.	'95	EXERCI
DRAYDAM, ED K.	'95	EXERCI
DRILLING, PAMELA L.	'95	EXERCI
DUMCHARD, LYNNETTE A.	'95	CH J
DUPUIS, DAVID E.	'95	EXERCI
DUSCOE, BRIAN P.	'97	CHEM
DUTTON, CHRISTOPHER M.	'95	EXERCI
DWORKIN, JONATHAN B.	'95	EXERCI
EBERMANN, CHRISTOPHER D.	'95	BIOC
EBERSOLE, ERIN J.	'95	EXERCI
EDELSTEIN, ALEX	'95	EXERCI
EDWARDS, CHRISTINE E.	'95	EXERCI
EGAN, KATHLEEN A.	'95	ENGL
EISENBERG, JONATHAN	'95	EXERCI
EISNER, JEFFREY A.	'95	EXERCI
ELLIOTT, MARGARET	'95	EXERCI
ELLIOTT, MARGARET A.	'95	EXERCI
ELLIOTT, MARGARET A.	'95	EXERCI
ELLIOTT, MARGARET A.

UM women's crew bashes blades in regatta

By Jody King
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts rowers placed sixth out of 20 teams overall on Sunday at the Head of the Connecticut Regatta held at the Cromwell Boating Area in Middletown Conn., in a time of 25:53.29.

Although there were 19 other crews in the head race, the Minutewomen really had only one school on their minds.

"We had been preparing for Yale all week. [UMass Coach] Jim [Dietz] really wanted us to do well against them to give our program a step up, and to hopefully start racing Ivy League schools," junior rower Amy Kenney said.

The Minutewomen used the race on Sunday to prove to themselves that they are able to make that step up. Passing both Wellesley and Yale during the course of the race helped.

As an Ivy League school and a member of the Eastern Association of Women's Rowing Colleges [EAWRC], which is the top women's rowing league in the country, Yale crew has an incredible amount of funding and support available to their program and are almost always a top contender. UMass went into the race with the mindset of beating Yale.

"The race felt good," Kenney said. "We were able to work our way up to Yale after passing Wellesley which gave us big incentive and kept us strong. We weren't really thinking about any of the other crews in the race."

The varsity eight race started in a strong head wind on Sunday which caused choppy water conditions and took its toll on some of the weaker crews.

"The race was hard from the start with the strong head wind," Kenney said. "But we remained strong and I think we were able to pass Yale later on because of it."

UMass and Yale took turns pulling ahead over the duration of the head race until the Minutewomen ended up taking them in the end and finishing two seats ahead.

UMass rowers bashed blades with the crew from Wellesley as the Minutewomen battled to take the lead. UMass Coxswain Dena Hiller was screaming to the boat as the Minutewomen approached, but Wellesley still would not yield.

In a crew race when a boat is coming up faster from behind, the rule is that the slower lead boat must yield. In the regatta on Sunday, however, Wellesley would not yield as the Minutewomen were fast approaching.

"[Wellesley] refused to yield to us so it was pretty much a battle to pass them. I think it was really an added rush though. When something like that happens everyone gets mad and it helps us as a team to push harder," Kenney said.

The first place collegiate finisher in the race was Brown in a time of 24:44.13. UMass placed sixth, finishing only 0.71 seconds behind Dartmouth College [25:52.58].

Sports Notice :

Tickets for Midnight Madness will be available starting today at the Curry Hicks Cage ticket office. Admission is free, but tickets must be picked up in advance.

Sign-ups for the Midnight Madness 3-on-3 tournament and foul shooting contest will be today and tomorrow at the Midnight Madness table in the Campus Center Concourse from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. There will be separate divisions for women and men.

Preliminary games will begin Wednesday night at 9 p.m. Participants must have a valid Student ID.

There will be a meeting for all Collegian sports writers tonight at 7 p.m. at the Collegian office. Anyone who is unable to attend is required to contact Andrew Bryce or Matt Vautour at 545-1851.

"Simplify, simplify."
Henry David Thoreau

"Hey, that's not a bad idea."
AT&T

AT&T Universal MasterCard.
The credit, cash and calling card. All in one.

The AT&T Universal MasterCard. No annual fee—ever. Access to cash at over 350,000 locations. Plus an AT&T calling card. Because life should be contemplated. Not complicated.

Call 1 800 438-8627 to request an application.

Look For FREE STUFF at The AT&T Universal MasterCard Table

AT&T

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE FRIDAY, OCT. 21
GRANTS FOR:
• Visual Art & Design
• Literature, Theater, Performance Art
• Film & Video
• Music
•Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance & information:
Student Activities Office
or
the Arts Council
101 Hasbrouck
545-0202

COMPLETE OPTOMETRY EXAMS
AT THE UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES

Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director,
UHS Eye Care Program.

We offer. . .
. . .quality, comprehensive vision care at a reasonable cost.
courteous, friendly, professional staff.
. . .reduced rates on eye glasses at participating opticians with a complete optometric examination at the University Health Services for Student Plan members.
. . .a comprehensive contact lens service.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over the years has been consistently excellent

uhs
EYE CARE PROGRAM

"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."

Convenient hours and on campus location.
call 549-2671
X244

Men's tennis falls to Vermont

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Correspondent

A dark Friday night set upon Amherst and the lights went out on the University of Massachusetts men's tennis team, as they fell 5–2 at the hands of a powerful Vermont team.

The team's season mark falls to 3–2, with only a pair of matches remaining.

UMass fell behind early, dropping two of the three doubles matches to the Catamounts. Tim Lipsky and Keith Murray won the sole doubles match for the Minutemen, defeating Vermont's Mike Derby and Josh Altman.

Tied at two, Lipsky and Murray broke serve on a never– ending deuce and never looked back, en route to an 8–5 victory. Lipsky single handedly put the match out of reach, amassing a pair of aces in the final game, before finishing off the Vermont duo with a backhanded winner down the line.

"Losing the doubles point was key, we didn't have good play where we're usually strong," said Massachusetts Coach Judy Dixon following the match.

Needing to take four of the six singles matches, the Minutemen faced an uphill challenge. Lipsky became the only double UMass winner on the afternoon as he took his match 6–4, 6–1 over the Catamount's Marcus Eyth. In the first set neither player broke serve until Lipsky broke Eyth to take a 6–5 lead that he wouldn't relinquish. Lipsky displayed both excellent baseline as well as serve–and–volley styles in his resounding victory.

Justin Lynn captured the only other singles match of the day for UMass as he knocked off Vermont's Andrew Sirota 5–7, 6–3, 7–5 in a very tightly contested match. After a shaky first set, Lynn stormed out to a 3–0 lead in the second, which he finally took 6–3. After a back and forth third set, Lynn finally emerged victorious.

"I'm very pleased with the effort. Vermont is always a tough team. Last spring we lost to them 7–0. It's been a great improvement. We're knocking on the door of this kind of team," Dixon said.

The match of the day, unfortunately, didn't end as well for the Minutemen however. Senior Keith Murray used all of his 6–5 frame in a three set baseline slugfest against the Catamount's Jeremy Morrone. Both players attempts to rush the net were highly ineffective and the match slowly became a power tennis clinic. Murray dropped the first set 6–4 and eventually captured the second by the same score, despite falling behind 1–4 early on in the set.

The thrilling third set tied at four as darkness started to set in upon the upper Boyden Courts as even the band, practicing beside the Mullins Center called it a day. By the time the tiebreaker came around, the pitch black sky dictated the flow of the match. With tennis skills almost a nonfactor, Morrone defeated Murray, 6–4, 4–6, 7–6 (7–5), proving to have the superior night vision.

Still, Dixon said, "the singles play is much improved all around. Vermont is deep and we matched them head to head all the way down."

The 3–2 Minutemen face Providence this afternoon on the Boyden Courts, and travel to Boston University for a match on Oct. 18.

NHL players present new proposal

TORONTO (AP) — Hockey players, making what may be the final attempt to ensure a full NHL season, presented the owners Monday with a new taxation proposal.

The owners, who postponed the start of the season from Oct. 1 to Oct. 15, will consider the proposal Tuesday when they meet in New York.

"The issue will be brought back to the governors for an update, and we'll have a discussion and then a decision," NHL commissioner Gary Bettman said after a 3 1/2-hour meeting.

The new proposal calls for a top taxation rate on salaries from 5.5 percent to 7 percent. Players say this would create a $20 million pool for small-market teams, $1 million more than the NHL's proposal. They say the proposal would give the small-market teams revenue of 72 percent of the NHL average.

"It is something that goes against our grain," said Toronto's Mike Gartner, president of the NHL Players Association. "I hope the owners see that, but I do not know how they will react to it." Fifty-seven games will have been postponed through Tuesday. Bettman has said the league would consider starting the season Saturday if there were significant movement toward a collective bargaining agreement. Union head Bob Goodenow said that condition was met.

"In today's proposal, we responded to all of the stated concerns of the NHL and made significant moves that should form the basis for a new agreement," he said. "We have gone the extra mile to get an agreement. We have made today's proposal to bring an end to the lockout and play hockey, not because we are interested in taxing player salaries."

Bettman says if the season starts this weekend, teams will play full 84-game schedules.

UM places 4th in Short Invitational

By Rich Wicker
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts men's cross–country team had a very successful meet in last weekend's Paul Shore Invitational in Bethel, Pa., placing fourth in a 22–team field, one place ahead of No. 1 ranked Georgetown.

The Minutemen finished with 151 points, behind Penn State (31), Pennsylvania (128) and James Madison (147). The Minutemen also finished ahead of Iona, who they had previously lost to.

"The meet is always an important one on our schedule because of the level of competition," said UMass Coach Ken O'Brien. "This meet gives us a more compact situation. This year there were five of the top 10 teams in the country at the meet from all over the country, including No. 1 ranked Georgetown."

Overall, O'Brien was pleased with his team's performance.

O'Brien said he wanted to see his top two runners, Towse and Nedeau, run together for the first time. He also wanted to see the three, four and five runners on the team take a completely different approach in racing and narrow the gap of the times between the two and three men.

"I have noticed Mike Maceiko and Jon Way are making real efforts and some significant strides towards doing that," O'Brien said. "I was hoping we could put two of our runners somewhere in the top 30 of the race and then hopefully with at least two of the next five spots come in one of the top 70 spots. Then we would have made significant strides since the beginning of the season."

"We felt as though the meet couldn't have done much better. The kids looked at the meet initially as the start of the second half of the season where they were thinking in terms of championship competition."

UMass' top runners were Towse (31:46), who finished in eighth place, Nedeau (32:09) who finished in 17th place, Maceiko (32:27), who finished in 30th place, senior Rick Copley (32:57), who finished in 45th place, and Way (33:07) who finished in 51st place.

"This is the first time we have run 6.2 miles," O'Brien said. "That is the distance that you run at the NCAA's at the end of the year, so you should try and race at this distance at least once. We were using the meet to measure how far we have narrowed the gap between us and the top teams in the country."

"We wanted to go down and use the meet as a barometer to our teams development at this point in the season, against some of the best teams that we can run against, under championship conditions."

The Minutemen race again next Friday in the New England Championships in Boston.

X-Country pulls out all stops

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts women's cross country team surprised even themselves on Saturday as they placed second out of 24 schools at the Paul Short Invitational, held at Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa.

Once again, sophomore Melissa Langevin led the way for the Minutewomen, finishing the race in a personal record time of 17:46.9 seconds. Langevin finished third among all runners in a thick and highly competitive field. The first mile she ran uphill in 5:23, a phenomenal time considering that the opening mile at Vermont she completed downhill in 5:20.

"This was their best performance of the year so far," said UMass Coach Julie LaFreniere. "They all went out and ran the first mile very well and aggressively. The entire squad had a great effort. They competed like veterans."

Rebecca Donaghue and Julie Moreau also recorded their personal best times Saturday, finishing in 18:25.7 (sixteenth overall) and 18:30.5 (nineteenth overall) respectively.

Donaghue topped her previous high, set earlier this season at home against UConn and Maine, by 20 seconds. Yet, she said she can improve more before the upcoming New England Championships.

Kristen Donaldson posted the second best time of her career, finishing 40th in 19:00.7.

Sheryl Lyons ran a strong race as well, finishing sixth for the Minutewomen finishing in 19:16. Lyons injured her foot late in the race and was on crutches Sunday afternoon, but she persevered and finished a tremendous race.

"I was very pleased with their attitudes going in. They're a young team, but they didn't panic and were very confident," LaFreniere said. "They went out hard and they were very aggressive. That's how you have to run this part of the season and if you run conservatively, you'll be in the back of the pack."

UMass finished behind Providence College, who has been ranked in the national top five for the past 10 years. Providence's top runners finished first, second and fourth. Only Langevin's efforts prevented a clean sweep by the Friars.

Meanwhile, the Minutewomen narrowly placed ahead of Connecticut, who defeated UMass earlier this season. UMass' performance also included a comfortable victory over defending Atlantic–10 champion St. Joseph's. The Hawks, however, were running without one of their top runners, Sue Yagielski, who stayed back in Philadelphia to take the entrance examination for graduate school.

After a week off for what LaFreniere referred to as "some heavy–duty conditioning," the Minutewomen will return to action on Oct. 22 at Franklin Park in Boston at the New England Championships. Massachusetts anticipates a top five finish in this race. The consensus is that the Friars will run away with the title.

"There's nobody in New England who can challenge them," LaFreniere said.

Dartmouth, Boston College, Boston University and UConn all have tough teams that could give the Minutewomen trouble at the New Englands. UMass was edged by BU earlier this season, and has split a pair of races with the Huskies.

"The whole team was ecstatic, and it was a real nice bus ride home," LaFreniere said. The Minutewomen aspire for a similar return trip from Boston in two weeks.

F.Y.I.
Bring your listing down to the Newsroom, and we'll make sure it runs in Amherst's only Daily Calendar
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Career Day 1994
Date ? Wednesday, October 12
Time? 1:00-5:00
Where? Campus Center Auditorium
Who? Open to Everyone
Why? Find Out About 52 Major Firms
• TJ Maxx • Chubb
• AT&T • May Company (Filenes)
• Cigna • Raytheon
• Andersen Consulting • Many More
• EDS
Ask Good Questions – Get Good Answers Bring a Resume if you wish
Sponsored by
The Undergraduate Business Club

TOTAL FITNESS
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES • TREADMILLS • LIFESTEPS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • FREE WEIGHTS • NORDIC TRACK
FALL SPECIAL • '99 • 10 WEEKS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 WEST ST. ON BUS ROUTE OPEN 7 DAYS

SANDY RENAUD
of the University Barbers
will re-locate to
90 North Pleasant St., Amherst
(near D.P. Dough & CVS)
starting Monday, Oct. 17
Hours: 8:30 - 4:30 Mon. thru Fri.
8:00 - 1:00 Sat.
253-3666 Free Parking

IGU
INVITES ALL UNIVERSITY AND STOCKBRIDGE WOMEN TO OPEN RUSH
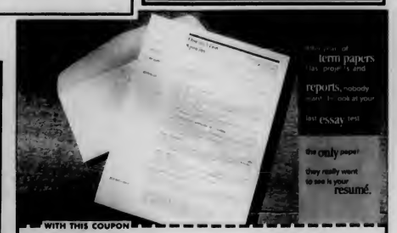
10/6 BBQ 5:30 - 7:30
10/11 SUNDAES 6:00 - 8:00
10/12 PIZZA 5:00 - 7:00
CALL KRISTEN @ 549-0243
406 N. PLEASANT ST.

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
SHARK NIGHT IS HERE
Single Elimination Pool Tournament
• Free Pizza for Players
• $2.00 Entrance Fee
Sign Up: 7:30-8:00
W!NNER TAKE ALL!!!
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549 4040



WITH THIS COUPON
$29.95
professional resumé package
Bring this coupon into the Kinko's listed and receive a $21.95 Professional Resumé Package includes one page typeset and provided to you on disk, 25 copies on fine parchment, 25 matching blank sheets (for cover letters), and 25 #10 envelopes. One coupon per customer. Not valid with other offers. Coupon good through November 15, 1994.
kinko's the copy center
AMHERST: 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2543 Open 24 Hours
NORTHAMPTON: 34 Bridge St., 585-5000 (Across from the Post Office) HOURS: 6am to 12 ...

UMass Arts Council Presents performance interventions at public art sites & courtyards artEventives
October 20
To celebrate the ReMaze... Maze Interventions: Reclaiming a Campus Public Art Site.
A 1994 Collaborative Project of the University Arts Council and Physical Plant
3:30 - 6:00
Beginning with the musical sounds of flutes on the meadow with Gordon Korstange and Rajesh Ranganathan, South Asian flute and drum; Barney McElhone of "The Bards" on the Irish tin whistle; and HAWK (Nipmuc), Native American Flutes.

3:30 - 6:00 "Before the First Frost" bulb planting
Planting and resowing of wildflowers in the meadow of the Maze. Student volunteers needed for this momentous planting event – sign-up at the arts council table at the campus center concourse, 10/14 & 10/17
5:00 Dedication and appreciation of this ReMazed public art site.
All throughout this artEventives there will be ReMazing refreshments of crisp orchard apples, popped corn, and cider.
ReMazing assistance and support from: UMass Arts Council, University Physical Plant, South Asian Music in Dance Program of the Fine Arts Center, Monique Fordham (Abenaki of WMAS), Rita Department of Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning, Laura Wilson (MLA '95) and Lois Kissinger (MLA '95), Mike Davidson, Stockbridge School of Agriculture, and many other gardener friends and faculty.

Volleyball splits Atlantic–10 matches in weekend action

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts volleyball team split two conference matches this past weekend, losing to Temple 11-15, 3-15, 12-15 in Philadelphia, and defeating Rutgers 15-6, 15-9, 15- 6 in Piscataway N.J.

UMass, now 15-2, 3-2 in the A-10, lost only their second contest of the season Friday night at Temple, and it was the first time this year in which they were defeated in three straight games.

The Minutewomen had run off 14 straight victories to open the season. They were then handed two losses within four days, falling first at the Cage to Rhode Island last Tuesday, and then in their match against the Owls.

"We didn't play as a team at all. We played like individuals," said sophomore outside hitter Dionne Nash. "We were in a daze."

Nash collected 12 kills, second on the team, against Temple, who knocked UMass out of last year's A-10 Tournament in a tough five game match. She was also second in digs, tallying 13.

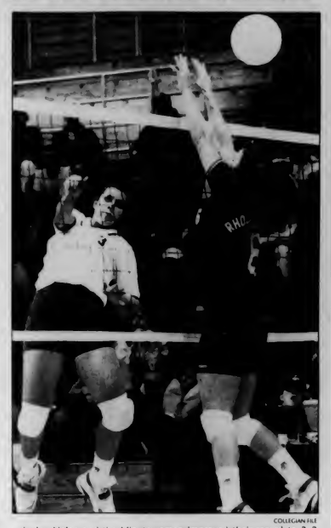
Another sophomore, Giza Rivera, played well for the Minutewomen. Rivera, who has been one of UMass' biggest offensive threats this season, led the way with 17 kills, and also recorded 12 digs.

"I feel like we could have beaten both URI and Temple if we had played our hardest," Nash said. "We'll be confidant when we face them at home."

Another bright spot for UMass has been freshman Lesley Nolan. Nolan, the Minutewomen's season leader in digs with 205, reached double figures again Friday night with a team high 16. She has also been a force offensively. Nolan, who stands behind only Rivera and Nash in total kills on the team, amassed 11 in the loss.

Temple's senior outside hitter Katie Harrigan, last year's Atlantic 10 Player of the Year, provided the heroics leading the Owls, (13-7, 3-1) with 16 kills, and an impressive .452 hitting percentage.

On Saturday, UMass headed to New Jersey where they locked horns with another A-10 foe, Rutgers. The Minutewomen were able to come out on top of this one, defeating the Lady Knights in three straight games. Massachusetts was once again led by Rivera, who had a team high, and career high 25 kills. Rivera has now led the Minutewomen in kills



COLLEGIAN FILE

Lesley Nolan and the Minutewomen improved their record to 3–2 in the Atlantic 10 this weekend.

13 times this season. She also recorded 12 digs. Marking the 11th occasion she has reached double figures in both kills and digs this year.

"We talked about coming together and playing like a team the night before," Nash said. "And we were able to do it."

Nolan also had a career day for the Minutewomen, collecting 17 kills, her highest total ever at UMass. She also led the way in digs, with 16, and served 3 aces.

"Giza and Lesley both played extremely well," Nash said, who did not play so bad herself. She tallied eight kills, eight digs, and was in on two of three team blocks, one of them solo.

The Minutewomen were able to jump ahead of Rutgers (now 4-12 overall, 0-5 A-10) early in the first two games, but had to use a ten point run, including six straight served by Nolan, in game three to come back from an 0-4 deficit and ice the victory.

UMass is in the midst of a six game road trip, and will be traveling to the nation's capital to tangle with George Washington on Oct. 14. The Colonials, who were last year's Atlantic 10 regular season and tournament champions, defeated UMass in both of their encounters last season.

"We're working hard on being disciplined on defense," Nash said. "We're trying to be strong on the block. We know its going to be a big game."

■ New Hampshire

continued from page 16

tually untouched along the sideline to put UNH up top, 14–3.

With UMass defense still holding the Wildcats at bay, the offense had several chances to score in the fourth quarter. The Minutemen turned to an aerial attack for the first time this season with McNeilly throwing 27 passes, completing 10 for 182 yards.

"We had time to complete the passes when we had to, we just couldn't. It's not all Andrew's [McNeilly] fault, we ran some bad routes," Hodges said.

McNeilly found Daryl Thomas [5 catches, 106 yards] alone for a 60 yard bomb for UMass' first touchdown. Ingoglia ran the two-point conversion in, and the Minutemen were within three points with 4:20 to go.

UMass had its last chance with 28 seconds to go, and the ball at its own 46 yard line after a UNH botched punt. McNeilly (2 INT's) was intercepted by Jim Concannon down at the UNH 34, trying to set up a tying field goal attempt.

"No regrets from today's game. It's back to practice, focusing on William & Mary," Corcoran said.

"We need to stay together as a team, no finger pointing, everyone takes the blame for this loss. We have some things to work on in practice, and we'll have to get better for next week," Hodges said.

■ Wildcats

continued from page 16

The missed field goals were crucial to the final score. Oke missed a 19-yarder, a 22-yard attempt was blocked, and a third quarter, 29-yarder was wide right.

Turnovers were costly as well. At the start of the second quarter, with fourth and goal inside the one, Ingoglia was cranked by the New Hampshire defense and coughed up the ball. The Wildcats gained possession with the touchback.

In the second quarter, McNeilly, in the grasp of defensive end Mike Foley, who was about to be sacked, apparently flipped the ball forward as he was being brought down. Wildcat Warren Armes was given credit for the interception, which led to a two-play drive capped by a Jim Stayer–to–Jeff Tamulski 15–yard touchdown.

"They played aggressive defense, and we came up short," Ingoglia said. "We got into the red zone [inside the 20], and we didn't score. Their defense was excellent, they played scrappy defense. They were coming inside and out, and they made a lot of good plays."

A defensive–holding penalty proved to be detrimental to the Massachusetts effort. Late in the second quarter, New Hampshire had third down and 22 at its own 18 before the Minuteman penalty.

It became first down for the Wildcats, and though it did not lead to a touchdown, it prevented Massachusetts from getting good field position in New Hampshire's territory.

For Division I–AA playoff reasons, the New Hampshire game was big, and the Minutemen came up short. With the tough loss, next week's game at Mid–Atlantic Division leader William & Mary is that much larger in magnitude.

"We needed this game badly," Ingoglia said. "But we're not out of it. We're 3–2. Next week's game is so very important. This game is over now. Now we'll look to William & Mary."

■ North Carolina

continued from page 16

Minutewomen, who dominated the play after that.

"The momentum really shifted when Hilary made that save on the stroke," said senior co-captain Danielle Borges. "After that we knew we had to go do it. They had their chance and we were going to get ours."

Freshman forward Missy Sweeney, who was seeing her first extended action of the season, provided a spark for the Minutewomen on offense.

"Missy has excellent speed," Donnelly said. "The other thing is, when you have an athlete who keeps saying I can do it, I can do it, and if somebody believes in themselves that much, you have to give them a shot. When we put her in, she kept doing the job."

Despite opportunities for the Minutewomen, the score remained knotted at the end of regulation. Going into sudden–death overtime, Megan Donnelly told her squad that someone would have to emerge. Rothenberger took her cue.

"Before the overtime, I told them, we need someone to step up," Donnelly said. "Kyle was looking right at me and just nodded. She's a big game player."

The sophomore midfielder is no stranger to big goals. Rothenberger now has eight game–winners in her career including one in last years's upset of Old Dominion.

"When the coach says that someone needs to step up, I think it's me," Rothenberger said. "I want the ball in overtime. I want to be the one to take the shot. I have so much confidence in myself and the people around me."

North Carolina Coach Karen Shelton pointed to UMass' overtime experience (four OT games in their last six) as a key to the outcome.

"They really showed that they've had a lot of experience in over time games," Shelton said. "They looked a little fitter than out team and certainly a little hungrier. They deserved to win today."

"We knew that going into the second half that we were in great shape and as long as we kept plugging away that we were going to score," said senior midfielder Colleen Duffy.

The win registers as the biggest in Donnelly's short head coaching career.

"This is everything you hope for," Donnelly said. "The No. 1 team, in front of a home crowd. We've worked hard and had so many close calls. It would have been easy to get down, but we just stepped up when we really needed to."

Despite only having one loss, the Minutewomen have struggled to move up in the poll. This win will likely silence any doubters.

"This says a lot," Donnelly said. "Our confidence will build. Hopefully other people will give us recognition."

"It should really wake some people up to the talent that we have on this team," Rothenberger said. "We are definitely National Championship contenders."

The win enhances the teamwide belief that this team can win it all.

"We're heading right up the poll, into the Final Four, and come back number one," Rose said. "If we can play like this every game, we're going to do it."

UMass returns to action this afternoon against Maine at 3:30 p.m. at Totman Field. They will not have to wait long for another shot at a No. 1 opponent as this Sunday's opponent James Madison will likely take over the top spot.

■ field hockey

continued from page 16

10 assists in 1994], only seven yards away, preparing for a penalty stroke.

Rose admitted that she was attempting to psych Werley out before the shot was taken.

"First of all, I think it's etiquette that the goalkeeper steps out of the other cage, so I had to ask the umpire [to tell her to move]," said Rose. "I went and touched the ball, because that's what I do, then I stepped back and told her to bring it on.

[Defending a stroke depends on] a combination of different things when she steps up to take the stroke — where her blade is, where her feet are, and you kind of get an idea of where it's going. Then, instinct just takes over."

Werley aimed for the lower left corner of the cage and Rose dove to her right, blocked the shot and single-handedly turned the game in the favor of the Minutewomen.

"They were dominating play completely, and to be shut down time after time, it has to get to you mentally. Hilary is just absolutely key to this team," Donnelly said.

Coming into Sunday's contest, Massachusetts and North Carolina were the stingiest on defense in the country, allowing four and three goals, respectively.

The deciding factor has been finishing on offense and, up until Sunday, the Tar Heels were the team pouring on the goals, tallying eight goals twice and more than four goals in a game five times. Massachusetts players and coaches said they did not let North Carolina's numbers overwhelm them in Sunday's contest.

"I don't think their numbers meant anything to us. We put everything aside and played UMass hockey, which is [playing] the best defense in the country," said Massachusetts senior co–captain Kyri Sparks. "Megan preaches that to us, we believe it, and that's all we have to do is play UMass hockey."

BEE BOP

If you've got a good vibe you can snap your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum. Mass Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS

STILL HAVE TIME TO ENTER

Volleyball: (Men's/Women's/Co-Rec/)

Tennis Singles: (Men's/Women's)

Cross Country Race TODAY 3:30; Boyden Steps

Don't Miss The ACTION

For entry forms and info 545-2693 545-0022

RETURNING TO THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS THIS FALL... THE MOST SUCCESSFUL NATIONAL BARTENDING SCHOOL PRESENTS ...

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING™

- Professional Bartending and Bar Management Training at a fraction of the cost at many schools
- Full certification in as little as six weeks
- Specific programs tailored to your specific needs
- T.I.P.S.™ and Serv-Safe™ certification available
- Approved by the National Restaurant Association®

FREE INFO SESSION TONIGHT! Mon., Oct. 3 @ 7:00 pm Lord Jeffrey Inn

Shop around and compare! Call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX for more information. Act now! Space is limited!!

YoungLife

INTERESTED IN RENEWING YOUNG LIFE CONNECTIONS HERE IN HAMPSHIRE COUNTY? CALL DAVE 549-3991

Book NOW for the holidays!

LONDON $173

AMSTERDAM	$215
PARIS	$229
MILAN	$239
TEL AVIV	$369
CARACAS	$215
BANGKOK	$468

Fares are each way based on a round trip purchase from Boston. Student or Faculty ID may be required. Taxes and surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.

STA TRAVEL

79 So. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002

(413) 256-1261

Daily Collegian

We at the Collegian are always looking for new and innovative students to join our staff. Join our newsroom staff and add your voice to the largest college daily in New England. Not a writer? The workings of a paper demands creative talent at many levels: business, graphics, photography, advertising.

All you need is initiative.

The Collegian is located 113 Campus Center Basement.

Mental Health Groups Fall 1994

Topic-Focussed Groups being offered by the Mental Health Division of UHS this Fall are:

- Eating Disorders Group — Tuesdays 4-5:30
- Exploring Gay, Lesbian, Bi-sexual Identities — Tuesdays 4:30 -6
- Building Self-Esteem — Wednesdays, 3:30-5
- Skills for Combatting Depression — Wednesdays 3:30-5

Groups are open to students covered by the health plan and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. Groups begin in mid-October. Pre-group interviews are required. For information or to sign up for a pre-group interview call 545-2337 or stop by 127 Hills North. We're open M-F, 8-5.

Women's soccer escapes with 3–2 OT win; Hartford awaits

By Mike Reiss
Collegian Staff

It was not too long after a hard–fought 3–2 overtime victory over pesky Colgate, but many of the players from the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team still remained on the playing surface at Richard F. Garber Field.

UMass	3
Colgate	2

For the players, it was hard to find satisfaction in this victory. By looking at most of them, their general expression was far from the cheery atmosphere the weather set forth on the gorgeous fall Sunday afternoon.

"We're going about it the hard way," said Massachusetts Coach Jim Rudy. "This is a good win, but not a satisfying win. It's not satisfying because I know [the players] aren't happy. They're very harsh on themselves."

Regardless, the two teams, and even more so Massachusetts, put on an exciting show for the estimated crowd of 325. And when sophomore defender Erin Lynch looped a curving ball from 18–yards out into the upper left corner at 95:54, Massachusetts had a 3–2 lead it would never relinquish.

"In overtime things got stretched out a bit, and that's going to happen after almost 100 minutes of play," said Colgate Coach Kathy Brawn. "The ball [on Lynch's goal] was not cleared well, three of our defenders had a chance at it. The communication just wasn't there."

If the term smash–mouth applied to soccer, this match was a perfect example of that hard–nosed style of play.

"We might have picked our play up a notch in that department," said Rudy, a modest smile on his face at the thought. "We played a little harder, especially with our tackling."

"The referee let them play consistently throughout the match," said Brawn. "I didn't think it was getting out of control. Both teams took their knocks and lumps."

Both teams had plenty of offensive opportunities to go along with those knocks and lumps. Just seven minutes into the match, defender Nikki Ahrenholz saved a dangerous situation in front of the Minutewomen goal, clearing a ball which easily could have resulted in a Colgate score.

Massachusetts was just as active offensively. After two legitimate bids that just sailed wide, midfielder Julie Magid made sure the third chance was anything but wide. Settling a bouncing ball, the sophomore blasted a 16–foot shot to the low right corner at 13:46, out of the reach of the seemingly immobile Colgate keeper.

STEVE PEDELLA / COLLEGIAN

Julie Magid has been playing outstanding both offensively and defensively lately. She scored the Minutewomen's first goal against Colgate Sunday.

It looked as if Magid's goal would stand as the only tally of the first half, but with four seconds remaining, Colgate's Nicole D'Orazio slipped past the defense before depositing a shot to the low right corner to tie the score at 1–1.

D'Orazio was at it again early in the second half, scoring on a corner kick at 46:03. "Whatever nerves and trepidations of playing UMass, and the dynasty here, the slate was wiped clean at halftime," said Brawn.

But sophomore midfielder Rebecca Myers had the answer for D'Orazio's second tally, once again testing the lateral movement of the Colgate keeper with a shot to the low right corner, knotting things up at 2–2.

Massachusetts put on a late flurry to end things in regulation, but the Colgate defense stiffened. Then it was up to Lynch in overtime, and the steady performer delivered.

Yet judging from the reaction of the players, and the relative concern of the coach, it appeared both knew a better effort could be put forth. "The girls are ruthless in their self–evaluation," said Rudy. "They're actually a lot better than they think they are. The self–doubt is not timely to have with Hartford coming up."

Victory or no victory, there was a sense something was missing from Massachusetts play on Sunday. And with Hartford, the No. 1 ranked team in the Northeast region coming to town tomorrow, Rudy and Co. can only hope to bring things back to a level that not only produces victories, but is also self–satisfying to a group of players that expects nothing but the best of themselves.

Soccer splits weekend

UMass beats West Virginia, loses to George Washington

By Brian Gormley
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team split two road games against Atlantic–10 opponents this weekend, defeating West Virginia, but losing to George Washington.

GW	3
UMass	1

The Minutemen returned home with a record of 6–4–1 overall and 4–1 in the A–10.

Friday's 1–0 victory over the Mountaineers (6–4–1, 1–2 in the A–10) was the first time Massachusetts has ever beaten West Virginia on the road. To get the win, the Minutemen had to overcome not being used to playing on an Astroturf field. They also had to overcome a West Virginia team that is notoriously tough to beat at home.

"West Virginia is the hardest place to play in the A–10, the field is very tough to play on," said Massachusetts Coach Sam Koch. "We have never beaten West Virginia in West Virginia and for us to accomplish that is very tough. I am very pleased with the team."

Sophomore forward Dave Siljanovski scored the game's only goal at 25:19 in the first half. The rest of the game was controlled by the Massachusetts defense and goalkeeper Mark Wolf (6 saves), who earned his fourth shutout of the season.

Koch credited his team, who controlled the first half, for withstanding a Mountaineer onslaught in the second.

"In the second half we began to lose the midfield a little bit, which is the reason why they were able to put as much pressure on us as they did," Koch said. "They began to win the loose balls, anticipate the plays better and read the bounce of the ball better, which is to be expected when you are down. It is a credit for us that we were able to take the pressure as well as we did."

Koch said backs Joe Maruca, Joe Jacobson and Benny Shcally's excellent defensive work held West Virginia to just two good scoring chances from inside the 18–yard box in the second half.

Sunday's 3–1 loss to George Washington (4–6–1, 3–1 in the A–10) was a physical affair that left the Minutemen bruised and frustrated. Midfielder Mike Doyle's foot is now in a temporary cast because of an injury he suffered when a George Washington player clipped him. Defender Dan Chagnon was ejected for getting a red card in the first half and several other Massachusetts players received minor injuries.

Koch said the referees let several penalties go early, which caused them to lose control of the game. He also said his team must learn to expect that type of officiating on the road, and that they should not let it throw them off of their game.

"The referees were definitely very creative and what they let go caused us a great deal of frustration," he said. "But we have to learn to make sure that doesn't happen. You have to expect that when you go on the road you are going to get referees who don't see the game your way. To be a good team, you have to learn to play in those situations and find a way to get through that."

Forward Colin Johnson scored the only goal for Massachusetts at 20:42 of the first half. Johnson also had a chance to tie the game in the second half on a penalty kick, but he could not convert. But Koch credited him for being a catalyst in the Minuteman offense.

"Colin Johnson played very well in both games this weekend," he said. "He has been a big reason for the turnaround we have had on offense."

Koch did not lay all of the blame on the referees. He said although Massachusetts generally outplayed the Colonials, some defensive lapses caused them to give up goals they should not have given up.

Koch said the first goal, scored by George Washington's Mo Reyes, was a well executed play by the Colonials, but it was also a play that Massachusetts could have prevented if they had not broken down in the midfield. Koch also said the other two goals they surrendered were due more to defensive mistakes rather than great plays by George Washington.

STEVE PEDELLA / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Joe Jacobson and the Minutemen split their weekend beating West Virginia and losing to George Washington.

Lynch and Myers reverse roles in victory

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

Erin Lynch is the defender, Rebecca Myers is the scorer.

On Sunday against Colgate, their roles were reversed. In UMass' 3–2 overtime win, Lynch was the scorer and Myers the defender.

With less than two minutes left in regulation, a Colgate player was sprinting down the left side of the field destined to go one–on–one with Massachusetts goalkeeper Danielle Dion, when from behind came Myers with a slide tackle to thwart the rush.

Game saving defensive play.

"I think that's great of her," said Lynch of Myers. "That's her defensive role to get back and check the player that came through, that's part of her job. It should depend on the backcourt to do it but if she comes back and does it, it helps us out a lot. That was a great job on her part."

Then in the first overtime period at the 95:54 mark, Lynch took a shot from about 18–yards out that landed in the far post.

Game winning score.

"She comes through in important games," said Myers of Lynch. "I'm glad she did [score]. She's a great defensive player, hard to stop. If she doesn't play well it has a great impact on the team. She's an all–around great player."

Without those two plays, the Minutewomen do not win. Both Lynch and Myers speak glowingly of each other and their play, but are modest when it comes to talking about themselves, downplaying their game saving and game winning tactics.

"It was my player, I should have played her tighter," Myers said of her defensive stop.

"I was coming down the middle, I missed the first try at it and I got another chance," Lynch said of her game winning score. "I just put it away to the far post. My role is really to defend and then get forward when its open. Coach gives me that opportunity. And that time I saw it open and I just went for it, and it paid off."

Contrary to their hustle–minded, aggressive play on the field, the two roommates are very laid–back off the field.

"When you get beneath the look that they have, the laid– back, sort of shuffling, we call it ambulating, because they sort of ambulate in, sort of slow, with the baseball cap pulled low over their face," said UMass Coach Jim Rudy. "When you get below that, those two are two of the neatest kids that I've had."

The only way they differ is on the field. The two play different positions. But according to Rudy, they have the ability to play just as well at other positions.

"I can see them easily playing other positions. Erin as an attacking midfielder because she certainly gets forward well, and Becca played as a stopper for us last year when [Paula] Wilkins was injured. I almost can see Myers maybe as a big target center forward as well.

"They're both excellent well–rounded players. They have a load of potential."

Lynch and Myers are not just teammates or roommates. Off the field they are good friends.

"She's definitely my closest friend on the team," Myers said of Lynch. "I can talk to her, and not just about soccer."

"She's a reliable, trustworthy friend," Lynch said of Myers.

The two sophomore leaders will be looking for another role reversal on Wednesday when the No. 1 ranked [in Northeast region] Hartford Hawks come to Richard F. Garber field for a 3:30 p.m. matchup.

NFL FOOTBALL RESULTS

LA Raiders	21	Atlanta	17	Denver	16
New England	17	Tampa Bay	13	Seattle	9
New York Jets	16	San Diego	20	Green Bay	24
Indianapolis	6	Kansas City	6	LA Rams	17
Chicago	17	Dallas	34	Philadelphia	21
New Orleans	7	Arizona	3	Washington	17
Buffalo	21	San Francisco	27	New York Giants at
Miami	11	Detroit	21	Minnesota (late)

WEEK SIX

THE ALANA LECTURE SERIES

PRESENTS

Anthony P. Crayton

THURSDAY OCTOBER 13, 1994

CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM

7:30PM

Free and Open to the Public.

Anthony P. Crayton, Community Activist and Alum of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Former Director of the Office of Third World Affairs and member of the Boston City Council from the Roxbury District. Mr. Crayton will speak on Politics, Prejudice and Power. He is presently, Vice-President of Diversity and Management Associates.

SPONSORED BY: THE OFFICE OF THIRD WORLD AFFAIRS.

Immigration Law

Hans & Curran, P.C.

30 Years of Experience in Immigration Law

163 Main Street Springfield, MA 781-6870 | 13 Old South St Northampton, MA 584-3232 | 50 Congress St Boston, MA (617)722-0063

Free Consultations for Five-College Students/Faculty

Eating Disorder Programs • 1994/95

Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Call for more information 549-2671, Ext. 233

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phoneline for help around eating disorders - yourself, or someone you know 549-2671, ext. 168.

26 YEARS 1968-1994

THE PUB

Fun, Food & Spirits

TUESDAY

Live Entertainment with

New Horizons

and special guest

Mentos

Reggae - Calypso

9:30-1:00

Nachos $2.00 9:30-10:30

15 EAST PLEASANT·AMHERST

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Sports Weekend

UM

Tuesday, October 11, 1994

Lynch nets OT winner

The Minutewomen soccer team improved their record to 9-2-0 with 3-2 overtime victory over Colgate this weekend at Garber field (Story page 15).

Volleyball absorbs second loss

The Minutewomen volleyball team came away with a weekend split falling to Temple and beating Rutgers. This brings the team record to 3- Atlantic-10 competition. They will be facing George Washington during a six-game road trip (Story page 14).

Cross Country teams shine at Paul Short Invitational

The men's and women's cross country teams turned in excellent performances at this weekend's Invitational meet. Both teams showed great improvements in the performances of their runners. Upcoming meets will hopefully bring similar results (Story page 13).

Soccer splits weekend games

Junior Colin Johnson scored UMass' only goal in a 3-1 loss to George Washington. The Minutemen beat West Virginia 1-0 Friday (Story page 15).

Minutewomen topple No. 1 UNC

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

WESTFIELD — A year ago, the No. 1 ranked North Carolina men's basketball team ran into Massachusetts in early autumn, and was toppled from the top spot. In Sunday's field hockey game, history was repeated.

UMass	1
UNC	0

Just over six minutes into overtime, Kyle Rothenberger blasted a shot from 16 yards out, past UNC goalkeeper Jana Withrow to give UMass an upset victory over the No. 1 Tar Heels.

"[UNC] was outstanding," said Massachusetts Coach Megan Donnelly. "We just played a smart tough gritty game. We didn't have a lot of chances."

The Tar Heels carried the play throughout the first half, but with the exception of penalty corners, the Massachusetts defense kept them from establishing any offensive rhythm.

"They were dominating play completely in the first half, but were shut down time after time," said Donnelly. "Mentally that has to be frustrating."

In the second half the Tar Heels attacked early, collecting an early penalty corner, but like 18 other times that afternoon, they were thwarted by Minutewoman goalie Hilary Rose.

The Tar Heels key scoring opportunity came with 16:21 remaining in regulation, when they were awarded a penalty stroke. Cindy Werley, a member of the United States National Team, was denied by Hilary Rose on a low hard shot.

Shortly after, UNC had another opportunity. Senior Barb Hanson had a clear shot with Rose out of the net, but Melanie Gore dove across to save the goal.

"Since the beginning of the season, Melanie has taken a step upwards every game," Rose said. "She has the speed and the courage. I'm just pleased that she's on my team."

The brilliant defense energized the

Turn to NORTH CAROLINA, page 14

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Kyle Rothenberger enhanced her reputation as a big game player, scoring the game winning goal in Massachusetts' upset of North Carolina.

Hilary Rose turns in a stellar game in UNC upset

By Arthur Stapleton Jr.
Collegian Staff

WESTFIELD — If they don't score, they can't win.

Goalkeeper Hilary Rose has perfected Massachusetts Coach Megan Donnelly's defensive philosophy for her Minutewoman field hockey team, and never was it more evident than in the clash with No. 1 North Carolina Sunday afternoon.

Rose kept Massachusetts in the game by blanking the potent Tar Heel offense through regulation, which allowed midfielder Kyle Rothenberger to net the game winner in overtime, leading No. 9 Massachusetts to a 1-0 stunning upset over then-undefeated North Carolina on the turf at Westfield State College.

"It's a really good feeling knowing the No. 1 team is here, they come to play in our yard, and they don't get a look in," Rose said.

"Experience is one thing — you can have as much experience as you like, but it's the trust I get from everybody else [which is important]," she said.

The sophomore from Bury St. Edmunds, England, was stellar between the pipes, stopping 22 shots, while recording 18 saves. Unlike in two scoreless overtime ties earlier this season in which Rose completely shut down the opposition, Massachusetts came away with a victory.

"We soaked up a lot of pressure in the first half," Rose said, "And we knew in the first half, when we contained them, they had nothing else to give us. It was just a matter of us stepping forward and winning it."

Stepping forward and beating North Carolina was something 11 teams before Massachusetts could not do, yet Rose was able to take the game in her own hands and thwart the Tar Heels on several key situations in the second half.

"We knew [Hilary] was going to be a factor in the game. We knew that we were going to have to get quality shots on goal. We had sufficient opportunities and she just was there every time," said North Carolina Coach Karen Shelton. "We knew that it was going to take an incredible effort to score a goal."

The best scoring opportunity for the Tar Heels came with 16:21 left in regulation and North Carolina's leading scorer, Cindy Werley [11 goals,

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY page 14

Mistakes lead to YanCon loss

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

DURHAM, N.H. — It was bound to happen some time.

It, indeed, happened Saturday afternoon as the University of Massachusetts football team came up short against New Hampshire 14-11 at Cowell Field in Durham, N.H.

In front of the 9,018 in attendance, the Wildcats [4-1 overall, 3-0 in YanCon play] defense set out to stop the explosive Yankee Conference-leading running attack of the Minutemen [3-2, 2-1]. Stuff 'em in the middle, force them to the outside. Prevent them from playing their successful smash-mouth brand of football.

Mission accomplished.

Massachusetts rushed for 168 yards, well below its average of 305.8 yards per game prior to Saturday's contest. The strength of the Minutemen was known to all, especially after the team and YanCon record 313 yard-performance the weekend before by All-American candidate Rene Ingoglia against Rhode Island.

With the run being stuffed, the only other option was to pass. So, Massachusetts went to the air a season-high 27 times, as quarterback Andrew McNeilly completed 10 of those for 182 yards.

Was the passing game successful? The passing yardage was a career-high for McNeilly, as was the 5-catch, 105- yard effort by wide receiver Darryl Thomas. But overall, the passing game was inconsistent.

There's an old saying, "you live by the sword, you die by the sword." The Massachusetts offense lives by its running game, and it died by the passing game.

How so? Massachusetts has not passed all season. They do not favor the passing game, and they are not forced to pass on normal occasions. What did they have to do in the final 2:35 drive while down by three points, and 77 yards away from the endzone? Pass.

With first down and 10 on their own 23, McNeilly completed a pass to Thomas for 14 yards. Then, it was 0-4 on the next four plays. Incomplete, incomplete, broken up pass by Wildcat cornerback Wes Mills, and a batted down pass for an incompletion. Four incomplete passes for an incomplete touchdown drive.

"We had time to complete the passes we had to, but we just couldn't," said Massachusetts Coach Mike Hodges. "It's not all Andrew's fault, we ran some bad routes."

The chance for victory was there. Considering the time and number of yards away from a scoring opportunity, the running game could not be utilized. The Minutemen had 155 seconds to charge up the field and at least — despite kicker Eric Oke's subpar day — get within field goal range.

Turn to WILDCATS, page 14

Errors plague UM as UNH wins 14–11

New Hampshire hands UMass their first Yankee Conference setback in battle of the defenses

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

DURHAM, N.H. — The University of Massachusetts football team committed far too many mistakes, failed to convert scoring chances, and missed opportunities all day to pull out a victory.

New Hampshire [4-1, 3-0 in the YanCon] upended the Minutemen 14-11 on Saturday at Cowell Stadium, in front of a crowd of 9,018.

New Hampshire	14
Massachusetts	11

"We had to make big plays, and we did, a TD pass and a punt return. Unquestionably our defense won this game," UNH Coach Bill Bowes said.

UMass [3-2, 2-1], outgained the Wildcats, putting up 342 yards of total offense, compared to 195 from UNH. Three missed field goals, two interceptions, and a fumble cost the Minutemen dearly.

"We have to execute, there's no magic to it. Both defenses played great, it just wasn't enough for us to win," said UMass coach Mike Hodges.

UNH defensive end Mike Foley was awarded the Bill Knight trophy for outstanding player in the game. Foley keyed a defensive line that stopped the best running game in the conference and harassed UMass quarterback Andrew McNeilly.

UNH stopped UMass' Rene Ingoglia, holding the All-America candidate to 73 yards on 24 carries, a week after he set the conference record with 313 yards last week against Rhode Island.

"Our whole defense played great, I feel great about the run defense," Bowes said.

The UMass defense played just as well as UNH's. The Wildcats were held to 54 yards passing, with QB Jim Stayer completing only five passes on the day. Ben Albert and Brian Corcoran led the charge, sacking Stayer four times.

"This was what college football was all about, two great defenses slugging it out, it's just a battle. We just came up short," Corcoran said.

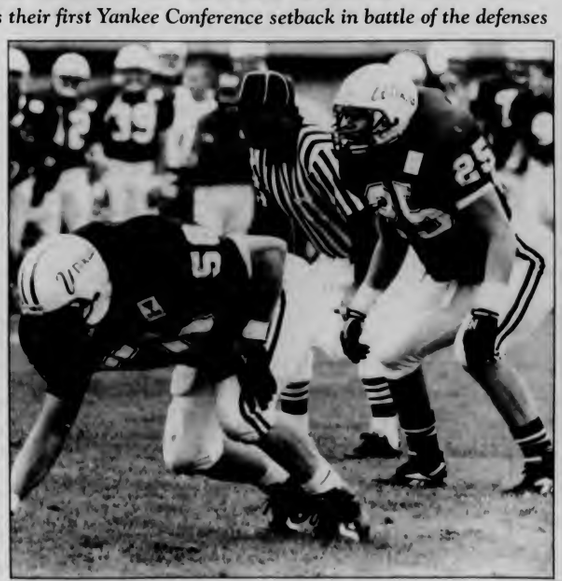
UMass opened the game with an 11-play drive, only to begin the day of missed opportunities. Ingoglia caught a screen pass on the first play from scrimmage, rumbling 27 yards. Behind the running of Ingoglia and Frank Alessio, the Minutemen moved down to the UNH 12, only to have Eric Oke miss a 29 yard field goal attempt.

At the end of the first quarter, Breon Parker fielded a UNH punt at his own 24, and returned it the UNH 28. An 18 yard run by Ingoglia set up a first-and-goal situation. UMass got the ball down to the one on three straight running plays.

UMass went for it on fourth down, and Ingoglia was stopped and fumbled into the endzone for a touchback. Things fell apart from there.

"I want the ball in Rene's hands in that spot, we felt like we could punch it in," Hodges said.

UNH was held without a first down for the fourth straight series, giving the ball back to UMass. Two plays later, McNeilly was sacked by Foley on his own 20, coughing the ball up as he was dragged down. Warren Armes jumped on the ball and suddenly the Wildcats had excellent field position.



NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Roger Kotlarz and the Minuteman defense played well this weekend, but it was not enough as the University of Massachusetts fell to New Hampshire 14-11 on Saturday.

With 11:18 left in the first half, on the second play of the ensuing drive, Stayer stepped back and found tight end Jeff Tamulski wide open in the endzone for a 7-0 lead. Without having so much as a first down until that point, UNH had the lead.

Long runs of 30 and 14 yards by Alessio set up another Oke attempt, midway through the second quarter. Oke's low kick from 22 yards away was blocked by UNH's Wes Mills. This was UMass' third drive inside the UNH 20 yard-line that resulted in no points.

"We have to score inside the 10, we're not the type of team that can afford not to," Hodges said.

Oke did connect on a 37 yard field goal after a 15-yard personal foul penalty on UNH gave the Minutemen a first down. Oke struggled all day, connecting on only one of four attempts.

"The guys played their hearts out, we deserved to win. I had some bad moments today. I have this sick feeling. I don't know how to explain to the guys, we should have won," Oke said.

Calvin Jones returned a UMass punt 52 yards for a touchdown to start the fourth quarter. Jones exploded vir-

Turn to NEW HAMPSHIRE, page 14

Hart blasts winner against Maine

With less than two minutes remaining, Natalie Hart blasted a penalty shot home yesterday to give UMass field hockey a 1-0 win (See Sports, page 10).

Fishing just isn't that simple

Anglers are the subject of study for a UMass scholar who is trying to answer the age-old question: why do they do it? (See story on page 2.)

Harper's blues ferry to land in Noho

Ben Harper will open for Luscious Jackson at the eagerly awaited Oct. 13 show at Pearl Street. (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast

Skies will stay clear and the wind will let up today, with temperatures nearing 60. Tonight will be a frosty 30 and Thursday and Friday will see continued sunshine and 60-ish temperatures.

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 57	HIGH: 63	HIGH: 60
LOW: 30	LOW: 32	LOW: 30

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 21 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, October 12, 1994

Coming out rally overcomes poor publicity

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

The Lesbian Gay Bisexual Association (LBGA) of the University of Massachusetts fought poor publicity and technical problems for their National Coming Out Day rally.

Marking the anniversary of the first march in Washington D.C. in 1987, the rally took place at noon on the Student Union steps in front of about 40 people.

"National Coming Out Day is designed for people to come out in as many parts of their life as they can, whether that means at work or at home with the family," said Wendy Darling, a sophomore anthropology major.

The opening speaker, senior Kelly Hayes, spoke of her experiences in the coming out process.

"I came out when I was 18, my second semester at UMass," said Hayes. "I'd really like to acknowledge the community that was here, mostly bisexual women. These are my role models. These are the women who were out, stayed out, got harassed and beaten up, and still they were there."

Hayes then opened the floor to the participants of the rally, asking them to share their feelings and experiences.

Junior economics major Ali Davis told of his experience in coming out and the difficulties facing a gay African- American.

"I have had to deal with a lot of crap," Davis said. "I have had to deal with racism in the gay community and homophobia in the Black community. That's not going to stop me."

Junior journalism major Rachel Tanenhaus, spoke of how she had not yet announced her sexual orientation at last year's rally, but it was her first "out" experience.

"I've come out to my friends — most stuck around, some didn't," Tanenhaus said.

She said she watched people at last year's rally and used them as role models.

"Now I feel I have to give back," Tanenhaus said. "Somebody else is out there, watching and learning from your example. The more people that are out, then the more people that can come out."

Asha Doyon, a former UMass student, said he came to the rally for the same reason.

"I'm going to be visible and try to be a role model," Doyon said. "Knowing people who are out really helps."

The outlook for the rally was not good at first, with only a handful of people on the Student Union step when the speaking began. Davis said he doubted the rally would ever get off the ground.

Hayes said she felt it was due to a lack of advertising.

"There has been a shift in leadership," Hayes said. "We're not as well organized."

After the rally, Davis said his outlook changed because of the strength of the community.

"Even the crowd was not as big as we would have liked it to be, and we had some adversity," Davis said. "We managed to make something very positive out of a situation that was going downhill quickly."

Paul Entis, an advisor to the LBGA, said he felt events like this are great not just for those coming out but for people who have already done so.

"It's a wonderful thing to be able to celebrate who we are," Entis said. "It's about affirming an identity that is not well received."

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

Listeners showed their support yesterday on the Student Union steps as Kelly Hayes shared her experience coming out at the age of 18.

Clinton wary, hopeful over Iraqi troop retreat

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Carefully watching an Iraqi troop pullback, the United States on Tuesday suggested imposing a wide off-limits zone on Saddam Hussein's forces near Kuwait's border. The administration said Baghdad must "stop being the bully in the neighborhood."

See related story, page 3.

Five days after the crisis began, the Pentagon said some Iraqi units had moved away from their combat positions toward rail stations for loading onto trains.

"There's fairly broad movement" among the 80,000 Iraqis assembled at the Kuwaiti border, Gen. John Shalikashvili said at the Pentagon.

President Clinton was cautiously optimistic that Iraq was pulling back from the brink of a military showdown.

"I'm hopeful," Clinton said. "It's a little early to reach a final conclusion. We're watching it very closely." Despite signs of a pullback, Shalikashvili said that "considerable units" of Iraqi forces were still in place near Kuwait and that it was uncertain how far back the retreating troops were moving.

"I'm not at all prepared to say the crisis is over in any way," said Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. With Election Day four weeks away, the president was campaigning in Michigan for Democrats.

Clinton's actions won bipartisan praise from members of the Senate Intelligence Committee, who were briefed by Pentagon and CIA officials.

"The president is right by not relenting at all and deploying more forces," said Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., the committee chairman. "Any movement of (Iraqi) troops there is certainly not convincing."

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., the committee vice chairman, called Clinton's actions "timely and very prudent."

American forces continued to rush to the Persian Gulf, with 19,000 troops in place and 44,500 more in various stages of deployment. An additional 156,000 troops were on alert but had not received orders to move.

Despite the promised pullback, the United States and its allies appeared determined to prevent Saddam from triggering another crisis at will.

One idea being discussed with allies called for the U.N. Security Council to declare a wide off-limits zone for Saddam Hussein's forces in southern Iraq near the Kuwait border.

"There's a no-fly zone now (in southern Iraq) but we are looking at ways to kind of move them back and make sure that they stay behind a certain area so that we are not faced with this kind of thing again," said U.S. ambassador Madeleine Albright.

UM crime statistics suggest decreases in assaults, rapes

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

Reported sexual assaults, rapes and aggravated assaults on the University of Massachusetts campus have decreased significantly since 1991, according to 1993 crime report data.

The University's Division of Public Safety crime statistics show a notable decrease in reported aggravated assaults and forcible rapes from 1991 to 1993.

Fifteen cases of aggravated assault were reported to University Police in calendar year 1993, down significantly from the 64 cases reported in 1992 and 39 reported in 1991.

Aggravated assault is an unlawful attack by one person upon another when the offender uses a weapon or displays one in a threatening manner, or the victim suffers obvious severe bodily injury involving apparent broken bones, loss of teeth, possible internal injury, severe laceration or loss of consciousness.

In 1993, four forcible rapes and eight sexual assaults were reported, down from 11 rapes and nine assaults the year before, according to University police. In 1991, 11 assaults and eight rapes were reported.

Detective Joanne O'Connor said forcible rape can be any form of penetration of any orifice by any object against one's will.

O'Connor said these rape statistics represent only the rapes reported to University Police.

"Often times, victims don't report to the police because they don't feel safe," O'Connor said.

According to the University statistics, there have been no cases of non-forcible rape in the calendar years of 1991, 1992 or 1993. Incest and statutory rape are placed under the category of non-forcible rape.

Larceny and theft reports have risen to 782 in 1993 from 676 in 1992 and 657 in 1991.

Larceny/theft is the unlawful taking of property from the possession of another person.

"Students need to use common sense and lock their doors," said Detective Chris LaFlamme. "There is not a protective bubble over UMass."

Burglary has remained fairly constant, with 255 reported cases in 1993 compared to 253 in 1991 and 241 in 1992.

Burglary is the unlawful entry into a building or other structure with the intent to commit a felony or theft.

LaFlamme said many of these thefts are ordered by car theft rings in Springfield and Holyoke.

The stolen cars are often taken to chop shops where the cars are dismantled and their parts are sold, he said.

Liquor-related arrests have sharply decreased in the past three years, from 112 in 1991 to 66 in 1992 and just 47 in 1993.

One hundred and twelve cases of liquor-related arrests were recorded in 1991, 66 in 1992 and 47 in 1993.

Only one robbery was reported last year. Two were reported the year before. Robbery is taking or attempting to take anything of value under confrontational circumstances by force or the threat of force.

Motor vehicle theft has also remained fairly steady, with 22 stolen vehicles reported in 1993.

Eighteen drug-related arrests were made in 1993. In 1992, 10 arrests were made on drug charges, and 13 were made in 1991. Four weapon related arrests were made in 1993, 3 in 1992 and 4 in 1991. No murders have been recorded at the University since 1991.

New boiler forces construction of smokestack near Annex

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

A new smokestack is to be built across from the Textbook Annex, causing a two-week detour along the road to the campus parking garage. The stack is intended to eliminate excess condensation coming from a new boiler at the Physical Plant.

The newer buildings require more steam than the University has the capacity to hold. The new boiler and stack are necessary to make it through the winter, according to Patrick S. Daly, director of operations at the Physical Plant.

With construction of the new stack and repairs on one of the older ones, there will be a total of three functioning smoke stacks on campus, Daly said.

The detour will take effect Oct. 24 and may run up to a maximum of two weeks, Daly said.

The police will detour traffic needing to access the garage down a one-way street. The street goes by Holdsworth and passes Chenoweth and Flint laboratories before coming to the entrance of the campus garage, he said.

The repairs on the older stack will temporarily eliminate use of coal-fired boilers, which represent 50 percent of the steam generating capacity at UMass, the University News Office said.

"The University sends the steam through pipes to heat all the buildings on campus and the hot water," Daly said. "We need more steam for the Mullins Center and the new polymer center."

On the coldest day, the Silvio O. Conte Polymer

Turn to SMOKESTACK, page 3

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

A construction worker tightens nuts on the steel footings for the new smokestack under construction near the Textbook Annex.

Marrow drives staged to save area girl

12-year-old Southampton resident could reap benefits of drives

By Andrew Ferguson
Collegian Staff

Four Red Cross bone marrow drives throughout the month could save the life of 12-year-old Stephanie Phakus and thousands like her who are battling blood diseases.

A bone marrow transplant is her only hope of being cured, according to a Red Cross representative.

Phakus, a Southampton resident, is suffering from aplastic anemia, a disease where bone marrow fails to produce blood cells. A bone marrow transplant is her only hope of being cured, according to Lisa Amicone, a representative of the Red Cross.

Phakus was diagnosed in August and has been in the hospital since that time.

Approximately 30 percent of people needing transplants have a family member with matching marrow. The rest, like Phakus, rely on a nationwide donor program.

Amicone said there are thousands of people searching for matches and new potential donors are always needed.

"It takes less than 15 minutes and could potentially save a life," she said.

The National Marrow Donor Program (NMDP) is a congressionally sanctioned non-profit network throughout the United States and 15 other countries to help patients with leukemia and other blood diseases find matching bone marrow donors.

The NMDP was established in 1986 with a grant from the Office of Naval Research. In 1987, two successful transplants were completed. So far this year alone there have been more than 2,600.

The program also conducts research on the effectiveness of transplants. There are currently more than 1.3 million volunteers registered on the network.

A potential donor gives a small blood sample that is analyzed and entered into the national registry. In the event of a match, the marrow could be extracted and would replenish itself within a matter of weeks.

The chances of two unrelated people matching varies from one in 100 to over one in one million. The level of match must be closer than organ transplants, since the marrow contains the cells responsible for the immune system.

The success rate of the transplant depends on the exact disease, the stage of the disease and the individual. The survival rate is between 30 and 60 percent for diseases that would be fatal without the transplant.

There are, on average, 2,000 people scanning the registry for a match at all times. Over 75 percent of those searching the registry have some form of leukemia, but people like Phakus who suffer from other diseases benefit as well.

The registry is always in need of people willing to donate marrow, and the testing centers are actively trying to increase the number non-white donors, as people are much more likely to find effective matches within their own racial or ethnic group.

Two drives will be held in the University of Massachusetts Campus Center from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The first will be tomorrow in room 174, and the second will be held Oct. 29 in room 168.

Two other area drives are scheduled Oct. 15 at the Inn in Northampton and Oct. 29 at the Red Basket in Southampton. Both drives will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Informational fair targets UM students planning to go abroad

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

If you're planning a trip to Ireland or even Italy in the next year, you have an opportunity to talk to somebody who has been there.

The International Programs at the University of Massachusetts is holding the 13th annual Study Abroad Fair. The fair features information tables on the Campus Center concourse today from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The Study Abroad Program, which is a part of International Programs, will have eight information tables across from the Bluewall, according to JoAnn R. Bernhard, who is charge of general advising for the Study Abroad Program.

"We hold the Study Abroad Fair to help students be more aware of what study abroad programs are available at UMass, give students information about the different programs, and to gain interest," Bernhard said.

The tables will offer an assortment of informational brochures, pamphlets and fliers about the Study Abroad Program, as well as video tapes about the different countries students can visit.

"There will be tables with information about the Study Abroad Program and material on the different countries it offers a chance to go to," Bernhard said.

Turn to FAIR, page 2

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Wednesday Ticker

Market Closes as of 4pm Tuesday, October 11, 1994

Index	Close	Change
Dow Jones Industrial Average	3,876.83	+55.51
Standard & Poor's 500	465.79	+6.75
Nasdaq Composite Index	765.57	+8.76
AMSE Index	457.76	+1.78

Market Reports

Compiled by Andrew Ferguson

Inflation fears end as stock prices rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks rose sharply for a third session today helped by some good news about corporate earnings and a bond market rally.

Motorola, Chrysler and Pepsico posted stronger than expected third-quarter profits, leaving investors optimistic about the entire earnings reporting season and the economy.

Chrysler said profits were $1.76 a share vs $1.13 in the same three months; Motorola profits, released after the close of trading on Monday, were 65 cents a share vs. 44 cents in the third three months of last year; and Pepsico earnings were 68 cents a share vs. 56 cents last year.

A rally in bond prices, fueled by receding inflation fears, also helped stocks. When bond prices rise credit market interest rates fall. That makes shares more attractive and cuts the cost of money to companies.

Sentiment in the market was also positive following Friday's strong but not inflationary September employment report. That put aside fears of growing cost-of-living and an immediate rise in interest rates.

Dollar ends mixed; gold price falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar ended mixed against key currencies Tuesday, as strength from rallies in U.S. financial markets failed to offset the effects of a surging German mark and the receding threat of a Persian Gulf conflict.

The mark rose against most currencies on growing sentiment that German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's center-right coalition will prevail in Sunday's federal election. Uncertainty over Kohl's prospects had driven the German currency broadly lower in recent weeks.

Gold prices retreated. On New York's Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery fell $3.10 to settle at $387.60 per troy ounce. Republic National Bank quoted the metal at $387.50, off $3.10, at 4 p.m. EDT.

Currency dealings were sluggish in U.S. trading, with no market-moving news or fresh economic data to guide money dealers.

The dollar drew some support from gains in bond and stock prices. The Treasury market rallied as investors grew convinced that the current pace of economic growth is not inflationary, which means the Federal Reserve probably won't raise interest rates in the near term.

Trade report sends crop prices rising

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures prices rose Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade in quiet trading ahead of a government crop report.

The Agriculture Department will revise its 1994 U.S. grain and soybean production estimates in the report, to be released early Wednesday before the grain markets open.

Analysts expect the USDA to increase its September production estimates of 9.3 billion bushels of corn and 2.3 billion bushels of soybeans.

They also expect a downward revision in the USDA's forecast for May 31, 1995, U.S. wheat stocks due to increased export demand for U.S. wheat.

The modest gains Tuesday in the corn and soybean pits mainly reflected an adjustment of the speculative positions held by traders who sold corn and soybean futures in recent weeks.

Wheat for December delivery rose 3 1/4 cents to $4.16 1/4 a bushel; December corn was unchanged at $2.13 3/4 a bushel; December oats rose 1 1/4 cents to $1.30 1/4 a bushel; November soybeans rose 2 1/2 cents to $5.32 1/4 a bushel.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, Oct. 12

Meeting — Children and grandchildren of Holocaust survivors, share stories, 541 Station Road, Amherst, 7 p.m. Information: 253-2153.

Meeting — UMass College Bowl Team, 8:30 p.m., Cape Cod Lounge, Student Union. Information: 546-2614.

Another meeting — Debate Union, 6 p.m., East Machmer lobby.

Meeting — Alana Christian Alliance Gospel Choir, 7 p.m., Campus Center. Information: 546-3215.

Speaker — "Clinton and Europe: A View From Brussels," Therese Raphael, deputy editor of the Wall Street Journal Europe, 1:25 p.m., 204 Tobin Hall, UMass.

Fair — Study Abroad Fair, Campus Center Concourse, UMass, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Special Event — Onawumi Jean Moss, 101 New Africa House, UMass, 7 p.m.

Film — Ivan The Terrible, Part 1, 202 Dwight Hall, MHC, 7:15 p.m.

Lecture — Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Studies Lecture Series: "Coming to Light: Doing Gay and Lesbian History," Campus Center room 904, UMass, noon to 1:30 p.m.

Meeting — Lesbian Bisexual Woman's Union, LBGA office, 413B Student Union, UMass, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Thursday, Oct. 13

Lecture — Professor John H Bracey Jr., "African Americans and Higher Learning in America," 4 p.m., Memorial Hall, Memorial Lounge, UMass, free.

Fair — Career Opportunities, Undergraduate Business Club's Career Day, contact School of Management office at UMass for more information.

Seminar — Chemistry seminar, "Immunosuppressive Boronic Acid Dipeptides," Lederle Graduate Research Tower room 1634, UMass, 11:15 p.m.

Film — Fantastic Cinema: Legends, Myths, Adventures, Herter Hall room 227, UMass, 7:30 p.m., free.

Music — University Jazz Ensemble and Chapel Jazz Ensemble, Bowker auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m. Information: 545-2511.

Meeting — Bisexual Rap Group, 4th floor lounge of Mary Lyon House in Northeast, UMass, 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Friday, Oct. 14

Lecture — Tim Miller will be speaking, Bowker auditorium, 8 p.m.

Lecture — Visiting Lecturer Series in Geology, Morrill Science Center room 131, UMass, 3:30 p.m., free.

Theater — Coatlicue Las Colorado present Open Wounds on Tlalteuchli, Hampden Theater, UMass, 8 p.m. Tickets: 545-2511.

Just for fun — Contra dance with George Marshall and Wild Asparagus, Dining Commons, Holyoke College, 8 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 15

Benefit — The annual Amherst fall foliage walk, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., Mill River Conservation Area in North Amherst. Information: 665-0447.

MassPIRG — Hosting streamwalk to survey the water and clean waste in Puffers Pond in North Amherst, 1 p.m., meet at MassPIRG office, 423B Student Union, UMass.

Performance — Tim Miller, "My Queer Body," Bowker auditorium, UMass. Tickets: 545-2511.

Special event — WFCR's Vintage Vinyl, Amherst Town Common, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Theater — National Marionnette in Concert, Amphitheater, MHC. Show times: 10:45 a.m., noon and 1:15 p.m., $3.

Music — "A Celebration by Friends: Clavichord Inaugural Recital in Memory of Ruth Mortimer '53," Sage Recital Hall, Sage Hall, Smith College, free, 3 p.m.

Film — Out of Africa, Gamble Auditorium, MHC, 7 p.m. and 10 p.m., $2.50.

Music — The Klezmatics, presented by WFCR and the Yiddish/World Music ensemble, Academy of Music, Northampton, 8 p.m. Information: 545-0100.

Theater — They Do It With Mirrors, Chapin Auditorium, MHC, 8 p.m., $5.

UMass professor analyzes motives behind angling

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Staff

A day of fishing seems to be a pretty simple thing. You throw your rod and tackle in the car, go someplace with water, get in a boat or cast from shore, catch fish, and then go home. Not according to David Loomis.

Loomis, an assistant professor of forestry and wildlife management at the University of Massachusetts, studies, among other things, why people fish. He says this type of information is essential to managing fishery resources.

Loomis studies the human dimension of fisheries and wildlife. "I do not do biology," he stresses.

"I study anglers. When you look at why people fish, to catch fish, you begin to realize that catching fish is less important than other reasons," he said.

"Those other reasons can be to catch big fish, to catch a lot of fish, to catch certain types of fish, to be outdoors, to be with people, to be alone; people fish for any number of reasons."

Diversity among anglers must be accommodated, Loomis said. "What is important to realize and understand is that 'average angler' does not exist, and as a result, we cannot manage for the average angling experience.

"It would be like giving everyone one type of shoe, one color, one style. We know that isn't the case."

It's important for resource managers to examine these differences so as to meet the needs of all anglers, he explained.

"Sport fishing is a multi-million dollar industry," Loomis said. According to the 1991 National Survey of Fishing, Hunting, and Wildlife Associated Recreation, the number of fishermen nationwide in 1990 is somewhere around 35.6 million. They fished a total of 511 million days and spent $24 billion that year. Massachusetts fishermen spent $454 million last year alone.

"There's a level of satisfaction being sought, and a key question for managers is are anglers being provided with what they want," Loomis said. "If they aren't, they may well do their fishing elsewhere, and take their spending with them."

Loomis also mentions that much of the support for the management of fisheries does not come from taxpayer dollars, but from the anglers themselves through license fees, excise taxes on equipment and fuel, and various other fees and charges. This strengthens the need for resource managers to pay attention to what anglers want.

Loomis is a fisherman himself, but he regrets he doesn't have much time for the sport.

As for the appeal of fishing: "There's just something about fishing that even I can't understand."

■ fair

continued from page 1

"Staff from International Programs and returning students who have gone on the Study Abroad Programs will be there to talk about the program including their experiences studying and living in other countries," Bernhard said.

The tables will be broken up by the different countries the program offers students to visit, with three to four students to a table, said Bernhard.

The places which the Study Abroad Program reaches include Africa, Australia, Bulgaria, Canada, China, Denmark, Egypt, France, Germany, Hungary, India, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Latin America, the Netherlands, Poland, Russia, Spain, Switzerland, Taiwan and the United Kingdom.

The International Program has had success with the Study Abroad Fair, which is in its 13th year, according to Bernhard. The fair helps attract approximately 800 students to the Study Abroad Programs.

Bernhard encourages students to stop at one of the table or at the International Program Office in Goodell Building for more information about the programs available.

Students interested in the Study Abroad Program or other related programs can get more information by visiting the office and talking first to a peer advisor and then any one of the 10 advisors working there, said Bernhard.

WHEN WAS THE LAST TIME YOU TESTED YOUR SMOKE DETECTORS?

Last month? Last year? Can't remember? If you're not sure your smoke detectors are working, then how can you be sure you'll be protected if a fire breaks out?

Don't gamble with your life and assume your smoke detectors are working. Test each one, every month, so you'll know they'll be ready to protect you and your family if there's a fire.

Test your detector for life.

American Red Cross | NFPA National Fire Protection Association

ATTENTION UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS:

STUDENTS WHO ARE PLANNING ON PICKING UP CHECKS AT BURSAR TELLERS' WINDOWS IN WHITMORE PLEASE NOTICE:

IF YOU HAVE NO FINANCIAL AID AND ARE ONLY LOOKING FOR THE REFUND CHECK FROM THE CURRICULUM FEE REDUCTION:
DO NOT STAND IN LINE*

THESE CHECKS ARE BEING MAILED OUT.

FOR ALL OTHER CHECKS GO TO THE BURSAR TELLERS' WINDOWS AS USUAL.

Karen Lee Shelley, Bursar

TOTAL FITNESS
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES • TREADMILLS • LIFESTEPS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • FREE WEIGHTS • NORDIC TRACK
FALL SPECIAL • '99 • 10 WEEKS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 WEST ST. ON BUS ROUTE OPEN 7 DAYS

Career Day 1994

Date ? Today, October 12

Time? 1:00-5:00

Where? Campus Center Auditorium

Who? Open to Everyone

Why? Find Out About 52 Major Firms

- TJ Maxx
- AT&T
- Cigna
- Andersen Consulting
- EDS
- Chubb
- May Company (Filenes)
- Raytheon
- Many More

Ask Good Questions – Get Good Answers
Bring a Resume if you wish

Sponsored by
The Undergraduate Business Club

Listen dopey,

classes were bng, or they will be bng.
CHILL

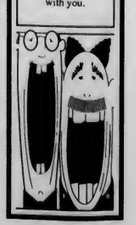
tomorrow comes, the time is now, the place is here.
CHILL

your peers watch on, keep converting CO2.

exams, papers, you got this far.
CHILL

-Author's Note-
This ad was created by the ALLIANCE.

May the force be with you.



New smokestack will create a two-week detour for traffic around Campus Center parking garage

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Construction worker Tom McGrory signals as Louis St. Pierre shovels sand into a cement mixer to make mortar.

continued from page 1

Research Center requires 40,000 pounds of steam and the Mullins requires 15,000 pounds. That adds up to 65,000 pounds of steam the Univ. sity needs to supply, Daly said.

The power plant has the capacity to hold 360,000 pounds. On the coldest day of last winter, the campus required 317,000 pounds of steam an hour, reaching the capacity of the plant, Daly said.

"We need six boilers so that we can have five boilers running at one time, and still have one in reserve," Daly said.

Coal and oil burners are used to produce the steam, according to Dave Kmelius, a drafter for BG Mechanical Contractors.

Once the steam leaves the plant and gets distributed, it turns into water and is transported back to the plant, Daly said. Approximately 10 to 15 percent of the steam gets lost in leaks along the way.

A $1.8 million project was put together last July to build a new high-pressure steam line from the Power Plant to the polymer center and Lederle Graduate Research Tower, the news office said. The new pipeline will supply these buildings with the steam they need and may also provide additional steam capacity for other buildings in the area.

A large rectangular hole has been dug to fit the foundation of the new stack. A crane will be used to drop the 90-foot sections into the plane, Daly said. The top 20 feet of the older stack will be rebuilt by Oct. 31.

"There needs to be a detour, or it could be dangerous," Detective Lieutenant Mike Grabiec said. "Because it's so tall, if anybody ever dropped anything and it hit someone, it could kill them."

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Mortar travels to the top of an existing smoke stack undergoing repairs in preparation for winter and increased demand for steam on campus.

Pollution prevention discussed

Lecturer addresses new approach to environmental problems

By Matthew Pottinger
Collegian Correspondent

"Relative risk is a way to try to help establish priorities in environmental legislation," argued an environmental engineer who spoke last week on a new approach to solving environmental problems.

Dr. Raymond C. Loehr, who recently chaired the Environmental Protection Agency's science advisory board, called the approach "Risk Evaluation" — a system of establishing priority to cases in order to more effectively protect the environment.

In a lecture hosted by the Department of Civil and Environmental Engineering last week, Loehr said his experience as an advisor on the science advisory board has given him a better perspective on the public policy side of environmental protection, thereby crystallizing his views on better ways to carry out protection.

Loehr claimed that current "command-and-control" environmental legislation focuses on only one case at a time, thereby limiting consideration of cross-media concerns. Furthermore, he said, the amount of time needed to conduct studies on every proposed regulation slows down the whole regulatory process.

Instead, he maintains that risk assessment should be "a scientific tool that is used to help identify problems, set priorities, compare effectiveness of alternatives, communicate to the public and set research directions."

Loehr went on to comment on the progress engineers have made in environmental protection over the last quarter century. In particular, he noted a substantial drop in emissions pollutants and a large drop in fish kills attributed to water pollution.

"We've made considerable progress and at the same time we've had considerable population growth, and we've had new industries come in," he said, contending that regulations protecting the environment have not hindered economic growth in America.

In outlining other strategies to protect the environment, Loehr said, "pollution prevention should be the first approach for environmental protection instead of primarily end-of-pipe treatment approaches."

U.S. troops take over Haitian palace

By Anita Snow
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Hundreds of U.S. troops took over the National Palace on Tuesday, sweeping away the last vestiges of Haiti's military-backed administration before President Jean-Bertrand Aristide's return.

About 500 American soldiers entered the sprawling white building and other ministries, escorting out employees of the government set up by the military leaders who overthrew Aristide in 1991.

"This is to facilitate an orderly transition of power," Army Lt. Col. Ed Sullivan said. "No members of the past government will be allowed back in."

Aristide's Cabinet ministers fired all employees hired under a civilian figurehead government installed in May by military strongman Raoul Cedras, who resigned Monday.

Several hundred Aristide supporters crowded outside the gates of the palace grew agitated when they saw public hospital director Georges Dubuche trying to leave in a government car.

Shouting at him to stop, they surrounded the car and let the air out of its tires. Soldiers escorted Dubuche to a private car and he drove away unharmed.

One Aristide backer, Hilaire Georges, tried to calm the crowd. "From now on, we the people are responsible for the country," he said. "I don't agree with people who try to destroy, preventing the country from going forward."

At dusk, about 2,000 joyful people paraded outside the National Palace.

Aristide's ministers were to return to their offices Wednesday, U.S. soldiers on the scene said.

"We can now roll up our sleeves and begin to rebuild democracy in the spirit of reconciliation," Aristide's commerce minister, Louis Dejoie II, said in an interview.

The government of Robert Malval, Aristide's prime minister, announced Tuesday it would take over the government ministry offices, and the American soldiers arrived in the afternoon to help.

In a statement read by Malval's spokesman, Emile Jean-Baptiste, the government expressed "serious reservations concerning the management of public funds" and indicated military-backed officials would be subjected to audits.

"The government has decided to take control of the ministries, occupied until now by the usurpers of May 11," the Malval statement read, referring to the date the military-designated Provisional President Emile Jonassaint was installed.

The Malval government also announced a commemorative Mass on Friday for its former justice minister, Guy Malary, who was gunned down one year earlier on Oct. 14, 1993.

Iraqis have 'blown credibility' with U.N.

By Louis Meixler
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Saddam Hussein's saber rattling appears to have cemented support in the Security Council for delaying any talk of easing the crushing U.N. sanctions against Iraq.

"The Iraqis, frankly, have blown it big-time up here because they were trying to persuade people that they were living up to their sanctions resolutions," U.S. Ambassador Madeleine Albright said Tuesday on CBS. "That requires credibility, and they have blown their credibility."

The Council began circulating a long-awaited report Monday night that said Iraq was cooperating with U.N. weapons monitors and that a complex system to monitor any attempts to reacquire weapons of mass destruction was functioning.

"The report is fundamentally positive," said Rolf Ekeus, chairman of the U.N. special commission that prepared the document. "We had a very good chance of a lifting or easing (of sanctions) within six months. I felt we had something coming together." But he said that Iraqi threats to end cooperation with U.N. monitors unless sanctions were lifted "puts a question mark over our efforts."

Ekeus disputed U.S. claims that Iraq was hiding missiles and a biological warfare program from U.S. inspectors.

"We feel that our assessment is correct," he said.

The report had been expected to set off a dispute in the 15-member body between countries that favored easing the embargo - led by France and Russia - and those that want to keep the sanctions - headed by the United States and Britain.

The Gulf War cease-fire resolution calls for lifting the oil embargo, but not the full trade sanctions, after the monitoring program is functioning and Iraq has eliminated its weapons of mass destruction.

A Request for Proposals for Spring 1995

The Chancellor's Multicultural Advisory Board

...is soliciting proposals for activities which have at least one of the following goals and affects more than one individual:

- Presentation of programs and events focussing on multicultural and ethnic diversity
- Promotion of the understanding and appreciation of a variety of cultural perspectives
- Educational programs concerning diverse racial, social and economic groups
- Promotion of mutual respect and civility across cultures

New programs and collaborative projects are particularly encouraged

ELIGIBILITY: Undergraduate and Graduate Students, Staff, and Faculty
TIMELINE: Activity to take place between February- May 1995

Proposal requirements: • Type Written
Sponsor(s) clearly identified with a contact name • Address and telephone number listed
Description of project and how it will meet criteria listed above • Timeline
Proposed budget including other sources of funding

Groups that receive assistance through this fund must provide the funding committee with a report about the event within three weeks of the conclusion of the program. A reporting form will be mailed out with the grant award.

Award Ranges: $250 to $2,500, with total of all awards not to exceed $9,500.
Submission Deadline: Friday, November 4, 1994

Mailing Address:
Review Committee for Proposals
Multicultural Advisory Board
c/o FAC Director's Office
129 Herter Hall

Information
Call: Julie Fifield at 545-3517
Notification:
Grant Applicants will be notified whether or not the request has been funded by Friday, December 16, 1994.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Dunenne J. Horley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gurley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Chris Taylor Corner Black Affairs Editor Emily Marino Women's Issues Editor
Andrew Ferguson Business Editor Maren E. Hellner Editorial Production Manager
Position vacant Diversifying Students Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Ada Michelle Lugo Multicultural Affairs Editor Marty Pepyn Classified Advertising
Kelly Spang News Editor Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Nathan B. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Lack of legislation will cost votes

The 103rd Congress of the United States finally went home this weekend — and unfortunately for us, except for typical politics, they didn't leave much of anything behind. Rep. Pat Williams (D–Montana) describes their work as, "Fast start, slow finish, too much rancor." Indeed.

In 1993 Congress seemed to show much potential, having approved both economic and social legislation on a grand scale. One would have thought that after addressing issues ranging from the deficit to trade to gun control and family and medical leave, the 1994 Congress would fare pretty well. And to their credit they did accomplish some good, earning themselves a few feathers including the crime bill, abortion clinic access and legislation geared toward improving education.

But after comparing what they could have done with what they actually did, the 103rd Congress should be hanging their heads in shame as they walk down the Capitol steps. Killed were many environmental programs, including rewriting the Superfund law, which provides for clean–up of toxic waste and the Clean Water Act, one of the nation's most important water quality laws. Efforts to reform both campaign financing and lobbying standards were failures; and both the economic stimulus plan and the balanced budget amendment were thrown to the dogs.

But perhaps the greatest failure of Congress was in dealing with health care. Congress spent an entire year debating plans to solve one of our nation's biggest crises and still couldn't put partisan differences aside for a common good.

The Republicans saw congressional success where the Democrats saw failure. And argue as they will, the real difference between 1993 and 1994 congressional years is painstakingly obvious: elections are just around the corner and the Republicans desperately want victory.

E.C. Thomas

In summary, the Republicans saw congressional success where the Democrats saw failure. And argue as they will, the real difference between 1993 and 1994 congressional years is painstakingly obvious: elections are just around the corner and the Republicans desperately want victory.

The 1994 year embodies how elections systematically change the Congressional arena into a political three–ring circus. Only the voters haven't been entertained; rather, they have been left on the stands disgruntled and disappointed — or wasn't that the point?

The Republicans are counting on this voter disappointment to direct them to the November polls with the goal of punishing Democratic incumbents and candidates (Sen. Ted Kennedy being a prime example). And for a while this tactic was working. While the Democrats sat back arguing amongst themselves and doing nothing to organize against Republican obstructionism, the voters were looking on with disgust. Fed up with gridlock, the Democrats were sure to feel voter frustration.

But all that has changed now, and the Democrats are slowly but surely raising their heads above the water. What's thrown this political life preserver into the election seas? The Republicans' "Contract with America."

Hundreds of Republican incumbents and candidates have signed on to this document which promises tax cuts, more military spending and a balanced budget amendment within the first 100 days of the next Congress if their party wins a majority in the house.

To sum up the Contract: Resurrection of Reaganomics, the very mention of which will send chills down the spines of most American voters. The bottom line of Reaganomics, according to most voters, is tax benefits for the rich and cuts in programs for the regular American, especially seniors and veterans.

As Paul Begala, a Democratic consultant and political adviser to President Clinton, puts it, "There is not a night that I don't thank God for the Contract. It is the greatest gift to the Democratic party since Medicare."

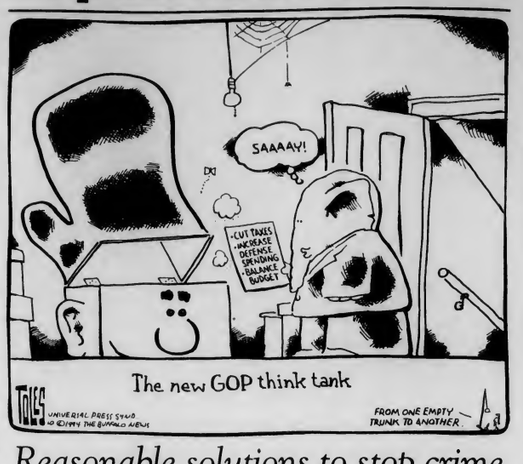
Well, not so fast.

In the coming campaign weeks, the Democrats will still be faced with explaining why they themselves were so ineffective in halting the Republicans' obstructionism. Merely building the Republicans accountable for dragging their feet and killing programs for the sake of election returns is not going to be easy, nor is it truly enough. It sounds too much like passing the buck. And no matter who blames who, the fact of the matter is that thousands, maybe millions have just lost their health care in the last year.

It strikes me as sad that what could have been a year of great progress in bettering America, was thrown into the wind of rhetoric and drowned out by the potential cries of Republican victory in November. But alas, none of that matters right now. For the moment, the Democrats have their much–needed ammunition, the Republicans are searching for their bullet–proof vests, and voters are preparing for an all out war between the two.

As Tony Coelho, head of the Democratic National Committee, says, "This will be an interesting and engaging four weeks." Indeed.

E.C. Thomas is a Collegian columnist.



SAAAAY!
-CUT TAXES
-INCREASE DEFENSE SPENDING
-BALANCE BUDGET
The new GOP think tank
FROM ONE EMPTY TRUNK TO ANOTHER
TOLES © 1994 UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND © COPPY THE BUFFALO NEWS

Reasonable solutions to stop crime

This is the second column in a three–part opinion series on crime.

Last week began a discussion of means of punishment; but punishment might not be so necessary if we can prevent crime from happening. This week, the series continues with the next phases of crime proposals.

Sixth, use the money that would have been used for prison construction to extend youth programs. In the cities, so many of these programs have been judged successful. We cannot ignore the conditions that create crime just because we can always juice the kid later on.

Seventh, increase the punishment for hate crimes committed because of race, gender, religion, age or sexual orientations. This may seem a minor point but hate– motivated violence is again on the rise in the United States.

Eighth, raise the requirement necessary to become a police officer. This is one of those careers, like teaching, that used to mean a lot more than it does today. What used to be a position of great respect is now a job taken by more and more people who can't do anything else. Why? Salary cuts. If we make police work a coveted career, with stringent requirements and a high salary, two things will be accomplished.

First, there will be less corruption; there isn't as much reason to hold a Mafia job on the side when you can live comfortably on your paycheck. Second, it will be impossible for incompetents and overt racists to join the force. Cops beat up Rodney King in Los Angeles, on the other side of the country. But they also gassed a block party in Hartford and have popped a few heads in Springfield. These are the good guys? Until we have good police, we will not have good crime prevention.

Peter Orvetti

This extends into my final point. Ninth, we must regionalize policing. Rather than having overprotection in rich suburbs and inadequate force in the crime centers in the cities, each town in a state or region would contribute to a general fund. Essentially, this would eliminate local police and extend state police.

If there is a crime wave in Holyoke, what good does it do to have Amherst police sitting idle? If these were all Massachusetts police, the unit could be sent into Holyoke temporarily and then recalled to Amherst later. Bill Clinton's 100,000 new cops won't do much good if they are incompetent and in the wrong place any way.

These nine points are just a bare outline, however. The key to eliminating crime is the decriminalization of victimless crimes.

In a libertarian democracy such as ours, we have always relied on the intelligence of the public to make their own decisions. Over the decades, though, we have imposed Puritan morality laws that serve only to send more people to prison. In fact, some of the "crimes" on the books today merely sound good in conservative political address; the situation would actually be better if the activity were legal.

The clearest example of this is prostitution. Banned as an affront to God and a dangerous act besides, the public would actually be served better if the law were repealed. Prostitutes could be given adequate health care. Abusive acts by pimps could be controlled, since prostitution would be regulated. Prostitution would take place in sanitary areas; the proceeds could be taxed.

"Yes, this is true," cry the moralists, "but prostitution is wrong!" Well, in this country the government does not have the power to mandate morality. Those on my end of the political spectrum are often accused of naivete. But in the case of crime, it is the conservatives who are naive. They want to simply wish these problems away. Prostitution has always existed and it always will. Instead of denying that, we should build laws around it to truly protect society.

Will legalizing prostitution end crime? Of course not. But ending the illegality of another victimless crime will.

If we truly want to end crime in America, we must fully legalize drugs.

More next week.

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

Chowing down on the first date

"I'll have a bacon cheddar burger with french fries, and a Coke," he says robustly, closing his menu.

"And what will you have, ma'am?" asks the waitress.

"I think I'll have the grilled chicken salad and a Diet Coke," she says, eyeballing the burger platter in front of the guy at the next table over.

It's their first date.

"Do you want to get an appetizer?" he asks her, thinking about the buffalo wings he had last week.

"No, but if you want them, go for it," she replies.

How many times have you been a part of or witness to a dinner situation like this one? If you stop by any local eatery on a given night, you will probably run into couples that are not unlike our imaginary duo. The funny thing about this scene, however, is that real women eat.

I didn't actually believe that women still wasted energy putting up the facade that they don't eat until it came up in one of my discussion classes. Men and women alike asserted that date scenarios typically followed the above example: women don't eat much when in the presence of men.

For one thing, they said, women don't want to look piggish by scoffing down a large meal — it's just not couth. But I think it's more than a matter of couth; I feel it has more to do with the way in which women are conditioned (by advertisers, music videos, fashion designers, television, etc. . .) to loathe their bodies if they do not measure up to certain standards.

If a woman is feeling badly about the way she looks because her figure is not comparable to that of Kate Moss, her relationship with food is going to be a love/hate roller coaster. The last thing she is going to do is eat (an activity that makes her feel unattractive) in front of a guy she wants to find her attractive.

This seems a bit silly to me, because we all know that everybody eats. Sure, some people have smaller appetites than others and there will be dating situations in which you simply aren't hungry. But my theory is simple: If you are hungry, eat.

I have never had a problem eating in front of guys. If you ask any of my male friends who have ever eaten with me, I can really pack it away when I'm hungry. If I want a chimichanga with the works, I'm going to order it.

I'm also going to consider the consequences of eating all that food and weigh in my mind if I really want to eat it. I'm not, however, going to base my body image on how I measure up to others.

I know when I need to watch what I eat because I feel unhealthy or uncomfortable, not because the guy at the next table is gawking at my ability to consume food, exclaiming, "Man, look at her go."

I think it is especially important to be honest with a date about how much you are going to eat; it is, after all, a part of who you are. Of course neither he nor she is going to order something destined to drip, splatter or fall out of the mouth and into the lap, like spaghetti (which leaves sauce skid marks on the chin) or ribs.

Two months down the road you may feel more comfortable and able to eat more in accordance with your normal eating habits. But who wants to wait a year to work up to ordering a full meal? Progressive eating just doesn't fly.

The other reason women tend not to eat large amounts on first dates, said my discussion group, is because they don't want a guy to spend a lot of money on an expensive meal.

My response to this could turn into a whole other column.

To keep it simple, this really is the '90s. To women who fear that their dates are spending too much money on them, I offer my amateur advice: Whip out your wallets, study the menu carefully, and get ready to chow down.

Emily Marino is a Collegian columnist.

Americans need diverse holidays

This past weekend we all enjoyed an extra day of leisure thanks to the observance of "Columbus Day." The Southwest munchy store had a sign posted outlining their "Columbus Day" hours. Why the quotation marks? It seems that many Native American groups are upset with the observance of a holiday honoring a man whose historic legacy was forged at the expense of the people indigenous to the lands he "discovered."

Thomas Akyali

Acknowledging this reasonable opposition to the holiday, and taking into consideration the general public's apathy toward the Columbus Day holiday, I suggest that we adopt a new holiday observing a more modern idea. Perhaps we might elevate this new holiday to something more than a welcomed day off between the start of classes and Thanksgiving break.

As a replacement for the well–timed but otherwise meaningless Columbus Day I suggest a holiday embodying the antithesis of the white male hierarchy Columbus represents. It might be good for America to celebrate some sort of "America Day" or "Diversity Day," a holiday used to thrust the reality of a changing nation it to the stubborn consciousness of middle America.

As nauseatingly P.C. as it may sound, such a day is needed in an age when every holiday and observance is associated with a particular race or religion. Even the most American of holidays, Thanksgiving, excludes the roles of African, Asian and Hispanic Americans in our nation's history.

While great strides have been made recentralization of the United States. While we may meet the demands of special interest groups A, B and C, we are ignoring the fundamental concept of viewing each and every U.S. citizen as a member of the same fundamentally heterogenous society.

Thus a "diversity" holiday can serve the purpose of awakening every corner of our nation to the need for an attitude adjustment. As Martin Luther King Jr. Day calls necessary annual attention to the civil rights struggle, this new holiday might forge a sense of solidarity in our racially and ethnically fragmented neighborhoods and schools.

Realistically, such a holiday may never come to pass. The observance of Columbus Day as a tribute to the spirit of adventure he possessed will continue. As the population of America remains predominantly of European descent, a holiday honoring an Italian sailing under the Spanish flag is unlikely to garner much opposition. Regardless of the popularity of Columbus Day, I cannot imagine the conservative populations of the Midwest, or sadly, perhaps, those of Massachusetts, voting in favor of a holiday which acknowledges cultural diversity in America.

If Arizona took until 1993 to adopt Martin Luther King Jr. Day, it may be another 50 years until they are ready to accept "Diversity Day." Nevertheless, such a day is needed, even if only as a sign of understanding between the innumerable groups whose constant strife serves only to weaken the fabric of our nation. Eventually we will realize that America is destined to become a microcosm of world population. That time for our enlightenment is now.

Thomas Akyali is a UMass student.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

BY THE WAY, MICHAEL-ROY, WHAT'S THE DEAL ON THE CRIME BILL? I HEAR YOU VOTED BOTH FOR IT AND AGAINST IT!
TRUE...
THE REASON I DID THAT IS BECAUSE IT TURNED OUT THAT SOME VOTERS WERE FOR IT, AND SOME AGAINST IT!
YOU SEE, SID-JOHN, I'M INTO INCLUSIVENESS! IT'S PART OF MY LIFE-FORCE! I WANT TO BE A SENATOR FOR ALL THE PEOPLE!
UH-HUH, WHO THOUGHT THAT ONE UP— MINISTER GET-A-LIFE?
SHE HELPED WITH THE FINAL WORDING, YES.

Letters to the Editor

Environmental legislation has been ignored

To the editor:

In just three weeks, the 103rd Congress will come to a close and it is outrageously distressing that not one single piece of legislation has been passed.

Clean water, safe drinking, endangered species, the California Desert bill, the Superfund Program, fisheries management, solid waste, overhauling the mining laws, ratification of the Biodiversity Treaty, creation of a "Biological Survey" agency within the Department of the Interior, and raising the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to cabinet level are all major legislative acts withering away.

Traditionally, a new executive administration will be most successful with its first congress in the first two years.

But with the current executive administration's irresistibility for the upcoming GATT treaty, it is clear that all of these pieces of environmental legislation are indeed headed for even more trouble. What is to be done?

Matt Kelly
New Ashford

Arts & Living

TV season's first casualties make room for a myriad of midseason replacements

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Just three weeks into the fall season, the brand-new Fox shows "Fortune Hunter" and "Wild Oats" are only a memory.

And now with fellow newcomers "The Martin Short Show" and "McKenna" already put on what the TV world calls "hiatus" (a word that comes, fittingly, from the Latin "hiare": to gape or gasp), gasping network programmers are scrambling to come up with new shows to fill the gaping holes in the schedule.

Here are some of them waiting in the wings:

• You may have noticed that no fewer 16 returning series began the season in a new time period, in most cases on a new night. And they're still getting flipped around like burgers at a Dairy Queen.

So don't miss "They Went Thatta Way and Thatta Way," a new game show that challenges contestants to find their favorite TV series USING ONLY THEIR MEMORIES AND DEDUCTIVE SKILLS!

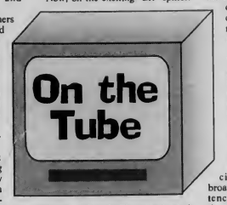
Everybody ready? Let's play the game! For five Nielsen rating points, do you know which night "Coach" switched to? Can you find "Frasier"? Do you have any idea which shows ABC swapped between Tuesdays and Wednesdays?

Please, no help from the audience. Any ideas? I'm sorry, the buzzer means you're OUT OF TIME!

• This season, the only Thursday night casualties aren't lying on gurneys at County General Memorial Hospital. No, the doctors of NBC's new hit "ER" have broken the cardinal rule of the medical profession, "Do no harm."

If you don't believe it, just consider the hurt "ER" puts on its rival shows.

Now, on the exciting "ER" spinoff



"Thursday, Bloody Thursday," watch the other networks bandage up their schedules. Watch CBS' competing hospital drama "Chicago Hope" scramble to an earlier Thursday slot. Watch ABC's "PrimeTime Live" prepare to skedaddle to Wednesday nights. Watch CBS' "Eye to Eye," now opposite "ER," blinking back tears of fright.

There's lots of action, lots of suspense, lots of blood. But caution: Could be a bit gruesome for the kidies.

• Instead, let them watch a new educational series, "National Geographic Presents Viewers in Flight."

It's a fascinating look at the migratory patterns of puzzled TV watchers hunting for their local Fox affiliate, which used to be the local CBS station, that is, until it traded with NBC and the independent channel started carrying ABC shows, after which . . . "Quitters Never Win. . . Or Do They?" This new mystery will follow the fortunes of a certain red-headed overnight success as he ditches a certain police show to try to make it even bigger in the movies.

Will about-to-be-former "NYPD Blue" star David Caruso go far when he leaves the show in a few weeks? Or just far down? Tune in and see whether down the road, hey, he's still OK.

Hosted by McLean Stevenson.

• "Unscamly Practices." With their so-called "seamless programming" the networks especially NBC have seized on the broadcast equivalent of run-on sentences which they think will help them keep their audience by sneaking past viewers a program's closing credits on a split screen with the stars goofing off or asking trivia questions then sliding right into the next show without a commercial interruption since after all you're just a bunch of chuckleheads and suggestible enough that without commercials to break the spell you'll sit and watch the same channel till Kingdom Come won't you?

• Finally, there's "Stop the Music." In an updated version of the 1950s quiz show, contestants look on sadly while ABC Entertainment President Ted Harbert trims or eliminates altogether the theme songs and fancy opening-credit sequences from his network's lineup of shows. It's all an

Turn to TELEVISION page 6

Funky grooves hit Pearl Street

Luscious Jackson and Ben Harper share an eclectic bill

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

In this ever–changing world of hip–hop who's to say that a group of White girls in their twenties who have roots as deep in punk as they do in rap can't groove with the best of them?

Luscious Jackson, a hybrid of the early Eighties hardcore movement and Nineties funk consciousness, are definitely doing their part to smash stereotypes for gender as well as music.

Consisting of members Jill Cunniff, Gabby Glaser, Kate Schellenbach and Vivian Trimble, the band mixes the laid– back grooves of hip–hop with a swirling mass of psychedelia and rock, not entirely unlike their obvious mentors, the Beastie Boys.

And while the girls are probably tired of the comparisons to the aforementioned musical maestros, the connection between the two is inevitably impossible to avoid. Schellenbach used to whack the skins in the Beastie Boys' hardcore days, before they got that urge to fight for their right to party. This, along with the fact that the band was the first to be signed to the Boys' Grand Royal label, casts a looming shadow over the group that hasn't been easy to shake.

COURTESY BECK OLIVER

Blues musician Ben Harper will open for Luscious Jackson at Pearl Street on Oct. 13.

But all that should soon change. With the release of their first full length release, Natural Ingredients (on the heels of the excellent EP In Search Of Manny), Luscious Jackson may finally be making a name for themselves.

Natural Ingredients has received heaps of critical praise across the board while filling the opening slot on the Breeders last fall tour. Add in landing a lucrative spot on the much ballyhooed Lollapalooza tour and the group has clearly established themselves as a serious live threat.

While the name Luscious Jackson may be new on the music scene, the four members have actually been together for quite some time. All growing up together in New York and coming of age through the punk experience, has given the girls a common bonding that has lasted until today.

"We made a spectacle of ourselves — the way we dressed, the way we danced, the music we liked. My whole attitude toward life was '[expletive] you,'" Cunniff told Details magazine.

With all these influences and background experience, as well as a sharp appreciation for the world of hip–hop, it is no wonder Luscious Jackson is sending waves through the music world. Their show may prove to be one of the bigger ones to hit the Valley this fall, so be sure to check it out.

Opening the show is Virgin recording artist Ben Harper. The 23–year–old singer/guitarist/songwriter has been creating an eclectic blend of bluesy Dobro riffs and insightful, intelligent lyrics that have culminated on his latest release Welcome To The Cruel World.

Coming from somewhat of a musical family, Harper picked up a guitar when he was about six and started performing at the tender age of 12. After being exposed at an early age to artists as diverse as Robert Johnson and Jimi Hendrix, Harper developed an appreciation for traditional songwriting, while at the same time creating his own distinct style.

A self–proclaimed fan of acoustic instruments (although he does occasionally dabble in the land of electric), Harper has the unique ability of pulling vividly emotional songs out of sometimes minimalist structures that often travel all over the stylistic map.

Along with the opening spot for Luscious Jackson, Harper will also play a free show at The Black Sheep Cafe in Amherst earlier in the afternoon.

Luscious Jackson will play Pearl Street in Northampton Oct. 13. The show is 18+. Doors open at 7 p.m. Ben Harper's solo show will be held at the Black Sheep Cafe in Amherst. The show is free and begins at 3 p.m.

BEE BOP
If you've got a good vibe you can snap your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum.
Meg Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

Is Your Smoke Detector Working?
Many households have several detectors that aren't working properly. Replacing a working smoke detector is an easy, inexpensive service. We can connect interconnect through the household, increasing escape routes and filling rooms with deadly smoke.
Make sure you're protected. Start a babysitting habit this October 31. When you change your clocks from daylight–saving time, change the batteries in your smoke detectors.
CHANGE YOUR CLOCK
CHANGE YOUR BATTERY
© 1994 Campbell Mithun Esty, Inc. All rights reserved. Sponsored by the Advertising Council and your local fire department.

!99.00!
Co-Ed FLEX Co-Ed
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive, Amherst
253-3539

100% BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
Great Burgs! Great Deal!
QUARTER POUNDERS® OPEN YEAR ROUND
585-0241 ROUTE 9 HADLEY MA
PETE'S

Yes, It's always a fine day for a barbeque. Ahh nothing like the hot coals to cause a man to break down in a fit of hysterical crying. "WHY DIDN'T I LISTEN TO MY MOTHER AND BECOME A DOG GROOMER!!!!"
COLLEGIAN
NEVER TOO LATE TO CHANGE

THE PUB
26 YEARS 1968 1994
Fun, Food & Spirits
TONIGHT
THE ART STEELE BAND
BLUES
• "A DIFFERENT TYPE OF BLUES BAND" HOLYOKE TRANSCRIPT TELEGRAM
• "AN ECLECTIC PASSIONATE BLUES MIXTURE." "A MUST SEE." BRATTLEBORO TOWN CRIER
• "STEELE YOURSELF FOR SOME GREAT BLUES" ART UMASS DAILY COLLEGIAN
15 EAST PLEASANT-AMHERST

Your future is coming.
Winter is almost here, and that means snow, ice and decisions about your future. Luckily, we may be able to solve all these problems. We're Providian Bancorp, formerly First Deposit, and although you may not recognize our name, we're an innovative financial services organization, and one of the top 20 issuers of credit cards and unsecured loans in the country. Our San Francisco–based positions offer unlimited career opportunity in a climate where snow is kept a safe four hours away.
Much of our tremendous success ($4 billion in assets under management) is due to individuals just like yourself. We recognize that U Mass - Amherst produces the hands–on, results oriented go–getters with just the skills we're looking for.
If you're a graduate/undergraduate student interested in a career in Finance, Treasury, Operations, or Engineering, we should be talking. We can tailor roles to meet your needs, and if you've got the talent, we'll give you the freedom to use it.
Come discuss your future with us at Career Day:
Wednesday, October 12
1pm - 5pm
Campus Center Auditorium
If you're looking to gain hands–on experience with one of the fastest–growing companies in the industry, our recruiters would love to tell you about our summer internship program too!
If you're unable to spend time with us, and are interested in opportunities at Providian Bancorp, stop by your career placement office, or send your resume to: College Recruiting, UMA/1094, Providian Bancorp, 88 Kearny Street, 10th Floor, San Francisco, CA 94108. We are an equal opportunity employer.
PROVIDIAN Bancorp
A Providian Company

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385
• Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
• Over 90 years staff experience
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
• Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems.
• We provide substitute transportation
• Users of Sikkens paint products
Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities
Shop Registration # RS1212

Finding the cure for the pain relief

By Peg Mitchel
Collegian Correspondent

Some time in our lives we've all found ourselves face to face with the drugstore shelf in search for some cure for pain. Presently, pain relief comes in so many forms of tablets, caplets, and capsules that the choice of "which one?" seems bewildering. Here are some guidelines to help you make choices the next time you visit the drugstore.

Authors of a 1991 Maclean's article on analgesics say that pain is an important symptom of illness but is individual, fleeting, intermittent, and often difficult to pin down or even describe. Most of the time our everyday pains can be managed by the use of over-the-counter (OTC) oral analgesics such as aspirin, ibuprofen, acetomenophin, and recently on the market — naproxen sodium. These work against both pain and swelling caused by headaches, dental aches, minor surgical procedures, arthritis, flu symptoms and minor injuries.

For simple tension headaches and fever, aspirin-like drugs work fine, says the medical journal The Lancet. Ibuprofen, also marketed under the names Advil, Motrin and Nuprin, exerts similar anti-inflammatory effects and causes fewer adverse reactions than aspirin with long-term use. It may be effective for patients who don't respond to asprin and is often prescribed for relief of the signs of rheumatoid arthritis and primary dysmenorrea.

The newest OTC analgesic is naproxen sodium sold as Aleve — once available by prescription only. According to the February 1994 issue of American Druggist, naproxen works relatively slowly so consumers are cautioned not to take too much. It is also the first product of its kind to carry a precaution about drinking alcohol when using non- prescription pain relievers.

A fourth pain reliever is acetomenophin, or Tylenol, which possesses the same pain-relieving qualities as the previous drugs but is not an anti-inflammatory medication, says the American Druggist. Therefore it generally won't relieve arthritis pain or pain associated with any other inflammation (such as a sprain). If you've ever sprained an ankle you know that ibuprofen or asprin tends to be the recommended drug.

As a final rule, with anything persistent or chronic, consult your physician.

Have any questions regarding topics in the field of health, fitness, or nutrition? I am interested in responding to your questions and in providing information to help you make your own choices about healthy living. Please send questions c/o the Collegian, 115 Campus Center.

Clancy, Grisham top the national campus bestsellers

By Jon Lupo
Collegian Staff

According to the Association of American Publishers/National and the Association of College Stores, E. Annie Proulx's The Shipping News leads the list for national campus bestsellers. Old favorites Tom Clancy, John Grisham and Michael Crichton also make appearances on the monthly list.

Here is the listing for national campus bestselling books as of Sept. 15, compiled by The Chronicle of Higher Education from information supplied by college stores throughout the country:

1. The Shipping News, by E. Annie Proulx (Touchstone $12.00) Newspaperman returns to his childhood home after death of his wife.
2. Like Water For Chocolate, by Laura Esquivel (Anchor/Doubleday $5.99) Life and recipes on a Mexican Ranch, inspired the hit film.
3. The Client, by John Grisham (Island/Dell $6.99) Young boy is privy to a lawyer's deadly secret; also the source for a recent movie.
4. Forrest Gump, by Winston Groom (Pocket $5.50) Simple Alabama man journeys through three turbulent decades of American history; the popular film was based on this original novel.
5. Without Remorse, by Tom Clancy (Berkley, $6.99) The rescue of prisoners held in North Vietnam.
6. Smilla's Sense of Snow, by Peter Hoeg (Dell, $6.50) Award-winning novel detailing the investigation of a child's mysterious death.
7. Nightmares & Dreamscapes, by Stephen King (Signet, $6.99) A collection of the popular horror writer's short stories.
8. Reengineering the Corporation, by Michael Hammer and James Champy (Harper Business, $13.00) Business innovation.
9. Seven Habits of Highly Effective People, by Steven R. Covey (Fireside, $9.95) Self-help guide to personal fulfillment.
10. A Case of Need, by Michael Crichton (Signet $6.99) The writer of Jurassic Park and Rising Sun penned this thriller about a doctor who is wrongly accused of causing the death of a young girl.

African–American storyteller to perform

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

For those interested in African culture and society, African–American storyteller Onawumi Jean Moss will present a special program this evening at the University of Massachusetts.

The show/lecture will be at New Africa House at 7 p.m. in the Augusta Savage Gallery. Admission is free.

Moss, a professor at Amherst College, is known both locally and regionally for her exciting yet educational presentations and has recently appeared at several events in the New England area dealing with cultural diversity. She has also appeared on Amherst College television.

Although Moss primarily focuses on Africa and its various peoples, she also incorporates the customs of other world nations into her mix of mythology, history and song. As a "rhythm master," she seeks to emphasize the importance of percussion in many international societies.

Moss also carries on the time-tested tradition of oral storytelling; this generation-to-generation process is a treasured staple in many African and world cultures whose development of written language may not have been far enough in progress to absorb works previously in existence.

However, unlike her ancient predecessors, Moss' expertise is based both on direct information from the indigenous peoples and meticulous research on her subjects.

Onawumi Jean Moss promises not only to engage her audience in a unique multimedia experience but also an engrossing history lesson.

■ television

continued from page 5

effort to lop off precious seconds and keep restless viewers.

But who wins this game? That's unclear.

Elsewhere in television . . .

Deadly Meat: Meredith Vieira anchors tonight's "Turning Point" investigation of government accountability for meat safety in the wake of deadly epidemics linked to E. coli bacteria in ground beef. Her report explores whether the nation's meat supply is any safer since the 1993 E. coli outbreaks in California and Washington, during which four children died and hundreds were hospitalized.

E. coli 0157H7 is a lethal bacteria found in meat contaminated with cow feces during the slaughtering process. If the bacteria is not killed during cooking, it can cause a disease called hemolytic euremic syndrome, which can be fatal. "Deadly Meat: What Every Parent Must Know" airs at 10 p.m. EDT on ABC.

Accepting writing submissions

The Collegian is now accepting submissions for a new fiction and prose column, "A&L Fiction."

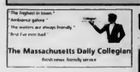
We are looking for thoughtful, intelligent, intriguing short fiction of 75 to 300 lines in length.

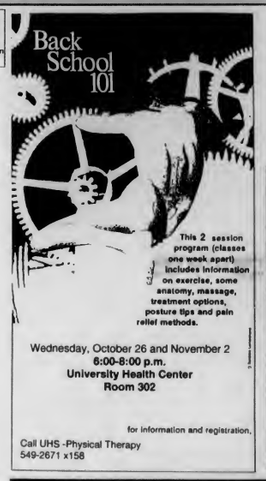
Those interested may send works c/o Dave Polanzak, Collegian Arts & Living, 113 Campus Center, UMass. For more information, please call Dave at 546–0082 or Jon at 545–1361.

Accepted at more schools than you were.

It's everywhere you want to be.

© Visa U.S.A. Inc. 1994





Back School 101
This 2 session program (classes one week apart) includes information on exercise, some anatomy, massage, treatment options, posture tips and pain relief methods.
Wednesday, October 26 and November 2
6:00-8:00 p.m.
University Health Center
Room 302
for information and registration,
Call UHS -Physical Therapy
549-2671 x158

The Edwin M. Rossman Alumni Career Forum Presents:

The Fourth Annual
SPORT MANAGEMENT CAREER DAY

Thursday, October 13, 1994
at 2:30pm
Campus Center, Room 101

Alumni Panelists

Kathie Cain* (MS'89)
Business Manager of Athletics
Dartmouth College
Hanover, New Hampshire

Anne Flannery* (MS '89)
Manager of Women's Athletics
Spalding Sports Worldwide
Chicopee, Massachusetts

Steve Lombardi* (MS '75)
Executive Director
Providence Civic Center
Providence, Rhode Island

James O'Neill* (BS '84)
Ticket Manager
Boston College
Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts

Sponsored By University Career Center, University of Massachusetts Alumni Association, and the Sport Management Program*

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

We are now taking applications for the paid position of

Developing Nations Editor

UMass undergraduate students familiar with issues affecting the Developing Nations community on both a local and global level are invited and encouraged to apply.

Interested students should stop by the Daily Collegian office, 113 Campus Center, and talk to Managing Editor Art Stapleton Jr.

Applications are due by 3 p.m. Friday, Oct. 14

MOUNTAIN BIKE SALE
ONE DAY ONLY !
OCTOBER,12TH 9-5PM
U-MASS CAMPUS CENTER
ROOM 101

ACADIA BIKE RENTAL FLEET LIQUIDATION
1-800-526-8615
GREAT SAVING$ ON USED MT. BIKES COME EARLY

You are Invited to participate in
A WORKSHOP
CONFRONTING ANTI-SEMITISM ON THE COLLEGE CAMPUS

Sunday, October 16, 1994
1:00pm - 4:00pm

Keynote Speaker: LEONARD ZAKIM
Director, ADL New England Regional Office

Discussion Group Topics:
Anti-Semitism & Supporting the Individual Student
Building a Campus Climate Positive to Jewish Concerns
The Challenge of High Profile
Anti-Semitic Speakers: Creating Coalitions

Hillel House
388 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst
413/549-1710
The workshop is free.

Co-Sponsors:
UMass Hillel, ADL New England Regional Office, ADL Department of Campus Affairs/Higher Education, The B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation for Jewish Campus Life, Samuel and Mildred Levine Institute to Combat Bigotry on Campus, and UMass Office of Human Relations

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Family

Wednesday - October 26 - Room 902
(repeated on)
Tuesday - November 29 - Room 801
6:30 - 8:30 p.m.
Murray Lincoln Campus Center,
UMass Campus

I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?

I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest . . . Where should she go?

I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid . . . What can I do to help?

If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.

For more information, please call
549-2671, Clinic 4 - ext. 233 or 234
UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES - UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS - AMHERST

RETURNING TO THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS THIS FALL... THE MOST SUCCESSFUL NATIONAL BARTENDING SCHOOL PRESENTS ...
UNIVERSITY BARTENDING™

- Professional Bartending and Bar Management Training . . . at a fraction of the cost at most schools
- Full certification in as little as six weeks
- Specific programs tailored to your specific needs
- T.I.P.S™ and Serv-Safe™ certification available
- Approved by the National Restaurant Association®

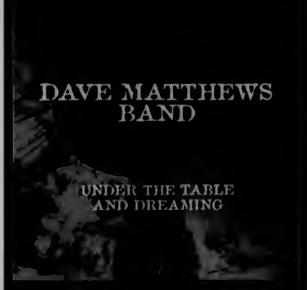
CLASSES START TONIGHT!
Wed., Oct. 12 @ 7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn

Shop around and compare! Call
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
for more information.
Act now! Space is limited!!

DAVE MATTHEWS BAND
UNDER THE TABLE AND DREAMING



Their long awaited studio debut.
Produced by Steve Lillywhite and mixed by Tom Lord-Alge.

On the RCA Records Label Cassettes and Compact Discs.

Pearl Street

Pippen still key to Bulls' success

By Mike Nadel
Associated Press

DEERFIELD, Ill. — Scottie Pippen quit on his team. Then the team almost quit on him.

After all the apologies were accepted and all the trades were rejected, however, Pippen remains the Chicago Bulls' best chance for success.

"He had a great year last year, I'd take another one just like it," coach Phil Jackson said Tuesday as the Bulls prepared for their second season since Michael Jordan retired to the baseball diamond.

"Scottie played tremendously until the All-Star break. Then he experienced a little fatigue, but he came back and played big for us in April and May."

Most of May.

For 1.8 seconds on May 13, Pippen didn't play big. Or at all. Unhappy that Jackson didn't call the final play for him, Pippen refused to re-enter Game 3 of the NBA Eastern Conference semifinals against the New York Knicks. Toni Kukoc, Pippen's least-favorite teammate, made the winning jumper, but the Bulls went on to lose the series in seven games.

"It's over," Pippen said. "You can't gripe about spilled milk. You just have to go on with your life and your career." That's fine with Will Perdue, one of only three players left from Chicago's 1991, 1992 and 1993 championship teams. (Pippen and B.J. Armstrong are the others.)

"Our attitude is that he's our team leader," Perdue said. "Unfortunately, when Scottie's name is mentioned, there's always going to be an asterisk. The moment in the Knicks series is something he's always going to be remembered for.

"But he apologized to us, and we've accepted the apology. It's a new year."

Pippen just about had a new address.

The Bulls considered trading him to several teams and almost pulled the trigger on a deal with Seattle.

"As far as me being out in public, it was a difficult offseason because people kept asking me if I was going to be traded," Pippen said. "The questions that they were asking me were the same questions I could ask the organization."

But the Bulls kept Pippen, the only starter left from the three-peat era. Power forward Horace Grant and center Bill Cartwright departed via free agency, guard John Paxson followed Jordan into retirement.

"I'm so glad Scottie stayed," said Ron Harper, the shooting guard who signed as a free agent during the offseason. "The guys around the league feel he's one of the top five players. It'll be fun to be his teammate."

Pippen, 29, a smooth 6-foot-7 forward, emerged from Jordan's shadow last season to have the highest scoring (22.0) and rebounding (8.7) averages of his seven-year career. He was MVP of the All-Star Game and averaged 22.8 points in the playoffs.

"One of the best things ever to happen for Scottie was the retirement of Michael," Perdue said. "He might not have been ready for it at first, but now he's ready to take on the load."

Pippen's biggest test as team leader might be the way he deals with Kukoc, the import from Croatia who makes about twice as much money and plays the same position. The two had any icy relationship during Kukoc's rookie season and have avoided each other so far in training camp.

Jackson, accustomed to dealing with Jordan's strong personality, thinks it's a non-issue and doesn't want Pippen to change a thing. Pippen does want to make one change, though. He feels he must rebound more to make up for the loss of Grant and Cartwright.

"There are going to be a lot more opportunities for me because we don't have as many rebounders," he said. "In past seasons, I had to respect Horace's territory. But this season, I'm going to have a big effort on the boards."

Three more days until the madness begins

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Dana Dingle and the men's basketball team are ready to start the season with their first practice on Friday.

■ football

continued from page 10

The early race for Coach of the Year has the Eagles Rich Kotite and the Chargers Bobby Ross leading the pack. Consideration has to be given to the Browns Bill Belichick and the Big Tuna himself.

How about the race for Player of the Year? It looks as if this could be the year for Dan Marino to win that coveted Super Bowl ring, as he has been absolutely immense. The fans in Miami are fired up, and they have good reason to be. Stan Humphries gets consideration in San Diego. My vibes are telling me this is the year the AFC wins the Super Bowl, or at least anyone but Dallas.

Look for Tampa Bay head coach Sam Wyche and Cincinnati head coach David Shula to be without jobs after this year. Is it any coincidence that both have had ties with the Bengals? Houston's Jack Pardee is also in jeopardy of losing his position; as double R points out, the Oilers have had a bad case of mismanagement. How about Buddy Ball in Arizona? The jury is still out on this one.

Thus far, it would be safe to say that San Diego is the biggest surprise of the young season. A team picked for last place in the AFC West is undefeated at 5-0. But even more impressive is that the 'Bolts have road wins at Denver, Seattle and Los Angeles. Count Philadelphia as the NFC's biggest surprise, recovering from several off-season losses to hold its own in the competitive East.

Finally, Doogie has told me he is very concerned that double R has gone off the deep end. Prior to this Sunday's Pats game, Doogie was woken up in the wee hours of the morning as the big guy prepared his tailgating spread. But my bro apparently recovered from the lack of sleep to put forth a fine tailgating effort.

"The tailgating spread looked good," he said. "It was a nice barbecue. I'll tell you, he puts the whole kitchen in the trunk and runs with it."

And as you all know, a good fan not only takes in the game, but has to tailgate with the best of them.

Mike Ressa is a Collegian columnist.

■ men's soccer

continued from page 10

need big games from everybody tonight, and some of the younger guys will have to come through."

Corner kicks: The honors just keep coming for Bremke, last week's Atlantic 10 Player of the Week. UMass' stopper turned striker was named to that week's Soccer America Men's Collegiate Team of the Week. Bremke is tied for the team lead in goals (4) with Dave Siljanovski and Colin Johnson.

■ water polo

continued from page 10

the day before, though," he said.

Overall, the Minutemen did well in their man-up percentage with a 13 out of 20 success rate. Yarworth was also pleased with the performance of his other senior co- captain.

"Adolpho Olete [46 points, 67 quarters played] took the role and did real well setting two meters, and he has been our secondary back-up to Luis Limardo," Yarworth said.

Sophomore Ron Gonen was impressive this weekend with six goals and seven assists. Since coming back from pre- season surgery which led to an early slump, Gonen is apparently on the comeback trail. He led the team in steals last season with 36.

"Ron Gonen is starting to play what he is capable of," Yarworth said.

The Minutemen will play in the Eastern Water Polo Association Varsity North Division Tournament this weekend at Amherst College where they will be hosting Harvard University, M.I.T., Boston College and Brown University. This will be their second and last home meet of the season.

■ field hockey

continued from page 10

Who votes? Six head coaches. There are 20 teams that make the poll but only six voters. It hardly seems like six is enough to provide an accurate showing.

Donnelly claims the poll means very little when it comes to taking the field.

"We just focus on winning," Donnelly said. "If we finish the season with only one or two losses, there is no way they can keep us down at eight. We can't worry about how they vote."

Senior co-captain Danielle Borges says that the team has just gotten used to being slighted.

"We come to expect by now that the polls aren't right this year," Borges said. "We just need to beat JMU this weekend."

"Who cares?" Kyri Sparks said. "It matters in November. It doesn't matter now."

■ women's soccer

continued from page 10

Freshman goalkeeper Danielle Dion has recorded 5.5 shutouts and has a 0.48 goals against average coming into the game.

"They're a good team who is used to playing important games," Daniels said.

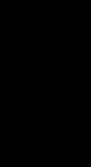
Last year, when the two teams met up in Hartford, the Hawks were struggling with injury problems and the Minutewomen prevailed 3-0. But according to Daniels, there will not be any revenge factor.

"It's a fun rivalry," Daniels said. "It should be a good game. Both teams play with great skill."

UMass leads the overall series that started in 1986 with a 5-3-1 record.

"I think it will be great for the fans and great for the players," Daniels said.

"I enjoy this rivalry a lot," Rudy said. "I think the players do too. It's a healthy one, it's not nasty."



Today as we walked home from snarek per see Normal announced that he had sold his complete set of rotten smart figurines and made a low contest for a job getting fish in an Alaskan fish cannery.

Our daughter Willemina has decided to rush a sorority and is considering taking a journalistic position on the Arts & Living staff.

My wife commented that we must have done something right raising our children. "Oh, No..." I said. "It couldn't have been anything we did... We're positive & hard hearted individuals!" "Yes, your probably right Walter. It must have been that power the children read, the one we use to wrap our fish."

Collegian
"Too tempting, huh?"

Student Union
Art Gallery
is hosting a
Wednesday Night Video Series
(All Programs start at 7:30 p.m.)

Oct. 12 Francis Bacon
Oct. 19 Marc Chagall
Oct. 26 Gifts from the Fire: The Ceramic Art of Brother Thomas
Nov. 2 The Hague School: Touched by Nature
Nov. 9 Frida Kahlo
Nov. 16 Jacques Lipchitz
Nov. 30 Ringgold, Faith: The Last Story Quilt

Videos will be held in Rm 909-905 Campus Center
The Videos are free and open to the public, sponsored in part by the UMASS Arts Council

The Distinguished Visitors Program
Proudly Presents
A Lecture on AIDS by Tim Miller

Friday, October 14, 1994, 8 PM
Bowker Auditorium
University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Admission: Free for UMass undergraduates with valid UMass I.D.
Non-UMass students/community: $2.00 at Bowker Box Office distinguished visitors program

BACK FROM ABROAD?
WELCOME BACK TO ALL STUDENTS
RETURNING FROM STUDY OR WORK ABROAD!!
Let's get together for an evening of
FUN STORIES MUNCHIES
Meet others who are in the same boat!
Sunday, Oct. 16
6:30-8:30 p.m.
Campus Center
Room 174-176
Sponsored by International Programs, Goodell Bldg., 545-2710

THE ALANA LECTURE SERIES
PRESENTS
Anthony P. Crayton

THURSDAY
OCTOBER 13, 1994
CAMPUS CENTER
AUDITORIUM
7:30PM
Free and Open to the Public.
Anthony P. Crayton, Community Activist and Alum of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Former Director of the Office of Third World Affairs and member of the Boston City Council from the Roxbury District. Mr. Crayton will speak on Politics, Prejudice and Power. He is presently, Vice-President of Diversity and Management Associates.
SPONSORED BY:
THE OFFICE OF THIRD WORLD AFFAIRS

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

EVERYONE TAKES ME FOR GRANTED! NOBODY PAYS ANY ATTENTION TO MY NEEDS!
IS IT TOO MUCH TO ASK FOR AN OCCASIONAL TOKEN GESTURE OF APPRECIATION?!
OK. HOW ABOUT A BIG HUG?
COULD I HAVE 20 DOLLARS?
SEE?! I DON'T MATTER TO ANYONE! NOBODY CARES ABOUT ME!

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

OH, GREAT ALTAR OF PASSIVE ENTERTAINMENT...
BESTOW UPON ME THY DISCORDANT IMAGES AT SUCH SPEED AS TO RENDER LINEAR THOUGHT IMPOSSIBLE!

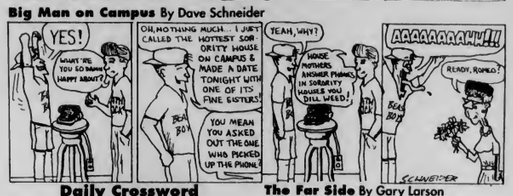
Bruno By C. Baldwin

WELL CAT, WE'RE SAFE AND SOUND, BACK ON THE GROUND AGAIN. I DO APOLOGIZE FOR THE UNCOMFORTABLE TRAVELING CONDITIONS.
JUST SAY IT: YOU HATE ME.
GATES 27 - 32
YOU MUST BE THRILLED TO BE HERE THOUGH... JUST THINK, NEW ORLEANS!
OH BOY! YOU WOULDN'T MIND IF I CHEWED THROUGH THE POWER CORD OF THE FIRST ELECTRICAL APPLIANCE THAT I SEE?

Jim's Journal By Jim

Tony and I went to McDonald's today.
They were having one of those rub-off contests.
"They give away tons of free cakes with these things," Tony said.
I rubbed off a spot and didn't win anything.

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider



YES!
WHAT'RE YOU SO INSANELY HAPPY ABOUT?
OH, NOTHING MUCH... I JUST CALLED THE HOTTEST SORORITY HOUSE ON CAMPUS & MADE A DATE TONIGHT WITH ONE OF ITS FINE SISTERS!
YOU MEAN YOU ASKED OUT THE ONE WHO PICKED UP THE PHONE?
YEAH, WHY?
HONK IF YOU'RE ANSWER PHONE IN SORORITY HOUSES YOU DILL WEED!
AAAAAAAAAHH!!!
READY, ROMEO?

Daily Crossword
Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Part of rye bread
6 Brass instrument
10 Pluck
14 Street show
15 Ok, in the Bible
16 Folk follower
17 — costs: by any means
18 Six, in dice
19 So be it!
20 Proclamation
22 "A Bell for —"
23 Modern composer John
24 Coach
26 Favorite
29 Old — the sun
30 Scarlett's home
31 Vola into office
33 Dissenters
37 Wood strip
38 Residence
40 Type of test
41 Playhouses
43 Greek island in the Mediterranean
44 Legal lead-in
45 Accoutrement for short
47 Turf
48 Temporary
51 Members of the crew
53 Bike —
54 Ostracized
59 Singer Parry
60 Medley
61 Rant
62 Soon
63 Part of a shoe sole

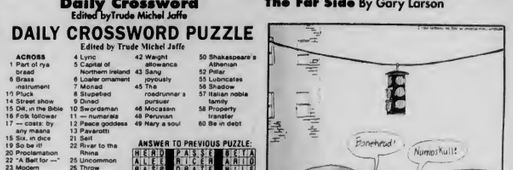
64 "— Syncopations" MacMillan baker
65 Hawaiian goose
66 Being
67 Crossed out

DOWN
1 Study hard
2 Pep —
3 Moniker lizard
4 Lyric
5 Capital of Northern Ireland
6 Loafer ornament
7 Moniez
8 Stupefied
9 Dined
10 Swordsman
11 — numerals
12 Peace goddess
13 Pasarotti
21 Sell
25 River to the Rhine
25 Unincommon
25 Throw bouquets?
27 Biblical king
28 Place for a beret
32 Duenna
33 Bk. of the Bible
34 Angers
35 Roman statesman
36 Winter transport
38 Form lead-in
39 Raspberry shrubs for example
42 Weight allowance
43 Sang joyously
45 Tiki roadrunner's pursuer
46 Mocassin
48 Peruvian
49 Nary a soul
50 Shakespeare's Athenian
52 Pillar
55 Lubricates
56 Shadow
57 Italian noble family
58 Property transfer
60 Be in debt

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

N	E	R	D		P	A	S	S	E		B	E	T	A
A	L	E	E		A	R	I	E	L		A	N	T	O
R	A	S	P		P	O	K	E			R	A	M	P
E	N	T	R	A	P	R	E	M	A	R	K	E	T	S
				I	N	C	O	G
M	A	R	V	E	L
A	L	O	E
N	A	P	S
A	N	S		B	A	R	E
				E	S	S	E	N
C	H	I	L	E
H	I	D	E
I	N	L	A	W
P	A	S	S	E

10/12/94



The Far Side By Gary Larson

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

1968 MUSTANG
Classic '68 Mustang Way Cool! Wheels FOR SALE!! Electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, 2 door, great way to pick up chicks and studs alike. Best offer call Beth at 6-4434.

ACTIVITIES
IGU invites all University women to open rush. Come and see what we're all about! Oct. 6: 5:30-7:30 Oct. 11: 6-8 Oct. 12: 5-7 406 N. Pleasant St. For more info call Kristen 549-0243.
NECEC Karate Club Shorokan style coed Tomari 101 M-W 6-9:30 F 7-9 All levels welcome! Call Jessica at 549-4229.

ANNOUNCEMENTS
Alex, Meanings for $100
October 12th (today) at 8:30 pm in the Cape Cod Lounge
What is the UMass College Bowl Team's first meeting?
Or call Chris at 546-7614
Attention students! The UMass' Credit Union has new/used car, personal, and computer loans starting as 9.95% Come visit our loan dept. 314 Student Union bldg. or call at 545-2800.
Chi Omega open rush Come find out what sorority life is all about! Please call Lauren at 549-4351 for additional information.
Learn to bartend with University Bartending Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools right here in Amherst! Classes start Wed. Oct. 12th! Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-ARK to register today!
Phi Alpha Theta, the history honor society is now accepting applications for membership. For more information and an application please go to 817 Herter.

AUTO FOR SALE
1968 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metallic blue, exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Beth at 6-4434.
83 Subaru wagon 118k mi. Excellent condition $720 obo 665-0349.
89 Chevy Cavalier automatic, white coupe, good shape, good sound $3700 532-3194.
Honda CRX 86 AT, AC, sporty black Blaupunkt stereo 106K miles Jeff 253-0866 or 579-2019.
Infiniti G20, 1991, auto, have 2 cars, must sell! 1 Andrea Chow (home) 253-7282 (handphone) 538-1875.
Volkswagen Quantum 1986 excellent condition, 5 speed, 115K, power brakes, windows, steering, locks, a/c $7300 253-9508.

BOXING LESSONS
Recreational & competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Dyala Bumpus 549-3752.

BUSINESS OPP.
Two unique food vending carts for sale 549-5089. Dood.

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE
Do you need $$$ for college?!? We have the solution! Guaranteed results. Write to Corporate Scholarship Service, 7 Oakhurst Terrace East, N. Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

COMPUTERS
IBM AT computers $169! Includes monitor, 10 meg hard drive, 5 1/4" floppy. Ms Dos, printers $90 call 256-8094.

FOR RENT
1 room in 4 bedroom apt. 2 bathroom, kitchen, spacious living rooms 5 min from campus! $230/ month for least! Jim 253-4773.
Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery$29.00.
Take over my lease. Call 665-7498.

FOR SALE
1984 Buick $1200 neg call 6-2031 Bom bridge $20 call 6-2031.
Brother Word Processor WP 2200 Spell and grammar check, spread sheet. Excellent for papers $200 Debbie 253-0967.
Dorm fridge excellent condition includes all trays and shelves $70 call 549-5514.
Mac Plus, Imagewriter printer, mouse, Microsoft program $295 00 367 9357.
Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $500. Call Chris at 800-789-5685.
Pagers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549-7231.
Rather shabby but comfortable oversized sofa and matching chair $150 call 253-2499.
Shades for less name brand sunglasses 30%-50% off! Campus Center MWF 800-MEGHADES.
Solid oak triple dresser
Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9054.
Tandy computer system w/ drives, monitor, tons of software. Asking 225 or b/o. Call Joe 6-7348.
Watch batteries are pricey, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from glass to gold, custom designed jewelry. Silverscape Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst. 253-3319.

FOR SALE: AUDIO/VIDEO
Stereo equipment, tv's, vcr's, etc. used/reconditioned, area's largest selection, priced to sell! Buy/sell/trade at Stereo & Video Exchange. Sundays 10-5 at Jackson's Free Market Mountain Farms Mall, Rt 9, Hadley. Other days call 256-0941.

FOUND
Indian metal pin call 5-1915 to claim.
Woman's Seiko watch with leather band on Oct 7th Call 665-3827 and describe.

HELP WANTED
14 openings due to expansion local company has part time openings $9.00 up to $15.00 to start. No experience necessary, training provided, advancement potential, flexible schedules, scholarships possible. For application details call 413-733-0057.
$363.00 Sell funny college T shirts Profit $363.00. Risk free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs 1-800-700-4250.
Alaska employment - fishing industry. Earn up to $3,000-$8,000+ per month. Room + board! Transportation! Male/female. No experience necessary. (206)545-4155 ext. A50011.
Computer Stuff of New Hampshire is looking for sales reps for UMass/ Amherst area. Call Denise at 548-9047.
Cruise ship jobs! Up to $900/ weekly. Free room/ board! Now hiring skilled men and women. No experience necessary. Call 801-799-1362 ext. 5018 24 hours.
Cruise ships hiring- earn up to $2000 + mo. on cruise ships or land- tour companies. Seasonal + full time employment available. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext. C50011.
Earn Spring Break cash selling Student Holidays, the nation's leader in spring break vacations, seeking enthusiastic, highly motivated students and organizations to promote and sell all inclusive 4 star Cancun trips! From only $499 call now 1 800 366 7869!
Now hiring experienced waitstaff Apply within Ka-Ch- Restaurant.
Receive up to 268,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am- 5pm.
Start own cash business, turn straws into dollars, money while you sleep, public service machine - makes people's awareness. Minimum investment $1,295. Serious inquiries only. George 617-837-0609.
Wanted! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel! fantastic pay 1-800-426-7710.

INSTRUCTION
Have fun! Make money! Aerobic instructor training begins October 15. Call 413-774-6351. Accredited by American Council on Exercise.
Learn to bartend with University bartending Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools, right here in Amherst! Classes start Wed. Oct. 12th. Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX to register today!

LOST
Brown wallet! Lost in Bluewall! Please return to Collegian. No questions asked.
Stolen 3 foot ball python from Pierpont dorms if returned/ found. Has small scar on neck. I just want my pet back please! Any info call Jay @ 6-3741.
Sunglasses in a brown hard case "Greg" written on back. Call 582-0280.

MOTORCYCLES
Kawasaki EX 500 '88 Good condition 900/bo 549-4331.

PERSONALS
Sharon, You go girl! M.M.

PINNOCHIO'S
Hiring drivers full or part time. Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Bottwood Walk. Ask for Bob.

ROOMMATE WANTED
Female to share large bedroom in house. Great location behind Dairy Mart uptown/ 256/mo + utilities. Move in immediately, lease ends May. No payments! Call Kristin 549-3992.

SERVICES
"Balloon view" cartoon characterizes Makes great gift! $25. full color Satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 586-6447.
Model search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues. Local cast shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Males, females, all categories welcome. 617-523-0367.
Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906.

SHAREWARE
Free!! Shareware listing hundreds of quality software programs only $3.49 each. Call 584-2282.

TRAVEL
 Spring Break 95**
America's #1 spring break company! Cancun, Bahamas, Daytona & Panama! 110% lowest price guarantee! Organize 15 friends and travel free! Earn highest commissions! (800)32-TRAVEL.

WANTED
Attn. Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jugglers, jamaycer to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. $40/ hrare 584-4203.
Campus representative Kodak products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, Si Padre, Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1-800-222-4432.
Experienced drummer Must own kit 253-9982.
Looking for male strippers for Oct 14 contact 6-1858 for more info Deadline Oct 10.
Need cheap powerbook 100 If any information call Jess at 253-5515.
Wanted Atari 7800, hardware and games Eric at 256-8156.

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH
Three Cheese Pizza
Hamburger
BASICS LUNCH
Three Cheese Pizza
Goatburgers

DINNER
Baked Chicken
Simmered Corned Beef
BASICS DINNER
Baked Chicken
Sauteed Tofu

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Darienne P. Hosley
Copy Editor.....Caleb P. Cochran
Photo Technician.....Nathan P. Martin
Production Supervisor.....Andrew P. Davidson
Production.....Mark P. Mitchell, Robert P. Marley, Kevin P. Farrar

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Trust your instincts. Expanding your network of professional contacts will create valuable good will. Be a listener as well as a talker. An emphasis on spiritual growth will make you a happier person.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take the initiative when it comes to entertaining your loved ones or providing guidance to children. A shared hobby can be a wonderful source of fun. Stand by relatives who have fallen on hard times.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An unexpected developments turns the tables in your favor. Family pursuits can provide great pleasure in the afternoon. Join the clan for an evening feast.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be practical. Consider the advantages of a home building project, in preference to more risky ventures. Make certain that children left in your care do not get up to mischief. Lend spending on entertainment.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friendly relations could be jeopardized by your taking a stand contrary to the wishes of your mate or parents. Getting better organized will reduce a career-home conflict. Let loved ones know they come first! Tattoo your girlfriend or boyfriend's name on your backside.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Let your mind roam when you have a chance to relax and think things over. You make an exciting discovery! The love bug could bite when least expected. Are you ready for a new commitment? LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Carry out plans that spell fun for your loved ones and, consequently, for yourself. Giving children a chance to make suggestions encourages them to be more cooperative.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Hang on! Many lucky breaks are in the making. Do not become impatient if you encounter a problem immediately. A caring and forgiving attitude will eventually soften some one's heart. Show your vulnerable side.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An excellent day to pass the time with your favor. Family pursuits can provide great pleasure in the afternoon. Join the clan for an evening feast.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You find it easy to see eye-to-eye with those who have shared your labors. Now reach out to those who were skeptical! A serious issue will soon be settled. Uphold your ideals.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Friends could help you establish a new understanding with someone important to your happiness. Stock up on groceries and health care items. Classical music and good literature will liberate your creative powers. Think bold!
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid taking a public stand on a controversial subject if doing so will bring real discord into your home. There will be plenty of time later to go on the record. Be patient.

Quote of the Day

"I installed a skylight in my apartment... the people who live above me are furious."
—Steven Wright

F.Y.I.
Bring your listing down to the Newsroom, and we'll make sure it runs in Amherst's only Daily Calendar
If it happens in Amherst, it's in the DAILY COLLEGIAN

TOTAL FITNESS
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES • TREADMILLS • LIFESTEPS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • FREE WEIGHTS • NORDIC TRACK
FALL SPECIAL • '99 • 10 WEEKS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 WEST ST. ON BUS ROUTE OPEN 7 DAYS

Did You Pay Tuition This Semester?
One Hundred and Forty of your classmates didn't have to!
Because they're members of the Massachusetts Army National Guard.
Call today for more information
1-800-322-1338
ARMY NATIONAL GUARD

IGU
INVITES ALL UNIVERSITY AND STOCKBRIDGE WOMEN TO OPEN RUSH
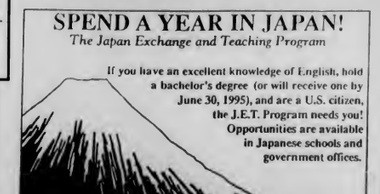
10/6 BBQ 5:30 - 7:30
10/11 SUNDAES 6:00 - 8:00
10/12 PIZZA 5:00 - 7:00
CALL KRISTEN @ 549-0243
406 N. PLEASANT ST.

SPEND A YEAR IN JAPAN!
The Japan Exchange and Teaching Program
If you have an excellent knowledge of English, hold a bachelor's degree (or will receive one by June 30, 1995), and are a U.S. citizen, the J.E.T. Program needs you! Opportunities are available in Japanese schools and government offices.



APPLICATION DEADLINE IS DECEMBER 10, 1994

ISAA Top 20 – Division 1 Women's Soccer Poll

1 North Carolina	6 Santa Clara	11 Portland	16 Clemson
2 Notre Dame	7. Massachusetts	12 George Mason	17 G W
3 Stanford	8 William & Mary	13 Washington	18 St. Mary's
4 Hartford	9 Connecticut	14 Dartmouth	19 Vanderbilt
5 Duke	10 Virginia	15 Wisconsin	20 Brown

Sports

NCAA Top 20 – Division 1 Field Hockey

1 Old Dominion	6 Ohio State	11 Princeton	16 Pennsylvania
2 James Madison	7 Connecticut	12 Iowa	17 Boston College
3 Northwestern	8. Massachusetts	13 Delaware	18 Providence
4 North Carolina	9 Ball State	14 Maryland	18 Virginia [tied]
5 Northeastern	10 Penn State	15 Syracuse	20 New Hampshire

Women's field hockey defeats Maine

By Mike Pinder
Collegian Staff

Good things come to those who wait.

That is exactly what the No. 8 nationally ranked University of Massachusetts field hockey team and Natalie Hart found out yesterday as they defeated the Maine Black Bears at Totman Field 1-0.

The Minutewomen waited nearly 70 minutes for Hart to deliver the game winner, her sixth goal of the season, with 1:30 left in regulation.

As the game loomed in the balance with the score deadlocked at 0-0, Hart stepped up to the top of the penalty circle area to take UMass' eighth and final penalty corner of the game.

With senior All-America candidate Danielle Borges setting, Hart received a picture perfect pass from junior Andrea Cabral and rocketed the shot passed the Maine goalkeeper Mary Lou Winstel for the winning score.

UMass	1
Maine	0

"I have kind of been rushing my corners and not thinking too much of them," Hart said. "On that one, I turned and saw the clock and thought to myself 'this one really has to go in.'"

The contest was played for the most part in the defensive zone of the Black Bears, with UMass' best offensive opportunities coming on the penalty corners.

The Bears, who came into the game with a 8–2–1 overall record, hung tough against the constant offensive pressure applied by the Minutewomen but wound up on the short end of Natalie's stick.

"This was a great opportunity for us, and our game plan worked very well," Maine Coach Terry Kix said. "We couldn't give up too many corners, and that last one killed us. [Hart] can really hit the ball well."

Kix said she had hoped the Minutewomen would experience an emotional letdown after their stunning upset of North Carolina.

"I think it was a great time to come in and play against them. Anytime you have a huge win like that, there is a chance of catching a team a little flat," Kix said.

"We were hoping to catch them in the first 10 minutes and we actually had an opportunity, but we couldn't put it away."

Kix's hopes were for naught and in the view of Hart the game was not a letdown even though the Minutewomen struggled offensively.

"I think this was not so much of a letdown, but for some reason we don't play as well against teams who don't spread the field as well," Hart said. "I think that we struggle in that respect because we don't spread out too well ourselves."

With UMass coming into the game sporting a 7–1–3 record, Coach Megan Donnelly emphasized the importance of winning the game and not recording the Minutewomen's fourth tie of the year.

"We needed to prove to ourselves that we can end the games in regulation and someone can step up and score," Donnelly said.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Kyri Sparks and the Minutewomen defense continued their outstanding play recording their ninth shutout of the season.

Donnelly said that after coming off the huge win against the Tar Heels, she viewed the game against Maine as a let down and was thankful to come away with the victory.

"I think a letdown is to be expected," Donnelly said. "We haven't had a day off in a long time and right now we are physically exhausted. This game was a matter of getting through it the best we could."

"I'm really relieved to get through this game. Maine is a tough team to play. They are very fast and very aggressive and that's a team you don't want to play after a big win."

The Minutewomen take their 8–1–3 record on the road when they face off against Rhode Island on Saturday and then clash against James Madison on Sunday at Boston College.

The Dukes are currently ranked second in the nation behind Old Dominion.

Field hockey poll raises questions

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Roll the dice, cut the deck or just draw teams out of a hat. One of these seems to be the formula for this year's NCAA Division 1 field hockey poll.

A quick glance at the top ten of this week's updated rankings:

1. Old Dominion, 2. James Madison, 3. Northwestern, 4. North Carolina, 5. Northeastern, 6. Ohio State, 7. Connecticut, 8. Massachusetts, 9. Ball State, 10. Penn State.

This poll is so full of ludicrous contradictions that it's hard to take it seriously.

A week ago James Madison was undefeated and stood at No. 2 behind North Carolina. Last Sunday UNC was upset by UMass, while JMU remained undefeated. The logical progression would move the Lady Dukes into the top spot, right?

Well, the problem here is the word logical. Instead of boosting JMU, the only undefeated team left in the Division 1, to No. 1, Old Dominion leap-frogged the Lady Dukes into the top spot.

The only thing the Lady Monarchs have over James Madison is tradition. JMU has beaten ODU (2-1 on Sept. 11) and has two fewer losses than the 10-2-1 Lady Monarchs.

It is even hard to come up with an intelligent reason why ODU is above North Carolina. The Lady Tar Heels have also beaten Old Dominion and have one fewer loss than the Lady Monarchs.

"There is a lot more parity this year," Massachusetts Coach Megan Donnelly said. "There are more teams who are capable of knocking each other off, and [poll voters] didn't take that into account so the fluctuations were big. Now they understand that there are a lot of good teams, so they're not making the adjustments the same way."

Things have been questionable for the Minutewomen as well.

After starting the season at No. 6, the Minutewomen went undefeated in their first eight games. In that time they fell to No. 9 and then to No. 12 a week later.

The Minutewomen lost their first game of the season Oct. 2, so UMass was headed for another fall, right? The coaches poll for that week moved the Minutewomen up three spots to No. 9. A few more defeats and they will be headed to No. 1.

Then after they upset No. 1 UNC, they only move up one spot and they are still behind Ohio State and UConn who both have more losses than UMass.

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 8

Water polo sweeps at Villanova Invitational

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Correspondent

This past weekend the University of Massachusetts men's water polo team, 18–3 (16–2 in EWPA), proved that they are ready for another high berth in the Eastern Championships to be held next month in Cambridge, Mass.

The Minutemen swept all four matches at the Villanova Invitational in Philadelphia, Pa.

With consecutive wins of 12–11 over No. 14–ranked nationally Princeton and Queens College on Saturday, the Minutemen went on to defeat Boston College with a 21–7 win and Villanova with a 14–5 victory Sunday.

Senior co-captain Javier Gonzalez (106 points, 65 quarters played) had a great weekend, leading the scoring in three out of four games while dishing out five assists.

Sophomore Greg Menton (60 points, 70 quarters played) led the scoring in the Boston College game with six goals and three assists.

Without two of their better players, junior Luis Limardo (76 points, 54 goals) and his brother, freshman Juan Carlos Limardo (35 points, 0.535 shooting percentage), the Minutemen went into their matches on Saturday not knowing what to expect.

"On Saturday, we responded by playing inconsistently, which is understandable but not forgivable," Coach Russ Yarworth said.

"The inconsistency was that they were putting themselves in a situation with the game in control, and then relaxing on defense and giving up the quick goals."

With two three-goal leads in the Princeton game, UMass let the Tigers back in the game with a minute to go by letting them score two quick goals.

The same happened against Queens. Up by a score of 12– 6, UMass once again faltered and fell into that trap, letting Queens back in the contest for a final score of 12–11.

Yarworth was not pleased with the showing on Saturday. However, Sunday proved to be an about-face.

"After we had a team attitude adjustment session, Sunday we just came out and played," Yarworth said.

"I don't know if that group of guys could play any better than they played against Villanova. They played tremendous defense, tremendous offense, and only had a couple of mental lapses towards the end of the game."

But Yarworth has a long memory. "It doesn't mean I forgot about

Turn to WATER POLO, page 8

Minutewomen ready to host No. 1 Hartford Hawks

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

It's No. 1 versus No. 2.

Today Hartford, the No. 1 team in the Northeast region, comes to Richard F. Garber Field for a 3:30 p.m. tilt against the No. 2 team in the region, Massachusetts.

This is the biggest game of the season so far for the Minutewomen, who take a 9–2–0 record into the game.

"This game is bigger than the Santa Clara and William & Mary games because this one is like the battle of interstate 91," UMass Coach Jim Rudy said. "It will be very competitive, both teams will battle hard."

When you have something on the line, something to win, you play hard."

Along with being No. 1 in the region, the Hawks are No. 4 in the nation with a 9-1-1 record.

Hartford's only loss of the season came at the hands of No. 3 nationally ranked Stanford, 1–0, in their third game of the season.

Hartford has beaten Portland, 4–3 in OT, who has been ranked as high as No. 2 in Soccer America's poll and is currently ranked eleventh in the national poll, and tied Dartmouth, ranked No. 14 in the national poll.

The Hawks have six players in double figures in total points. Leading the way have been juniors Jessica Reifer and Irene Stelling.

Reifer has been a scoring machine in Hartford's 11 games so far and she leads the team in goals (14) and points (33), to go along with six assists. Stelling has scored 10 of her 12 goals in the last six games. She also has six assists for a total of 30 points.

Other high scorers for the Hawks have been sophomores Stephanie Chmura, who has 24 points (nine goals, six assists), and Erin Pochman, who has 17 points (four goals, nine assists). The other two Hawks with double figures in points is freshman Donna Holyman (five goals, five assists for 15 points) and senior Lisa Kesselman (four goals, two assists for 10 points).

"[Their stats] are impressive looking," Rudy said. "They are a very dynamic team. Their front six people can all score."

Sophomore goalkeeper Danielle Rotondi has been impressive in the net for the Hawks with 59 saves for a .808 save percentage.

Even with the magnitude of the game, Hartford Coach Austin Daniels is getting ready for it like any other match.

"This game is no different than any other game," Hartford Coach Austin Daniels said. "We'll prepare for this game like any other."

The Minutewomen have been led in the scoring department by sophomore Rebecca Myers (seven goals, one assist for 15 points) and juniors Nicole Roberts (five goals, three assists for 13 points) and Rachel LeDuc (four goals, two assists for ten points).

Defenders Heidi Kocher and Erin Lynch, along with Julie Magid, Nikki Ahrenholz, Amy Powell and Erica Iverson, have all turned in outstanding performances so far this season.

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 8

STEVE PEDULLA / COLLEGIAN

Rachel LeDuc and the rest of the women's soccer team are taking on Hartford, the No. 1 ranked team in the Northeast region, today at 3:30 p.m. at Garber Field.

Tips from a true football family

Mike Reiss on the NFL

For years it's been a Sunday tradition for my brother Doogie and me to watch football games alongside our old man in the cozy confines of our living room. But last year, our pops (we'll call him double R) cracked into the wallet and sprung for Patriots season tickets.

Our Sundays, or more specifically our lives, have never been the same. With his paunch belly, both Doogie and I are starting to think double R might be experiencing an identity crisis with Bill Parcells.

Nonetheless, double R was particularly pleased when informed of today's column on the NFL, and he felt obliged to offer his thoughts.

For the bettor, double R has this: up to date, every team coming off a bye week that plays a team not coming off a bye week has not only won the game, but covered the number. This past week's evidence: Denver defeats Seattle; Los Angeles defeats New England. But don't jump on this trend this coming Sunday. The four teams that had a bye (AFC central) on Sunday are playing each other. Run with it next week.

Double R seems to think he should be alongside the Big Tuna (Parcells, of course) on the sidelines. The big guy points out that former Ohio State football coach Woody Hayes would say "three things happen when you pass, and two of them are bad." Double R is not happy the Pats threw over 50 times on Sunday. He was seen heckling Parcells from the stands, begging for the old "three yards and a cloud of dust" game-plan.

While double R settles down, let's check in with brother Doogie, who right now holds the edge as top-tailgater. "Geez, I never knew he could drink that many beers," said double R after Doogie made his second appearance in Foxboro for the Raiders tilt. Doogie sticks with the obvious, saying that Ben Coates and Kevin Turner were the top Patriot performers on Sunday. Thanks for the insight, bro.

Before we get on to other thoughts around the NFL, one more point on the Pats. The family is quite perplexed about the lack of a running game, because to our knowledge, it has been shown that run blocking is easier to perfect than pass blocking. Yet the Pats seem to have that mixed up, and double R and sons are not happy.

Now let's go around the league and gather some points and trends. Did you know the team which gets more interceptions has won close to 95 percent of the games?

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 8

Minutemen to play Providence tonight

By Ted Kottler
Collegian Staff

Homes away from home have been friendly confines for University of Massachusetts teams. The men's basketball team consistently wins in Springfield and Worcester, and just three days ago the field hockey squad stunned top–ranked North Carolina at Westfield State.

Tonight at 7 p.m. men's soccer "hosts" Providence College at Zott Park in Chicopee, the first of three consecutive non–conference matches for the Minutemen.

Though the record suggests the team ought to be confident on the uncustomary pitch, UMass (6–4–1, 4–1 in A–10) will not be at full strength for this Atlantic 10–meets–Big East clash. Midfield co–captain Mike Doyle is in civilians tonight, for he injured his foot when he was tackled from behind by a George Washington player Sunday.

Minuteman defense, erratic in its two weekend tilts, will miss suspended ace marksman Dan Chagnon, who was questionably sent off against the Colonials.

"Doyle's a leader and a starter, so that hurts us," Assistant Coach Steve Rammel said.

Head Coach Sam Koch scheduled practice for yesterday evening to prepare his side for conditions under the lights. But the session also served Koch and Rammel in their decision on what lineup adjustments to make in Doyle and Chagnon's absence. Rammel said they were uncertain of those moves yesterday afternoon.

It appears their substitute for Doyle would be a clearer choice, as senior midfielder Joe Maruca has seen action in all games but one. But the defensive quartet of Chagnon, Benny Sheally, Karsten Bremke and Joe Jacobson has put in almost all the backfield time. Alex Sobdinow is the most experienced reserve back, having played but four games in the past two years and never starting a match.

While the other UMass programs have scheduled off–campus home dates to boost attendance, Koch brings his team the few extra miles south of Amherst to showcase its prowess for the rest of western Massachusetts.

"We're basically the only Division I team around here and a few of our guys are from the area, so it's a chance for them to play in front of their friends and family," Rammel said. Chagnon is UMass' Chicopee native, but he will not play for being shown the red card. Maruca (East Longmeadow), Brad Miller (Longmeadow) and Mike Butler (West Springfield) are the other locals in the UMass roster.

The Minutemen assembled their season long winning streak of four from Sept. 24 to Oct. 7, but GWU ended it Sunday. They will attempt to start over against a Friars squad that Rammel scouted and does not underestimate.

"They're a good team and they can beat us," Rammel said. "They've got midfielders who work their tails off and two solid forwards."

But instead of concerning itself too deeply with the opposition, UMass' staff has adopted a John Woodenesque strategy of primary concern for its own players.

"We just wanted to have a good practice and get our guys ready to have great games," Rammel said. "We'll

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 8

Women's soccer falls to Hartford

Nicole Roberts scored for the No. 7 UMass women's soccer team, but the team lost 2-1 to No. 4 Hartford yesterday (See Sports, page 16).

Cultural conference

The Williams College South Asian Student Association and their Museum of Art co-hosted the South Asian Student Conference this weekend. (See story, page 3).

Redeeming Shawshank

Tim Robbins and Morgan Freeman overcome cliches in their new film, adapted from a short story by Stephen King (See Arts & Living, page 9).

Extended Forecast

Sunny today with light winds. Highs in the lower 60s, with increasing clouds tonight, and the low 35 to 40. Mixed clouds and sun beginning Friday and moving into the weekend.

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 35	HIGH: 65 LOW: 35	HIGH: 60 LOW: 40

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 22 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, October 13, 1994

European perspectives on Clinton's global policy

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Europeans refer to President Clinton as the "prince of perhaps," with foreign policies that change periodically and an approach that fails to resolve conflict, Therese Raphael, deputy editor of the Wall Street Journal Europe, said.

Raphael spoke at Tobin Hall yesterday afternoon and addressed Clinton's public policy from a European perspective. She has acquired a feel for the perspective through her four years at the Journal's office in Brussels, Belgium.

After graduating from Cornell University with a degree in international relations and ethical philosophy, Raphael interned at the Journal and managed to work her way to an editorial position, Eric Einhorn, chair of the political science department, said.

The general feeling in Europe is that Clinton is as "soft as putty," and that he suffers from a case of "chronic vacillation," Raphael said.

"Clinton is like a revolving lighthouse; when the light shines on you it feels warm and cozy, but most of the time you're in the dark," Raphael said.

The Clinton Administration holds foreign policy hostage to domestic politics, an approach that will hinder solutions to problems and challenges facing Europe in the future, Raphael said.

Policy issues can be considered far more complicated now than they were during the Cold War, though. During that period, there was an enemy and a set formula to plug policy into, Raphael said.

A growing fear of engaging military where there's a possibility of American casualties and the major defense draw-down is impeding America's ability to act abroad, Raphael said.

If this continues, the United States may jeopardize its credibility in Europe and run the risk of being held hostage to an inefficient system, in which the tasks set out by NATO and the United Nations contradict each other, Raphael said.

"The European nations focus on minor issues like riots over fish prices instead of concentrating on issues of security and cooperation," Brandon Young, a sophomore political science major who attended the forum, said. He had spent time in Europe and saw these kind of inefficiencies first hand, he said.

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

The Wall Street Journal Europe's deputy editorial page editor, Therese Raphael, addressed Prof. Eric Einhorn's American Foreign Policy class yesterday in Tobin Hall.

The three major American policy issues in Europe addressed were concerning Russia, Bosnia and NATO. Raphael looked at these issues through the perspective of America's responsibility and role, and the effectiveness of the policies that have already been instated.

It is difficult to analyze Clinton's policy at this time, because of recent successes that do not fall into the recurring pattern of waffling the president has displayed thus far, Raphael said.

The president did not have to face up to any loss of American lives in Haiti, and was able to resolve the problem in a relatively short period of time, according to Raphael. It was his foreign policy which effectively mobilized forces in Iraq, Raphael said.

"These are more exceptions to policy that has largely lacked coherence," Raphael said.

U.S. foreign policy turns political in times of peace

By Andrew Davidson
Collegian Staff

The changing global political climate determines American foreign policy today as much as the leaders who shape it.

Wall Street Journal Europe's deputy editorial page editor Therese Raphael's critical analysis of Clinton foreign policy encompassed an internationalist perspective not normally available within the United States.

Clinton and Europe
News Analysis

"There is no formula as there was during the Cold War," Raphael said.

The breakdown of the bipolar international climate to which the world grew so accustomed after World War II drew Raphael to ask the important question, "Does NATO still have a purpose?" The U.S. "has essentially checked-out. The priority in Europe is Russia, and the rest of Europe has been sacrificed."

Several factors have determined the deterioration of NATO's effectiveness after the fall of communism, and the crisis in the former Yugoslavia underscores the problems which the world's major peacekeeping organizations must face.

The conflict between the United Nations, who must rule by consensus, and NATO, who wishes to establish a clear military objective, has prevented the Western democracies from establishing a solution to the conflict which has now dragged on for over three years.

But the lack of urgency is exactly what prevents the United States and Western Europe from establishing a clear objective.

"Alliances are weakest when there is no imminent

Turn to FOREIGN POLICY, page 3

Employers arrive in search of students for future positions

By Andrew Ferguson
and Kelly Spong
Collegian Staff

Students who are months — or even years — away from graduation crowded into the University of Massachusetts Campus Center Auditorium for a chance to speak to some of the 52 companies looking for a few good students.

Students of all majors met with representatives of various companies at a career fair sponsored by the Undergraduate Business Club.

"Our main purpose is to get information out," said Jennifer Arieta, a Jordan Marsh representative and a recent UMass graduate. "We talk to students and see what they're interested in. People come to us with questions, if they want, they can leave a resume. The recruitment director gets all of the resumes."

Lisa Berkowitz, president of the club and a senior accounting major, said this fair increased from the last both in the number of companies participating and the number of volunteers.

Students participating in the fair had the option to also discuss possible internships and co-ops as well as permanent jobs.

Berkowitz said many of the representatives of the many companies which ranged from Taco Bell to AT&T are UMass graduates.

"It gives students some hope for finding a job," she said.

The career fair is not only to let students know what type of jobs are available, but it also allows companies to market their names to students.

"Our goal is to get our name out to students, to have people learn about our company" said Elizabeth Sheehan, a representative from Enterprise Rent-a-Car. "It's great because we can expose ourselves to students and educate them about the company."

The Undergraduate Business Club is open to any students from the School of Management, but is particularly designed for first and second year students, according to

Turn to CAREER FAIR, page 3

New female condom provides new option

By Emily Marino
Collegian Staff

Contraceptive options for women now include one more, thanks to the makers of Reality, the first female condom. Reality is a soft, loose-fitting pouch that lines the vagina and is designed to provide protection against pregnancy.

Reality is a polypropylene sheath (opposed to the male condom, which is typically made of latex) with a 74 percent effectiveness rate against pregnancy, according to the manufacturers.

Kim Mueller, a graduate student of Public Health at the University of Massachusetts and Peer Health Educator at University Health Services emphasized the fact that Reality has not yet been tested for its effectiveness in protecting against sexually transmitted diseases.

According to Mueller, the female condom was tested approximately one year ago over a six month period using real people as subjects. Mueller said that because testers did not want to risk exposing subjects to STDs, there is only information available regarding pregnancy rate.

Initial controversy over the short testing period did occur, but Reality was approved by the Food and Drug Administration in 1993.

According to the Pan American, the student newspaper at the University of Texas–Pan American, the female condom has two rings. The ring at the closed end is used to insert the device and hold it in place, while the outer ring rests outside and partly covers the vagina.

Because the outer vagina is partially covered, according to Mueller, further testing may reveal that the female condom does protect against some STDs.

Kathy Moore, assistant director of public affairs at the Family Planning Council of Western New Massachusetts in Northampton, said that using a barrier contraceptive does prevent the spread of STDs if used effectively and consistently. The female condom, while yet untested, is a barrier contraceptive.

Mueller said that the female condom was aimed as an inexpensive, accessible alternative to the male condom. If a male condom is not available at the time of sexual intercourse, Mueller said that Reality is an alternative which is better than using no contraception at all.

"I think that the idea behind it [the female condom] is that women will be more responsible and that they have more control [over protecting themselves against pregnancy]," said Mueller.

The fact that Reality is available without a prescription and offers women the same convenience of spontaneity that the male condom offers also adds to its appeal as a contraceptive option, according to Mueller.

"We offer the condom because it provides a much needed alternative," said Moore. "We have to be realistic about how it's going to be received."

Moore said that all forms of birth control are under public scrutiny when first introduced, especially barrier contraceptives.

"Over time traditional condoms have become more common," said Moore, recalling efforts to encourage men to use condoms during the second World War.

"Usage is always the big, black hole," said Moore, who emphasized the importance of proper and consistent contraception usage in determining its success rate.

"The most important thing about any kind of contraceptive is that you have to use it," said Moore.

Moore said that people need to incorporate contraception into their lifestyles, and that with a new product like the female condom, this will take time.

Manufacturers say that the female condom can be inserted up to eight hours prior to active sexual intercourse, though it is usually inserted two to 20 minutes before intercourse, due likely to comfort factors.

"I think the more options available for birth control and protection from STDs, the better," said Jeff Cloutier, a former Peer Health educator and Not Ready for Bedtime Player.

Cloutier said that due to its large size, the female condom does not seem like a convenient contraceptive method in terms of carrying and concealing it.

The Pan American said that Reality is available as a pack of three female condoms and an instruction kit for about $8.

The Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts does offer the Reality female condom. For more information, call the clinic at 586–2539, or 1-800-750-2016 to reach the HIV Hotline for test-

Turn to FEMALE CONDOM, page 3

Fair offers students a peek at studying abroad

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

The Study Abroad Fair on the Campus Center Concourse offered students a sneak peek at what they might encounter when living in a foreign country.

Sponsored by International Programs, the fair had eight tables highlighting countries from India to Latin America.

"We offer approximately 50 exchange programs," said Study Abroad Coordinator Russell Edgar. "About 800 students a year go abroad, both from UMass and outside the school."

The initial obstacle to overcome when planning on going on an exchange is the funding. Edgar said tuition usually covers the cost for going.

"It depends on what program you choose, some countries may be more expensive than others," said Edgar. "Because it is based on tuition fees, financial aid can be applied."

Edgar said that if you are an out-of-state student, sometimes it is less expensive to go on an exchange than to go to school.

That was not the case for senior mechanical engineering major Robert Taylor, an out-of-state student who went to India.

"It was very expensive," said Taylor. "My travel expenses were higher, plus I had to pay tuition."

Taylor said he had a great experience, but found some facets difficult to adjust to.

"The academic life was very rigorous," said Taylor. "I couldn't transfer all my credits because I didn't make good grades."

Seniors Lisa Capoccia and Amy Martin both attended the University of Seville in Spain, and said they had no problem transferring all of their credits.

"The learning experience really comes from meeting people, though," said Martin. "You learn more out of the classroom than in."

When it came to social life, most students said they found it to be difficult to break the American stereotype.

"They think we're loud, obnoxious, outspoken, and wealthy," said Cameron Carey, a senior who went to Ireland last year. "We all wear baseball caps and white sneakers; it's hard to break the stereotype."

After breaking the stereotype, junior Italian major David Walden found long lasting friendships.

"I got a million Italian friends," said Walden. "I want to go back."

Walden said he found the stereotypical Americans to be the only negative part to his exchange.

"The worst part was the noisy, loud Americans who weren't interested in learning," Walden said.

Sophomore Laurien Santos said she would like to go to Spain or Italy next fall because she wants the experience and to meet new people, but does have a fear that people may be biased against Americans.

"I found foreign women got a lot of comments that were supposed to be compliments," said Martin. "It sometimes annoyed me, but I got used to it."

Carey said he didn't run into any blatant discrimination, except the extreme culture difference.

"An American accent can be picked out unbelievably fast," said Carey. "You could be in a crowded pub and your accent cuts right through."

Maryelise Lamet, associate director at International Programs, said there is much more to gain by going then there is to lose.

"I wouldn't be doing this if people came back crying," said Lamet. "There is pain, but there is so much more gain."

For more information stop by the International Programs Office in Gorddell.

DAMION SARTH / COLLEGIAN

Caroline Arnold (left), Maryelise Zamet (center) and JoAnn Bernhard (right) help students who are interested in studying abroad.

First Student Senate meeting marred by controversy

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

The first Student Senate meeting of the year ran late into the night, as debate about a motion in the agenda created controversy within the senate, resulting in several senators leaving.

Thomas B. Robinson, vice chancellor of student affairs, was in attendance yesterday at the first official Student Senate meeting of the year.

Robinson, as well as newly sworn in senators, watched as the general meeting turned quickly into what Mirran Raphaely, president of the Student Government Association, called "a fiasco." Mercedes Betanco, undergraduate student speaker, refused comment about the meeting.

Due to the new SGA constitution, which was reconstructed and rewritten last semester by Matt Malone, former attorney general, the senate was unsure about what was proper parliamentary procedure.

Approximately two hours in the meeting, Phil MacNamara, the current attorney general, left the meeting visibly disgusted with the procedure the senate was following. MacNamara would later return to the meeting.

The confusion was the result of the first motion in the agenda, made by the senate, pertaining to the confirmation of six students as members of the Student Judiciary.

The judiciary positions, which were created by the new constitution and were filled by appointments from Raphaely, had to be approved by the senate. The controversy began over the confirmation of a single senator, then escalated

Senator Charles Lenchner proposed an unfriendly amendment, asking that Diego Figueroa be eliminated from the motion.

Lenchner cited that Figueroa's integrity should be questioned. Lenchner cited two incidents, the first involving the final senate meeting last year.

Lenchner contested that Figueroa left the meeting, at which the budget for registered student organizations and agencies was being voted upon. Figueroa left while the senate was voting on a motion presented by Lenchner.

After Figueroa left, quorum was called and the senate body did not have enough members to constitutionally hold a meeting, according to Lenchner. The meeting was over and Lenchner's motion was never voted upon.

Figueroa says that Lenchner is wrong, and the reasons he left involved other commitments. Figueroa also mentioned that he believed that Lenchner simply does not want a conservative on the judiciary.

The decision about Figueroa's position was tabled until the next senate meeting, Oct. 19.

Police Log

Compiled by Kelly Spang from University reports

Vandalism
Oct. 6
The supervisor of maintainers reported racial graffiti written on a stall in a bathroom of Brown Dorm.
An individual reported a side view mirrror on his vehicle in Lot 49 was damaged.
Oct. 7
A cinder block was thrown through two windows on the west side of Morrill Science Center.
An individual reported a broken windshield and extensive damage to the hood of her vehicle in Lot 11.
Burglary/Breaking and Entering
Oct. 6
Staff in the History Department in Bartlett Hall discovered pry marks on an office door, but it appeared that nothing had been taken.
Oct. 7
An officer on patrol in Lot 34 discovered a vehicle with a smashed window. The owner was contacted and determined nothing was stolen from the vehicle.
Oct. 9
An individual reported leaving her purse on a couch in Moore Dorm for a brief period and then returned to find it stolen.
Annoying Behavior
Oct. 6
An individual in Coolidge Dorm reported derogatory graffiti written on a message board affixed to her room door.
Two individuals walking outside in the vicinity of Coolidge Dorm reported an object, believe to be an apple, was thrown down at them and a voice from the direction of the dorm reported yelled racial remarks at them.
Oct. 7
Walter Burke, 21, of 405 Bedford St. in Concord was arrested on Clark Hill Road for disorderly person, disturbing the peace and assault and battery on a police officer.
Injured Person
Oct. 6
Police responded to North Village for a report of a person, age 19, on the ground. They located an individual with cuts and scrapes on his face. Amherst Ambulance personnel checked the individual who was placed in protective custody.
Drug Offense
Oct. 6
An officer investigating the odor of marijuana in Washington Dorm allegedly had a room door slammed on his hand. An individual will be summoned to court for the incident.
Oct. 9
Police investigating a smell of marijuana in Thatcher Dorm confiscated a small amount.
Larceny
Oct. 7
An individual from Washington Dorm reported a gold chain which she lent to another individual was not returned and is presumed stolen.
Oct. 9
An individual reported her purse stolen from the Blue Wall.
Timothy Hodges, 21, of 752 Blandford Road in Russell, was arrested on seven counts of larceny over $250, larceny of property $250 or less, and possession of burglarious tools.
Annoying Phone Call
Oct. 7
An individual reported annoying calls from a former boyfriend. The matter will be pursued through the courts.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Oct. 13

Lecture — Professor John H. Bracey Jr., "African Americans and Higher Learning in America," 4 p.m., Memorial Hall, Memorial Lounge, UMass, free.

Fair — Career Opportunities, Undergraduate Business Club's Career Day, contact School of Management office at UMass for more information.

Seminar — Chemistry seminar, "Immunosuppressive Boronic Acid Dipeptides," Lederle Graduate Research Tower room 1634, UMass, 11:15 a.m.

Film — Fantastic Cinema: Legends, Myths, Adventures, Herter Hall room 227, UMass, 7:30 p.m., free.

Music — University Jazz Ensemble and Chapel Jazz Ensemble, Bowker auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m. Information: 545-2511.

Meeting — Bisexual Rap Group, 4th floor lounge of Mary Lyon House in Northeast, UMass, 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Meeting — Five college habitat for humanity, Convierge Hall, Amherst College, 1st floor room 108, Information: 549-5976.

Movie — The Life of Brian, downstairs in the Hillel House Basement, free, 7 p.m., refreshments will be served.

Meeting — French Club, 7 p.m., meet at the Cafe Mediterrainian.

Friday, Oct. 14

Lecture — Tim Miller will be speaking, Bowker auditorium, 8 p.m.

Lecture — Visiting Lecturer Series in Geology, Morrill Science Center room 131, UMass, 3:30 p.m., free.

Theater — Coatlicue Las Colorado present Open Wounds on Tlalticutli. Hampden Theater, UMass, 8 p.m. Tickets: 545-2511.

Just for fun — Contra dance with George Marshall and Wild Asparagus, Dining Commons, Holyoke College, 8 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Hatch Bash — Concert by Mocha Java, Jaya the Cat, and Loose Caboose, Hatch Bar, 8 p.m., $4.

Saturday, Oct. 15

Benefit — The annual Amherst fall foliage walk, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., Mill River Conservation Area in North Amherst. Information: 665-0447.

MassPIRG — Hosting streamwalk to survey the water and clean waste in Puffers Pond in North Amherst, 1 p.m., meet at MassPIRG office, 423B Student Union, UMass.

Performance — Tim Miller, "My Queer Body," Bowker auditorium, UMass. Tickets: 545-2511.

Special event — WFCR's Vintage Vinyl, Amherst Town Common, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Theater — National Marionnette in Concert, Amphitheater, MHC. Show times: 10:45 a.m., noon and 1:15 p.m., $3.

Music — "A Celebration by Friends: Clavichord Inaugural Recital in Memory of Ruth Mortimer '53," Sage Recital Hall, Sage Hall, Smith College, free, 3 p.m.

Film — Out of Africa, Gamble Auditorium, MHC, 7 p.m. and 10 p.m., $2.50.

Music — The Klezmatics, presented by WFCR and the Yiddish/World Music ensemble, Academy of Music, Northampton, 8 p.m. Information: 545-0100.

Theater — They Do It With Mirrors, Chapin Auditorium, MHC, 8 p.m., $5.

Car Wash — Pioneer and Five College Habitat will be sponsoring a car wash in Northampton, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Information: 549-5976.

Sunday, Oct. 16

Special Event — American Friends Service Committee Open House, 25 Main Street room 221, Northampton, free, 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Conference — Confronting Anti-Semitism on the College Campus, Hillel House, UMass, free, 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Theater — Fried or Boiled? Chapin Auditorium, MHC, $5, 8 p.m.

Music — Maura O'Connell with special guest Carol Noonan, Campus Center room 103, AC, Campus Center Frontroom, 8 p.m.

Music — Smith College Chamber Orchestra, Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, SC, free, 8 p.m.

THE SPOKE
The Spoke Amherst, Mass
A DRINKERY TO MEET, RELAX AND ENJOY
Beer of the Month
16 OZ BUD BOTTLES
$2.00
Drink of the Month
JIM BEAM & COKE
$1.75
35 E. PLEASANT STREET

It's Time To Sow; Dig It!
aMAZE yourself and help us plant bulbs in the wildflower meadow of the MAZE on October 20 from 3:30 to 6:00
An Arts Council ARTeVENTive with flutes and food and earthly delights.
Sign up for this SunSet celebration
At our CC Tables 10/14 & 10/17
At the A.C. Office, 103 Hasbrouck
For More Info Call 545-0202

PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Open 7 Days a week
20 % OFF MEALS FRI. AND SAT. EVENING WITH COMEDY SHOW with this ad
Comedy Shows Friday and Saturday at 8:30pm with dinner
Monday -Thursday Dinner Buffet $5.99 Sunday Brunch $6.99
586-1202 FREE PARKING ON RT. 9 HADLEY MASTER CARD VISA

For once, a cut in educational spending that actually helps students.

Macintosh® Performa® 636 8/250 with CD-ROM, Apple® Color Plus 14" Display, AppleDesign® Keyboard and mouse.

Apple® PowerBook® 150 4/120

Power Macintosh® 7100/66 8/250 with CD-ROM, Apple® Multiple Scan 15 Display, AppleDesign® Keyboard and mouse.

With Apple's special low student pricing, you can get a terrific deal on Macintosh,® the best-selling personal computer on college campuses today. You can choose the affordable Macintosh Performa,® which comes complete with lots of powerful software to help get you through college. You can also choose the portable Apple® PowerBook® or the Power Macintosh®— the world's fastest Mac.® And because Macintosh is still the easiest personal computer, you won't have to dig through complex manuals. Plus, with low student pricing, a Mac is as easy to afford as it is to use. All of which makes it the ideal time to discover the power all college students need. The power to be your best.® Apple through it.

UNIVERSITY STORE ☆ CAMPUS CENTER 545-2619 M - F 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. SAT 11 a.m. - 3 p.m.

©1994 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the apple logo, Macintosh, Macintosh Quadra, Performa, PowerBook and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. AppleDesign, Mac and Power Macintosh are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc.

Alum to speak on prejudice, power

Former Third World Affairs director Crayton returns to UM

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

Community activist and alum Anthony P. Crayton is returning to the University of Massachusetts to lecture on politics, prejudice and power.

The ALANA (African-American, Latino, Asian and Native American students) lecture series is bringing Crayton to the Campus Center Auditorium tonight at 7:30 p.m. His lecture is sponsored by the Office of Third World Affairs.

As well as being a former student, Crayton was also the director of Third World Affairs at UMass. Presently, Crayton is working as vice president of Diversity and Management Associates Inc.

Crayton's job entails preparing proposals for contracts, reviewing project data and preparing end-project reports in order to present them to regulatory entities, as well as researching data and financial service fees.

From 1992-94, Crayton was a member of the Boston City Council, from the Roxbury District. Crayton was Chairman of Post Audit and Oversight Committee and Chair of the Ways and Means Committee.

As Chair of the Ways and Means Committee, Crayton created an all funds budget and presided over every city department, along with program and budget rationales.

While Crayton was on the city council, he also served as vice-chair of the planning and development which conducted hearings on numerous development issues.

Crayton worked as Administrative Analyst for the Boston Employment Commission from 1987-92. As an analyst, Crayton provided compliance quarterly and annual reports, researched employment, and developmental trends for the Boston Metro area, issued reports on jobs policy, and worked on a Supreme Court decision in 1989.

From 1971-86, Crayton worked as a paralegal researcher and advocate. As a paralegal, Crayton performed case monitoring, research, and advocacy for clients on income maintenance, housing and job discrimination, social security and consumer affairs for Student Legal Services, the Office of Third World Affairs, and the Greater Boston Legal Services Corporation.

Along with Crayton's several paid work experiences, he has also participated in numerous roles with boards and committees related to management, diversity and economic issues.

Crayton was a member of the Social Policy Research Group, advising on matters of both construction and non- construction related to resident jobs, policy, minority business and vocational education.

Because of his experience, Crayton was elected to the Boston Management Consortium's Advisory Board, with a focus on reinventing government.

Bracey to focus on Afro-Am influence in colleges

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts professor John H. Bracey, Jr. will lecture tonight on the influence of African-Americans on the American college system of the 20th century.

The event, part of the Distinguished Faculty Lecture Series, will be at 4 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Admission is free and an open reception will follow the lecture.

Entitled "African-Americans and the Higher Learning in America," the lecture focuses on the on-going debate over the nature of higher education and its tendency to overlook the contributions of many African-American scholars.

Bracey, a history professor who has taught in the Afro-American Studies department since 1972, is the product of a family in which four straight generations have been educators, primarily in Mississippi and Arkansas.

Because his mother graduated from the University of Chicago and taught at Howard University for 30 years, Bracey has first-hand knowledge of the two schools he chooses to contrast in his lecture.

An example of the differences between the two universities' philosophies on curriculum is their choice of classic Western texts, Bracey asserts. While professors at Chicago chose fifty European and American works, all by White authors, as definitive volumes, the Howard professors instead made the term "Western" more inclusive by citing works by African-American authors as well.

Bracey says that the notion that confuses "Western with meaning White" is all but extinct on many predominantly Black campuses.

In comparing outdated and fresh educational concepts, Bracey said he hopes to erase some preconceptions about collegiate education.

■ female condom

continued from page 1

ing and other information.

The female condom is not yet available at the UHS pharmacy, but Mueller said that she assumes that Reality will be available on campus within the next year.

For more information regarding the female condom and other contraceptive options on campus, call the Peer Health Program at 549-2600 ext. 181.

■ career fair

continued from page 1

Dan Castellano, former president of the club and a junior general business major.

Castellano said many students are not aware of their options for career choices which is where the club can help in guiding students on a path which suits them.

The club sponsors a number of speakers throughout the year which Berkowitz said not only helps student in knowing what is available, but also gives the companies a chance to make contacts with students and potential employees.

Yesterday's career fair, however, is the club's largest annual event.

Tanya Todtenkopf, a senior sociology major, said she came to the fair for information.

"I'm just meeting people and finding out about companies," she said. "I'm here to meet a lot of people, get names and get contacts. Now I can call a company and hopefully, they'll remember me."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
More fun than a barrel full of chimapnzees.

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring Sam Adams Lager $16.99 cse.
Icehouse $12.99 case bots.
Bacardi Rum $9.99 Liter
So. Comfort $14.99 1.75 L
Busch $9.99 cse bots.
S.S.P. Vodka $8.99 1.75L
Sam Adams & Catamount $9.95 12/pk (your choice)
Pilsner Urquell $5.99 6/pk bots.
Miller "Lite" 16 oz cans $7.99 12/pk
Bud 16 oz bots. $7.99 12 pk
American Beer $7.29 cse cans
Visa/Mastercard accepted on Keg Deposits
All Beers Plus Deposit Many More In-Store Specials (especially on wines) -Delivery Available-

THE ALANA LECTURE SERIES
PRESENTS
Anthony P. Crayton
THURSDAY OCTOBER 13, 1994
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
7:30PM
Free and Open to the Public.
Anthony P. Crayton, Community Activist and Alum of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, Former Director of the Office of Third World Affairs and member of the Boston City Council from the Roxbury District. Mr. Crayton will speak on Politics, Prejudice and Power. He is presently, Vice-President of Diversity and Management Associates.
SPONSORED BY: THE OFFICE OF THIRD WORLD AFFAIRS

Conference celebrates South Asian art

By Michelle Lugo
Collegian Staff

WILLIAMSTOWN — "Art is a living center of the college community, not something to be locked away in a closet," said Kevin Bubriski, professional photographer and author of the book Portraits of Nepal.

Bubriski's photographs and other South Asian art including paintings, sculptures, dance and music were the main attractions in the inaugural South Asian Student Conference at Williams College in Williamstown. The South Asian Student Association (SASA) and the Williams College Museum of Art (WCMA) sponsored the conference on October 7-10.

"We [SASA] are just getting aggressive," said Ro Bawa, a sophomore at Williams, and coordinator of the event. The SASA members at Williams said they created this conference in an attempt to interact with other organizations like itself, in order to celebrate South Asian culture, hoping to gather a diverse group of students to collectively experience a festival of South Asian culture.

"This conference doesn't deal with politics, or economics, or religion, but art. We are students, we need a break," said Meenakshi Marwaha, vice-president of the UMass South Asian club.

Exhibitions and performances were presented by expert artists in the field. "The Greatest Delight: Art of India" exhibit displayed 78 paintings, sculptures, and textiles selected from the Permanent Collection of WCMA. According to the museum display, these art works traced the development and popular themes in Indian art from the 15th through the 19th centuries.

Between these centuries, three civilizations collided on the same continent: Islamic, Hindu and British India. Paintings now called Mughal, Raiput, or Company tell the story of how these profoundly dissimilar cultures adapted and borrowed from each other as they preserved or transformed their identities. The exhibit will end November 27.

The photography exposition was titled, "Sadhu: Hindu Holy Men Photographs by Kevin Bubriski." Although Bubriski is a product of Williamstown, he spent three years, starting in 1975, working for the Peace Corps. The photographer decided to go back to Nepal less than a couple of weeks after returning to the U.S. and "work without deadlines, following my own bliss. My only deadline was the expiration date on the black and white roll of film."

From Bubriski's experience came the award winning book from 1993, Portraits of Nepal,documenting the people and culture of the Himalayas since mid-1970s. Bubriski explained how different sects of Sadhus practice a life of renunciation and detachment as means of transcending the "world of appearances" and attaining "spiritual enlightenment," a Sadhu tradition which has changed little in the past 4,000 years. One of the most impressive photographs was that of a Sadhu man who had been standing up for nine years straight.

The dance show was in the classical Indian ballet form. The head performer, Ranjanas Devi of the Natarag dance group, began the dance relating a story, usually about the deity, or god, Krishna. Devi said "the eyes are the soul of the human." Devi wore bells around ankles so movement had to be precise and in rhythm with the music.

The participants also saw the movie 1942: A love story and took part in a social dance. An authentic Indian dinner on Saturday was catered by India House in Northampton.

Students from colleges such as Boston University, Dartmouth College, the Fashion Institute of Technology, Harvard University, Mt. Holyoke College, Smith College, UMass, Wellesley College, Yale University and others came on different weekends to partake in the conference and see the art expositions and performances. The groups came on different weekends because the schools all have different breaks.

"With all this networking you become closer to South Asian friends," said Asma Khawaha, a native of Pakistan who now studies at the Fashion Institute of Technology. "When you come here [to the U.S.] you find that you want to share things from home, and who are you going to do it with?" said Khawaha.

■ foreign policy

continued from page 1

danger," Raphael said. "For all the talk about the European Community, [the nations of Western Europe] are in no position to make a common foreign policy."

The guiding light thus falls upon the United States to establish foreign policy goals and pave the way for ultimate solutions.

Raphael cited Former National Security Adviser Henry Kissenger in saying that this is "a historical role for America. We can't help but be involved."

But Raphael asked, "Why should we care — beyond the moral questions?"

It is this conflict in American priorities, the need for American leadership but the ultimate uncertainty of our proper role, which has undermined U.S. credibility in foreign policy.

It is this duality which has led to what Raphael calls "chronic vascillation" in American foreign policy. "The U.S. position has changed about every five months."

Current National Security Adviser Anthony Lake sees our new international role in a new light. He considers our mission as "not containment but the promotion of democracy throughout the world," Raphael said, "which is very Wilsonian."

This thinking might coincide with the moral tradition grounded in American democracy, but it doesn't establish a clear U.S. objective. It simply drops American concerns "into the dossiers of international organizations," according to Raphael.

"Clinton foreign policy has been hostage to domestic policy," Raphael said.

The Black Caucus' influence in Haiti, Congress' unwillingness to distribute foreign aid, and public disinterest in the former Yugoslavia have narrowed the current foreign policy focus to be one which is more attractive politically, but could prove costly in the long run.

"On its face, Clinton foreign policy is beset by lots of waffling," Raphael said. "We have abandoned many traditional American interests. The consequences as of yet aren't all that serious. In the post-Cold War world, we seem to be able to bumble along. In the end, however, this will catch up with us."

U-MASS. vs BC
Game Ticket - Round Trip Bus
Sunday afternoon Oct. 30th
Hockey Game at BC
Call Steve at Rock & Jock
(508) 877-6050

ST. THOMAS ORTHODOX CHRISTIAN MISSION
Meeting for Pre-Liturgy first and third Sundays of the month
Upstairs Lounge Newman Center University of Massachusetts Amherst, Massachusetts
First Meeting October 16th Divine Liturgy 11:00 AM
For more information call Fr. Luke Mihaly (508) 748-0671
A Parish of the American Carpatho-Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Diocese of the U.S.A. (Ecumenical Patriarchate)

Get Ready for MAY now!
ATTENTION: UMASS GRADUATING SENIORS
Learn more about our exciting Executive Training Program!
Join Filene's executives and recent UMass Alums at our upcoming events..
Resume Day, Friday, October 14th, from 10 to 4 pm in the School of Management Faculty Lounge
Student Reception, hosted by Filene's Chairman, Joe Melvin Monday, October 17th, at 7 pm in Memorial Hall
We look forward to seeing you there...Bring your friends!!
FILENE'S
The May Department Stores Company

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gurdes Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bruce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Chris Tasker Conner Black Affairs Editor Emily Marino Women's Issues Editor
Andrew Ferguson Business Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor John Khachadourian Finance Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Jim Roulé Circulation Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Eric Abetiam Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Maureen Mastrowski Senior Bookkeeper
Ada Michelle Lugo Multicultural Affairs Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Kelly Spang News Editor Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Notes from the Basement

I almost got into accident in town yesterday trying to beat the traffic rushing to the Bangs Community Center at noontime. Martin F. Jones — of the Minuteman and hunger strike fame — held another press conference to announce his latest position on the issue of the mascot, despite the fact that the mascot is no longer an issue.

Tracy Monahan

It seems that Martin has completely changed his mind and no longer feels that the Minuteman is a racist, oppressive and violent symbol.

No, now Martin feels the Minuteman is a glorious part of our state's history. He admitted that during his fall media blitz last year, he hadn't known the history and tradition surrounding the state's earliest militia.

Martin is also drafting a proposal to establish a holiday that would honor the Minuteman and other American heroes. It would be a national holiday.

I can see it now, everyone would get the day off so they could go to Bertucci's for dinner. If you're lucky, maybe the Chancellor will pick up your dinner tab.

The plan unveiled in yesterday's press conference is to walk from the steps of Beacon Hill to the Minuteman National Park in Lexington and Concord. Martin has invited a few friends to join him, including Gov. William F. Weld, Mitt Romney, Sen. Ted Kennedy and State Rep. Mark Roosevelt. The walk will also commemorate the restoration of President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power in Haiti.

I'll bet ol' Jean is heaving a sigh of relief that Martin is on his side. Wouldn't want a hunger strike to stir things up in Haiti again.

This media event was attended by reporters from two publications. The directions — which were faxed out late Tuesday night with the press release — read "...and near a yellow hot dog cart."

That's the problem right there, CNN and the other big media outlets must have taken a left at the RED hot dog cart. Better luck next time.

******

Columbus Day went by this year without even a peep from anybody. Not a single building was taken over, no rallies, no protests, no nothing. This is the first time since I got here as a freshman that the day has passed by so unnoticed.

Usually, you can't get away from the voices shouting at you from bullhorns pointing out of the windows of buildings that are effectively shut down.

I guess the people hoping to change the focus of the holiday have just given up on the whole idea. If they just dug in their heels a little bit, maybe they'd get taken out to dinner, too.

******

The library has been renamed the W.E.B. Du Bois library, but no one can say for sure when the actual name change goes into effect.

I tried calling the library the other night and the woman on the phone — who answered, "Tower Library" — couldn't say for sure when it would happen. I called the man she suggested and he told me that he only knew what he'd read in the Collegian. I assumed it would be an immediate change, but no one seems to know.

******

The new issue of The Minuteman came out last week and I have to say I was sorely disappointed. I use to enjoy reading it, but now it makes me wish I had a puppy so I could use the paper for something useful. The biting sarcasm and humor seem to be lost in a fog of drink recipes and beer goggling jokes. It's sad because it has potential and a conservative publication is just what this campus needs to temper the liberal views. Too bad the issue read like it had been written by an unfunny version of Beavis and Butthead.

Eh.

Tracy Monahan is a Collegian columnist.

Seeking voices of our generation

While perusing the reserve readings for my history class, I came upon an interesting concept put forth by Thomas Jefferson. He believed that every living generation should write its own constitution. It is easy to adhere to the laws made by an early majority who was a product of the "golden age" of the past, but it is a more difficult task to put into compact the goals and ideologies of a varied generation. I found his idea rather intriguing as I wondered whether or not my living generation could accomplish such a task, and if so, who would we elect to put pen to paper.

Erin Barnes

I can immediately tell you that Kurt Cobain would not have been high on my list of constitutional framers had he been alive today. As far as I am concerned, he certainly was not the voice of my generation, nor was his death one that troubled me for an extensive period of time. He was not a martyr nor a fallen hero, he was stupid and he committed suicide. (Kudos to Andy Rooney who agrees with me.)

And while I enjoyed the Seattle and Texas-based films that allegedly captured the spirit of my generation, I do not believe that Cameron Crowe or Ben Stiller would make reputable framers as well. Grunge is not our generation's dress code nor is "PC" our language. Besides, both of those men frolic in Hollywood, which is a world all its own.

Similarly, I agree, to some extent, with those views expressed by Dennis Leary and Maggie Estep, but their raw delivery lacks certain composure required in the diplomatic process.

Although this negative list could go on forever, those people whom I would desire to be involved in a contemporary constitutional convention are much more effortless. I would want framers with the eloquence of Maya Angelou, wisdom of Anna Quindlen, and perseverance of Anita Hill. I would like to see representatives with the environmental sense of Vice President Al Gore or early ecofeminist Rachel Carson, as well as the business sense of Lee Iacocca. I would like to see people who show an earnest concern for their community and for those underprivileged people which they represent.

Generally, I would like to see a modern-day constitution drafted by people who are aware of societal ills rather than "good ol' boys" whose breeding and status have placed them above the problems faced by the rest of us. The original framers drafted a masterpiece, but understandably had no idea the changes that more than two centuries would bring. A dynamic constitution written by each new living generation is a grand idea, but one that belongs in the pages of history books and, perhaps, is not applicable in today's society.

The adage says that the constitution is written by the people for the people, and the extent of governmental authority depends on the willingness of the governed. Walt Whitman agrees: "The genius of the United States is not best or most in its executives or legislatures, nor in its ambassadors or authors or colleges or churches or parlors, nor even in its newspapers or inventors...but always most in the common people."

Erin Barnes is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Question 3 is anti-student

To the editor:

"Question 3 is the most anti-consumer, anti-environmental, and anti-democracy law passed by the Massachusetts Legislature in years. It reeks of special interest politics at its worst." —Ralph Nader

What, you may ask, is Ralph Nader talking about? Last year, industry lobbyists pushed a law through the Massachusetts state budget (as a rider) that prohibits students from forming and funding groups on campus that lobby on public policy issues. The law was a direct attack on MASSPIRG, a student-directed organization that works on environmental and consumer issues in Massachusetts. Last fall, students and activists across the state collected 85,000 signatures to repeal this law.

The campaign to vote No on 3 is a campaign to fight back against corrupt influences in the government. Who are we? The No on 3 committee is chaired by UMass student Julia Lev and our money is from student supporters. Endorsers of the No on 3 campaign include Jerry Brown, Ralph Nader, College Democrats of America, Robert Redford, student governments across Massachusetts, faculty members and student groups.

Our opposition is made up of lawyers and businesses. Interestingly enough, the chairperson of the committee to support Question 3 is not a student or member of the campus community, but a business man. The treasurer is a corporate lawyer. Their money comes from the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, Browning Ferris Industries, Master Metal Finishers Association of Massachusetts and the Society of the Plastics industry.

This November we have a chance to make history. Massachusetts is the only state in the country that restricts the rights of students to form and fund groups on campus. By voting No on 3 November 8, students have the chance to set a precedent for what can be done on college campuses. To get involved in the campaign or for more information, stop by the MASSPIRG office, 423B in the Student Union. We need psyched, pissed-off and outraged people to help with the visibility campaign on or before election day to educate voters and stab special interest in the back!

Julia Lev
Co-chair
MASSPIRG

Seat belt law violates rights

To the editor:

Throughout the next two months the Massachusetts seat belt issue is going to be getting a lot of attention, especially since the law is now on the November ballot for voters to decide. I am taking this opportunity well in advance to voice a widely supported opinion. There is hardly any doubt the seat belt law will save lives; however, the Massachusetts legislature fails to see the law eliminates essential individual liberty and undermines the public's intelligence on the issue.

Perhaps no one understood liberty better than John Stuart Mill, the co-founder of utilitarian ethical theory and author of On Liberty. He writes, "That the only purpose for which power can be rightfully exercised over any member of a civilized community, against his will, is to prevent harm to others. His own good, either physical or moral, is not a sufficient warrant." Mill concludes in his beautifully depicted essay that liberty is the single most important end in a person's life and if restricted then life has no meaning. The only possible way in which a person can be circumscribed is to prevent harm to others.

Another great supporter of liberty was Benjamin Franklin, who warned, "They that can give up essential individual liberty for a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety." The seat belt law serves only to protect people from themselves.

Another point brings me to the issue of public safety. How far is the state going to go with protecting people from themselves? If you support the seat belt law then you might support laws that call for mandatory life jackets while swimming. Or laws that ban hang gliding, mountain climbing or skydiving. Aren't all those activities just as dangerous as driving without a seat belt? But why stop there? If the state has significant interest in protecting people for their own good then it should fine people who eat high cholesterol food or don't exercise regularly. Is this the kind of government that we want to have? I certainly don't want any government that ignores my personal freedom and only has an interest in my safety, especially when it is trying to protect me from myself.

So I intend to retain "my quality of life" by retaining my liberty. I intend to help repeal the seat belt law. That in no way means you or anyone else can't wear your seat belt, it only means you will be able to decide what's best for you. I hope that you have now seen the issue from a different perspective, one that seems to blend better with our constitution. We all should look forward to the November Ballot as the chance to take back our freedom: vote no on question 2.

Brian P. McColgan
IOA

The "closet" is a lonely place

To the editor:

I am writing in response to the Oct. 11 article written by Wendy Darling. It was nice to read an article about the fact so many people are in the closet, including me. I am the one who sits alone in the dining commons feeling lonely. Out of 11,000 students living here I know two lesbians and I hardly ever see them, I live on a floor which is all heterosexual and most homophobic. My roommate to name one, I thought coming to college I could be out and be ME. But I am afraid. I don't want to lose my friends and I don't want my roommate to freak out. I've been to a few GLB lectures but I haven't talked with anyone. I know eventually I will have to say or do something to ease my loneliness but for now I am silent in the closet.

UMass Freshman
Orchard Hill

The pleasure of public transportation

Dave Copeland

"A free bus system?" my mother exclaimed. "How wonderful!"

Obviously, my mom has never been subjected to the 20+ minutes of hell that I have come to know as "getting to and from school."

The Pioneer Valley Transit Authority, in theory, is a great concept. Public transportation, on the other hand, is not.

And despite their best efforts, the PVTA is still public transportation, whether it is free or not.

As much as I have tried, I cannot enjoy and barely tolerate the predicament I have put myself in by living in the bowels of South Amherst without a car. However, as a veteran rider of the PVTA, I can offer the following hints about how to survive the perils of this service.

The amount of time that a bus is late will be equal to the level of urgency you have to get where you are going. What this means is that if you are expecting to catch the 9:52 bus for your 10:10 class, that bus will pull up to the bus stop at 10. If you have a quiz or an exam in that 10:10 class, then do not expect that bus until five past 10.

The only time a PVTA bus will ever be on time is when you are running late, and therefore, you will miss the bus completely.

To become a PVTA bus driver you must be convinced that you are the only person who has good taste in music. PVTA bus drivers are convinced that everyone they pick up will want to listen to Ministry at 100 decibels first thing in the morning. I am pretty sure that I have listened to every crappy band that ever managed to get an album out, courtesy of the fine people who drive the busses.

PVTA bus drivers are members of a really cool clique that you will never be able to join. Have you ever noticed that PVTA bus drivers always wave whenever they pass each other in their busses? I used to think that this was a real nice gesture, but then I learned that they are very selective about who they wave to. When I borrow my roommate's car, I always wave to the PVTA busses, but they never wave back, proving that the wave is reserved for members of their clique only.

The number of screaming children on the bus will be equal to the number of beers you had the night before. What this translates into is that if you have the most vicious hangover of your life, expect a field trip from a local preschool on the day that Mr. Rogers dies to be waiting for you on the bus.

The person who just went on a shopping spree at the Hampshire Mall will take the seat next to you. I hate taking the bus to the mall more than anywhere else. It always seems that the person sitting next to me on the way home has just bought a fall wardrobe, a microwave oven and a futon. They really should put curtains of barbed wire in between each seat so as to define some boundaries.

PVTA buses are designed to be cool and drafty in the winter and sweltering in the summer. After all, this is free transportation. They have to discourage people from abusing it somehow.

PVTA bus drivers are under no obligation to stop when you press the bell. On a particularly icy day last January, I pressed for my stop, but the driver was too busy talking on that little phone to stop at my requested stop. When I darted to the front of the bus to complain, she merely said, "What do you want? A refund?"

Capacity limits for busses can be ignored on the weekends. Once a friend and I went to the mall on a Saturday. There were a lot of people waiting for the bus back to Amherst on that cold November day, so the bus driver did everything in his power to get everyone on. The bus filled quickly, and the next thing we knew we were pressed up against the front window of the bus, clearly in violation of the signs that read "No one is allowed in front of the white line when the bus is in motion," and "Unnecessary conversation with the driver is prohibited by law." It's hard not to talk to the driver when you are forced to sit on his lap.

Conversely, capacity rules are strictly enforced on school days. It always seems that the sign that says "Sorry, Full" pops on when I'm ten minutes late for a class.

You won't be seeing me on the bus anymore. I have a feeling that the bus driver clique will be upset with my harsh criticism, so they will more than likely make an effort to ban me from the bus. Oh well, at least I won't have to listen to their crappy music anymore.

Dave Copeland is a Collegian staff member.

The mailbox is open!

The editorial page at the Massachusetts Daily Collegian is always open to you.

Send your letters and comments down for publication. Put your name and number on them, too. We like to read letters from you.

We reserve the right to edit all letters for grammar and clarity.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

SO WHAT'D YOU THINK OF MICHAEL-ROY, SID? ISN'T HE THE NICEST?
I GUESS. BIT OF AN EMPTY SUIT, THOUGH!
WELL, I THINK THAT'S SO ARI-ANNA-JOHN CAN WEAR IT. THEY SHARE EVERYTHING!
WHERE'D YOU MEET HIM, ANYWAY?
ON THE BEACH. HE'D JUST MOVED IN FROM TEXAS SO HE COULD REPRESENT US.
HEY, Y'ALL! WHERE'S THE OCEAN?
UH... TO YOUR LEFT. THE BLUE THING.

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING
Thursday October 13, 1994
Weekend Edition • Volume CIV Issue 22

Random musings from TV land

By Tracy Gavel
Collegian Correspondent

This is strange. The recent broadcast of Fox's movie bio on the life and times of "domestic goddess" and comedian Roseanne has put me in an oddly reflective mood. And it's at a time like this that I start thinking that maybe the real Roseanne should turn on her television set and get some good advice from the fake Roseanne.

I believe that real Roseanne could really learn a lot from fake Roseanne. I sincerely do. Fake Roseanne's first indispensable nugget of advice: Rosey, get yourself some Crackerjack tattoos. Of the soap-and-water easy-cleanup variety. They make life so much simpler.

But now on to more important matters. I saw an uncomfortable looking Warren Beatty on Letterman's show last week, and he still looks great for his age. He doesn't really like going on talk shows, though, and getting him to interact was like pulling teeth. Beatty did get to say a profane word on the air, so at least he's keeping up the growing trend of the "Late Show," if nothing else.

Personally, I think that the whole controversial Madonna– Letterman thing that happened last year was just a fix to get some publicity. I mean, Letterman got months worth of comedy material out of it — and he and Madonna even did a little skit at some awards show together. It was just a bit overdone, I think.

Incidentally, my all–time favorite out–of–control Letterman guest was hyperactive actor Crispin Glover, who appeared on NBC's "Late Night" in 1987 wearing '60s bell–bottom pants, six–inch platform shoes, and a woman's wig — placed on sideways. He attempted to impress Letterman by challenging him to an arm wrestling match, and then demonstrated his agility by nearly kicking the host in the head with those amazing shoes. What they should do at CBS, instead of giving the 12:30 post–"Late

Turn to TELEVISION, page 10

From tattoos to appendage piercing, this brand of body expression stretches the limit between ouch! and art

• By Roderick A. Beltran •
Collegian Staff

Celtic design armband, mushroom tattoo on right ankle, left and right nipple pierced, Art-Deco box tattoo on right arm, eyebrow ring, a Red Reindeer tattoo.

These are some of the various ways individuals have taken the once back–room rite of tattooing and body piercing to becoming one of Generation X's particular form of self expression.

The reasons for such body customization vary. Some maintain the rational that both art forms just look cool, while others have the perspective that body customization takes on a more personal nature.

David G. McCarthy, a 20–year–old student, is the proud bearer of a Red Reindeer tattoo on his left bicep which in passing looks somewhat like Gumby's clay friend Pokey, but in truth has a meaning much deeper than the ink under his skin.

"I got it because it has a connection with me and it appears on my family coat of arms," he admits with deep pride. As to the uniqueness of the deer, McCarthy pointed out: "how many tribal armbands are out there? The only other person who would have this is another McCarthy."

"There is a story behind it. Many centuries ago the Red Reindeer was sacrificed to symbolize the time a boy was to be turned into a man. The Red Reindeer is also a masculine symbol in Celtic folklore which represents bravery and wisdom."

With the horned creature from the classic children's book Where the Wild Things Are by Maurice Sendack gracing his left shoulder, it is fairly evident that the tale is more meaningful than a simple story to Joab Ryan, a 23–year–old senior from Boston, MA.

"When I was a kid I had an attachment to the book. It related to myself. I was an only child and so was Max (the main character in the story), so there was that additional attachment. He pulled himself up by his bootstraps and the monsters represented the pitfalls in life as I saw them."

"I like the dreamlike, faded colors," Ryan said about his tattoo. "Nothing can be crystal clear in life."

Aesthetically, Ryan described tattoos as "giving the body a more cut appearance." But what intrigued him the most were the dynamics of producing a two–dimensional item on a three–dimensional surface.

For Katherine Zone, a 20–year–old student at UMass, the reasons for her first tattoo (she has three including one on her navel), a mushroom on her right ankle were a little more opaque than David McCarthy's deer, but not in the slightest bit less personally meaningful.

"I have always really liked tattoos," Zone admits. "They're really cool. I can remember one of the first times I was attracted to them was one time when I was younger. I was looking at National Geographic magazine and there was this cool one on this Samoan man. This guy had his body full of designs."

The mushroom tattoo came out of an inner spontaneity. "Very impulsive. I learn a lot about myself when I do things on impulse," she says. "I went into this shop in New Orleans with an idea of getting a cross tattoo. While I was talking with the tattooer we came up with more ideas, but then I saw the "Alice in Wonderland" mushroom caterpillar on the wall. I thought it was cool and cute."

With body piercing, the reasons seem to be less introspective and take on a more physical, temporary form of self expression. As Wendy Bounds, a journalist for the Wall Street Journal noted in her article "Body–Piercing Gets Under America's Skin," some people do it for independence, and others to push mind–over–body by attempting to conquer the physical pain a piercing can bring.

Liz Coffey, a 20–year–old junior, was attracted to piercing by pictures of tribes in National Geographic who resembled human pin–cushions. Photos in a book at the location where she was pierced piqued her interest further, but it was scenes of nipple piercing in the film Pierce that finally convinced her to go all the way. Coffey got both nipples pierced.

"It gave me an endorphin rushed to get them pierced. And I thought the rings looked cooler on my nipples," Coffey said.

And as an added bonus, the nipple rings have made her sex life more exciting.

"The 12–gauge rings (the measured thickness of the rings) have made me more sensitive," Coffey said.

Borja Rodriguez, a 21–year–old exchange student from Spain, adds a different perspective: one of a man who has put the rebellious nature of body alteration behind him.

"None of my friends at home have their nose pierced. I met this guy from the States who had one and I thought it was cool. Also, I saw a rock star who had one and I liked it."

Rodriguez got his nose pierced during a visit to Boston. "I went to Boston to meet some friends of mine so we could go to clubs," said Rodriguez. "The club we were going to was having some sort of Seventies retro–thing, and my friends said I looked too much like a heavy metal rock star to be allowed in.

"I told them to give me an hour and I would be back. I went and got my nose pierced so I could look

Turn to TATTOOS, page 10

SHORT CUTS

Edited by Tara MK Connelly

Best of weekend events

Thursday

Luscious Jackson with Ben Harper at Pearl Street, 7 p.m. 18+

"Food For Soul," Valley Women Artists show. Student Union Art Gallery. Oct. 13 - Nov. 4.

Friday

Combattimento Consort Amsterdam, debut tour of the United States. Worcester's Mechanic Hall, 8 p.m. Tickets are $25 and $23. Call (508) 752-0888 or Ticketmaster (617) 931-2000.

Auditions are being held for African American male and female dancers and singers wanted for First World Images' production of Langston Hughes' Black Nativity. Auditions held from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., and on Oct. 15 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Northampton Center for the Arts. For more info, call Ingrid Askew (director) at 256-1402.

Saturday

Coatlicue Las Colorado (the Colorado Sisters present Open Wounds on Tlalteucili. Rand Theater, 8 p.m. Tickets are $5.

Comedian Kate Clinton, Smith College, Sage Hall. 8 p.m. Tickets $18 and $12 for students with IDs. All seating is reserved. Call 586-8686 or 1-800-THE-TIX.

Sunday

"Fried or Boiled," an evening of outlandish visual humor, presented by Lesbian Theater. Chapin, MHC at 8 p.m.

Quote of Note

"Mutually caring relationships will always include some measure of unkindness and impatience, intolerance, pessimism, envy, self-doubt and disappointment."

—David Pirner and Winona Ryder

People and Pop Culture in the News

Woody Allen's new movie Bullets Over Broadway is coming out this weekend and it seems that Allen already has another project all lined up. Allen told ex-lover Mia Farrow to change her tune or he'll make a movie about their child custody battle. Farrow currently has custody of the three children and Allen has visitation rights to only one (no, it isn't Soon-Yi). Allen is holding his cards until after the court looks over his appeal.

Is there no end to the hoopla and mayhem that has engulfed the O.J. Simpson trial? Well, if you just can't get enough of that oh-so-riveting CNN coverage (Mr. Simpson is now taking a sip of water, analysts are standing by) then switch off your T.V. and boot up your computer. CNN has decided to make you truly part of the cation by creating (drum roll please) — The People v. O.J. Simpson, an interactive CD ROM for PC/Windows and Macs. With this brilliant piece of technology, you can act as judge, juror, persecution, and even the defense attorney for Mr. Citrus himself.

Wonder what role Tom Cruise will be sinking his teeth into next (bad pun adds panache)? Try Brian De Palma's movie version of Mission: Impossible. Cruise must have a lot of faith in De Palma (maybe he missed Carlito's Way) because he's also producing it. Keep your eyes peeled for Interview With The Vampire posters boasting an ominous "Drink and you will live forever" slogan. Catchy!

What words do you think of when someone says Barney... besides purple and annoying? Well, how about filthy rich? That's right, according to Forbes' Top 40 list of the highest earners in the entertainment industry, Barney made an estimated $84 million in the last two years. That's more than authors Michael Crichton ($35 million) and John Grisham ($33 million) make combined. Rumor has it that Anna Nicole Smith and the purple dork are close personal friends.

Now that Pigpen, ah Puck, has left the Real World, who do we exploit next? How about Pedro Zamora, the 22-year- old with HIV? During a recent promo in the Big Apple, Zamora suffered a brain infection. But guess what, Pedro doesn't have life insurance, so MTV picked up the tab for his two-week hospital stay. Wow, what a realistic scenario, a house with free rent, supportive, PC roommates, and health care — just like in the real world, right?

Hollywood is resurrecting the King of Cool, James Dean. Playing the part of the brooding hipster is 19-year-old Oscar nominee Leonardo DiCaprio (What's Eating Gilbert Grape). The bio-movie is sophisticatedly entitled: Dean. Not to be confused with the famous breakfast sausage guy who is ALSO filming a bio.

Editors' Cuts

Music The Cranberries

I thoroughly enjoyed The Cranberries' first album, Everybody Else is Doing it So Why Can't We, so much that I couldn't wait for their sophomore release No Need to Argue. I wanted to be wowed again by Dolores O'Riordan's throaty and angelic voice that seduced me with "Linger."

So when I ripped open the cellophane covering and popped in the disc I was, well, disappointed. The songs were all beautiful, all ethereal and delicate, and awfully boring. I'm not saying that slow ballads aren't nice to listen to, but songs like "Twenty One" (sweetly sung as it is) just fades away leaving no lasting impression. Frankly, if I wanted to listen to songs like that, I'd throw in Enya. The pace is picked up somewhat by the sassy title track and first release "Zombie," but other than that, I longed for the bounce and uniqueness of "Dreams."

Hopefully, this plaintive collection of ballads to sleep by won't turn me away from the group. The disc isn't totally bad, just ordinary, and something I didn't think The Cranberries strove to be.

—Tara MK Connelly

Film Weekend Movie-rama

If the mall cinemas get their act together, the next few days will prove to be a stellar weekend for armchair moviegoers and thirsty cinephiles alike. Scheduled to open (and I do mean scheduled — don't blame me if these aren't playing tomorrow at a theatre near you) are three eagerly- awaited film releases.

Up first is the much-talked about, much-anticipated Pulp Fiction. Quentin Tarantino's follow-up to his already classic Reservoir Dogs has the buzz of the decade behind it and boasts plenty of trademark Tarantino wit, violence and all- around bloodthirsty nihilism.

Also up is Woody Allen's latest, a broad farce entitled Bullets over Broadway. Featuring John Cusak and Dianne Weist, the Wood-ster's latest is expected to continue Allen's reputation as one of America's greatest working directors.

All this and the new, intriguingly post-modern Freddy Krueger sequel New Nightmare — a shocker winning unexpected raves from critics — make for a virtual weekend filmgoing bonanza.

—Jon Lupo

Music Ray Manson Band

If no-frills pop is your thing, then be sure to check out The Bay State Cabaret in Northampton this Saturday night as local heroes The Ray Mason Band and Sourpuss take the stage.

The Ray Masson Band has been wowing The Valley with their down to earth pop stylings since 1981, and continue to play continually throughout New England on a regular basis. Rooted in traditional songwriting, the group finally released its debut CD this fall.

Newcomers to the Northampton music scene Sourpuss have been only been around a short while, but have already created quite a buzz. Playing a brand of energetic, unabashed pop, the band has earned a well-deserved reputation for kinetic live shows.

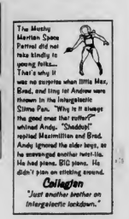
While both bands definitely come from different perspectives, they both are living testaments that excellent songwriting always beats gimmicks. A great chance to check out some great music, while also supporting some of the great local talent we have here in the Valley.

—Matt Audette

Student Union Art Gallery
presents
Valley Women Artists
"FOOD FOR SOUL"
Opening Reception
Oct 13 from 5 - 7 p.m.
The show will be on display from
Oct 13 through Nov 4
This event is free and open to the public, funded in part by the UMASS Arts Council

SANDY RENAUD
of the University Barbers
will re-locate to
90 North Pleasant St., Amherst
(near D.P. Dough & CVS)
starting Monday, Oct. 17
Hours: 8:30 - 4:30 Mon. thru Fri.
8:00 - 1:00 Sat.
253-3666 Free Parking

BUCCI'S
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-0155



The Northampton Center For the Arts and John Peters Present
THE SAMPLES
TUES., NOV. 8 - 7:30 PM
$14.50 Advance General Admission
John M. Greene Hall, Smith College, Northampton
Advance tickets available at The Northampton Box Office, Strawberries Record Stores, For The Record in Amherst, About Music in Greenfield, and at Tix Unlimited in the U. Mass Campus Center. To charge by phone call 586-8686 or 1(800) THE-TICK

Mt. Holyoke College and John Peters Present
ANI DIFRANCO
THURS., NOV. 3 - 8 PM
$12.00 Advance
General Admission
Chapin Hall,
Mt. Holyoke College
S. Hadley, MA
Advance tickets available at The Northampton Box Office, Strawberries Record Stores, For The Record in Amherst, About Music in Greenfield, and at Tix Unlimited in the U. Mass Campus Center. To charge by phone call 586-8686 or 1(800) THE-TICK

How to interview with the Fortune 500 without even getting out of bed.

OK, graduate-to-be. You can get up early or you can get Career/NET™. It's simple. You give us your resume in a personal profile on the disk we provide. And we guarantee to deliver it to 10,000 employers (including the Fortune 500) in exactly the form they're looking for. Your Career/NET enrollment kit—a preprogrammed disk and a booklet of step-by-step instructions—is $99.95* To be in the next nationwide distribution to employers, order today. Call 1-800-682-8539.

Career/NET

*Plus $4.95 for shipping and handling.

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street
South Amherst

University Barbers
(Campus Center)
549-0123
Hours:
Weekdays
8 am - 4:45 pm
Sat. 8 am - 1:45 pm
No Appointment Necessary

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE FRIDAY, OCT. 21
GRANTS FOR:
• Visual Art & Design
• Literature, Theater, Performance Art
• Film & Video
• Music
•Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance & information:
Student Activities Office
or
the Arts Council
101 Hasbrouck
545-0202

Images of music on display in Noho

By Michael MacLean
Collegian Staff

Images of various performers and musicians such as Kurt Cobain, Juliana Hatfield, Billy Bragg and Shawn Colvin captured performing live are on display at the Haymarket Cafe, on Main Street in Northampton.

The display, entitled Bard, is the work of photographer and UMass post graduate student Don Bush. Bush has collected images over the past six years from such locations as Cleveland, Boston and Northampton. Bard is arranged to be viewed in six groups of three pictures each, to emphasize the themes and colors displayed. The first grouping is of the band Chupa, live at the Middle East Cafe in Boston. The second grouping is entirely of the late Kurt Cobain, at Cleveland's Empire Nightclub in 1991, only a short time after Nevermind hit Billboard's charts.

Third, is a collection of three photos in which audience members made for unusual or interesting shots, and the forth segment consists entirely of street performers, including Luko Adjaffi, who can also be found performing in Harvard Square.

The last two segments provide the most recognizable names of the display. The first is of folk artists, and includes Billy Bragg on stage in Newfoundland and Shawn Colvin live at the Iron Horse in Northampton, just a few months before receiving her Grammy award.

An all-female section rounds out the exhibition with Mona Elliott and Lizzette Xixxo performing with their bands, Spore and Xixxo, respectively. And the final picture is that of Juliana Hatfield, before her solo career and while still with the Blake Babies.

"Bard" by Don Bush is on display from now until Oct. 30 at the Haymarket Cafe, Main St. Northampton. The exhibit is free during regular cafe hours.

Accepting writing submissions

The Collegian is now accepting submissions for a new fiction and prose column, "A&L Fiction." We are looking for thoughtful, intelligent, intriguing short fiction of 75 to 300 lines in length. Those interested may send works c/o Dave Polanzak, Collegian Arts & Living, 113 Campus Center, UMass. For more information, please call Dave at 546–0082 or Jon at 545–1361.

Ben Taylor, Jonathan Carr and Julia Foster star in The Swan.

COURTESY FRANK WARD

'The Swan' to open at Amherst College

The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is putting on its first production of its 1994-95 season. The Swan, written by Elizabeth Egloff and directed by Wendy Woodson, is a black comedy which involves an odd love triangle between Dora, a nurse, Kevin, her married boyfriend, and Bill, a swan who appears on Dora's doorstep.

The initial production of The Swan began in 1988 at Yale University in conjunction with Midwest PlayLabs, a project of the Playwrights' Center in Minneapolis. The play received its premiere at the Actors Theater of Louisville's 14th Humana Festival of New American Plays, co-winning the 1990 Kesselring Prize. Subsequently, The Swan was produced by the Magic Theater in San Francisco.

Director Elizabeth Egloff received her MFA from the Yale School of Drama in 1989. She went on to direct such plays as The Nose in 1988, and Phaedra and Hippolytus in 1989. Most recently she has directed The Devils, a stage adaption of the Dostoyevsky novel of the same name. Egloff is also the recipient of a 1991-92 McKnight Fellowship from the Playwrights' Center, and of playwriting fellowships from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Massachusetts Artists Foundation.

Tickets are on sale now at The Amherst College Box Office. Hours are 1-4:30 p.m. daily and until 8 p.m. on performance nights. Admission is free, reservations are suggested. Telephone: 542-2411

—Matt Audette

The Edwin M. Rossman Alumni Career Forum Presents:
The Fourth Annual
SPORT MANAGEMENT CAREER DAY
Thursday, October 13, 1994
at 2:30pm
Campus Center, Room 101

Alumni Panelists

Kathie Cain (MS'89)
Business Manager of Athletics
Dartmouth College
Hanover, New Hampshire

Anne Flannery (MS '89)
Manager of Women's Athletics
Spalding Sports Worldwide
Chicopee, Massachusetts

Steve Lombardi (MS '75)
Executive Director
Providence Civic Center
Providence, Rhode Island

James O'Neill (BS '84)
Ticket Manager
Boston College
Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts

Sponsored By University Career Center, University of Massachusetts Alumni Association, and the Sport Management Program

HELLCATS
JOIN THE PACK
RIDE WITH DEATH
THE COLLEGIAN

IT'S MIDNIGHT MADNESS WEEKEND...AND GREAT SAVINGS AT
LIQUORS 44
BEER WINE LIQUORS
GENUINE DRAFT & GENUINE DRAFT LIGHT CASE OF 24/12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $10.99 +DEP
BUD DRY & COORS GOLD
HEINEKEN/AMSTEL 12 PACK BOTTLES $8.99 +DEP
MOLSON ICE CASE OF 2 12 PACK BOTTLES $15.49 +DEP
KEYSTONE REGULAR, LIGHT & ICE CASE OF 2 12 PACK CANS SALE $8.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 COST AFTER REBATE $6.49 +DEP
HARPOON 6 PACK BOTTLES OCTOBERFEST $4.99 +DEP
1/2 KEGS ICE HOUSE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LIGHT, BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE & LOWENBRAU $39.99 +DEP
Almaden WINES
CHABLIS, RINK ROSE, RHINE, BURGUNDY, GOLDEN BLUSH 3.0 LITER $6.49
GLEN ELLEN WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML $3.29
SEBASTIANI COUNTRY WINES CHARDONNAY, ZINFANDEL, PINOT NOIR, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON, RIESLING, FUME BLANC 1.5 LITERS $6.99
PICCINI CHIANTI 750 ML $3.99
BOONE'S WINES ALL FLAVORS 750 ML $1.99
LORD CALVERT CANADIAN WHISKEY 1.75 LITERS $11.49
POPOV VODKA 1.75 LITERS $9.99
BEEFEATER GIN 1.75 LITERS $19.99
MUIRHEAD SCOTCH 1.75 LITERS $12.49
PEACHTREE SCHNAPPS 750 ML SALE $8.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 $6.49
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 10/13/94 THRU WEDS. 10/19/94
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

NRA BASIC PISTOL COURSE
NORTHAMPTON REVOLVER CLUB
CALL 268-3596 FOR DETAILS

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Family
Wednesday - October 26 - Room 902 (repeated on)
Tuesday - November 29 - Room 801
6:30 - 8:30 p.m.
Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass Campus
I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest . . . Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid . . . What can I do to help?
If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call
549-2671, Clinic 4 - ext. 233 or 234
UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES - UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS - AMHERST

THE TOC
SPORTS BAR & LOUNGE
11TH FLOOR CAMPUS CENTER
LARGE SCREEN T.V.
GREAT SPORTS ACTION
MUNCHIES
ICE HOUSE PITCHER $4.50
COMING UP OCTOBER 22ND . . .
LOOK FOR OUR SPECIAL
UMASS HOCKEY NIGHT!
the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION
OCTOBER SPECIAL!
MILLER
GENUINE DRAFT PITCHER $4.25
MUNCHIES
POOL TABLE

PEARL JAM
MADE YOU LOOK!
Now that we have your attention, we can't give you Pearl Jam but we can give you the dynamic jazz piano duo of Ellis Marsalis (yes, the father of Wynton, Branford and Delfayo) and young jazz lion Marcus Roberts.
See them October 28 at 8 pm
Bowker Auditorium
HALF-PRICE TICKETS FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS
There's more to see! Pick up your free student brochure at the Fine Arts Center Box Office or call 545-2511- we'll mail you one.
Brought to you by the FINE ARTS CENTER and WRNX 100.9, WFCR 88.5, BUSINESS WEST and YANKEE CANDLE COMPANY

Pumpkins smash stereotypes with Pisces Iscariot release

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

PISCES ISCARIOT
Smashing Pumpkins
Virgin Records

It is official boys and girls! Smashing Pumpkins have finally reached the full-fledged rock star status they've been striving for, since Billy Corgan screeched "Let me out!" and broke free from the musty underground dungeon.

With Pisces Iscariot the Pumpkins have taken the next step up on the golden staircase of rock superstardom: the infamous B-side collection album. Yes, that glorious money- making scheme which collects songs that usually were not good enough to make the cut the first time around, keeping the record company execs rolling in green, and the rabid fans drooling.

Not that this move comes as any sort of a surprise. It has been clear from the get-go that Smashing Pumpkins have had more in common with 70s stadium gods like Boston than any post-punk relic. Arena rock polished nice and clean for a thrill-hungry generation.

After listening to 1993's mega-selling Siamese Dream it was easy to imagine a nerdy teenage Billy Corgan alone in his room playing air guitar to Diver Down, imagining the rock n' roll fantasy in his head. Only now, the nerdy twenty-something Corgan is living out those fantasies on stage, and on record. Half the fun was listening to him moan in his best lonely-boy-next-door voice about how "today is greatest day he's never known," and then turning around and letting loose a guitar solo that would make Peter Frampton blush.

Not surprisingly Pisces Iscariot delivers much of the same. Corgan is still whining and rocking like the best of them, but only this time with a little more variety. If Siamese Dream was an exorcism of the band's alternative rock demons, then Iscariot is the group's peaceful foray into the last twenty years of popular rock n' roll history.

Look no further than Corgan's dead-on version of Fleetwood Mac's (one of the band's who helped define the term rock n' roll excess) vintage gem "Landslide," and you will quickly realize Corgan isn't trying to be hip or kitsch. He believes this stuff, and that may just be this album's saving grace.

Not to worry though. Pisces Iscariot is far from any grand departure for the Pumpkins. Their trademark sound (Corgan's boyish voice, Jimmy Chamberlin's aggressive drumming, and the sparkling crescendo's and decrescendo's of the guitars) is still very much intact. Only this time around the group seems more confident of how they want to sound, partly because they are not afraid to be wearing their influences on their sleeves. Maybe these tracks sound more "experimental," due in part that they were never actually slaving out those fantasies on stage, and on record. Half

Turn to SMASHING PUMPKINS, page 9

Dusting out cobwebs inside Mike's brain

By Michael MacLean
Collegian Staff

Welcome to my column, or, more appropriately, welcome to my mind. And while a glimpse into my thoughts can be scary enough, this column hopefully will develop into a not- so frightening glimpse into what is going on in my head as I react to the outside stimuli that is my world.

Ultimately, each column should focus on one facet of life in particular. However, this being the first, there seems to be so much floating around in the vast emptiness up there that a fall cleaning seems to be in order.

Bob and his discount furniture ads, in particular, the one where he is dressed up as a woman. Every time I sit down in front of the T.V. with any type of food I pray that this one doesn't hit the airwaves. And he's always in some factory somewhere in the world where the workers are supposedly making his mattresses. Have you noticed how these workers seem to be staring at the camera a little funny? They all seem to look at Bob like he's some kind of kind of gnome who snuck into the factory overnight and needs to be chased out with a broom.

While on ads, what's up with the Bernie's ad where he is telling you all about his great deals, and jogging? Why is he jogging? I am starting to see a connection here: two guys, each with a name that begins with B, both with discount- type stores, and both with equally inane concepts for ads. Maybe it's some kind of unwritten discount store law.

I can't dwell too long on T.V. because unfortunately, I live in the dorms; yes, it's that twisted University "cable" system that only qualifies as such because it uses a cable. But I really can't complain, Wayne's World and White Men Can't Jump really are better after you see them for the 101st time.

There is something in the air here at UMass, can you feel it? It's a protest waiting to happen. The semester has just been quiet, too quiet if you ask me, we need a new controversy. The new Minuteman, the new Library/Phallus comment — c'mon students, please make us the laughing stock of Beacon Hill for another semester.

I have yet to see Forrest Gump, and I know I may be thought of as a weirdo for not doing so. I just want to get across that I have no desire to see it. It could be all of the negative vibes about it, or that everyone is repeating those inane sayings to no end, but hey, I don't mind if Gump happened to you, just keep it to yourself.

It's the beginning of October, and something is missing, it's the World Series. I'm not the biggest baseball fan but it just seems like the season has a huge void right in the middle without it. It is just a little hard for me to comprehend this whole deal. Salary caps? No-trade clauses? Getting millions to play? Personally, if I could just support myself playing Scrabble it would be a dream come true. Baseball has shot itself in the foot for years to come and hockey could still save itself by learning a thing or two from the result of greed that has rooted itself in America's pastime.

Home over the long weekend, I got a chance to catch up on my MTV viewing, and while the "Jimmy the Cabby" promos just keep getting weirder (ergo, bette VJ Idalis is doing her best to overthrow Jon Secncio in the "VJ that annoys Mike the most competition."

The Official Slacker Handbook has found its way to the Arts desk, and with such pressing issues as eight jobs you can do in your pajamas, 13 things your parents will still pay for and 12 books to tell others you have read, it proves to be perhaps my best reading of the year (and perhaps my only reading of the year besides TV Guide). Someone finally penned a guide to my life — it's about time. I'll let you know when I'm done.

The Front Runner sequel, Harlan's Race, catches up with gay hero

By Alan Flippen
Associated Press

'Runner' novelist finds that her book reaches wide audience

NEW YORK (AP) — Patricia Nell Warren's The Front Runner not only helped thousands of young gays come to terms with their sexuality, it also launched an athletic movement.

Since the late 1970s, some 75 "Front Runners" groups of lesbian and gay amateur runners have sprung up around the country. Warren had nothing to do with the founding of the groups and avoided them for years, out of shyness and a reluctance to be labeled, said Tyler St. Mark, her business partner.

But she had an emotional meeting with them at the Gay Games in New York in June, just after the sequel Harlan's Race was published.

"She just simply walked over very casually, and it wasn't until she raised her arms (for a photographic pose) that people noticed her," said St. Mark, who was present at the event in Central Park. "It was a ripple effect. It was like a wave."

And, ultimately, it was a great round of applause - just like that for her character, Harlan Brown, in his first meeting with the Front Runners, which occurs at the climax of Harlan's Race. If the second novel leads to the founding of any group, it might be the "Gay Panthers." Several characters in the book, despondent over the assassination of Harlan's lover Billy Sive, flirt with forming a mythical terrorist group modeled on the Black Panthers. Warren says the idea was not hers.

"Before I ever wrote this book, I heard 'Gay Panthers' talked about and theorized about," she said.

But no such group exists, and Warren noted, "I point out in the book that, of all the major movements, the gay movement alone has not had its share of violent activists." She said she doesn't know why.

Warren said she first thought of doing a sequel to The Front Runner in the late 1970s, focusing on Billy's son, conceived through artificial insemination after his death. But that project foundered because, to make the son a teen-ager, the book would have had to be set in the early 1990s, then still many years in the future.

"I worked on this for about a year, tried to make it work and it wasn't happening," she says, and realizes now that her decision was correct: "If I wrote the sequel in the late '70s, I would have left out AIDS."

She describes Harlan's Race, which mainly takes place between 1976 and 1981, as a "bridge" between The Front Runner and the book on Billy's son, which will be published next year.

The Front Runner was set largely in the burgeoning gay scene of the early 1970s and, despite its ending, was optimistic, with the gay characters and their supporters triumphing over the athletic establishment, public opinion and even the U.S. Supreme Court, which in the novel struck down sodomy laws. (The real-life high court upheld them in 1986).

Harlan's Race is a different kind of book. Though set in the late '70s, the frantic gay disco-and-sex scene of those years is glimpsed only from a distance. Two characters from the first novel become early victims of AIDS. Harlan himself finds love, but of a much more ambiguous kind than his early romance with Billy.

"Imagine if in real life, you had seen your lover's head blown off on national television," Warren said. "Part of developing the book was really sitting with my character and thinking, 'If this was a real-life situation, where would the story go next and what would be his concerns?'"

All of Warren's previous books were published by major publishers. But for Harlan's Race, she chose to go it alone, setting up her own publishing company and largely creating the book on home computer equipment.

Warren says she was looking for more creative control than authors typically get from a major publishing house.

"We totally created the book from beginning to end. When I hold that book in my hands, that is MY book," she said. "A lot of writers would love to experience that."

In doing so, she gave up the publicity budget and staff that major publishers have. But booksellers say Harlan's Race has been doing just fine regardless.

"It's probably the best-selling, self-published hardcover I can think of in 15 years of bookselling," said Richard Labonte, manager of A Different Light, a gay and lesbian bookstore in San Francisco.

He said it was the summer's second-most-popular title, behind Yale University scholar John Boswell's Same-Sex Unions in Premodern Europe, the controversial book asserting that the early Christian church had ceremonies for same-sex marriage.

"When a book like Same-Sex Unions comes out, it's got a big publisher behind it and a big PR budget," Labonte said.

Harlan's Race, by contrast, seems to be selling largely on word of month.

"I guess a lot of people were waiting for the book," Labonte said. "It's just one of those books that has a built-in audience and that audience hasn't been disappointed."

Hermance agreed: "I'm probably the only gay man on the entire East Coast who not only hasn't read this, but hasn't read The Front Runner."

Warren said she was counting on that reaction to cushion the risk of going it alone. And she said fans of The Front Runner have waited for her again now that they've read the sequel.

"They're kind of like Harlan. They're older, wiser, sometimes a little fatter but sometimes not. They've lost lovers to AIDS. They are not students any more. They're professionals out there in the world."

And they'll have another installment to look forward to: Billy's Boy will be published next year, and will cover developments since 1981. But it will be told by a different narrator: Billy's son, who appears in Harlan's Race only as an inarticulate child.

"It's time to leave Harlan and move on to other points of view," Warren said. "I've been working a lot with gay teen-agers in Los Angeles and it's time to let them have their voice." So does Billy's boy turn out to be gay?

"Read the book and find out," she said.

Uplifting flick overcomes cliche

Robbins, Freeman star in the moving 'Shawshank Redemption'

By Jon Lupo
Collegian Staff

THE SHAWSHANK REDEMPTION
Directed by Frank Darabont with Tim Robbins & Morgan Freeman

Someone once said that prison movies are like a box of cliches — you always know what you're gonna get. Some of those old standards are well on display in The Shawshank Redemption — the sadistic guard, the evil warden, the birdman of Alcatraz homage, etc. But it's a credit to Frank Darabont, Redemption's screenwriter and director, that he meshes the cliches into involving, even effective, melodrama.

If you haven't gotten the idea from the almost pious TV ads (or the near-shameless title), Redemption is full of despair and hope; real triumph of the human spirit stuff. It succeeds in spite of all this; in fact, maybe because of it. Usually, this brand of sentiment sinks before it swims, drowning in its own earnestness. And yet Redemption earns its title with a steady hand, sure direction and a finely- written script.

Culled from a short story by Stephen King (the King of Stand by Me, not the King of Sleepwalkers), The Shawshank Redemption recounts the story of a falsely convicted killer (Tim Robbins) and his years of abuse and triumph in a Maine prison. The film also focuses on Robbins' relationship with a fellow inmate (Morgan Freeman) over the numerous decades.

When Robbins first arrives at Shawshank, he's branded a loner. Sexually-assaulted by some rough prisoners, Robbins slowly comes out of his shell. He uses his financial knowledge (he was a banker before being incarcerated) to do the guards' taxes and eventually scis up a money-laundering scheme for the warden. He also, by the way, revamps the prison library (one inmate refers to the author of The Count of Monte Cristo as Alexandre Dumb-ass) and tutors other inmates for their high school diplomas.

And yet for all of this action, Robbins' characters remains somewhat of a cipher; to say that he's cagey is more than just a bad pun. While it's his character we're clearly meant to root for, the film finds its emotional core in the relationship between Robbins and Freeman. It's their "love story" that ends up giving the film the emotional weight.

Freeman, with his low voice and world-weary tone, gives the best performance here, even if he's played this role (sage sidekick to white hero) so often he's almost becoming a genre unto himself. He delivers a great line about how longtime prisoners become "institutionalized" to the point where they become dependent on the system instead of rehabilitated by it. It's a powerful statement, but more inportantly, it's followed up in the film as it details life after being released for a prisoner incarcerated for 40 years.

Yet for all of the film's emotional truths, it delivers a doozy of a false note. The most obvious occurs when Robbins, having locked himself in the warden's office, plays Mozart over the yard loudspeaker. The prisoners all look up (at the same time) in some sort of collective awe, the soundtrack swells, and it's all a pure load of crap. And must all the supporting players remain stock stereotypes? Haven't we had enough of psycho guards and, "What we've got here is a failure to communicate"-type wardens?

The Shawshank Redemption is the kind of film easy to overrate but hard to dismiss. It's not the "monumental achievement" one critic dubbed in the film's print ads, but it is, in its own quiet way, a feat of moviemaking not usually attempted in this day and age of stunt-filled "epics" about dumb guys triumphing over history. The guys in The Shawshank Redemption are triumphing over something more difficult, making their journey all the more laudable — and all the harder to forget. B+

COURTESY MICHAEL WEINSTEIN

Morgan Freeman and Tim Robbins play inmates who form a longtime friendship over the decades they spend in prison in The Shawshank Redemption, a film based on a short story by Stephen King.

Sylvester Stallone bombs out again

By Daniel Pellegrini
Collegian Staff

THE SPECIALIST
Directed by Luis Llosa
with Sylvester Stallone, Sharon Stone,
James Woods & Eric Roberts

I told myself after seeing that prepostorous Charlie Sheen movie The Chase last winter that I should go a little soft on the obviously worthless pictures and try not to give out another F grade. So much for self-discipline.

The movie is The Specialist, starring Sylvester Stallone and Sharon Stone. It's this year's third installment in a tragically declining series of plotless, mindless "bomb" movies that started with Speed, the one-dimensional but spicy Keanu Reeves film that did for public transportation what Jaws did for the water. Next came Blown Away, the lame bomb squad flick that forced Jeff Bridges into impersonating the worst psycho guards and, "What we've got here is a failure to communicate"-type wardens?

The Shawshank Redemption is the kind of film easy to overrate but hard to dismiss. It's not the "monumental achievement" one critic dubbed in the film's print ads, but it is, in its own quiet way, a feat of moviemaking not usually attempted in this day and age of stunt-filled "epics" about dumb guys triumphing over history. The guys in The Shawshank Redemption are triumphing over something more difficult, making their journey all the more laudable — and all the harder to forget. B+

In The Specialist, Stallone plays an ex-special forces bomb expert who's trying to break free from his current lifestyle as a sort of vigilante hit man, or "specialist." Along comes Adrian (Sharon Stone), who, via telephone, seduces Sly into getting her revenge against the Miami drug family who killed her family as a child. Now Stallone must track down the drug family and, uhh, blow them up.

This is a laughable (several of the film's action sequences you will genuinely laugh at), miserable excuse for a dim- witted Hollywood action movie. Seeing this film brought me painfully back to a time when I would get excited over those Golan-Globus films from the mid-'80s like Missing in Action or Invasion U.S.A. Actually, The Specialist is more reminiscent to sofi-core pornography in the way that it's scripted — everybody speaks in these heavy, melodramatic whispers and moves as if the whole film is in slow-motion. If this movie had a no name cast, it could have easily made a late-night showtime movie called "Explosions of Lust" or something.

I didn't expect much more from Stallone, but Sharon Stone will really have to clean up her act if she expects to survive the filming of Martin Scorsese's Casino, currently in production with Robert DeNiro and Joe Pesci. Shame on both Rod Steiger and James Woods for appearing in the movie. And Eric Roberts, who right now should be praying for a Pope of Greenwich Village sequel, walks away from this disaster with the sleaze/cheeze bad guy of the year award. I could cry.

One can only ask oneself how a movie like The Specialist can get made nowadays. Like I said before, I tried to give mercy, but I really don't think I'd be doing this movie any justice if I let it pass. And you know, I heard this crazy rumor that this was number one at the box office last weekend. F

COURTESY TRISTAR PICTURES

Sylvester Stallone (shown here in Cliffhanger) bombs out in The Specialist.

■ smashing pumpkins

continued from page 8

ed to appear on any actual album, maybe they are just Corgan's indulgent exercises. Either way this compilation of B-sides, unlike most others, amazingly holds up as both a vision into the band's more traditional rock sounding side, and a completely coherent album.

Not that there isn't some self-indulgent garbage fluttering throughout. About 30 seconds into the track "Space" and you realize Corgan really is indeed the biggest art-rock geek since David Bowie. But the simple fact of the matter is Pisces Iscariot contains some of the most daring songs the Pumpkins have put on tape. "Frail & Bedazzled" would have been the most stunning track had it been put on the band's now famous debut Gish, while "Girl Named Sandoz" may just be the best unreleased Foghat track ever.

Songs such as "Soothe," "Whir" and "Blew Away" reveal a more stripped down version of the Pumpkins that was unfortunately left off their previous, way over-produced albums. The latter even contains a dash of southern-style guitar reminiscent of (!) The Eagles. Even the slightly over the top "Starla" (clocking in at a brutal 11 minutes) somehow works even with its overly retro psychedelic motif.

With Pisces Iscariot, Smashing Pumpkins have deftly dodged critical heckling by releasing a compilation album that is actually worthy of being grouped with their studio releases. By not peppering the album with half-hearted throw-a-ways, but rather showing somewhat of a different side, they have opened up an avenue for possible new directions.

Sure, Pisces Iscariot is a shameless stab an making money, but these guys are big rock stars now. Accept it, and enjoy. A-

Pearl Street Northampton

• WEDNESDAY •
GAY NIGHT
MUSIC BY SPIN INC

• Thursday •
18+ DANCE PARTY
HOSTED BY WMMP'S NICK DANGER
The Area's Biggest Dance Party
Music by Spin Inc

• Friday •
RETRO NIGHT
Dance Music From the Late 70s & early 80s with DJ Dennis
9:00pm-1:00pm
Free Admission With This Ad
Duran Duran, Wham!, Missing Persons, Rick James, Blondie, Human League, Funkadelic

• Saturday •
TOP 40 DANCE PARTY
WITH DJ LANCE
SATURDAY NIGHT DINNER & DANCE PROMOTION
Date showtime in Northampton on Saturday night, bring your ex and receive free admission to the Dance Club

LIVE MUSIC

Thur., Oct 13 - 7:00pm / 18+
LUCIOUS JACKSON
Ben Harper

Thur., Oct 13 - 9:00pm / 18+
THE LUNACHICK'S
Angry Johnny & The Killbillies
Sons of the Carpenter Boy
Cameron's Way

FESTIVAL LOUISIANA / WRSU
Sun., Oct 16 - 8:00 pm / 18+
THE RADIATORS
Synaesthesia

Mon., Oct 17 - 8:00 pm
BUCKWHEAT ZYDECO

Thur., Oct 20 - 8:00 pm / 18+
SKAVOOVEE '94
The Toasters
The Scofflaws / The Pietasters
Spring Heeled Jack

Fri., Oct 21 - 8:00 pm / 18+
MAX CREEK

Sat., Oct 22 - 8:00 pm
JOHN CAFFERTY & THE BEAVER BROWN BAND

Sun., Oct 23 - 8:00 pm / 18+
DEEE-LITE

Tue., Oct 25 - 8:00 pm / WRSU
KOKO TAYLOR
Mark Nomad Band

Thur., Oct 27 - 8:00 pm / WRSU
FRENTE!
Gigolo Aunts / Home

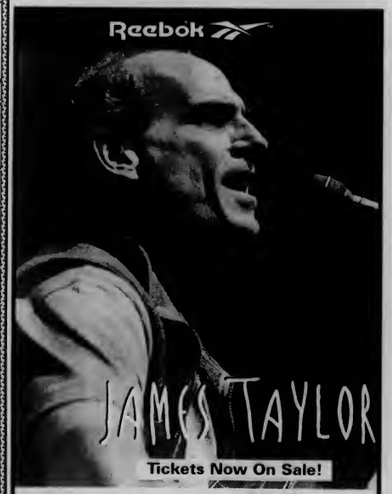
Fri., Oct 28 - 8:00 pm
BLACK 47

Coming ...
10/29 EXTREMEOS HALLOWEEN PARTY
10/31 BRAGODLER
11/03 BIM SKALA BIM / 18+
11/05 JAMES COTTON
11/11 HEAVY METAL HORNS
11/12 PHYSICAL GRAFFITI / 18+
11/13 THE PROCLAIMERS
11/15 G. LOVES SPECIAL SAUCE / 18+

Advance Tickets Available at The Northampton Box Office, For the Record in Amherst, Strawberries Record Stores, and Tix Unlimited at U. Mass. To Charge by phone call 586-8686.

10 Pearl Street, Northampton 584-7771

Reebok



JAMES TAYLOR
Tickets Now On Sale!
NOVEMBER 16
7:30pm $20* Includes 5% facility surcharge
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
Tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office and all Ticketmaster locations. *An additional service charge will be paid to and retained by ticket company on all purchases at outlets or by telephone. Presented by Tea Party® Concerts
CALL FOR TICKETS TICKETMASTER (413) 733-2500

We Deliver to UMass
Kai Chi
Chinese - American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
LATE NIGHT DINNER SPECIAL!
UP TO 30% OFF!
Friday, Saturday & Sunday • 9pm - Closing
No other promos apply / Not available for Take Out
Entrees Starting at $4.50
Kai Chi Restaurant
MT. FARMS MALL • RT 9 • HADLEY • 586-2774
Open Sun. - Thurs. 11:30am - 11:00pm
Fri. - Sat. 11:30am - midnight

Test Your Detector for life!

Fire Prevention Week
October 9-15
1994
National Fire Protection Association
Batterymarch Park, Quincy MA 02269
BEE BOP
If you've got a good vibe you can snap your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum.
Mass Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

Halloween Stuff Here!
Come See For Yourself!
JOKE CITY
Funniest Store In the World
233 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 549-8114

ATTENTION UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS:

STUDENTS WHO ARE PLANNING ON PICKING UP CHECKS AT BURSAR TELLERS' WINDOWS IN WHITMORE PLEASE NOTICE:

IF YOU HAVE NO FINANCIAL AID AND ARE ONLY LOOKING FOR THE REFUND CHECK FROM THE CURRICULUM FEE REDUCTION:
DO NOT STAND IN LINE

THESE CHECKS ARE BEING MAILED OUT.

FOR ALL OTHER CHECKS GO TO THE BURSAR TELLERS' WINDOWS AS USUAL.

Karen Lee Shelley, Bursar

KATINA'S NIGHTCLUB
#1 LIGHTSHOW IN THE AREA!
EVERY SUNDAY LIVE SHOWS •ALL AGES•
EVERY THURS./SAT. Selectrocution 18+
EVERY MONDAY GAY PRIDE 18+
EVERY FRIDAY 18+ COLLEGE DANCE PARTY
Hosted by UMass' own Frats & Sororities

NO WHEELS? NO PROBLEM!
There will be a shuttle provided that leaves Haigis Mall in front of FAC every 15 minutes starting at 9pm every Th., Fri. & Sat.
VISA MASTERCARD ACCEPTED
ROUTE 9, HADLEY
IN THE HEART OF THE 5 COLLEGE AREA
586-4463

■ tattoos

continued from page 5

weird."

But now the nose ring has been retired. "Responsibilities change," Rodriguez said. "You don't know what it's going to look like because in a month I'm going to graduate and get a serious job. It's not a good impression for older people in their '40s and '50s who aren't used to it and won't accept it. They won't take me seriously," said Rodriguez.

Susan Micheman, a professor in the Consumer Studies department at UMass shed some light on some of the possible reasons for why people get various appendages pierces and body parts tattooed.

"From an academic perspective, a lot of the times people got tattooed and pierced when they were in a transitional phase in their lives," said Micheman. "It was a physical and tangible way of showing change during a point of self- exploration."

It also has something to do with where the mark or hole is located.

"An interesting feature shared by both is that people show their tattoos and piercings and some don't." Micheman said. "Where somebody wants to put a tattoo on their body has to do with how they want to see the tattoo in relation to their public appearance; how you would choose to show yourself to anybody, as opposed to their private [appearance]. If it is private it can give the person flexibility, where and when they want to show it."

With tattooing and piercing becoming so mainstream, it is not surprising that model Christy Turlington showed off her navel ring in Vogue magazine, nor that Stephanie Seymour flaunted her ankle tattoo in the Victoria's Secret catalog. The question asked is will these two forms of personal expression become a novelty of the past, as the big hair of the early '80s?

"I think there is a fashion component but I don't think it's just fashion," Micheman commented. "People are always interested in showing their identity and people still enjoy it. People are always looking for new ways to customize the body."

Body piercing artist Michael, who works at Hubba Hubba in Cambridge, has a different view on the increased popularity of his craft.

"On the one hand it's good for my wallet, but in terms of hurting the art form [it] absolutely [is]. For the most part, they [those who wish to have body parts pierced] want to get their belly button pierced because their friends will think they are cool instead of the spiritual experience, which is what piercing is really about," said Michael.

"I make it a point to tell customers of the rich tribal background in piercing. I don't want them going away thinking that piercing was invented by Madonna," said Michael. "Piercing has ancient roots. The navel pierce has direct ties to ancient Egyptian culture, and the Labrette (pierce between the lip and the chin) has and is still being performed by various South American Indian tribes."

A professional tattoo artist from Boston the could not give his name as tattooing is illegal in Massachusetts) says that while it makes no difference to him, many people get the wrong tattoos for the wrong reasons.

"It's good for me financially, but a lot of customers don't understand the personal relationship between the body and the tattoo," said the source. "They come in and get 'Hash Art' like panthers and rock band logos. There are going to be a lot of sorry adults in the year 2010."

Hopefully by the time you read this, Jackie Jones, a 20-year-old junior, won't be sorry that she got her eyebrow pierced for the third time in the last year. The reason for her multiple piercings has less to do with body expression than it does with Jones' toughest critics: her parents.

"The first time I went home for Christmas break my dad told me to take it out," Jones said. Yet she tried it again. Why would anybody go through the bothersome ordeal and resulting pain that comes with piercing again?

"I want it now while I'm in college because I think piercing is a youthful thing," she replied.

But her eyebrow?

"It's typically weird, and when I got it done the first time hardly anyone had it. I felt that you didn't have to fit a certain mold to get one," Jones said. "In college, I want to be distinguished from the other 20,000 other students at UMass. I want to keep society on its toes."

■ television

continued from page 5

Show" slot to boring talk show veteran Tom Snyder, is give Crispin Glover a shot at refining his conversational and kick-boxing skills. Hey, I would watch.

Elsewhere on the late night television scene, I was very disappointed to learn how rumors are flying fast and furious that (despite improving ratings) "Late Night" host Conan O'Brien may soon be replaced by Greg Kinnear — the smarmy and annoying current host of "Later." O'Brien has always amused me with his nerdy, off-beat style, and I just don't understand why NBC is in such a rush to dump him for a guy whose whole personality is like a bad David Letterman imitation.

I think if I had to pick the most inane, non-sensical, purely dumb talk show, I would choose "The Ricki Lake Show." Where does Ricki dig up these people, anyway? I mean, maybe this country is just filled to the rim with brain-dead women who will tolerate their mutant husbands beating them up, impregnating their sisters, and skinning the family dog. But even if that's true, I'm still astonished that anyone would agree to go on national television to reveal such embarrassing conditions of existence. Maybe they don't have the brainpower to be embarrassed, or something.

And some of them don't even fix themselves up for the camera or anything — like a couple of weeks ago when Ricki had on a guy who had only three teeth. I counted. If I was him, I would have stuck chicklets gum, or something in there so I wouldn't look quite so bad. I guess he hadn't discovered the joys of fluoride yet. Some people have more trouble with the modern age than others.

Piano Man

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

Pianist Nigel Coxe will tickle the ivories at the Bezanson Recital Hall on Oct. 18 at 8 p.m. Coxe will play a concert entitled "Ravel's World." The program will include early works by Ravel as well as selections from Bach, Haydn and Liszt. Call 545-2511 for ticket info.

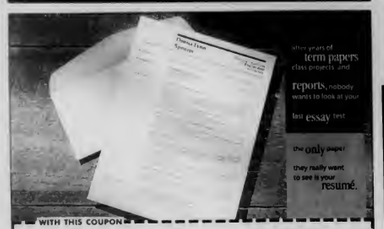
ATTENTION ADVERTISERS:

Thank you for helping the following Advertising Reps exceed their goal....

#1 Jennifer Geagan
#2 Kara Kilduff
#3 Tracy Katzman

Honorable Mention
Eric Abenaim
Cindy Connolly

Watch For Your Ad Rep Next Week



WITH THIS COUPON
$29.95 professional resumé package
Bring this coupon into the Kinko's listed and receive a $29.95 Professional Resumé Package includes one page typeset and provided to you on disk, 25 copies on fine stationery, 25 matching blank sheets (for cover letters), and 25 #10 envelopes. One coupon per customer. Not valid with other offers. Coupon good through November 15, 1994
AMHERST: 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2543. Open 24 Hours
NORTHAMPTON: 34 Bridge St. 585-5000 (A mile from the Post Office) HOURS: 6am to 12
kinko's the copy center

You are invited to participate in A WORKSHOP
CONFRONTING ANTI-SEMITISM ON THE COLLEGE CAMPUS
Sunday, October 16, 1994
1:00pm - 4:00pm
KEYNOTE SPEAKER: LEONARD ZAKIM
Director, ADL New England Regional Office
DISCUSSION GROUP TOPICS:
Anti-Semitism & Supporting the Individual Student
Building a Campus Climate Positive to Jewish Concerns
The Challenge of High Profile
Anti-Semitic Speakers: Creating Coalitions
Hillel House
388 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst
413/549-1710
The workshop is free.
CO-SPONSORS:
UMass Hillel, ADL New England Regional Office, ADL Department of Campus Affairs/Higher Education, The Bnai B'rith Hillel Foundation for Jewish Campus Life, Samuel and Mildred Levine Institute to Combat Bigotry on Campus, and UMass Office of Human Relations

SHOOT FOR THE COLLEGIAN
New photographers are always welcome at the Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England
COME DOWN TO THE COLLEGIAN • 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT
TALK TO NATHAN MARVIN, PHOTO EDITOR

Research Interviewers
Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Monday-Friday, 5pm-10pm. Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 1pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hr with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Interested candidates, please call between 9am-7pm, Monday-Friday: (413) 586-6615.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer
Abt

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Lunch and Dinner Buffet
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful newly remodeled facility including our Sunny Greenhouse.
"Largest Chinese Restaurant in Hampshire County"
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30 AM - 10 PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS TILL 11 PM
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte. 9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte. 9 & University Drive • 256-8800

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

This 2 session program (classes one week apart) includes information on exercise, some anatomy, massage, treatment options, posture tips and pain relief methods.
Wednesday, October 26 and November 2
6:00-8:00 p.m.
University Health Center
Room 302
For Information and Registration
Call UHS Physical Therapy at 549-2671 ext. 158

AS THE LEAVES FALL, SO DO THE PRICES AT SCOTTS!!
Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m. Tel: 549-2629
BUSCH 24-12oz Bar Bottles $9.49 +dep
GENUINE DRAFT & G.D. LIGHT 24-12oz Bar Bottles $10.99 +dep
KEYSTONE & KEYSTONE LIGHT 24 - 12oz Cans $8.79 +dep
POPOV VODKA 1.75l $10.49
ICE HOUSE 12 pack bottles $6.99 +dep
BUD ICE, BUD, BUD LT 1/2 Kegs $39.99
JENKINS RUM (Great for punch) 1.75l $10.99
AMERICAN 24-12oz Cans $7.29 +dep
MasterCard VISA DISCOVER
Tele-Check for your personal check
We Want To Be Your Favorite Liquor Store!
6 University Drive
at Newmarket Center, Amherst
We now have all Mass Lottery games

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

We are now taking applications for the paid position of

Developing Nations Editor

UMass undergraduate students familiar with issues affecting the Developing Nations community on both a local and global level are invited and encouraged to apply.

Interested students should stop by the Daily Collegian office, 113 Campus Center, and talk to Managing Editor Art Stapleton Jr.

Applications are due by 3 p.m. Friday, Oct. 14

BE A TEACHER.
BE A HERO.
Call 1-800-45-TEACH.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
for travel beginning November 1
One Way Round Trip
LONDON $183 $345
PARIS $214 $428
MADRID $250 $500
SAN JOSE/ COSTA RICA $224 $448
Rounding
TOKYO $749
Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Eurail passes issued on the spot.
Customs, immigration & departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Full-time student ID cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*

Is Your Smoke Detector Working?
CHANGE YOUR CLOCK
CHANGE YOUR BATTERY

ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Treasures 584-8435
Thurs. & Fri. at 7:00 & 9:15
(NO REGULAR SHOWING Sat. or Sun.)
HOWEVER
LATE SHOW SAT. 11:30
Our Box-office Opens at 9:00 pm
THEN GO SEE THE MOVIE CRITICS ARE CALLING
"THE FEEL-GOOD MOVIE OF THE YEAR!"
"ONE OF THE WILDEST MOVIES EVER MADE!"
Priscilla QUEEN OF THE DESERT
AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

INCO
Instituto Internacional de Cobán
Guatemala
Learn Spanish by the "natural approach"
•One instructor per student
•Individualized curriculum
•Year-around, begin any Mon.
•Bilingual rep meets you airport
•Special winter rate: Room & board with local family, 20 hours instruction per wk, two excursions per week — just $120 per week!
—In Guatemala contact
Manolo Sanchez, Ed.D., Dir.
Apartado Postal #22
Cobán, A.V. 16001
Tel/Fax: 011-502-9-511-497
—In USA for free brochure:
Dr. Calvin Gruver
TEL: 612-252-0036
FAX: 612-654-0632

Available at: Store 24, Christy's, GNC, Star Market and Participating Sports Specialty Retailers

FUEL FOR OPTIMUM PERFORMANCE
Low-fat Sustained Energy
Suggested Retail: $1.69
Fat: 2.5 grams
Protein: 42 grams
Carbohydrate: 43 grams
In Chocolate, Malt-Nut, Wild Berry and Apple-Cinnamon flavors.
For a 12-page Guide to Nutrition and Energy, call 800-444-5154.
PowerBar.

4 Seasons
Thank you for your patronage The Krupczak Family
Rte.9 • Hadley • 584-8174
HOURS: MONDAY - SATURDAY 9:00-11:00
SALE THRU 10/19/94
Not Responsible For Typographical Errors
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE

1/2 BBL BUD, MICHELOB $39.99 +Dep	1/2 BBL LITE ICE, M.G.D. $39.99 +Dep	1/2 BBL NATURAL LT $32.99 +Dep	1/2 BBL ICEHOUSE $39.99 +Dep	1/2 BBL BUSCH $36.99 +Dep	1/2 BBL ROLLING ROCK $43.99 +Dep	KEG OF THE WEEK! 1/2 BUD LT $36.99 +Dep
BUSCH & LT 24-12 oz. cans $9.99 +Dep	BUD DRY 24-12 oz. bott. $10.99 +Dep	GO UMASS!		BUSCH 24-12 oz. Bar Bott. $8.99 +Dep	ICEHOUSE 24-12 oz. Bott. $12.99 +Dep	M.G.D. & LT 24-12 oz. Bar Bott. $10.99 +Dep	AMERICAN 24-12 oz. cans $7.29 +Dep
PALO VIEJO RUM $5.99 .750 ml	REBEL YELL BOURBON $8.99 .750 ml	CAPTAIN MORGAN RUM $15.49 1.75 l	MALIBU RUM $8.99 .750 ml	MIDNIGHT MADNESS!!		M.D. 20/20 $1.99 .750 ml	ZHENKA VODKA $8.99 1.75 l

Campus Perspectives

Compiled By Tim White • Photos By Daymion Smith

How are you going to use your tuition refund money?

"I already spent it on my girlfriend. We went out and had a good time."

–GEORGE T. GEORGES
sophomore
environmental engineering

"Buy food, and new wheels for my rollerblades."

–SANDY KIM
junior journalism

"I'm putting it in my bank and saving it, gaining some interest, and putting it towards some new wheels. I need a car."

–JOHN FELO
sophomore
School of Management

"I'm putting it in my Madonna fan collection account, and buying more Madonna stuff."

–CHRIS SAVASTANO
pre-Med
junior

"I'm buying books and a plane ticket to go home for Thanksgiving."

–WEMANE HAGOS
junior engineering

"I went out to bars in White Plains [New York] this weekend."

–TRAVIS BOULEY
sophomore
HRTA

Book NOW for the holidays!

LONDON $173

AMSTERDAM	$215
PARIS	$229
MILAN	$239
TEL AVIV	$369
CARACAS	$215
BANGKOK	$468

Fares are each way based on a round trip purchase from Boston. Student or Faculty ID may be required. Taxes and surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.

79 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-1261

On the day of the apocalypse God finally revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her Mrs Pretty make up kit in the 3rd grade.
Mass Daily Collegian
Make America Now

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湖園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 p.m.
Sunday Brunch 11 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3 p.m. - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

BIG GUY LIQUORS
BIG ON FRIENDLY SERVICE
549-3555 RTE 63

AVIA WHITE ZIN 2 FOR $5.00	ICEHOUSE 12OZ. BOTTLES $15.79 + Dep
16 oz Budweiser Bottles $14.99 + Dep	LIONS HEAD 12 OZ. BOTTLES $8.79case + Dep.

F.Y.I.
Bring your listing down to the Newsroom, and we'll make sure it runs in Amherst's only Daily Calendar
If it happens in Amherst, it's in the DAILY COLLEGIAN

Anthony's
Adult Entertainment With A Touch Of Class.

NOW SHOWING
First Time Ever In Anthony's History!
Double Feature
Formerly the Ray Sisters & Nina Hartley

Oct 11-15

Special Seating For 18+ Positive ID Required

Now Hiring New Entertainers
MON - WED: 4pm-2am
THURS - SAT: 12pm-2am
CLOSED SUNDAYS

500 New Ludlow Rd., South Hadley
Exit 5 MA Pike to 33 North. Take right at Jiffy Lube, 1/2 mile on left.
413 536-0502
RH1094

ZETA BETA TAU PRODUCTIONS PRESENTS
OLD SCHOOL PARTY JAM '94
FEATURING
REB BASE
DRINK SPECIALS ALL NIGHT LONG
TICKETS $8 18 TO PARTY 21 TO DRINK
BUSSES WILL RUN EVERY HALF HOUR FROM THE SOUTHWEST HORSESHOE STARTING AT 8:00P.M. THEY WILL ALSO BE GOING FROM KATINA'S TO THE MULLINS CENTER, FOR MIDNIGHT MADNESS.
FRIDAY OCTOBER 14,1994 8:00PM
AT KATINA'S NIGHT CLUB
FOR TICKET INFO CALL ERIC 253-3068 OR BARRY 546-5525
Tickets will also be sold today in the Campus Center

Guido

continued from page 15

long. Tennessee QB Peyton Manning has begun to come into his own, while Jay Barker has been up and down for the Tide. Barker dueled with Georgia's Eric Zeier two weeks ago, only to sputter last week. Once again, the Volunteers will stack the line to stop Sherman Williams. Can Barker respond? Not this week, the mirrors will break for the Tide.

Florida 33, Auburn 17 — The first loss ever for Terry Bowden as a head coach. Terry Dean gets recognition if he can torch the Tiger defense. Like father, like son, watch Steve Spurrier manipulate Bowden. The Gators will have a field day.

Penn State 28, Michigan 23 — The game of the day. The Nittany Lions lead the nation in scoring, averaging 51.6 points per game. The health of the two star running backs is an issue. Ki-Jana Carter has a dislocated thumb but shouldn't miss any time. Tyrone Wheatley is back and piling up big numbers for the Wolverines.

Penn State has more weapons, and a healthy defense. Watch for Bobby Engram to explode at wide receiver and stretch the defense for Carter. With Joe Paterno coaching against Gary Moeller, that might be all you need to know. Paterno can sense a national championship; the Nittany Lions will pass their biggest test of the year.

Anthony Guido is a Collegian columnist.

rivalry

continued from page 15

Up to yesterday, that was the last time Massachusetts had lost at home.

But perhaps what sets this rivalry apart from most rivalries is the mutual respect the two teams have for each other. Before the match, Rudy trotted over to the Hartford bench to shake hands with Daniels.

This type of action rubs off on the players from both sides, as each team uses the other to push itself further.

"Each of us is always up for each other, always ready," said Rotondi.

And yesterday, the 500-plus spectators that dotted the hill and filled the bleachers at Garber Field were treated to another chapter in this rivalry. Just one small chapter in the overall rivalry, because these two teams will surely meet up again.

"I told the team to look at the scoreboard and remember it...," said Rudy.

"We'll probably see them again in the [NCAA] Regionals," said Refer.

The history continues to grow. The respect is mutual. Unique in its own way, Hartford and Massachusetts have one special rivalry.

Oliete

continued from page 15

for a scoring opportunity, and somebody else was a little bit more open, I will still pass it."

"Adolfo has steadily developed through his four years here. I think he is one of the most knowledgeable players we have," said Yarworth. "When he's got his head in the game, he is as good as any player in the East."

"He gives us a lot of versatility because he can s... two meters, he can drive and can play good defense. He's certainly a good leader on our team, and that's what we need out of him."

This unselfish attitude that exhibits Oliete's personality is key not just in water polo and other team sports, but also effects every aspect of a person's life. The lifestyle that has become the game of water polo for Adolfo Oliete, as he stated, will always continue with him. He hopes to still compete for club teams until his body tells him not to.

But what it more important to Oliete is to take his Finance major and start a life here in the United States. After his mandatory military service in Spain, that is.

SAT

continued from page 15

Currently, incoming athletes must meet both the standardized test score and the grade-point requirements.

The council stopped short of making a decision on awarding a fourth year of eligibility to partial qualifiers. There is strong sentiment in some corners of the athletic community to award a fourth year to partial qualifiers who make substantial progress in school.

"The council expressed an interest in an opportunity for a discussion and debate on all of the proposals, in particular the fourth year of competition for partial qualifiers who make academic progress,"said Joseph Crowley, president of the council and president of the University of Nevada-Reno.

"I think this is one of those issues that doesn't fit into a comfortable niche in terms of the debate over academic standards," Crowley said.

The question has been voted upon during each of the past five NCAA conventions. Crowley said it was coming closer and closer to being approved.

The council also reversed itself and withdrew its support for a sliding scale in which a lower test score could be compensated for by a higher grade-point. A committee had recommended that the request be denied, and Crowley said the 44-member Council went along via a voice vote.

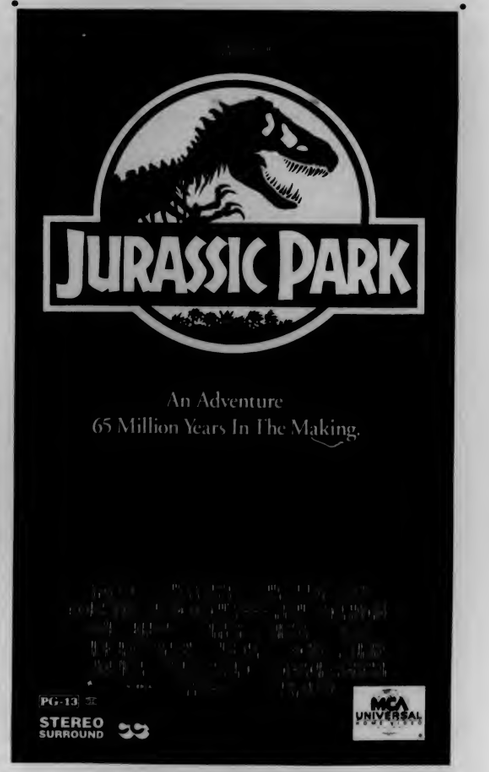
In other moves, the council refused to grant a University of Idaho request for a waiver of stadium size rules that would have allowed it to move up to Division I.

SUPER STOP & SHOP VIDEO CENTER
HADLEY SUPER STOP & SHOP
456 Russell Street
Hadley, MA

SIDEWALK SALE
Saturday and Sunday
October 15th & 16th!

ENTER TO WIN GREAT PRIZES
BLOW OUT PRICES ON MOVIES AND VIDEOGAMES, BOTH NEW AND PREVIOUSLY VIEWED

★NOW SHOWING★



"Seeing it once is not enough."

READINGS BY ABBY
PALM TAROT & ESP READING
HELPS SOLVE ALL PROBLEMS OF LIFE. HELPS YOU THROUGH YOUR GOOD AND BAD CYCLES OF LIFE. TELLS YOU LUCKY DAYS AND LUCKY MONTHS. ONE VISIT WILL CONVINCE YOU THAT SHE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL READERS YOU HAVE SEEN BEFORE.
All readings Confidential and Results Guaranteed.
HOURS: 9 A.M. TO 9 P.M.
210 Russell Street
Route 9
Hadley, MA 01035
(413) 586-6711
Walk in's are Welcome

VALLEY MOTORSPORTS
Rt. 5 Northampton, MA 01060
413/584-7303 • 800/649-9965
HONDA Kawasaki YAMAHA DUCATI
WINTER STORAGE AVAILABLE
Scooters • Generators
Snow Blowers • Jetmate
Motorcycles • ATV's
Lawn Mowers • Jet Skis
Snowmobiles

YOUR FAVORITE BANDS ON YOUR CHEST
PEARL JAM, WHITE SHIRT #3032
ALICE IN CHAINS, OFF-WHITE SHIRT #3003
GREEN DAY, BLACK SHIRT #1018
MEAT PUPPETS, WHITE SHIRT #3028
LEMONHEADS, WHITE SHIRT #1023
LIVE, LINE SHIRT #1024
PANTERA, BLACK SHIRT #4029
CANDLEBOX, BLACK SHIRT #2013
RAGE AGAINST THE MACHINE WHITE SHIRT, #2036
BEASTIE BOYS, BLACK SHIRT #1010
SOUNDGARDEN
SOUNDGARDEN, BLACK SHIRT #1037
STONE TEMPLE PILOTS, WHITE SHIRT #2045
WEIGHT
ROLLINS BAND, NAVY SHIRT #3034

ALL SHIRTS ARE AVAILABLE IN L AND XL UNLESS OTHERWISE NOTED

USE YOUR VISA, MASTERCARD, OR DISCOVER CARD TO ORDER BY PHONE
WE HAVE TONS OF OTHER SHIRTS. CALL US! (413) 746 6877 FROM THE FIVE COLLEGES AREA, DIAL 1 413 FIRST

TO ORDER BY MAIL...
- FILL OUT THIS FORM, DETACH, AND MAIL
- WRITE THE ITEM NUMBER, BAND NAME, AND SIZE YOU WANT FOR EACH SHIRT
- SEND CHECK OR MONEY ORDER FOR $15.00 FOR EACH SHIRT, OR USE YOUR CREDIT CARD
- INCLUDE $3.00 FOR POSTAGE PER ORDER
- MA RESIDENTS NEED TO ADD 5% SALES TAX
- MAKE CHECK PAYABLE TO C.S.I.

VISA, MASTERCARD, AND DISCOVER
CARD NUMBER -
EXPIRES - SIGNATURE -
SHIRT 1 -
SHIRT 2 -
NAME -
ADDRESS -
CITY - STATE - ZIP -
CYPRESS SLOUGH, INC. 40 LINCOLN STREET SPRINGFIELD MA 01109 (413) 746 6877

ANNOUNCING THE DISCOVER® CARD $25 NEW MEMBER REBATE.

(Hurry, it won't be here for long.)

Apply for the Discover® Card
by November 10.
Spend $75. Get $25 back*.
NO Annual Fee.

IF YOU DON'T GOT IT, GET IT.℠

MEMBER NOVUS NETWORK ©1994 Greenwood Trust Company, Member FDIC

*This offer valid for Discover Card applications received by 11/10/94, that are approved and enrolled between 9/31 and 11/31/94. Offer valid for purchases made by 3/31/95. Cash advances/balance transfers excluded. Offer limited to one rebate per account.

WHERE TO GO TO GET IT:

Bookstore, 9am - 5pm, Thursday & Friday, October 13 & 14

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Waterson

HOBBES, DO YOU THINK OUR MORALITY IS DEFINED BY OUR ACTIONS, OR BY WHAT'S IN OUR HEARTS?
I THINK OUR ACTIONS SHOW WHAT'S IN OUR HEARTS
I RESENT THAT!

Jim's Journal By Jim

Bruno By C. Baldwin

THANKS, PAUL, FOR LETTING ME STAY AT YOUR PLACE 'TILL I FIND MYSELF MY OWN.
SURE BRUNO, OH HEY, THIS IS BOURBON STREET THAT WE JUST TURNED ON TO.
REALLY? GEEZE... IS ALL OF NEW ORLEANS AS FILLED WITH GAY CULTURE AS THE FRENCH QUARTER?
IS THERE LOTS OF GAYS AROUND HERE? I HADN'T NOTICED.
ME BOO! I'M DIDN'T NOTICE! I GUESS I FORGOT. HOW AUGHTY THE HAPPY VALLEY MAKES YOU OF THAT BREEZE.
OR ELSE IT MAKES YOU SEE THINGS THAT AREN'T ACTUALLY THERE.
WHAT I LIKE THE FACT THAT YOU AREN'T "ACTUALLY" WEARING PHYSICAL BLINDERS? I CAN SEE THAT.
FINE! HAVE IT YOUR WAY
OKAY

Stick-Man By Matt Bellucci

THIS IS STICK-MAN. HE'S A SUPER-HERO. HE ENJOYS BEATING-UP BAD GUYS, AND SAVING THE WORLD.
HIS ENEMIES HAVE ALWAYS BEEN A PROBLEM.
BUT HE KNOWS LOTS OF OTHER HEROES.
LITTLE DOES HE KNOW, HE'S BEING WATCHED!
Shh!

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

Daily Crossword

Edited byTrude Michel Joffe

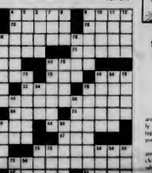
ACROSS

1 Victory
4 Slate
6 Takes an oath
13 At the peek
15 Nary a soul
16 Essesm pastrieze
17 Just as schadenzi
20 Stoulers-enoed cigars
21 Weight watchers
22 Large container
23 Ran, as Madras
25 Lets up
28 Capek classic
29 — Ten: UCLA's league
32 Sun-dried earth
33 Tournament tor Trevino
35 Leger suit
36 Black Friday event
38 Commedia dell' —
40 Lacking moistura
41 Admit
42 Consenting reply
43 Expert, for short
44 Stanley Cup athlete
46 Stick in one's —
47 NYC time
48 — Gay: famous plane
51 Beechee
56 Academy Award category
59 Joie de vivre
60 Kind of squeeze
61 Korea Bay feeder
62 Meddlesome
63 Slowe character
64 Fail behind

DOWN

1 Service women ot WWII
2 Hamstring
3 Wedding, French style
4 Responsibl.
5 Nothing —!; a cinch
6 Heavy weights
7 Part of the U.K.
8 Soak flax
9 Lacking enthusiasm
10 Eye amorously
11 Questioner's word
12 Without
14 Describing a boom box
18 Weye to go
19 German name for a Czech river
23 Engenders
24 Fontaine's husband
25 Antarctic cape
26 Secures the door
27 Sad leaving
29 Bread-and-butter item
30 Asgard group
31 Lyricist Sammy
32 Out of town
34 Louvre addition architect
35 Doll up
37 Seat of the Iroan kings
38 Elegant
43 Belly buggy
45 N.J. town named for a Union general
46 French lace
48 Perfect place
49 — Coniendere
50 Wood sorrwe
51 Crossing sign
52 "... lend me your —"
53 Touch tone's predece ssor
54 Cinders of the comics
55 Self-satisfie.l
57 Nobia
58 Serge, e.g.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



10/13/94

© Tribune Media Services, Inc. All Rights Reserved.

The Far Side By Gary Larson

Despite his repeated efforts to explain things to her, Satan could never dissuade his mother from offering cookies and milk to the accursed.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): Bold moves are taken today. Dress and act conservatively when dealing with mainstream business types. A friend comes to the rescue when you need a helping hand.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20): A check arrives in the nick of time. Old friends and close relatives will provide loving support when you need it most. Romance adds a new glow. Wear yours heart on your sleeve.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): A good day for tidying up your office or home. See a doctor if an ailment persists. Ignoring new symptoms would be a mistake. Championing the rights of the downtrodden and disenfranchised wins you allies.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): Do not despair if you encounter a setback today. Persistence pays when eventual success is in the offing. Use a disappointment as a stepping-stone. The future of picture is favorable.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): Keep a sharp look-out for real estate bargains. You should be able to make a nice profit. Clear up some domestic issues before tackling a time- consuming work project. Homemakers should try new recipes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): Avoid acting impulsively. The moment is not right for a romantic overture. Bestraying in the face of family problems. Lone conquers all! Financial discussions should go well. Be aware of all your options.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): Buying equipment that it runs to use will help you start ahead of the game. The neat look pays off on job interviews. Test an idea on an adviser to see if it will fly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Think about important appointments before committing yourself to other events. Take your time when making important decisions. Influential will express their admiration. Put every trip into an exotic locale.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Money and romance are closely linked now. You will never know how easy it is to get results until you do the job yourself. An improvement on a parent child relationship forms grace in mind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): In a whole new world for those willing to put in a bit of effort and time today. A student may have helpful money management tips for the whole family. Listen attentively.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Someone from your past could reappear. How you react could determine how good a day this is. Once you are comfortable with who you are, you will exude new confidence. Be patient with youngsters.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): A decision you make today may be immediate. Think that before committing yourself. If you feel that something can be done, give yourself additional time to think things through.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Emily Marino
Copy Editor.....Art Stapleton
Photo Technician.....Rebecca Peterson
Production Supervisor.....Andrew Davidson
Production.....Olmy Rosenstock, Mark Mitchell, Sandy Bogage

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Sneeze	Roast Beef Au Jus
Chicken Burrito	Broccoli/Cheese Strudel
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Grilled Sneeze on Wheat	Latin Stew
Cauliflower Casserole	Broccoli/Cheese Strudel

Quote of the Day

"They that can give up essential liberty to obtain a little temporary safety deserves neither liberty nor safety."

—Ben Franklin

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

1968 MUSTANG

Classic '68 Mustang Way Cool Wheels FOR SALE!! Electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, 2 door, great way to pick up chicks and studs alike. Best offer call Beth at 6-4434

ACTIVITIES

NECKC Karate Club Shotokan style-coed Tolman 101 M-W 8:9:30 $19 All levels welcome! Call Jessica at 549-4279

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Attention students! The UMass Credit Union has new/used car, personal, and computer loans starting at 9.95% Come visit our loan dept. 314 Student Union bldg. or call at 545-2800

It's time to borrow! with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools right here in Amherst. Classes start Wed. Oct. 12th. Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX to register today!

AUTO FOR SALE

1969 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Beth at 6-4434

89 Chevy Cavalier automatic, white coupe, good shape good sound $3200 532-3184

Infiniti G20, 1991, auto, have 2 cars, must sell 1 Andrea Chow (home) 253-2782 (hanging)views 539-1875

Volkswagen Quantum 1986 excellent condition, 5 speed, 115K, power brakes, windows, steering, locks, a/c $7300 253-9508

BOXING LESSONS

Recreational & competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Bobo Burrpus 549-5752

BUSINESS OPP.

Two unique food vending carts for sale 549-5089 Dood

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? WE have the solution Guaranteed results Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service, 2 Oakhurst Terrace East, N Reading, MA 01864 for free details

COMPUTERS

IBM XT computers $ 150 Includes monitor, 10 meg hard drive, 5 1/4 floppy, Ms Dos, printers $60 call 256-8094

ENTERTAINMENT

Video rentals now available at Hillmden and Worcester Hunchbe ditms

FOR RENT

1 room in 4 bedroom apt. 2 bathrooms, kitchen, spacious living room 5 min from campus $230/ month (or less) Jim 253-4173

Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery$29.00

Take over my lease. Call 665-7498

FOR SALE

1984 Buick $1,500/neg call 6-2031 Dorm fridge $70 call 8-2031

Beautiful designer's clothes for women, sizes 5 to 24 1/2. Very reasonable 413-323-8624

Brother Word Processor WP-2200 Spell and grammar check, spread sheet Excellent for papers $100 Debbie 253-0967

Dorm fridge excellent condition includes all trays and shelves $70 call 549-5514

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $500 Call Chris at 800 289 5685

Pagers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549-7331

Shades for less name brand sunglasses 30% 50% off! Campus Center MWF 800-989-9439

Solid oak triple dresser Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354

Tandy computer system w/ drives, mon, printer. Tons of software Asking 325 or bo. Call Joe 6-7348

Tandy computer system, inc. 512K camp rgh mon., drives, printer; many extras Asking 250 fm. Call Joe 6-7348.

FOR SALE:AUDIO/VIDEO

Stereo equipment. N's, w's, etc. used reconditioned, here's a large selection, priced to sell! Bus'sell/Trade at Stereo & Video Exchange. Sundays 10-5 at Jackson's Free Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley. Other days call 256-0541

FOUND

Woman's Seiko watch with leather band in lot 26 Call 665- 3627 and describe.

Seiko watch found by Tirson Farm field on jogging path Phone 545-4050 to id and claim ask for Phil

HELP WANTED

14 openings Due to expansion local company has part time openings. $9.00 up to $15.00 to start. No experience necessary, training provided, advancement potential, flexible schedules, scholarships possible For application details call 413 733-0057

$303.00. Sell "Lorry college T shirts Profit $363 60 Risk free Choose from 19 designs Free catalogs 1-800 700-4750

Alaska employment- fishing industry Earn up to $3,000 $6,000+ per month Room + board! Transportation! Male/females No experience necessary (206)545-4155 ext A50811

Cruise ships hiring- earn up to $7000 + mo. on cruise ships or land- tour companies Seasonal + full time employment available No exp necessary For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext C50011

Stand Start your own business selling jewelry Call 1-800-700-3808 for info

Earn $2500 & free trips Spring Break! Student Holidays, the nation's leader in spring break vacations, seeking enthusiastic, highly motivated students and organizations to promote and sell all- inclusive 4 star Cancun trips! From only $499 call now 1-80-392 1869

Reuesscleaner part time permanent, experienced, responsible, efficient, references, bus $6 hourly 549-0413

Jobs for the environment. Grassroots political organizing Earn $40 80/ day Flexible hours/ casual atmosphere Call Alex 256-6404

Now hiring experienced waitstaff and driver Apply within Ka Chi Restaurant

Receive up to 768,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am-5pm

Start own cash business, turn straws into dollars, money while you sleep, public service machine- raises people's awareness Minimum investment $1,295 Serious inquiries only George 617-837-2009

INSTRUCTION

Have fun! Make money! Aerobic instructor training begins October 19. Call 413-774-6251 Accredited by American Council on Exercise

LOSE WEIGHT

Dieting is dangerous & depletes muscles- including heart muscle! Use our all herbal products- FDA safe/effective/Dr recommended Make peace with your body. Call the Herbal Loft 256-3016

LOST

I lost my purse on 10/10 at Bart's. If you found it, please please call me 546-3675

Lost wire rimmed eyeglasses in Campus Center early morning 413-339-4038

Pair of bifocal glasses. If found contact 546-0345 reward

Ray Ban sunglasses. Rectangular, wire rim Lost at Bondocci's cafe Cash reward Call Thad at 253-7391

Sunglasses in a brown hard case "Greg" written on back Call 582-0780

MOTORCYCLES

Kawasaki EX 500 88 Good condition 9800/bo 549-4331

OFF CAMPUS VOICE MAIL!!!

Always get your messages! Many free options, access from anywhere Only $9.95/mo. Call 549-5734

PERSONALS

Boost. You had your last chance. You are not the same person I fell in love with. You've changed too much for my liking It's over - move on Belle

Dear Liz. Welcome to AEPhi Get psyched for a great semester Your Phi friend (guess who!)

Daniel How can I describe my admiration to my mentor. You possess everything I want for myself. You must show me the way to be a magnificent lover teach me how to cook and how to play lacrosse Polish your creative intelligence with me I need your help to take me out of my barbaric ghetti Te ig Lenton

Jen R. Welcome to AEPhi!!! Cut nose from the noose I have cat's eyes- guess who?! Your Phi friend

Karyn. welcome to AEPhi! I can't wait to get to know you better! LM, Phi love, Your Phi friend

Pari Nave- I'm so happy you picked AEPhi! Hope you liked the process! Good luck and have fun! Phi love, Your Phi friend

Salen, I am your Phi friend as happy as can be, I'm here for you, in all you do, and soon you will know me! Get psyched for AEPhi- Phi love U LM.

Sue, AEPhi will surpass your dreams! Enjoy, !

PINNOCHIO'S

Hiring drivers full or part time Call 256-6110 or stop by 30 Bonwood Walk Ask for Bob

SERVICES

"Balloon view" cartoon characatures Makes great gift! $25, full color Satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 586-6447

Call the playground bbs! 256-0080. Msg bases, files, online games etc. New folks are welcome!

Fundraising choose from 3 different fundraisers lasting either 3 or 7 days. No investment Earn $$$ for your group plus personal cash bonuses for yourself Call 1-800-932-0528, ext 65

Model search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography Beginners and experienced models Males, females, all categories welcome 617-523-0087.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906

SHAREWARE

Free!! Shareware is filling hundreds of quality software programs only $3.49 each Call 584-2782

TRAVEL

 Spring Break 95 America's #1 spring break company! Cancun, Bahamas, Daytona & Panama! 110% lowest price guarantee! Organize 15 friends and travel free! Earn highest commissions! (800)32 TRAVEL

WANTED

Attn. Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, juggliers, armourer to oversee games of skill and vieqing quests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time Bill/ Irene 584-4203

Campus representative Endless products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica S Padre + Florida We handle the bookkeeping You handle the sales Call 1-800 222-4432

Experienced drummer Must own kit 253-4982

I need someplace to park my car, fairly close to the corner of N. Pleasant by Hillel House Willing to pay, but not for $ lot Call Amy 549-0702 before I get towed

Need cheap powerbook 100 If any information call Jess at 253-5515

Wanted Atari 2600, hardware and games Eric at 256-8156

classé café
Experience the Best Breakfast Around
Classé Where Everything's Homemade
Sunday Brunch 7am-3pm
Monday-Saturday 7am-10pm
Downtown Amherst • 253-2291

Come Clean With Us!!
Speedwash
11 Pray St. Amherst • 549-1665
Open 24 Hours
Drop-off service available:
Mon. & Tues. 2 p.m. - 10 p.m.
Wed., Thurs. & Fri. 2 p.m. - 10 p.m.
Sat. 10 a.m. - 6 p.m.
South Towne Commons Laundromat
479 West St. South Amherst
Open 7 days/week, 7 a.m. - 10 p.m.
Triple Load Washers

October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month,

a time to commemorate the many women who have struggled with this disease. It is also a time to become educated about and aware of breast cancer prevention and testing methods.

For information about local support and testing services, contact University Health Services at 549–2600.

Sports

Minutewomen sputter at start, fall to Hawks

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

Coming into yesterday's game against the Northeast region's No. 1 team Hartford, the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team knew it would have to play a near-perfect game to win.

But in the first 15 minutes of the game, the Minutewomen struggled to match that perfection, giving up two goals.

UMass surrendered the first goal 50 seconds into the match. Defender Nikki Ahrenholz failed to control the ball, which allowed Hartford's Donna Holyman to take an open shot and score.

Then at the 15:07 mark, Hartford forward Stephanie Chmura scored on an assist by midfielder Jessica Reifer.

"We just lacked intensity [in the first 15-20 minutes]," UMass co-captain Heidi Kocher said. "After that, parts of the game were really even, and parts of it, I felt like we really dominated."

UMass had its opportunities in the first half, but could not find the net.

With about 24 minutes left, sophomore defender Erin Lynch served the ball to Nicole Roberts, but Hartford goalkeeper Danielle Rotondi beat Roberts to the ball.

Just seconds later, Amy Powell served the ball to Roberts who in turn passed the ball to Lynch. Lynch took the shot from the top of the keeper's box, but missed high.

UMass' last great opportunity of the half was with 6:35 left. Melissa Mitchell received the ball from Julie Magid and shot, but right at Rotondi.

The score would remain in Hartford's favor into the second half.

Five minutes into the second half, UMass had a golden opportunity. Lynch got the ball from a defender and had the open shot from about 20 yards out. The shot was a bullet headed to the upper left corner of the goal but Rotondi made an unbelievable save, touching the ball just enough to prevent the score.

"It's more a reflex, you see the ball and you just go for it," Rotondi said about her outstanding save. "I didn't even think about it, I just went and got a hand on it."

Hartford	2
Massachusetts	1

"She played great," Hartford Coach Austin Daniels said. "You hope that every so often when everything else breaks down that the keeper is the one that comes through and she came through."

UMass finally got a score at the 68:18 mark when Mitchell served the ball to Roberts, who booted the ball into the upper left corner of the net to make it a 2-1 game.

The Minutewomen kept the pressure on Rotondi the rest of the way with shot after shot, but could not come up with a score to tie it.

"The way to look at it is they had about five chances and put in two, we had about 15 chances and put in one," UMass Coach Jim Rudy said. "I think that tells the story."

"I think from the 15 minute mark on they won more balls than we did," Daniels said. "I don't think they were as sharp as I've seen them either. I think if they were sharper it would of been a lot more trouble."

Freshman goalkeeper Danielle Dion made three saves on the day for UMass, while Rotondi recorded nine.

Even with the loss, Rudy said he was still pleased with how his team performed while behind.

"They fought back," Rudy said. "I always know that by the end of the game, if it's close, our kids will fight to the end. I just wish they had fought at the beginning and I think they do too. This is a good learning experience for them."

"Losing is never something that's fun, but I think that it's going to be a good thing because we have to learn from our mistakes," Kocher said.

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Freshman goalkeeper Danielle Dion sits dejected after No. 7 University of Massachusetts women's soccer team lost to No. 4 Hartford, 2-1, at Richard F. Garber Field yesterday afternoon.

"It's great because both teams play hard and respect one another. There's never any dirty stuff. The respect is there, the soccer is good, and it's great for the region."
—Hartford's AUSTIN DANIELS

Players and coaches note special, traditional rivalry

By Mike Reiss
Collegian Staff

To classify a match-up between two teams as a rivalry, a long, tradition-rich history is usually required. Not so in the case of Hartford and Massachusetts.

When these two women's soccer teams meet, there is always a little more on the line, a little extra at stake.

And in just a short time [teams first played each other in 1986], the two schools have formed something that certainly does classify as a rivalry.

Listen to the players.

"Of course, there is something extra when we play Massachusetts," said Hartford goalkeeper Danielle Rotondi. "This year, we want to keep our top position in the [Northeast] region. It's definitely a rivalry."

"When we play Massachusetts, it's a regional game, and regional games like this are big," said Hartford midfielder Jessica Reifer. "It's a battle. You really see how good you are."

"It's a battle of two top teams hoping to get to that next level," said Massachusetts sophomore defender Erin Lynch.

"Hartford and UMass have always had tough games and that was demonstrated today," said Massachusetts senior co- captain Heidi Kocher. "Winning this game puts you in great position to get to the NCAAs."

Now, listen to the head coaches.

"It's great because both teams play hard and respect one another," said Hartford's Austin Daniels.

"There's never any dirty stuff. The respect is there, the soccer is good, and it's great for the region," said Daniels.

"This is probably one of the more highly-contested matches in the country, as evidenced by the crowd today," said Massachusetts Coach Jim Rudy. "It's big. We dropped an important game today."

A rivalry, no question.

Call it the Battle of the Northeast. Call it the Battle of New England. Hey, call it the Battle of Interstate 91. It doesn't matter what it's called because the product is good.

In a short time, these two teams are in the works of producing quite a history.

For a series that started less than 10 years ago, this match- up has already provided its fair share of exciting finishes and high drama.

A main reason why is because the teams meet up in such high-pressure situations, such as yesterday. Although the match was played mid-season, the importance of it didn't dwindle a bit.

In the past two years, the team which has won this regular season match has gone on to the NCAA Final Four. "This certainly puts Hartford in the driver's seat," said Rudy.

Indeed. In battling for position in the Northeast region, teams are now jockeying to secure that it will host the NCAA's in November. The bragging rights are also something to play for as well.

"From last year [a 3-0 Massachusetts victory], we wanted to come back," said Rotondi. "We wanted to prove ourselves. There was definitely a revenge factor there for us."

"We have to play the teams in our region the toughest, and right now Hartford, UConn and Dartmouth are the teams," said Lynch.

Yesterday, another twist was added to the rivalry between these regional foes. It was two years ago on Oct. 10 when Hartford walked onto Garber Field and took a 2-0 decision.

Turn to RIVALRY, Page 13

Penn State will pass biggest test of season

Anthony Guido on College Football

And then there were four.

Florida, Nebraska, Penn State and Colorado all are in the driver's seat. The four powerhouses control their destiny. Alabama and Michigan can alter the deal this weekend and jump into the mix.

Settle down BC fans.

You beat a Notre Dame squad that was one of the most overrated in the land. True, Boston College pulled off a remarkable upset, but get off the goal-posts. This is not a reflection of BC's talent, just an illustration of how ND quarterback Ron Powlus is not ready for prime time. BC is not going to a bowl game; enough with the celebrations, you lost to Virginia Tech [did anyone say overrated?].

Powlus, 5-21 for 50 yards, was an absolute nightmare. His decision-making was mindboggling, his progress stunted. How stupid do all those experts touting him for the Heisman look now? If Powlus plays like that when ND travels to Orlando, Florida State will double BC's score.

The best game of last weekend was in the Orange Bowl. Miami upset FSU in a battle of teams without QBs. Frank Costa was bad but Danny Kanell was terrible. The Hurricanes intercepted Kanell three times, killing drives when FSU was rolling.

Both defenses did play well, but it was a far cry from the past classic QB contests in this rivalry I can't believe I was watching the game wishing it was Gino Torretta-Charlie Ward again. Heisman winners, NFL flops. How about Gino on the Miami sidelines on Saturday night, unemployed, beaten out for that vaunted third-string spot in Minnesota by Andre Ware [I sense a trend].

Speaking of the Orange Bowl, this business about moving the game from the actual Orange Bowl to Joe Robbie Stadium is absurd. After the city of Miami votes to give the Orange Bowl a $30 million facelift, come on. The poor condition of the stadium will be taken care of. One of the most venerable stadiums in college football history will be no more. Let's play the Rose Bowl in Anaheim Stadium.

This will be a banner weekend for college football action. Besides the three huge games [which I'll get to later], the Big Eight has some solid match-ups as well.

Nebraska travels to Kansas State without a legitimate quarterback. Tommie Frazier is out for the year, while backup Brook Berringer is suffering from a partially collapsed lung. The Wildcats still have a lot to prove, and will likely be run over by Lawrence Phillips. But can the Huskers survive without a QB?

Colorado cannot overlook Oklahoma this weekend. The Buffaloes are looking squarely at that second national title in Coach Bill McCartney's tenure. This one can be a lot more legitimate, as the date with wounded Nebraska [Oct. 29] is looking more and more like a possible victory.

My season record [4-5] is getting better, but there was only one direction it could have gone. I'm on a roll, two out of three last weekend. For this week's picks, we'll start in Knoxville.

Tennessee 24, Alabama 20 — The upset of the week. 'Bama has been living on the edge for too

Turn to GUIDO, page 13

Oliete's low profile versatility aids men's water polo team

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

The star player, or primetime scorer, of any team is almost always the one who receives all the adulation from either the press or the fan base. The person who consistently buries the basket at the buzzer or runs for a thousand yards in a season is the one who gets the spotlight.

But behind every superstar there is the player that does the little things needed to win every day. If it is doing the job on defense, or reading the fast break opportunity and getting the ball to the open person, by the sheer knowledge of the game that person influences the team in ways that are not usually publicized.

The University of Massachusetts men's water polo team has a player like that in senior co-captain Adolfo Oliete. While record-breaking senior Javier Gonzalez takes the high road in his co-captain position, Oliete takes the low road and makes sure the team's game plan is taken care of every match.

As with his fellow captain, Oliete began his swimming career at a young age. When most of his friends in Madrid, Spain were out pursuing dreams of future World Cup soccer victories, the eight-year-old son of Adolfo and Maria Oliete was at the pool starting to hone his skills. By eighth grade, when he began both water polo and swimming, his coaches recommended an either/or situation due to his five hours a day of practice for both sports. When it came down to a distinct choice, he chose water polo because of the team aspect, in contrary to the individualistic timing of competitive swimming.

In his senior year, Oliete decided to take advantage of the exchange program from his home school, Saint Vincent Paloiti, and flew over the "pond" to Annapolis, MD. While playing for both club and international teams, he met Coach Russ Yarworth on a visit down in Navy-country and talked about furthering his education at UMass.

In an effort to solidify his future, and due to the current instability of Spain's economy in the European Common Market, Oliete made the decision to stay in America and became one of the first sought-after recruits for men's water polo in the program's brief history.

"In my freshman year, a lot of people weren't that experienced. There was more physical play, not a lot of finesse involved at all," said Oliete. "My role was more towards experience and knowledge of the game, that people didn't have before I got here. It was more of a swimming program developing into water polo."

After a junior year slump, where he only scored 14 goals with eight assists for 22 points, the senior co-captain has bounced back strong. This season, for the 18-3 and No. 11 Minutemen, he has already surpassed career highs in goals, assists and points scored [23 goals, 21 assists for 46 points in 67 quarters played].

His position is not of the "Jordan"-esque Gonzalez style of scoring, but of the 2-meter hole man looking to develop the play and find the open driver like his fellow captain, junior John Luviano and sophomore Greg Menton.

"My role now is more based on assists, attempt to draw kickouts, protect the ball and try to make the defender follow me. If it is a hard foul that I can draw, possibly get him ejected," said Oliete.

"It's the way I was taught. I was always more of an assist player than a scorer. My father used to say I was too humble, but I never wanted to have the spotlight. Even if I was open

Turn to OLIETE, page 13

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior co-captain Adolfo Oliete has scored 22 goals to go along with 21 assists [46 points] so far this season for the University of Massachusetts men's water polo team.

Proposal made to relax restrictions on freshman athletes who do not meet minimum SAT scores

By Craig Horst
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The NCAA Council on Wednesday endorsed a proposal by the President's Commission to relax restrictions on partial qualifiers — incoming freshman who do not meet all of the academic requirements.

The council, the main bureaucratic arm of the NCAA, gave its blessing to the proposal for allowing freshmen who do not meet the minimum scores on standardized tests to still receive scholarship aid and practice with their teams.

They would not, however, be able to play in games.

The proposal will be voted on by Division I-A schools during the NCAA convention in January.

Currently, partial qualifiers can be admitted to school, but must pay their own way and cannot practice or play their freshman year.

The proposal is in response to the complaints of many coaches, particularly members of the Black Coaches Association, that the standardized tests are skewed against minorities and unfairly penalize them.

Coaches say the new proposal doesn't go far enough. The BCA, which has been particularly vocal on the issue, threatened to boycott basketball games last season.

The proposal would define a partial qualifier as a freshman who didn't make a combined 700 on the SAT or a 17 on the ACT, but achieved a 2.5 grade-point in a core curriculum of 13 courses in high school.

Turn to SAT, page 13

Sports Notice

The University of Massachusetts men's basketball team will hold walk-on tryouts for all those interested on Monday, Oct. 17 at 7 p.m. The tryouts will be held in the Curry Hicks Cage.

••••••••••

If anyone is interested in writing for sports, please contact Andrew Bryce or Matt Vautour by coming down to the office [113 Campus Center Basement, opposite to the ATM machines] or calling 545-1851.

The Madness to begin for Minutemen

John Calipari and the UMass men's basketball team will hold their first practice tonight. Doors open for Midnight Madness at 10:30 p.m.

Keep your bike safe

Find out how to register your bicycles with the campus police. Program starts next week at the Student Union (Story on page 3).

Are the Bosstones still mighty?

The Mighty Mighty Bosstones are back with a new release. Find out if they can keep ska-core fans bouncing. (Arts and Living, page 7)

Weekend Forecast

Clouds mixed with sunny periods today. High near 60, low 43. Tonight clearing low 30-35. Saturday sunny and cooler, high 55. Sunday partly cloudy with a high of about 50.

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 43	HIGH: 55 LOW: 40	HIGH: 50 LOW: 40

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 23 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, October 14, 1994

Acrimony flies in SGA senate over alleged student misconduct

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

Wednesday night's Student Senate meeting at the University of Massachusetts created controversy as the integrity of former student senator and committee chair, Diego Figueroa, was questioned.

The first official senate meeting of the year was marred by internal conflict between two senators, stemming from the final senate meeting last semester.

The first motion of the senate was to confirm six appointed members of the student judiciary. Directly after the motion was presented, senator Charles Lenchner proposed an "unfriendly motion" to eliminate Figueroa from the list of judiciary appointees.

Lenchner cited two incidents which occurred within the SGA which he said "question Figueroa's integrity" as both former senator and appointed judiciary.

The first incident occurred at the last senate meeting of the year where the budgets for the Registered Student Organizations (RSO) and agencies on campus were reviewed and voted upon.

According to Lenchner, the meeting was running late when the senate had finished approving all the RSO budgets and a motion was passed that the voting on the budgets for the agencies would be held over.

Lenchner then recommended that a motion be added to the senate's agenda, dealing with the allocation of money for a bus and gas to take a group of students to South Boston in order to protest a neo-Nazi demonstration. The senate was in the process of voting on the recommendation when, according to Lenchner, the motion was intentionally sabotaged.

"The senate had approved the recommendation when (Figueroa) stood up and walked out of the senate leaving his bags in the meeting, then quorum was called," said Lenchner.

The senate did not meet the required number of senators needed to continue to hold the meeting in accordance with the Constitution, said Lenchner. The meeting was called and the motion was never completed.

"We didn't receive any money for the trip, we only got a loan, just because Figueroa walked out," said Lenchner.

Lenchner accused Figueroa of leaving the senate intentionally to stop the motion, because Matt Pavesi, former undergraduate student speaker, did not want the issue to go to a vote.

"The only reason Figueroa left was because Pavesi suggested it. Pavesi even admitted it," Lenchner said.

Figueroa denies the accusation, but admits that he did leave the meeting after the budgets were finished.

"I did not talk to Pavesi about killing the motion, I didn't even know about the motion because it came at the end of the meeting, the budget had been completed," Figueroa said.

"I left the meeting because it was close to finals week and I had other things to do."

Pavesi denied any involvement with the incident, saying that it was simply "Figueroa's own choice to walk out of the meeting."

"Things don't happen that way, there was simply no internal conspiracy going on," Pavesi said.

Lenchner cited another incident which happened during voting at the SGA elections last semester, when ballots were illegally added in favor of Figueroa, candidate for student trustee, and Joe Vozza, candidate for president.

"I'm not accusing [Figueroa,] but any irregularity in favor of a candidate should raise question," Lenchner said.

Figueroa denied any involvement with the illegal ballots, which were eliminated after being discovered. The election committee and the candidates met after the incident and agreed to approve the official results, said Figueroa.

Figueroa said that Lenchner, a member of the Radical Student Union, made these accusations because he does not want a conservative on the judiciary committee.

"I do not want to make a political issue out of this but, Lenchner simply does not want a conservative, like myself, as a judiciary," Figueroa said.

"The real question should be, would I make a good justice and would I do a good job."

Pavesi also said that Lenchner's questioning of Figueroa's integrity is unwarranted of a senator with his experience.

"Figueroa has been a senator for two years and was chair of the budgets committee," Pavesi said. "I think Figueroa's integrity is intact, and he is a committed student advocate."

Lenchner's motion was tabled until the next meeting on Wednesday, Oct. 19.

Hear me now

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN

Tom Carlisle, of the Campus Ministry, USA, preached outside the South Lawn of the Student Union yesterday afternoon as several students look on. Carlisle accused former Beatles singer John Lennon of promoting drug use and contributing to a general decline of morals in today's society.

Hillel hosts Anti–Defamation League for workshop

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN

Leonard P. Zakim

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

Confronting anti–Semitism on the College Campus is the theme of a workshop that will be held this Sunday, Oct. 16, at the University of Massachusetts Hillel House.

The conference will feature three speakers, Susan Behrend Jerison, Jeffrey A. Ross and Leonard P. Zakim, who will deliver the keynote address.

Jerison has been the director of community affairs for the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation for the last four years, where she went after her work as the director of Intergroup relations with the Jewish Community Council of Greater Philadelphia. Before that, she worked as a legislative aid for congressman Bob Edgar in Washington D.C.

Ross is currently the director of Campus Affairs/Higher Education for the Anti–Defamation League (ADL). He holds a doctorate in Political Science from the University of Minnesota, where he later taught. Ross has also taught at Queen's, Hamilton and Kirkland Colleges, as well as at Syracuse University. Ross also served for a time as the president of the New York State Political Science Association and has authored numerous articles.

Zakim is the Assistant National Community Service Director for Special Projects and also serves as the New England Regional Director for the ADL. Zakim also helped found the Greater Boston Civil Rights Coalition and has served as a co–chair for ten years.

Zakim has also done a lot of work to help relations between different groups. He travelled to Poland twice to work on improving Catholic/Jewish relations, as well as reducing anti–Semitism in that country. He has also accompanied Congressman Joseph Kennedy to Germany to assess the st .e of neo–Nazism there. Zakim has also gone to the Middle East many times, meeting with various national leaders such as Egyptian President Mubarak, and former Israeli Prime Ministers Begin, Shamir and Peres as well as current Prime Minister Rabin.

The conference is being sponsored by a number of groups, including UMass Hillel, the New England regional office of the ADL, the Department of Campus Affairs/Higher Education of the ADL, and the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations, as well as a contribution from the Samuel and Mildred Levine Institute to Combat Bigotry on Campus.

According to Rabbi Saul Perlmutter, of UMass Hillel, the conference was "born out of an ongoing concern about anti– Semitism on campus that had been discussed by the Hillel community board and staff and students."

The conference will begin with a speech and video from Zakim, and will then break up into four groups. Each group will discuss a topic under the combined leadership of a student and adult. Topics of the groups will include "Anti– Semitism and Supporting the Individual Student," "The Challenge of High Profile Anti–Semitic Speakers," "Creating a Campus Climate Positive to Jewish Concerns," and "Building Coalitions." After the discussions the groups will rejoin each other to discuss what they found out, and then refreshments will be served in the conclusion.

Perlmutter said that he was "Looking for specific proposals. Each one of the four discussion sessions will be dealing with real issues that we face on this campus. Our hope is each discussion will come up with concrete ideas and proposals for action that can help guide what happens throughout the year. It is not only a conference that provides information and perspective but that also taps the community's best thinking so we can emerge with some direction for action."

University powerless once again yesterday

For the second time in little less than one month, parts of the University of Massachusetts were left in the dark.

Around 2:30 p.m. yesterday afternoon, half of the campus lost power due to a power failure in Sunderland.

Physical Plant Director Peter Wozniak said the western circuit of campus was affected, leaving many academic buildings, the Student Union and Southwest Residential Area without power for about four minutes.

Professor Harry Schumer, however, said his educational psychology class in Bartlett Hall sat in the dark for at least 15 minutes before he dismissed them and rescheduled their exam for Tuesday.

"Now I have to make up a whole new exam," he said, adding that power was restored minutes after his class left.

Wozniak said Western Massachusetts Electric Company, which supplies electricity to the University, lost power in a transformer at its Route 116 substation near Bub's Bar-B-Q in Sunderland.

As of late afternoon yesterday, Wozniak said the utility company still had not given a reason for the outage.

Lights remained on in the Campus Center as the Student Union Building kept operating under backup lighting.

For the most part, business continued as usual in the Student Union: diners ate in near–dark in Earthfoods and a pool game went uninterrupted in the dimly–lit game room.

The University Store in the Student Union closed its gate for a few minutes until power was restored.

The western circuit of the University and much of the town of Amherst lost power for nearly an hour the morning of Sept. 28. That power failure was caused by an underground cable failure on the east side of campus.

— Darienne J. Hosley

Judge Lance Ito issues subpoenas to find leak's source

By LINDA DEUTSCH
AP Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson's lawyers subpoenaed two members of a TV news team, the police chief and his spokesman to try to find the source of persistent news leaks that could hurt the defense.

The development Thursday came as jury selection in Simpson's murder trial was halted because Deputy District Attorney William Hodgman was sick. The panel of about 80 prospective jurors was told to return Friday morning.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito scheduled for Friday afternoon a hearing on a defense request to find the source of the leaks that began the day after Simpson's ex-wife and her friend were killed.

Ito has threatened to ban TV coverage of the trial because of what he called false and irresponsible report-

Turn to O.J., page 3

Red Cross drive seeks bone marrow for local 12- year old girl

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Staff

A series of Red Cross drives to potentially save the life of a 12-year-old girl began yesterday at the University of Massachusetts, with almost 500 students volunteering.

The drive, the first of four scheduled, is being funded by the friends and family of Stephanie Phakus, a Southampton girl who is suffering from aplastic anemia, a disease where bone marrow fails to produce blood cells.

Phakus was diagnosed in August with the disease and has been hospitalized since that time.

Lisa Amicone, representative of the Red Cross said the goal is to have 1,500 students volunteer in the two drives scheduled for UMass. The second drive will be Oct. 29 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Campus Center room 168C.

"Everyone's been great," said Tracy Lucia, Stephanie's aunt and one of the many volunteers on the drive. "We've been organizing for about a month. This is our first drive."

UMass Men's Basketball Coach John Calipari has also broadcasted on WHMP in support of the drive.

"It was just a way to help," Calipari said. "I have two daughters and when I see something like this happen, it touches my heart."

The National Marrow Donor Program (NMDP) will be responsible for finding matching marrow for Phakus.

"We draw blood samples to put in a national program," Amicone said. "There are 1.3 million registered donors in the program. There are currently no matches for Phakus in the registry."

The NMDP is a Congressionally sanctioned program which analyzes blood samples and enters them into the national registry in order to find a match for those in need of bone marrow. Many people other than Phakus could benefit from donations.

"It only takes less than 15 minutes and it could save a life," said Amicone.

Turn to BLOOD, page 3

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN

Denise Meaux draws blood from freshman Leanne Goc at the bone marrow transplant drive yesterday.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Friday Ticker

Market Closes as of 4pm Thursday, October 13, 1994

Index	Close	Change
Dow Jones Industrial Average	3889.95	+14.80
Standard & Poor's 500	467.77	+2.30
Nasdaq Composite Index	767.89	+0.89
AMSE Index	458.57	+0.07

Market Reports

Compiled by Andrew Ferguson

Stocks rise early, lose ground throughout day

NEW YORK — Stocks sprinted higher after an unexpected drop in September wholesale prices eased fears of inflation and higher interest rates.

But the market gave up much of its gains by the day's end, as investors turned cautious ahead of another round of economic data due out Friday.

The Dow Jones industrial average shot up more than 50 points early in the session, causing the New York Stock Exchange to impose restrictions on program buying.

The impetus for the rally was a morning Labor Department report that prices at the wholesale level plunged 0.5 percent in September. That was the lowest reading in more than a year. Economists had expected the number to be up 0.1 percent from the previous month.

Moderate increases in wholesale prices indicated that inflation is under control, causing investors to hope that the Federal Reserve will not have to increase short-term interest rates soon.

Crops continue slide, look to reverse trend.

CHICAGO — Wheat futures prices extended their losses Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade amid selling prompted mainly by technical factors. Soybean and oat futures also fell; corn rose slightly.

Dan Cekander, grain analyst with Rodman & Renshaw Inc. in Chicago, attributed much of wheat's decline to selling by commodity investment funds, where managers tend to base trading decisions on price chart patterns.

On Wednesday, wheat futures made a new 2 1/2-year high before tumbling to finish below the previous day's low, a move that often signals a change in a market's trend.

"Everyone was looking at the charts, yesterday possibly being a big reversal day," Cekander said.

Soybean futures weakened on profit-taking from Thursday's gains, and on perceptions the soybean harvest is proceeding rapidly. Wheat for December delivery fell 4 1/2 cents to $4.03 1/2 a bushel; December corn rose 1/2 cent to $2.15 1/2 a bushel; December oats fell 3/4 cent to $1.29 1/2 a bushel; November soybeans dropped 3 1/2 cents to $5.33 1/4 a bushel.

Dollar down in Europe, Gold and silver fall.

LONDON — The dollar fell against most major currencies in European trading today. Gold prices fell.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 99.88 yen, down 0.27 yen from late Wednesday. In London, the dollar fell to 99.76 yen from 99.90. At midday in New York, the dollar was worth 99.59 yen.

Other late dollar rates in Europe compared with late Wednesday: 1.5417 German marks, down from 1.5422; 1.2847 Swiss francs, down from 1.2865; 5.2795 French francs, up from 5.2775; 1,566 Italian lire, down from 1,568; and 1.3486 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3473. The British pound was quoted at $1.5810, down from $1.5815. In New York, the pound fetched $1.5823 at midday.

Other dollar rates at midday in New York included: 1.5411 marks, 1.2853 Swiss francs, 1,565 lire, and 1.3486 Canadian dollars. Gold closed in London at $386.95 per troy ounce, down from $387.70 late Wednesday. In Zurich, the metal fell to $387.30 from $387.70. Hong Kong markets were closed for a holiday.

Silver traded at $5.36 a troy ounce, down from $5.50.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Oct. 14

Lecture — Tim Miller, lecture on AIDS, 8 p.m., Bowker auditorium, UMass, free.

Hatch Bash — Concert by Mocha Java, Jaya the Cat, and Loose Caboose, Hatch Bar, 8 p.m., $4.

Lecture — Visiting Lecturer Series in Geology, Morrill Science center room 131, UMass, 3:30 p.m.

Theater — Coatlicue Las Colorado present Open Wounds on Tlalteuctli, Hapden Theatre, UMass, 8 p.m., information: 545–2511.

Music — The Schubert Project–Songs of Franz Schubert, Sweeney Concert hall, Sage Hall, Smith College, 8 p.m., free.

Sports — Midnight Madness Baby!!! Mullins Center, UMass, it starts at...midnight.

Just for Fun — Contra dance with George Marshall and Wild Asparagus, Holyoke dining commons, MHC, free, 8 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Film — Swimming to Cambodia, Campus Center Theater, Amherst College, Show times: 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 15

Fair — Five College Health Professions Fair, McConnell Auditorium, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Car wash — Pioneer and Five College Habitat will be sponsoring a car wash in Northampton, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., volunteers needed, information: 549–5976.

Special Event — WFCR's Vintage Vinyl, Amherst Town Common, free, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Theater — My Queer Body, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m., information: 545–4824.

Film — Out of Africa, Gamble Auditorium, MHC, $2.50, show times: 7 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Theater — National Marionette in Concert, Amphitheater, MHC, shown at: 10:45 a.m., noon, and 1:15 p.m.

Sunday, Oct. 16

Dinner and Festival — 4th Annual International Talent Festival and Potluck Dinner, St. Brigid's Parish Center, North Prospect Street, Amherst, 5 p.m.

Meeting — Alana Christian Alliance Gospel Choir, Campus Center, UMass, 7 p.m., information: 546–3215.

Conference — Confronting Anti–Semitism on the College Campus, Hillel House, UMass, free, 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Music — Smith College Orchestra, Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, Smith College, 8 p.m., free.

Theater — Fried or Boiled?, Chapin Auditorium, MHC, $5 general, 8 p.m.

Music — Maura O'Connell with special guest Carol Noonan, Campus Center Frontroom, Amherst College, 8 p.m.

Monday, Oct. 17

Meeting — Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization will meet, 12:30, Graduate Student Lounge, Campus Center, information: 545–1560.

Lecture — Jews are Not White: Blacks and Jews in American Life, Neilson Library Browsing Room, Smith College, 4:15 p.m.

Talk — "Normal" Sex: The Poetics of Gender and Desire, Dickinson House, MHC, free, 4:30 p.m.

Lecture — Politics of Meaning: A Jewish Prespective, Converse Assembly Room, Amherst College, free, 7:30 p.m.

University of Massachusetts gets defense grant to clean up

By Jay Bragg
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts civil and environmental engineering department recently received $1.3 million from the U. S. Department of Defense (DOD) to students in hazardous waste clean up.

The grant will train undergraduates up to doctoral candidates as well as out–of–work engineers.

UMass is one of four universities, along with a number of state agencies, and private groups, who will participate in a partnership called the Environmental Technology Program Consortium to carry out the project.

The project will be located at both Fort Devens in Ayer and here at UMass.

"This is the first of many grants that will deal with the practical problems of our nation and will make more intellectual expertise available," said Vice Chancellor of Research, Graduate Education and Economic Development Fred Byron.

The grant's principal investigator is UMass professor in the civil and environmental engineering department, Dr. David W. Ostendorf.

"The DOD is addressing thousands of [hazardous waste] sites spread throughout the nation," Ostendorf said. "The Environmental Departmental of Energy faces enormous challenges out there and this will help the government spend its money more wisely."

Ostendorf said that the grant is "a new direction for the department."

Ostendorf said the grant will increase department research's experiences by 50 percent.

"[The grant] is part of the DOD's $20 million attempt to convert former military bases to productive peace–time uses, and the focus is environmental restoration," said Ostendorf.

Ostendorf also said faculty from different areas will be used to teach, making it an interdisciplinary project.

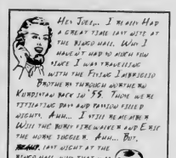
Byron said the engineering, chemistry, geology and public health departments on campus would be collaborating on the grant project.

Spokeswoman Kay Scanlan said the $1.3 million grant will be divided into $150,000 increments for three years. A total of $450,000 will be made available for graduate and undergraduate fellowships.

Scanlan said an additional $840,000 would be applied towards a variety of training projects in the current fiscal year.

"It is a new grant that we are going to bring many new opportunities for the University," Byron said.

The partnership will apply for another $840,000 in training funds in each of the next two federal fiscal years as well, according to Ostendorf.



HEY, JOEL... I WAS HOPE A GREAT TIME LAST NITE AT THE BLACK HALL. WISH I HAD GOT HERE SOONER SO I'D HAVE MORE TIME TO SPEND WITH YOU
BROTHER, THAT WAS THE FUNNIEST DAMN THING I'VE EVER SEEN!
KUNDERAH HAVE TO BE THERE AT 10 TODAY. WE'RE GETTING THAT BAND FASHION FIXED UP NIGHTLY. AHH... I STILL REMEMBER WHEN THAT BUNDY STREAKED BY AND E-RIC THE HORNE THREW R. AHH... BUT, BESIDES, LAST NIGHT AT THE BLACK HALL, NOW THAT WAS OUT... WELL... JOEL...
DAILY COLLEGIAN
UH... JOEL... I HATE TO DO, I HAVE A FEW ON THE OTHER LINE.

BMCP holds annual region–wide fundraiser party

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

The "Jeans–and–T–Shirt Party," a fundraiser sponsored by the Black Mass Communications Project, will be held this Saturday at 9 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Tickets are available in advance for $6 at Tix (call 545–0412) or at the door for $8.

Distinguishing Jeans and T–Shirt from many other campus events is a deeply–felt sense of purpose and commitment to the Black community not only at the University of Massachusetts, but also by Black students at other institutions.

Invitations to the gathering are extended to schools throughout the New England and Atlantic Coast regions.

"Basically, the purpose of Jeans–and–T–Shirt is to have people from different communities come together and unite," BMCP member Gigi DuJour said. "Hopefully everyone will enjoy themselves."

To ensure that the party, now in its 16th year, maintains its high standard of quality, BMCP enlists the aid of both its members and student volunteers, many of whom contribute to the police–trained security force comprised of approximately 60 men and women.

Although security is tight, it is certainly a small measure to take to keep a major undertaking like Jeans–and–T–Shirt functioning smoothly.

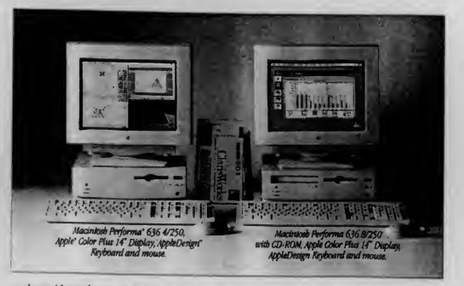
"BMCP was founded to provide programming for the Black community, especially in the five–college area," Shannan Magee, the BMCP's general manager said. "This event, coupled with Funk–O–Thon in the spring, is the cornerstone of our organization."

Success and Jeans–and–T–Shirt have proven to be inseparable for the oldest RSO of color at the University.

This year should be no exception.

For less than a dollar a day, both will give you the power you need to survive this semester.

One sweet, piping hot, no sugar and hold the moo juice.



Macintosh Performa* 636 4/250, Apple* Color Plus 14" Display, AppleDesign* Keyboard and mouse.

Macintosh Performa 636 8/250 with CD-ROM, Apple Color Plus 14" Display, AppleDesign Keyboard and mouse.

With an Apple Computer Loan, it's now easier than ever to buy a Macintosh* personal computer. In fact, with Apple's special low interest and easy terms, you can own a Mac* for as little as $23 per month.† Buy any select Macintosh now, and you'll also get something no other computer offers: the Apple student software set. It includes a program designed to help you with all aspects of writing papers. A personal organizer/calendar created specifically for students (the only one of its kind). And the Internet Companion to help you tap into on-line resources for researching your papers. It even includes ClarisWorks, an integrated package complete with database, spreadsheet, word processing software and more. All at special low student pricing. With an offer this good, it's the best time ever to discover the power every student needs. The power to be your best.* Apple through it.

UNIVERSITY STORE

CAMPUS CENTER 545-2619

M - F 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.
SAT 11 a.m. - 3 p.m.

Offer expires October 31, 1994, available only while supplies last. ©1994 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh, Performa and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. AppleDesign and Mac are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. ClarisWorks is a registered trademark of Claris Corporation. †$23 per month is an estimate based on an Apple Computer Loan of $1,695.27 for a Performa 636 system. Prices and loan amounts are subject to change without notice. See your Apple Campus Reseller or representative for current system prices. A 5.5% loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount. The interest rate is variable, based on the commercial paper rate plus 5.55%. For the month of August 1994, the interest rate was 10.10%, with an APR of 11.26%. 8-year loan term with no prepayment penalty. The monthly payment shown assumes no deferment of principal or interest. Students must defer principal payments up to 4 years, or until graduation. Deferment will change your monthly payments. The Apple Computer Loan is subject to credit approval.

Prof speaks of mother and education

African–American contributions to history ignored in schools

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Correspondent

Speaking through the experiences of his mother, University of Massachusetts Professor John H. Bracey Jr. said yesterday some liberal arts approaches to education do not emphasize Blacks' contributions to history.

Quoting his mother, Bracey said, "Nothing human is alien to me. If we cannot build a curriculum on that basis, then we are not a university."

Bracey addressed what he sees as shortcomings in the "great books" approach to liberal arts education to study Western Civilization through classic European works.

Bracey, a 22–year veteran of the African–American Studies Department, spoke yesterday as the first in a series of distinguished faculty lectures.

Bracey is the co–editor of "Black Nationalism in America" and "Blacks In the New World," a series of scholarly books published by the University of Illinois.

Following his discussion, Bracey was awarded the Chancellor's Medal for Distinguished Service to the University.

Bracey said historically, Black universities have been important in teaching a broad view of Western Civilizations.

"There is a distinction between Western Civilizations and White supremacy," Bracey said. "A discussion of Western people must include the experiences of African–American, Indian, and Hispanic people. Without the mention of these cultures, they [universities] defend White supremacy."

Bracey said his mother attended a Black university in the early 1900s and later taught at other Black universities in the South.

Bracey recounted how his mother, who pursued a masters degree from the University of Chicago in the early 1930s, a school he said was steeped in the "great books" tradition, was not allowed to live on campus or in student housing off campus.

"She was not even allowed in the pool," he said.

Bracey said schools emphasizing the "great books" tradition, such as the University of Chicago, systematically destroyed the surrounding African–American communities during the early 20th century forcing Blacks out of the area.

In contrast, Bracey cited schools such as Howard University in Washington, D.C., which developed the surrounding African American Community as well as welcomed other cultures.

"From day one, Howard University was integrated, and there has not been one year where the student body was not," he said.

Bracey said a similar open mindedness must be instilled in modern universities.

Making an impression

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN

Senior communications major Kelley Click carves her name into her clay footprints. The footprints are going to be turned into stepping stones outside of Herter Hall.

Bike registration will attempt to deter thefts

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

A week–long bike registration will begin throughout the University of Massachusetts campus starting next week.

Students will have the opportunity to register their bicycles with the campus police department as well as through a national data base.

The American Center for Bike Registration, an agency licensed by a national crime prevention counsel in Washington, D.C., offers a database for students to store their bicycle registration numbers.

"Students' registration numbers will be made accessible to law enforcement agencies throughout the nation on a 24– hour basis," said Larry Holmes, deputy chief of security at the UMass Department of Public Safety.

According to the American Center for Bike Registration, 15,000 bicycles are stolen each day on a nation–wide basis.

Registration forms for the national program will be provided at all registration areas on campus.

Students sending in the $5–registration form will receive a sticker which will state the bicycle is registered with the national program, a registration card, and a certificate of bicycle ownership.

In addition, information will be provided on appropriate locking devices for bicycles.

"The majority of stolen bicycles occur by a student's use of ineffective locking devices," Holmes said.

Students will also have the opportunity to engrave their bikes free of charge at each registration location.

Student can register bikes from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day at various locations. Monday and Tuesday registration tables will be set up at the Student Union Circle; Wednesday at the Southwest Mall; Thursday at the Worcester Dining Commons; and Friday at the Franklin Dining Commons.

Students may also register their bikes throughout the year at the UMass police department located in Dickinson Hall.

■ blood

continued from page 1

Students participating with the drive must fill out a form for medical background and sign a consent form, as well as donate 30 milliliters of blood.

Maureen Nawrocki, a sophomore Environmental Science major, said the donation process was "painless."

"If I was in this position I'd want this many people helping me out," said Tammy Halsted, a junior sociology major.

The drive will also extend beyond the UMass campus.

Local high school students are passing out fliers and holding fund raising events such as a walk–a–thon and carwashes, said Lucia.

The fundraisers are desperately needed since neither the Red Cross nor Phakus' insurance company can fund the drive, according to Lucia.

For each blood test, the family is charged $50. If a potential donor is found, further testing would cost an additional $500.

The drive will continue tomorrow from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Northampton Quality Hotel on and Saturday, Oct. 29 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Red Basket on College Highway in Southampton.

■ O.J.

continued from page 1

ing.

"These leaks began on the morning of June 13, 1994, and have continued to the present," said a sealed defense motion, which itself had been leaked to reporters. "The material leaked to the media has included false, distorted and otherwise misleading 'evidence.'"

Defense lawyers said they want to know whether members of the Los Angeles Police Department are responsible for spreading false information. If so, they would seek sanctions against the prosecution.

Yes, it's always a fine day for a barbeque. Ahh nothing like the hot coals to cause a man to break down in a fit of hysterical crying. "WHY DIDN'T I LISTEN TO MY MOTHER AND BECOME A DOG GROOMER!!!!" COLLEGIAN NEVER TOO LATE TO CHANGE

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY
LIMITED TO SEATING
Amherst SPECIAL ENGAGEMENT
MT. FARMS 4 MT. FARMS MALL ROUTE 9 HADLEY 586-9153
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Exit to Eden R
The Specialist* PG
Ed Wood* PG
Little Giants* PG
HAMPSHIRE 6 HAMPSHIRE MALL ROUTE 5 HADLEY 586-7550
Call Theatre For Showtimes
The River Wild PG-13
The Shawshank Redemption* R
Only You* PG
Pulp Fiction R
Quiz Show* PG-13
Wes Craven's New Nightmare R
Love Affair* PG-13

Is Your Smoke Detector Working?
Most homes now have smoke detectors than ever before. But nearly half don't work.
Without a working smoke detector as an early warning device, fire can spread undetected through the household, blocking escape routes and filling rooms with deadly smoke.
Make sure one is protected. Start a lifesaving habit this October 30. When you change your clocks. From daylight-saving time...change the batteries in your smoke detectors.
A message from your fire department
CHANGE YOUR CLOCK
CHANGE YOUR BATTERY

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
for travel beginning November 1

One Way	Round Trip
LONDON
$183	$345
PARIS
$214	$428
MADRID
$250	$500
SAN JOSE/ COSTA RICA
$224	$448

Rounding
TOKYO $749
Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Eurail passes issued on the spot.
Customs, immigration & departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. MT student ID cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
42 Main St. Northampton
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*

Only in New York Only at NYU

Live in historic Greenwich Village • Special summer housing rates for as little as $100 per six-week session • Over 1,000 undergraduate and graduate courses
For a free 1995 Summer Bulletin, return the coupon or call
1-800-771-4NYU, ext.130.
NYU Summer
New York University
Office of Summer Sessions
P.O. Box 2942
New York, NY
10117-1555
Please send me a free 1995 Summer Bulletin.
Name
Address
City State ZIP Code
Session I: May 22-June 30
Session II: July 5-August 15
New York University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity institution 131

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

We are now taking applications for the paid position of Developing Nations Editor

UMass undergraduate students familiar with issues affecting the Developing Nations community on both a local and global level are invited and encouraged to apply.

Interested students should stop by the Daily Collegian office, 113 Campus Center, and talk to Managing Editor Art Stapleton Jr.

Applications are due by 3 p.m. Friday, Oct. 14

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor
Chris Taylor Current Black Affairs Editor
Andrew Ferguson Business Editor
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Ada Michelle Lugo Multicultural Affairs Editor
Kelly Spang News Editor
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor

Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Emily Marino Women's Issues Editor
Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
John Khachadourian Finance Manager
Jen Roode Circulation Manager
Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Marty Poppis Classified Advertising
Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Some new ideas for career politicians

A few years back, there was a hot topic which has since dwindled in popularity. The idea of term limits for congressmen has been successfully manipulated so as to reside on the nation's political agenda somewhere in the vicinity of Christmas Tree disposal. Instead of creating some form of overturn on Capitol Hill we have allowed our elected officials to grow old and out-of-touch while remaining in power.

After pondering this seemingly backward attitude towards our elected officials the only explanation I could find was sympathy. No human being with any decency would force an old congressman back into the real world where they would actually have to pay their own postage, and someone else would be controlling their pay raises.

With accountability having gone the way of the typewriter, it would seem logical that we find some other method for assuring that the public's best interests are being kept in mind. Since we refuse to blame our representatives and senators for the sorry state of our nation, as evidenced by the high rate of 2nd, 3rd and more term congressmen, we might as well go ahead and make their lives even easier so they may concentrate on the topics which are salient to their constituents. To wit, I have compiled a few changes which must be make to insure the future of such a fine institution as congress.

First off, besides free mail, let's give them free water, electricity and gas for their cars. This will insure that absolutely nothing stands in the way of their lawmaking abilities and our tax money may be used to lessen the burden of everyday life.

Secondly, instead of having to vote themselves pay raises, and create an issue of it, the new procedure would be as follows. When one congressman feels that he or she needs more money, they simply add whatever amount they deem necessary to their paychecks and every other senator and representative will get the same amount added automatically to their own checks. This is the type of equality which our legislators have been robbed of to this point.

Along with the modified method for pay raises would go more vacation time in order to keep the wheels of justice well greased and the minds of our lawmakers free of the toils which we common folk must deal with. If we insist on placing them on a pedestal, let's make it a marble column to serve the majesty of these above average people.

Next we must address the issue of job security. How cruel we have been to force such important people to have to raise millions of dollars in "campaign money," and shake the hands of their pathetic constituents in order to keep their jobs. The solution here is as simple as cutting out the middle man. Instead of spending all their money on TV ads and other campaign promotions, the incumbents, which they all will be in the new system, could divvy up their "campaign funds," and send checks out to everyone of voting age. Thereby eliminating the barbaric ideal of accountability laid out in the Constitution.

Clearly we have proven that those methods are unnecessary, so what the hell? Why do we still need that old document? We'll burn it up with the election ballots to completely eliminate any anxiety associated with the job of U.S. legislator.

Finally, we must turn our attention to the actual lawmaking procedure. Before we attempt to make any changes we must first look at the existing nature of our lawmaking body. Our lawmakers are forced to sit through countless hours of boring debate and procedural bickering only to hide behind party lines when all has been said and done.

Our new congress would be equipped with a huge rope in each chamber. When it comes time to vote on an issue, topic, procedure, or the like, each party will unite on opposite end of the chamber and engage in a Tug-of-War. We'll tie Old Glory to the middle and whoever pulls her past the grandstand first wins the vote. Not only would this make a congressman's job a lot more exciting, we would get more bills past, and do away with lobbying.

If all of this seems a little hard to swallow, remember that it is not a whole lot different than what we are doing now. My new congress is simply a realistic manifestation of existing methods. If we refuse to post limits on a congressman's tenure we are inviting them to make the position of elected official a career.

Instead of being lead by our peers, we are creating an aristocracy, and we don't necessarily need a law to force into reform. We must realize that corruption and disillusionment with the ideals of the common man is a direct function of time spent in office, and thereby reduce this time using the means established by our founders. Either that or go ahead and replace checks and balances with pay- offs and coin tosses.

Paul Sarkis is a UMass student.

WAIT! I NEED TO TAKE THE CREDIT!
ECONOMY
I CAN'T. I DON'T KNOW HOW IT WORKS!
THE MAGIC SLIPPERS!
THEY'LL TAKE YOU RIGHT BACK TO ARKANSAS.
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND.
©1994 THE BUFFALO NEWS

Trying on Halloween costumes

Halloween is coming.

That delicious holiday that hits on the last day of October. A night that people are able to walk around in the middle of the night dressed in some ridiculous outfit with a big sack in their hands, going up to doors for handouts. Doing this any other night of the year would warrant police action, or an ass-kicking, whichever came first.

Everyone can remember when they were kids, and Oct. 31 rolled around. Preparation of the costume, grabbing the pillow case off the pillow to load up with candy.

I remember trotting around in my done-up costume, thanking those who gave out the Reese's peanut butter cup, throwing dirty looks at those who gave me an apple or a bag of chips — what an exciting night it used to be.

Then, I got home. Candy check — my parents would then see if there were any sharp objects in the candy. I would proceed to trade candy with my friends, and the night would then come to an end as I stuffed my face with Milky Ways.

Nowadays, we are just too old for that kind of stuff. I'd like to think I can go out on Halloween night, all dressed up in costumes with my friends, and go door-to-door. I'd also like to think that we could explain it to the cops that we were bringing out our younger brothers and sisters, and that we were just carrying their sacks for them. However, they may not buy it, and I ain't down with being handcuffed on Halloween.

There are those Halloween parties I can attend wearing a costume. I have some ideas. . .

I could be a football player — Yet again. I was a football player for about eight straight years, from my red helmet right on down to my Pony cleats. Oh shut up, it was the only costume I could put together on the night of...all eight years. Needless to say, when I played football my freshman year of high school, the thrill of suiting up was non-existent.

I could be a DC worker — I'd just have to steal myself a hat and a white outfit, and I'd carry around a pan with some crap in it with a spoon. The only thing I'd need would be patience in dealing with all the ingrates that complain about the food.

I could be an A student — Now, I'm getting out of my league.

I could be a carpenter — All I have to do is let my pants sag down, and show off my crack.

Actually, if that's all it takes, I could be a plumber, as well.

I could be Norm Peterson — All I'd have to do is sit at the end of a bar on my own stool, and suck back some brewskies. Probably the easiest costume to prepare.

I could be a Chippendale dancer — Anyone have a chiseled body I can borrow?

I could be a loud, obnoxious kid who lives in the towers in Southwest — All I have to do is scream my head off out the window, swearing at anyone and anything that walks by outside. After all, when I yell at people below, they don't know exactly where its coming from, so I can get real nasty.

I could be a Bursar's worker — All I have to do is peddle money out of people. I could handle that.

I could be Hammer — Seriously, my my my my music hits me so hard, and makes me say, "oh my Lord." I just take time out to say thank you for blessing me with a mind to rhyme and two hype feet.

Plus, I got the pants. I'm set.

I could be the person who cashes the checks in the Campus Center Basement — The woman there flips the ID cards back pretty accurately, but I think I could put a little more velocity on the card.

I could be Richard Simmons — I could deal a meal — I'll trade you a chicken puck for a hot hero.

I could be a cab driver — Only if someone could let me use their car, because I'll be able to get my hands on a can of yellow spray paint.

I could be a mummy — Because I believe that no one could have as bad a costume as my friend Mike had when we were about ten years old.

I'd be sure to have a few rolls of toilet paper instead of the half a roll that Mike grabbed from his bathroom and wrapped around him that night.

I could be the poster boy for premature ejaculation — Because I'm done — with the column, you perverts.

Andrew Bryce could also be a Collegian columnist for Halloween.

Letters to the Editor

Sylvan parking lots aren't secure

To the editor:

I would like to call Chancellor Scott's attention to the recent outbreak of automobile break-ins. This isn't anything uncommon, but I feel that the problem has swelled to such epidemic proportions that some course of action must be taken in order to quell these disturbances.

I myself had a rude awakening to this problem after my car was broken into last Thursday. A window was smashed and $350 in stereo equipment was stolen. In addition, estimates for a new window have run as high as $450.

Although I consider myself part of an unlucky few, this is the second occasion on which this has happened. Last May, a similar circumstance happened to me. Receipts for repairs totaled $600.

As governor of the Sylvan Area Government, I feel obligated to put forward a few suggestions regarding improved security in the numerous parking lots around campus, particularly in my area (D-Lot #44), where a disproportionate number of thefts have occurred.

Although I understand the University has limited funds, I feel that a few measures to enhance the security of automobiles on campus are long overdue.

I propose:

1) Installation of closed-circuit TV monitoring.

2) Brighter lights in the parking lots.

3) Increased police patrols.

4) Hire an undercover security officer (part-time nights)

These are but a few of the cost-effective means by which the University can better serve its students, faculty, and staff. I hope in earnest that Chancellor Scott takes this issue to heart and, at very least, acknowledges that preventive measures should be taken in the near future.

Christina R. Belles
Sylvan

Four other Sylvan Area Government officers signed this letter.

Cartoon offensive to women

To the editor:

I was offended by Wednesday's cartoon, "Big Man on Campus," which showed a college man horrified at having mistakenly asked a sorority house mother on a date.

The cartoon derived horror from a stereotype of older women as undesirable, desperate for affection, and asexual beings. Such an image is woman-hating to the point of being violent — it causes older women to doubt themselves and younger women to fear growing old.

There are plenty of things in life to laugh about without resorting to such overt sexism. Please stop it.

Ben Zeman
Belchertown

'Bridging Worlds' helps students

To the editor:

I am writing on behalf of the Bridging Worlds Program, and especially on behalf of Steve Satell, the program coordinator. I am currently enrolled at the University of Massachusetts as an ALANA second-year student. The Bridging Worlds Program has helped me tremendously.

They made sure I received the best academic career possible. Upon my enrolling at the University, Steve Satell approached me at a Talented Minority Scholarship Awards dinner and informed me of the program. During the summer he kept in touch with my high school faculty advisor on my academic performance.

When I entered UMass, I was lost because I had not gone to summer orientation and had no idea of where to go. Mr. Satell made sure that all my academic needs were met, and that I became involved with the CCEBMS (Collegiate Committee for the education of Blacks and other Minority Students) Program.

Bridging Worlds continues to attend high schools and provide outreach and inspiration to minority and working- class students. This has provided me, along with several other students, an opportunity to advance as a minority student on this campus and I hope that this program will help the future generations in years to come.

LaToya Simms

Coming out day has arrived

To the editor:

National coming out day is here once again. It is a time for celebration. All lesbian, bisexual and gay people know what it means to be in the closet. The solitude, the anguish, the feeling that you are the only one.

This is what makes National Coming Out Day so cherished and special in the gay community. It is a chance for those of us who are out to reflect on those times. It is a chance for us to say; "Yes I was, but no I am not anymore, and I am proud of it." It is also a chance for those among us who are still in the closet to see that they are not the only ones. There are many who have been, or are where you are. It is a day for all of us to feel the support which comes from knowing you are a part of a community that cares.

As we celebrate National Coming Out Day, for it truly is a day of celebration and affirmation, let us all: Black, White, Latino, Asian and all other nationalities, cultures, sexes and abilities, religions and political beliefs, say "Welcome home. Welcome to your community, your community that cares."

On behalf of the steering committee of the LBGA I would like to say "Welcome out of the closet, and please remember that silence truly does equal death."

Lawrence Ali Davis
Political Chair
LBGA

******

History has shown us that it is possible to be Black, queer and proud. To evidence we need look no further back in time than renaissance Harlem. Prominent people such as Bessie Smith, Jackie "moms" Mabley and Josephine Waters were lesbian or bisexual. Langston Hughes, Wallace Thurman and Augustus Granville Dill, personal protege of W.E.B. Du Bois, were sexually unorthodox at the very least. At that time, as it is told by an elderly resident of Sugar Hill: "Of course they had not come out of the closet back then, they didn't have to. We all knew they were homosexuals. We admired them for their intelligence and work during a very difficult time."

During the Harlem renaissance these people did not need to come out. Blues songs had lyrics like: "If you can't bring me a woman, bring me a sissy man," and "When you see two women walking hand in hand, just shake your head and try to understand." Other social functions also showed the acceptance of queer living. Speakeasies (illegal liquor saloons) openly catered to the gay community. Also, and more importantly, were the drag balls held at the Cotton Club, the Hamilton Lodge and the Savoy Ballroom. These functions attracted gays and straights, blacks and whites, from Atlantic City and Philadelphia to Chicago, Illinois. The culmination of these wild nights was the crowning of the queen of the ball, usually won by a man.

Today, as we proud Black lesbians, bisexuals and gays look at the movement for gay rights we see ourselves largely left out. This despite the fact that during the heyday of Harlem we welcomed Whites to party and hang out with us. We see drag queens associated with the White Anglo-Saxon protestant gay movement. We see lesbian feminists who ignore the contribution of past Black lesbians and ignore the issues of present day Black lesbians.

Back in the '20s, Black queers did not need to come out. Today it is an absolute necessity. As we "celebrate" National Coming Out Day we, the members of the Black Caucus subcommittee of the LBGA, implore all other Black queers to come out and let your voices be heard.

Lawrence Ali Davis
Black Caucus

Editor's note: The above two letters were written by the same person and were combined for that reason.

Fight still continues past name change

To the editor:

On Oct. 6, the Collegian reported that the Tower Library was to be formally dedicated to the memory of scholar/activist W.E.B. Du Bois. The move was widely hailed by administrators, professors and students as a victory and a sign the University of Massachusetts commitment to higher education and the welfare of all its students. Du Bois' legacy is certainly worthy of this type of recognition. But let us continue to question the University's commitment to those values to which Du Bois dedicated his life.

The situation for students, and specifically students of color, the day before and after this announcement remained pretty consistent. This event affected no miracle. They were still faced with the same struggles against racism and classism within the halls of this University and in society in general. The administration still has yet to commit to comprehensive solutions to many of the barriers that these students face here at UMass.

Regard this dedication as a victory. But never forget that the same institution that 'praised' and 'endorsed' this dedication still has along way to go until its commitments to students, and specifically students of color, are fulfilled.

Brett Gadsen
Amherst

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

REALLY? YOU KNEW MICHAEL ROY DURING HIS EARLY CALIFORNIA YEARS?
SURE! WE GO ALL THE WAY BACK TO 1992!
"WE HIT IT OFF INSTANTLY."
SO AFTER I CASHED OUT OF DAD'S COMPANY, I HAD TO DO SOMETHING! SO I BOUGHT A HOUSE IN CALIFORNIA!
I DIDN'T ACTUALLY MOVE IN— THE TAX SITUATION WAS TOO PERFECT IN TEXAS — BUT MY WIFE WENT OUT TO ESTABLISH A BEACHHEAD! THEN AT THE LAST MINUTE, I JOINED HER AND BOUGHT A CONGRESSIONAL SEAT!
WOW! YOU SOUND LIKE A MAN WITH A DREAM!
MORE LIKE A SCHEME. LIKE MY CANDOR! IT'S MY WIFE'S IDEA.

Arts & Living

Lynn Shapiro brings dance to Smith College

By Stacy Guerasseva
Collegian Correspondent

Lynn Shapiro is interested in creating a vocabulary all her own which she will demonstrate in Ambition Bird, a program of five short dances. It will be performed at Smith College's Scott Dance Studio Oct. 15 at 8 p.m.

Shapiro studied at Smith College for two years and was an active performer. She left Smith in 1977 and began attending New York University's Tisch School of the Arts. It was during this stage of her dance career that Shapiro felt the need to harness her energy.

Although she's been living in New York for the past sixteen years, it wasn't until 1988 that she actually began to choreograph.

When asked to label her form of dance, Lynn Shapiro hesitates. "It's definitely not jazz," she said, "and it's not ballet."

Shapiro's style developed mostly throughout her years of choreographing in New York City. It is distinct from traditional modern dance in its set of vocabulary and structure.

Ambition Bird's five pieces range from four and a half to ten minutes each. In the first piece, Shapiro explores the destructive force of self-loathing in a relationship. In the second, "Mother's Garden," the solo figure plays out the memory of a child standing half naked in a garden and being watched and admired by a parent.

The following piece, "Under Ice," accompanied by Erik Friedlander's eerie score, portrays a New England family in the dead of winter.

Perhaps the most memorable of all the five dances is "Silent Night," a four-minute duet set to the Dickens classic A Christmas Carol. The piece was originally twenty-minutes long, but Shapiro cut most of it. The work now runs as a four-minute segment.

"There is an intensity about the pieces, they're psychological," said Shapiro. "I try to use movement as opposed to using a standard vocabulary and putting a concept with it."

The vocabulary seems to naturally pair itself with the movement and the mood of the pieces. Many of the pieces, in fact, have come out of improvisation.

Over the past six years, The Lynn Shapiro Dance Company has received funds from such organizations as the Harkess Foundation for Dance and the Joyce Mertz-Gilmore Foundation.

The company received the 1992 Residence Award from the Choreographers and Composers Residency Project. Most recently, the Lynn Shapiro Dance Company received 1994 Artist Fellowship from the New York Foundation of the Arts.

The Shapiro Dance Company will be performing at Central Park Summer Stage in 1995, but meanwhile the Five-College community has a rare opportunity to experience the invigorating and distinctive style of Lynn Shapiro.

Lynn Shapiro will perform "Ambition Bird" on Oct. 15 at 8 p.m. at the Scott Dance Studio at Smith College. Contact Smith College for ticket info.

R.E.M. to hit the road in support of latest album

By David Bauder
Associated Press

Guitarist Peter Buck has traded his mandolin for an electric guitar, and R.E.M. is ready to hit the road.

R.E.M., long the kings of the underground rock scene but now one of the most creatively engaging mainstream superstar acts, is preparing for its first concert tour of the decade. The tour will last about a year.

Preceding the live shows is the critically acclaimed album "Monster." The disc is a return to rock 'n' roll and a sharp departure from the folky, subdued sound of "Automatic for the People."

"It just seemed like the thing to do, to be really ambitious and do a rock record while we still wanted to do it," Buck said. "When we're around 60, I don't think it will be good to do that. Not that we're anywhere near that."

No, but Buck, singer Michael Stipe, Mike Mills and Bill Berry are no longer able to pile into vans and spend months driving around the country with no cares behind them. Buck spoke by telephone while his twin, four-month-old daughters slept in an adjacent hotel room.

The guitarist had spent the last few years exploring the quieter side of his art — his mandolin is the featured instrument on "Losing My Religion" — and was ready for the visceral pleasures of rock 'n' roll.

"It is pleasurable, you forget about all of that," he said. "You're kind of an adult and playing folky stuff, but there's something kind of ideal about sitting in a basement or garage and playing really, really loud."

"Monster" is rock 'n' roll, but not like some old R.E.M. fans may remember it. The chiming, folk rock sounds of their earlier albums is gone, left to such bands as the Gin Blossoms to mine. Instead, Buck plays a rougher guitar. "What's the Frequency, Kenneth?" features some psychedelic backwards guitar, and "Circus Envy" is a six-stringed duet with Sonic Youth's Thurston Moore, who sounds like racing cars revving up.

One nostalgic touch is the sound mix, which frequently buries Stipe's vocals — a reminder of the days when he was shy and afraid to stand in the spotlight.

Except for some occasional shows, such as an "MTV Unplugged" segment, R.E.M. has stayed away from live performances since their last big tour ended in 1989.

"We did it all through the '80s and did it about as well as we could do it and it was just starting to become a job," Buck said. "Just for our own sake and for the band's sake, we thought it would be good to get away from it and explore other avenues. And we did. Now we're all kind of fired up about playing again." The five years that R.E.M. was off the road coincided with their greatest period of popularity.

"They continued to release good albums. That always helps," said Gary Bongiovanni, editor of the concert industry trade publication Pollstar.

It also serves to build up demand for concert tickets. The tour, which reaches the United States late next spring, is likely to be one of the biggest moneymakers of 1995, Bongiovanni said.

R.E.M. also recently has cultivated an international market, to the point where almost half of the subscribers of their fan club newsletter live overseas, said Michele Rawson, its editor. The tour starts Jan. 13 in Perth, Australia, and takes in the Far East and Europe through late winter and early spring.

COURTESY STEVE COLLETTI

R.E.M., seen here promoting the Greenpeace Alternative NRG album, is ready to embark on their first tour since 1989's Green tour. They will hit the U.S. late this spring.

Starting the tour in Perth has annoyed some big R.E.M. fans who are anxious to see the band live, said Todd Pluharski, a longtime friend of the band who buys and sells rare R.E.M. recordings. For a band that toured relentlessly in the 1980s, R.E.M. is now in the odd position of largely having a fan base that has never seen them live, Pluharski said. The tour is a big test.

Dozens of fans to whom he has talked seem excited about the new record, although Pluharski grumbles that several of the songs sound like rewrites from past records.

"A lot of the hard-core fans have said, 'Quit playing these wimpy things. Play some rock songs and tour,'" he said.

With three full albums released since R.E.M. last went on tour, expect the concert to concentrate on that material. "We've pretty much done the 80s stuff," Buck said. "I'd like to stick to the 90s stuff."

This will be the band's first full tour of large concert arenas. But they won't break the Rolling Stones' record for stage size. "It will be pretty low-tech," Buck said. "We're not going to compete with U2 or Peter Gabriel."

ACCEPTING WRITING SUBMISSIONS

The Collegian is now accepting submissions for a new fiction and prose column, "A&L Fiction." We are looking for thoughtful, intelligent, intriguing short fiction of 75 to 300 lines in length. Those interested may send works to Dave Polaniak, Collegian Arts & Living, 113 Campus Center, UMass. For more information, please call Dave at 546-0082 or Jon at 545-1361.

PANDA EAST
CHINESE & JAPANESE RESTAURANT
"Best Chinese food in the Valley"
Lunch Special Daily Start at $3.95
AMHERST 101 N. PLEASANT STREET, AMHERST, MA 01002
TEL: (413) 256-8923, 256-8924

THE DOVE'S NEST
Rt. 116 Sunderland • 665-7969
Open Mon-Sat 6am - 3pm
Sunday 7am - 3pm
THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL
French Toast $1.09
w/ Bacon, Ham, or Sausage $2.09
add 2 eggs + 80¢

RECIPE FOR GOOD GRADES:
Eat Well &
EXERCISE!
Join
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD • 256-6446

Book NOW for the holidays!
LONDON $173

AMSTERDAM	$215
PARIS	$229
MILAN	$239
TEL AVIV	$369
CARACAS	$215
BANGKOK	$468

Fares are each way based on a round trip purchase from Boston. Student or Faculty ID may be required. Taxes and surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.
STA TRAVEL
79 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-1261

Eating Disorder Programs • 1994/95
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4

Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about someboby with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Call for more information 549-2671, Ext. 233

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phoneline for help around eating disorders - yourself, or someone you know 549-2671, ext. 168.

ATTENTION UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS:

STUDENTS WHO ARE PLANNING ON PICKING UP CHECKS AT BURSAR TELLERS' WINDOWS IN WHITMORE PLEASE NOTICE:

IF YOU HAVE NO FINANCIAL AID AND ARE ONLY LOOKING FOR THE REFUND CHECK FROM THE CURRICULUM FEE REDUCTION:
DO NOT STAND IN LINE

THESE CHECKS ARE BEING MAILED OUT.

FOR ALL OTHER CHECKS GO TO THE BURSAR TELLERS' WINDOWS AS USUAL.

Karen Lee Shelley, Bursar

ANNOUNCING THE DISCOVER® CARD $25 NEW MEMBER REBATE.

(Hurry, it won't be here for long.)

Apply for the Discover® Card by November 10.

Spend $75. Get $25 back*.

NO Annual Fee.

Look for applications and certificates on campus.

IF YOU DON'T GOT IT, GET IT.℠

MEMBER NOVUS NETWORK ©1994 Greenwood Trust Company Member FDIC

*This offer valid for Discover Card applications received by 11/10/94 that are approved and enrolled between 9/21 and 11/21/94. Offer valid for purchases made by 3-31-95. Cash advances/balance transfers excluded. Offer limited to one rebate per account.

Bosstones deliver a less than mighty performance

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

QUESTION THE ANSWERS
The Mighty Mighty Bosstones
Mercury Records

The start of the customary fall chill has begun to cast its presence over the Pioneer Valley, and music fans have started to look for something that can warm them up. That particular something could possibly be the new release from The Mighty Mighty Bosstones, Question The Answers.

Wrong.

Since their first release, this band has been one of the forerunners of the hard rock-reggae-ska movement. It appeared with their smoking cover of "Detroit Rock City" on this summer's Kiss tribute disc, Kiss My Ass, they finally would get the commercial recognition they deserve.

With Dicky Barrett and his mates' fourth release (second on the Mercury label,) though, they seem to stray, and get hung at the gallows pole, by the genre of music they helped to create.

Don't misunderstand me, there are tracks on this new release that harken back to the times of old, and times still to come. With two of the later tracks on this disc the spirit and flavor of the "true" Bosstones emerges. On "Bronzing The Garbage," the band gets low down and dirty, as the title of the song implies, and drives right after the listener. As Barrett asks, "Have I got your attention? . . .," it comes through loud and clear with a straightforward hard-core punk feel.

The next track, "Dogs and Chaplains," goes in line with the band's concept of blurring the lines of musical stereotypes. Beginning with a sweet modern hard-rock intro that evolves, in order of genre, from a brilliant, jazzy breakdown, then into rhythm and blues, culminating with their standard ska. This song is what got me first into the Bosstones. The feeling, per se, not the distinct sound.

But that is where the imagination ends. A few other tracks, like their opening song "Kinder Words" and "Hell Of A Hat," do possess elements that hold true to their distinct sound and song-writing technique. Yet the band seems to conform to formula, both their own and commercially oriented, on the rest of the disc, reaching for the "radio- friendly" audience.

Case in point, on the fourth track, "Pictures To Prove It," this conformity becomes extremely evident. As the song began, I thought I was listening to a neo-Robert Smith lament. Just by the song title, and the lyrics, it was brutally apparent to me that I was hearing a rip-off of The Cure's "Pictures Of You." I know it's fall, but I only want sap on my pancakes.

Also, the final track "Jump Through The Hoops" emphasizes this disturbing trend. Not centering towards a commercial formula, as the prior example, they seem to get hooked by the bait that they have used in their brief musical tenure. With no imagination in rhythm, and the addition of a forced-sounding horn section compliment, the band attempts futilely to make a connection with the financially, and socially, disadvantaged listener. As Barrett sings, "Roll over, sit up and beg. . . ," all I wanted to do was stand up, go to the bathroom and puke.

Question The Answers left me questioning the path this forerunner of the hard rock-ska movement is pursuing. Is it commercial success, or is the band just losing a sense of imagination? If you're a hard core Bosstones follower, my condolences. If not, take the advice of Dicky Barrett in the song "Dollar And A Dream," and keep that ". . . dollar that I want to save. . ." C-

The Mighty Mighty Bosstones

COURTESY JOHN FALLS

My Queer Body

COURTESY CHUCK STALLARD

Tim Miller brings his eclectic, controversial performance piece, "My Queer Body," to Bowker Auditorium on Oct. 15 at 8 p.m. Miller, a gay activist, teacher and self-proclaimed "All-American Queer Jimmy Stewart," was one of the infamous "NEA four," a group whose funding was revoked due to its controversial content. On Oct. 16 at 8 p.m. at Bowker Auditorium, Miller will present an accompanying lecture, "SEXISELFIAIDS!; Our Bodies In Wartime." The events are co-sponsored by the Program for Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual Concerns and the Distinguished Visitors Program. Call 545-2511 for ticket info.

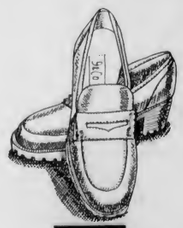
ACADEMY-MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema House 584-8435
Thurs. & Fri. at 7:00 & 9:15
(NO REGULAR SHOWING Sat. or Sun.)
HOWEVER
LATE SHOW SAT. 11:30
Our Box-office Opens at 9:00 pm
THEN GO SEE THE MOVIE CRITICS ARE CALLING
"THE FEEL-GOOD MOVIE OF THE YEAR!"
"ONE OF THE WILDEST MOVIES EVER MADE!"
Priscilla QUEEN OF THE DESERT
AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

Macintosh® or IBM® it's your choice

with this coupon
$2 off per hour on computer rentals
Bring this coupon into the Kinko's listed and save on in-store self-service Macintosh or IBM computer rental time. One coupon per customer. Not valid with other offers. Good only at the Kinko's listed. Expires November 30, 1994.
kinko's the copy center
AMHERST: 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2543 Open 24 Hours
NORTHAMPTON: 34 Bridge St. 585-5000 (Across from the Post Office) Open 24 Hours

BUY BEER & WINE on SUNDAYS from Noon to Six
Montague Mini Mart
•30 Packs of Budweiser Available
•Only 10 Miles from UMASS
• Reasonable Cigarette Prices •
from Amherst: 10 miles north on Rt. 63 to Rt. 47N
from Northampton: 14 miles I-91 north to Rt. 116 to Rt. 47N
(Follow signs to Montague Center • Proper ID Required)
Open 7 Days from 9-9 • 367-9551

at zanna...lug soles



ZANNA
Women's Shoes. Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 N. Pleasant St. • Amherst
413.253.2563

You are invited to participate in
A WORKSHOP
CONFRONTING ANTI-SEMITISM ON THE COLLEGE CAMPUS
Sunday, October 16, 1994
1:00pm - 4:00pm
KEYNOTE SPEAKER: LEONARD ZAKIM
Director, ADL New England Regional Office
DISCUSSION GROUP TOPICS:
Anti-Semitism & Supporting the Individual Student
Building a Campus Climate Positive to Jewish Concerns
The Challenge of High Profile
Anti-Semitic Speakers: Creating Coalitions
Hillel House
388 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst
413/549-1710
The workshop is free.
Co-Sponsors: UMass Hillel, ADL New England Regional Office, ADL Department of Campus Affairs/Higher Education, The Rita Rinn Hillel Foundation for Jewish Campus Life, Samuel and Mildred Levine Institute to Combat Bigotry on Campus, and UMass Office of Human Relations college students ski or snowboard $27 a day

Killington
Mount Snow
sugarloaf/usa
Waterville Valley
Play time is limited. So is cash. We won't waste either one.

Wherever your school is located you're probably less than 90 minutes from all the excitement of the best snow resorts in the east - challenging steeps, bumps you won't believe, half-pipe thrills and action that doesn't stop when the sun goes down. Now you can get all this for just $27 a day - a 40% savings over the daily price!

Just purchase the Extra Credit Card for $30, then get a one-day or multi-day ski pass at Killington, Mount Snow, Sugarloaf or Waterville Valley* for just $27 a day.

If you've never skied or snowboarded, and have always wanted to learn, get a complete package (lower mountain lift ticket, lesson, and equipment) for the same $27 a day.

Don't waste another minute, call 1.800.9.SKIERS (1.800.975.4377) to order your extra credit card today!

72 lifts
443 trails
10 mountains
5 halfpipes
4 snowboard parks
186 miles of terrain

*Smaller the Extra Credit Card a nominal or down fee during this season is contingent on Waterville Valley not being closed on any Some restrictions apply. Must be a full-time college student.

REBECCA PETERSON/ COLLEGIAN

Eric Oke [14] and the University of Massachusetts football team head down to Williamsburg, PA, to take on No. 8 William and Mary on Saturday afternoon.

■ Football

continued from page 10

what happened to Massachusetts last year, where the back- to-back losses to Maine and Boston University all but kept them out of post-season action.

Added to the fact that the Minutemen have yet to defeat William and Mary [0-2] in the all-time series between the two, including a 45-28 loss to the Tribe last season.

Hodges keeps this all in the back of his mind.

"We know what we've got to do," said Hodges. "We've never beaten them before. Last year's game, we hung in there, but we came up short.

"We have to, without doubt, play our best game of the season because we are playing, without doubt, the best team in the league."

Women's crew to compete in annual event

By Jody King
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts varsity women's crew team and the University of Massachusetts men's crew club will clash this weekend in its annual dual, the Hadley Henley.

On the Connecticut River in South Hadley tomorrow, the UMass rowers will battle before the crowd of alumni, parents, friends, fans and fellow rowers who show up year after year to witness the event.

The Hadley Henley was formed and is still run by the Crew Advisory Committee, a collection of alumni, coaches, community and current rowers. Since the inaugural 1965 season, UMass crew alumni have been invited to the event.

One of the most exciting races last year was between the 1985 men's boat that had an outstanding finish in its spring Dadville Regatta, and the 1993 women's boat, who had won the national championship regatta.

The Hadley Henley is a big day for rival races and alumni challenges, as well as the races between the women's and men's teams.

According to one UMass woman rower, half of this year's women's eight are currently beating half of this year's men's eight on the Ergometer (a simulated rowing machine which records the number of meters that a rower pulls and their 'split,' or time per five meters.) This should lead to a tight race between the two squads.

"I think the races should be an exciting challenge for both teams," UMass women's co-captain Wendy Wilbur said.

In the past, almost as far back as 1974 when the women started rowing at UMass, it has been a tradition for the women's varsity eight boat to race the men's novice boat in a decision-making contest.

"If the men win, they become novice men. If the women win, the men are then considered the 'novice boys' for the rest of the season," rower Leigh Twarog said of the Henley.

"The women's boat is pulling some pretty fast times — the novice boat will be well challenged, it should be a fun race," president of the men's club Dave Touhey said.

This year, however, under coach Jim Dietz, the women will pose more of a challenge to the men.

"Jim [Dietz] wants us to take on all of the men's boats instead of just the novice men," Twarog said.

The women will race both their varsity eight and their second eight boats against the men's heavyweight eight, lightweight eight, and second lightweight eight boats.

Unlike the other fall races that the UMass rowers have been competing in, Saturday's will be sprints instead of head races. The course will most likely be close to 1000 meters.

At last year's Hadley Henley, the team christened their new boats at their home boathouse. This year the women are also planning to add a race with the Amherst College women's team in a four-seat race.

"A four with Amherst will be a big challenge. They have a really fast four," Wilbur said.

UMass does not practice with a four, and in the event of the race, four of the top rowers from the varsity women's eight will fill the boat.

Rival races, challenges, and titles at stake — this should make for an exciting weekend.

Ball Control

PAUL BILODEAU/ COLLEGIAN

Joel Pittman [5] and the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team, who defeated Providence 3-0 on Wednesday, will travel north to take on Maine Saturday.

Minutewomen set for championships

By Derek Milosavljevic
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's tennis team is ready to take the next step in its climb to the top of the collegiate tennis world this weekend.

Coming into this season, UMass Coach Judy Dixon said of her top-notch freshman players, "This is the recruiting class that will put UMass on the map."

This weekend her young team looks to establish dominance, at least over the region, as they travel to the New England Championships at the University of Vermont.

Dixon said that her team's goal for the fall season was to win this tournament. While her team blazed out to a 6-0 start, and currently enjoys a 7-2 record, she is not overly enthusiastic about their performance.

"We've beaten the teams we should beat," she said. "But we've lost close matches to the teams that we're evenly matched with."

Those close matches could have easily gone either way. In both 4-3 losses, to Central Connecticut State and the University of Connecticut, freshman Noelle Orsini found herself in the position of playing out her singles match with the teams tied 3-3 and the overall result hanging in the balance. In both cases Orsini came up short, but she will get at least one more chance.

On Oct. 11, the Minutewomen hosted Providence. UMass took the doubles point by winning at No. 1 and No. 2 doubles, and got two points from singles victories by Liesl Sitton and Liz Durant. With losses at the No. 3, 5, and 6 slots, once again the Minutewomen's hopes hung on Orsini.

Darkness at the Boyden courts prevented the conclusion of the match so Orsini will pick it up in Burlington, Vermont, site of the championships, tomorrow night at 8:00 p.m.

When the New Englands finally do get underway on Saturday, the Minutewomen will be one of the favorites among the eight team field.

Dixon said the Minutewomen are expected to contend with the aforementioned Providence and Central Connecticut for the championship.

"We need a strong showing out of our No. 1 doubles team," Dixon said. "And stronger showings out of our No. 2 and No. 3 singles."

The format of the tournament allows for only four singles players, and those participating in singles cannot play doubles. Lana Gorodeskaya and senior Mary Edwards will take over the No. 1 doubles slot normally occupied by Sitton and Caroline Steele.

The different format presented some interesting choices for Dixon, particularly where Steele is concerned. Dixon said she thought about playing the freshman out of Paducah, Ky. in doubles, where she has fared better this season.

Dixon said while having Steele play doubles may have benefited the team in the short term, the singles experience will help the team and Steele more in the long run.

As usual, the anchor for the Minutewomen will be Sitton. The junior captain enters the weekend with a perfect 9-0 record and will be seeded No.1 in the singles flight.

Joining Sitton as a No. 1 seed is sophomore Liz Durant, who is expected to take home top honors at the No. 4 slot.

Dixon knows, of course, that in sports, nothing is certain.

"We could finish anywhere from first to third," she said. "We have to step it up."

■ Field Hockey

continued from page 10

the game hopefully I'll have a chance to talk to the players and their families," Donnelly said.

Rhode Island enters the game with a 4-9 record. The rebuilding efforts are evident as first year coach Laurie LeGoff tries to make the Rams a contender for the future.

Donnelly has a must-win attitude towards both games this weekend and says that beating Rhode Island decisively is just as important as defeating James Madison.

"We have to beat Rhode Island decisively, and if we beat James Madison then it's huge," said Donnelly. "If we beat JMU and we don't have a good showing against Rhode Island, then it won't matter. We have to treat this weekend as a tournament, that has to be our mind set."

Gain Valuable "Real World" Experience on Campus!

The Collegian Business Office is looking for ambitious, organized Sophomore SOM majors for the position of

Associate Business Manager

Direct supervision received from the Collegian business manager, as well as the assistant business manager. Applications may be obtained at:

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center (the basement)

Resumes and cover letters may be directed to:

Michael McRae, Business Manager

Application Deadline: October 17

The Collegian is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today Hal asked me to work some extra hours next week.
I didn't really feel like it, but I said I would.
"Great," he said.
I'm not sure why I agreed to do it.

Virtual Reality By Mark Warnat

Wo Wo Wo. . . Thud! By Gleeson

Without Porpoise By Kennet Dall

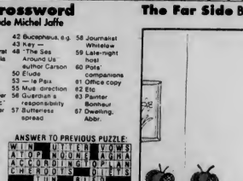
HEY C'MON OUT OLIVER... LISTEN THIS IS SERIOUS. MANDY MAY HAVE BROKEN YOUR HEART, BUT YOU'RE ACTING SCARY. LET'S GO GET SOME CARROTS, AND TALK ABOUT IT, DAL.
...WELL OKAY, I'M COMING OUT.
GRAB HIM!
WHAT THE...
BAM! BOOM! WHAP! POW!
I'LL GET YOU ALL FOR THIS, YOU'LL PAY, I'LL CHEW ON YOUR LIVERS...
LETS THROW HIM IN THE RIVER, IT'S DARK
HONESTLY, THIS WAS THE ONLY WAY.

Daily Crossword
Edited byTrude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Kitchen fixtures
6 Bikini parts
10 Blood or steamer
14 Condescend to, informally
15 Place
16 Atmosphere
17 Coronet
18 Song for Samuzze
19 Playwright Levin and others
20 Summer '94 Lincoln Center dance attraction
23 Limb
24 Certain bill
25 Dweller in 51 Across
28 Shout
31 Shun
36 Where Can is
38 High time
40 Fragrant resin
41 Summer '94 Broadway-musical debutant
44 White-plumed bird
45 — Verde
46 Trial run
47 Quester
49 Kind of stairs
51 Farm enclosure
52 Ring site
54 Brownies org.
56 Summer '94 across-the-nation sports event
64 Sailors direction
65 Race division
66 He treads the boards
68 Bridle part
69 Beet or Millay
70 Kind of porridge
71 Vanished bird
72 "— we forget"
73 Fitzgerald and namesakes

DOWN
1 Mideast grain
Abbr.
2 What's — for me?
3 Arriver on Ararat
4 Asian peninsula
5 Paul Simon's kind of night
6 Donkey's cry
7 — avis
8 Lake Pisa's tower
9 "South Pacific" chorus member
10 Spinnaker or jib
11 Fling
12 Does —
13 Time gone by
21 Signs
22 Photographer Adams
25 Does a road job
26 Effigy
27 Kind of painting
29 Fertile soil
30 Missed
32 Joint preceder
33 Attends
34 Ami
35 Small and delicate
37 Give off smoke
38 — prius
42 Bucephalus, e.g.
43 Key —
48 "The Sea Around Us" author Carson
50 Eludo
53 — la Paix
55 Mule direction
56 Guardrail's responsibility
57 Butteress spread
58 Journalist Whitelaw
59 Late-night host
60 Pole companionne
61 Office copy
62 Etc
63 Painter Bonheur
67 Dwelling, Abbr.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



10/14/94

The Far Side By Gary Larson

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center
Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

1968 MUSTANG
Classic '68 Mustang Way Cool Wheels FOR SALE!!! Electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, 2 door, great way to pick up chicks and studs alike. Best offer call Bern at 8-4434.

ACTIVITIES
NECKC Karate Club Shotokan shyrai-ryed Tomari 101 M-W 6-9:30 F 7-9 All levels welcome! Call Jessica at 549-4279

ANNOUNCEMENTS
Attention students! The UMass Credit Union has new/ used car, personal, and computer loans starting at 9.9%. Come visit our loan dept. 314 Student Union bldg. or call at 545-2800

If interested in becoming an International Students Association executive committee member call Rachael 549-1910 or Otara 549-6019

Learn to bartend with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools right here in Amherst! Classes start Wed. Oct. 12th. Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX to register today!

UMass Single Parent Association is having a pot luck dinner Friday 10/21 at 6:30pm in the Campus Center. If you'd like to join our group call Vicki 549-7248

AUTO FOR SALE
1968 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Bern at 8-4434

1979 Chevy Impala Runs well $600 or best offer 256-8794

1983 Plymouth Reliant automatic, air, looks good, runs great $695 256-8182

85 Chevy Cavalier automatic, white coupe, good shape, good sound $3200 532-3184

Volkswagen Quantum 1986 excellent condition, 5 speed, 115K, power brakes, windows, steering, locks, a/c $7300 253-9508

BOXING LESSONS
Recreational & competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Dale Rumpus. 549-5757

BUSINESS OPP.
Two unique food vending carts for sale 549-5089. Dood

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE
Do you need $$$ for college??? WE have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service 2 Oakhurst Terrace East, N. Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

COMPUTERS
IBM PC computers $180 Includes monitor, 10 meg hard drive, 5 1/4" floppy. Mac, Dos, printers $90 call 256-8094

ENTERTAINMENT
Video rentals now available at HAmden and Worcester munchie stores

FOR RENT
1 room in 4 bedroom apt- 2 bathrooms, kitchen, spacious living rooms 5 min from campus $230/ month (or less) Jim 253-4173

Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery$29.00

Take over my lease. Call 665-7498

FOR SALE
1984 Buick $1700/neg call 6-2031 Dorm fridge $70 call 6-7631

Brother Word Processor WP-2200 Spell and grammar check, spread sheet Excellent for papers. $700 Debbie 253-0967

Dorm fridge excellent condition-includes all trays and shelves $70 call 549-5514

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $500. Call Chris at 800-289-5687

Pagers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549-7231

Shades for less -name brand sunglasses 30%-56% off- Campus Center MART 800-9BSHADES

Solid oak triple dresser Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354

Tandy computer system- w/ drives, monitor, printer. Tons of software. Asking 325 or b/o Call Joe 6-7348

Tandy computer system, inc 512K computer, drives, printer, many extras Asking 250 Inc. Call Joe 6-7348

Tori Amos great seats 253-4895

FOR SALE:AUDIO/VIDEO
Stereo equipment, tv's, vcr's, etc. used/reconditioned, area's largest selection, priced to sell! Buy/sell/trade Pioneer Video Exchange. Sundays 10-5 at Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt 9, Hadley. Other days call 256-0941

FOUND
Wamse's Seiko watch with leather band in lot 78. Call 885-3627 and describe

Seiko watch found by Tobin Farm field on jogging path. Phone 545-4050 to id and claim ask for Phil

HELP WANTED
14 openings due to expansion local company has part time openings. $9.00 up to $15.00 to start. No experience necessary. training provided, advancement potential, flexible schedules, scholarships possible. For application details call 413 733 0057

$363.60. Sell funny college T-shirts! Profit $363.60. Risk free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs 1-800-700-4250

Alaska employment- fishing industry. Earn up to $3,000-$6,000+ per month. Room + board! Transportation! Male/female. No experience necessary. (206)545-4155 ext A50011

Bartender wanted Trattoria Gaspetto Italian restaurant. Apply in person after 4:00pm. 1177 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 549-7777

Cruise ships hiring earn up to $2000 + mo. on cruise ships or land. tour companies. Seasonal + full time employment available. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext C50011

Cruise ships jobs! Up to $900 weekly. Free room/ board. Now hiring skilled/ unskilled men and women. No experience necessary. Call 601-799-1362 ext 5016, 24 hours

Earn $6/hr light pollution. Work for political change with Clean Water Action environmental campaign staff. On bus lines. Paid training. P/T or career opportunity. Call 584-9830

Bland- Start your own business selling jewelry. Call 1-800-700-3608 for info

Earn $2500 & free trips Spring Break! Student Holidays, the nation's leader in spring break vacations, seeking enthusiastic, highly motivated students and organizations to promote and sell all inclusive 5 star Cancun trips! From only $499 call now 1-80-360-7949

Jobs for the environment. Grassroots political organizing. Earn $40-60/ day. Flexible hours/ casual atmosphere. Call Alex 256-6434

New hiring experienced wo-trieff and driver. Apply within Ko-Chi Restaurant

Pinocchio's hiring full and part time drivers. Apply in person, after 4:30pm any day.

Receive up to 288,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413 525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am- 5pm

Start own cash business, turn straws into dollars, money while you sleep, public service machine raises people's awareness. Minimum investment $1,295. Serious inquiries only. George 817-837-0609

INSTRUCTION
Kava fun! Make money! Aerobic instructor training begins October 15. Call 413-774-6261. Accredited by American Council on Exercise

LOSE WEIGHT
Dieting is dangerous & depletes muscles including heart muscle! Use our all herbal products- FDA safe/effective/Dr recommended. Make peace with your body. Call the Herbal Loft 256-3016

LOST
I lost my purse on 10/10 at Bart's. If you found it, please please call me 548-3875

Lost wire rimmed eyeglasses in Campus Center early morning. 413 339-4038

Pair of bifocal glasses. If found contact 546-0345 reward

Ray Ban sunglasses. Rectangular, red rim. Lost at Benducci's cafe. Cash reward. Call Thad at 253-2391

Sunglasses in a brown hard case "Greg" written on back. Call 582-0780

MOTORCYCLES
Kawasaki EX 500 88 Good condition 9000mi 549-4331

OFF CAMPUS VOICE MAIL!!!
Always get your messages! Many free options, access from anywhere. Only $5.95/mo Call 549-5734

PERSONALS
Andrea congrats! I am so happy you're pledging. Keep smiling! love Your Pinhand

Boost. You had your last chance. You are not the same person I fell in love with. You've changed too much for my liking. It's over- move on. Bella

Gaby. I hope that when we go to Florida in the winter, you'll trust my shorts. The H Hero

Happy Birthday B.A. You're the best!! Love, K & Kel. Sah. + Co

Hey Sweets- You're a neo-maxi zoom-tweebie Mug a hugs Cherry

Leon- Congrats on ALPh. Get psyched for this semester. Love, Your Phi friend

To my angel Amy Glacier. Hope you are having an amazing week! Get psyched for the darts party- it'll be a blast! So, do you know who I am yet? Keep guessing! Alpha Chi love your "wings"

To the Salem witches. Thanks for having me every night. Gorge

PINNOCHIO'S
Hiring drivers! full or part time. Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Bolfwood Walk. Ask for Bob.

ROOMMATE WANTED
Someone to share newly remodeled 2 bed apartment. Beautiful area! 267/mo + electricity. Call Jason 885-3728

SERVICES
"Balloon-view" cartoon characterss. Makes great gift! $25, full color! Satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 548-9447

Call the playground ball 256-6085. Mag bases, frisbees, oshing games etc. New title ers welcome!

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Model search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues. Total test photos now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and super-endowed models. Males, females, all categories welcome. 617 523-0367

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906

SHAREWARE
Free!!! Shareware listing hundreds of quality software programs only $3.49 each. Call 584-2787

WANTED
Actor, Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jugglers, armourist to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. Billy Irene 584-6703

Campus representative Kodak products spring break trips "guarantees" best prices + incentives. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S. Padre + Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1-800-227-4432.

Experienced drummer Must own kit 253-4987

Need cheap powerbook 100 if any information call Jess at 253-5515

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Tuna Melts!!	Chicken or Linguini
Tacos	Midnite Madness Cake!
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Tuna, Tuna	Chicken or Ratatatouille
Veggie Tacos	Midnite Madness Cake!

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Brian Gormley
Copy Editor.....Jacob W. Michaels
Photo Technician.....Gordon Fenwick
Production Supervisor.....Sandy Bogage
Production.....Joshua Grey, Mike "Fleaboy" Stern

Quote of the Day

"You all go to the University of Masturbators."

—Brother Tom, On the South Side Lawn

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Remain true to your high ideals — you will be the better for it! Earnest funds for college while a child is still young or you will be sorry later on. Promise a useful new tool.

TAURUS (April 20- May 20) Help someone who is willing to work hard to get a better education. Renting costs require careful planning. Taking shortcuts will not get you what you want. Be through. Love romance a sex and chance.

GEMINI (May 21- June 20) Good intentions and helpful suggestions abound today, making it easier for you to complete important tasks. A lesser idea seems improved, put it into action as soon as possible.

CANCER (June 21- July 22) Keep up the good work! Those efforts will boost your earning power and win the commendation of an employer. An urge to gamble should be squelched. Avoid the time grant before making a commitment.

LEO (July 23- Aug. 22) A change in your place of employment renews your interest in education. Buy used, written books or enroll in classes. A friend's marriage may be on the rocks. Be supportive but avoid offering advice.

VIRGO (Aug. 23- Sept. 22) Do not let a golden opportunity slip through your fingers today. Your friends are with you. Recognize your finances and leave the house a bit the less haunted.

LIBRA (Sept. 23- Oct. 22) Check out certain financial figures before proceeding with the day's business. Minutes or even months could be shortened by a call. Good things are received this afternoon.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23- Nov. 21) Going about your work quietly and deliberately is the best job protection. Encourage a close co-worker to follow your lead. A careful by-planned date will brighten your evening. Express your appreciation for someone's thoughtfulness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22- Dec. 21) Make a greater effort to act on your artistic or creative ideas. Devote less finance to misguided pursuits and more to self-improvement. Be discreet.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22- Jan. 19) The value of close collaborators is emphasized today. Try not to depart from family-devised policies. Those who stand to benefit financially from a partnership must be careful not to lock the final 3 cooperation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20- Feb. 18) Think before you act and you will be less likely to make a mistake. A superficial exchange of views and views may not be enough. Take a hands-on approach.

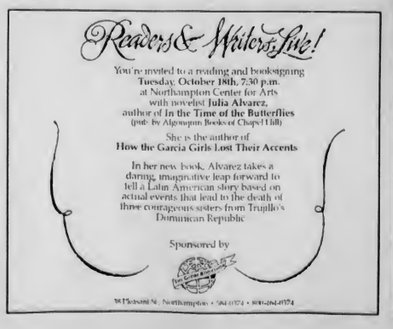
PISCES (Feb. 19- March 20) An awesome and social affair get the thumbs up sign! Let others know you intend to see more of them in the day ends. Any doubters must be convinced that you are on the right track.

Taken as an unified team from courts over the Harvard campusand that he had said his countries set of active court figurines and made a has warned for a job performing fish in an Alaskan fish canners.

Our reporter Wilkerson has decided to rank a university and is considering taking a journalistic position on the Arts & Living staff.

My only commented that we must have done something right raising our children. "Oh, Brian", I said. "It wouldn't have been anything we did... We re reasonable & hard hearted individuals!" "Yes, your probably right Walter. It must have been that below the waistline road. No one we are to wrap our fish."

Comingson
"Fine weaving goods"



Readers & Writers Live!
You're invited to a reading and bookssigning
Tuesday, October 18th, 7:30 p.m.
at Northampton Center for Arts with novelist Julia Alvarez, author of In the Time of the Butterflies
(pub. by Algonquin Books of Chapel Hill)
She is the author of
How the Garcia Girls Lost Their Accents
In her new book, Alvarez takes a daring, imaginative leap forward to tell a Latin American story based on actual events that lead to the death of three courageous sisters from Trujillo's Dominican Republic
Sponsored by

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
Bud Ice $6.99
Molson Golden & Ice $7.99
Heineken Tarwebok $5.49
Black Dog Ale $4.99
Cider JAck Hard Cider $5.29 six
All Prices Plus Deposit
Poland Spring Vodka $8.99
Cuervo Gold $10.99
Appleton White & Dark Rum $8.99
Courvoisier V.S. $16.99
Kahlua Combos All Flavors $4.75
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt.9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt.9E
VISA - MASTERCARD - DISCOVER Accepted

TEST YOUR DETECTOR FOR LIFE!

Your smoke detector has the power to save your life Or does it? If you haven't tested your smoke detector lately, it may not be working. And that's a risk you can't afford to take.

Working smoke detectors give us early warning of a fire, providing extra time to escape safely. But they can't do their job if we haven't done ours - monthly testing to make sure they're working.

Test all the smoke detectors in your home. For the life of the detector and for the lives of your loved ones.

American Red Cross | National Fire Protection Association

Sports

Minutemen ready for midnight practice

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

Let the madness begin.

The University of Massachusetts men's basketball team will take part in the annual Midnight Madness tonight at the William D. Mullins Center for it's first practice of the 1994–95 season. Doors will open for spectators at 10:30 p.m.

The Minutemen, with Channel 40's own Mike Rattee as the Master of Ceremonies, will kick off the upcoming year in style, as festivities are planned around the first practice of the season. Those include a dunk contest, a free–throw shooting contest and a three–on–three game, among other happenings.

The finalists from the preliminary rounds held this week will compete in the events.

Scheduled to perform will the UMass Hoop Band, the dance team, and the funk club, as well as the Minutemen cheerleaders.

Among those scheduled to appear will be the Minutemen hockey team and the women's basketball team, who begin its season, as well.

In the minutes leading up to midnight, the Minutemen basketball players will then be formally introduced, followed by the assistant coaches and concluded by the introduction of head coach John Calipari.

Practice will begin at 12 a.m., where Massachusetts will hold a regular practice — drills, playing an intra–squad scrimmage, etc.

New rules in NCAA college basketball moved the first practice of the season up 15 games, giving the Minutemen and the rest of the Division I teams more time to prepare for the start of the season.

"It's good for college basketball," said Calipari. "In order to prepare for the rigors of a tough season, the players need to get themselves mentally and physically ready."

"I like it, I think with the way the rules are, you can't do anything with basketball in the postseason," said assistant coach Bill Bayno. "They're on their own, with the lifting and the conditioning."

The first true practice will be Saturday, as Massachusetts begins to prepare for the toughest schedule in the history of the program.

The Minutemen will face 10 teams that appeared in the 1994 NCAA tournament, including the season–opener against defending national champion Arkansas on Friday, Nov. 25 in the Starter Tip–Off Classic at the Springfield Civic Center.

Massachusetts also plays Kansas in Anaheim, CA, in the first John Wooden Classic, as well as Ivy Leaguers Princeton and Pennsylvania, Western Kentucky [with all three at the Mullins Center], Louisville [at the Worcester Centrum], Maryland, St. Louis, LaSalle, and Southwest Louisiana — not to mention its Atlantic–10 opponents.

Calipari and the Minutemen know that tonight's practice will consist of more enjoyment than seriousness, as the hyped evening will hinge onto the festivities more than the effort given in the drills and scrimmage.

"It's more for the students and fans than anything else," said Calipari. "It's a tradition, a time to enjoy basketball. It's more a night of fun and dunk contests than it is a

COLLEGIAN FILE

Marcus Camby [21] and the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team will begin the 1994–95 season tonight as the annual Midnight Madness takes place at the William D. Mullins Center.

Minutemen to face Tribe

Massachusetts up for key YanCon tilt

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts football team will face its toughest task of the season when the Minutemen travel to Williamsburg, PA, to take on No. 8 William and Mary.

Massachusetts [3–2 overall, 2–1 in Yankee Conference] heads into Saturday's tilt coming off a disappointing 14–11 loss to New Hampshire last weekend. The Tribe [5–1, 3–0] survived a scare from last place Northeastern last Saturday, defeating the Huskies 17–12.

William and Mary may enter the game against the Minutemen without standout quarterback Shawn Knight. Knight was injured in an Oct. 1 contest against Virginia, spraining his ankle. Coach Jimmy Laycock said that the NCAA I–AA career passing efficiency rating leader [204.6] and this year's YanCon leader [160.0] is doubtful for Saturday's game.

Knight's accomplishments have not gone unnoticed, "Shawn is as outstanding of an individual as he is a quarterback," said Coach Laycock. "Not only does he have the ability, he also makes great decisions."

"He's as fine a quarterback as I've played against, and I've been here for a while," said coach Mike Hodges. "Since I've coached here, I've seen guys like Rich Gannon and Mike Buck, and those guys have played in the NFL.

"He's got a strong arm and great awareness. He's as good as we have ever faced."

Stepping up for the Tribe at QB is Matt Byrne. The junior field general, in his first collegiate start, threw for 251 yards in last weekend's game against Northeastern. Needless to say, the passing game is not salvaged.

Although the Knight–attack may not be apparent, Hodges realizes the passing ability of Byrne.

"[Matt's] a great player, too," said Hodges. "His play is similar to [Knight's] game."

Not to be forgotten is the Tribe backfield, led by Troy Keen. The junior back has amassed 709 yards on the ground in six games, and his 118.2 yards per game is second only to Massachusetts' All–America candidate Rene Ingoglia.

The Massachusetts defense will pose a strong front to the William and Mary offense. Despite the tough loss to New Hampshire, the defense shined once again, holding the Wildcats to under 200 yards of offense for the second time this season, including only 54 yards in the air. The Minutemen are currently ranked fifth in Division I–AA in total defense, according to the Oct. 9 ratings.

"[Massachusetts] has a tremendous defense," said Laycock. "They are very sound."

As for the Massachusetts offense, the backfield continues to carry the load. The Minutemen backs own the fourth best running attack in the nation, averaging 276.6 yards per game in the five games this season.

Ingoglia rushed for 72 yards against New Hampshire, and is now second in Division I–AA in rushing. With the 837 yards on 122 carries so far this season, the junior standout has moved to second place on the all–time rushing yardage list [2,778 yards], 1081 yards behind record–holder Garry Pearson [3,859]. Ingoglia is also second in the Massachusetts career touchdown list with 26, just nine behind Pearson.

For Hodges and the Minutemen, this game is important for Division I–AA playoff reasons. Two straight losses in the conference would hurt the Minutemen, as was evident in

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 8

Field hockey to face URI, unbeaten JMU

By Mike Pinder
Collegian Staff

Look out James Madison, Massachusetts does not take kindly to undefeated teams.

This weekend the No. 8 Massachusetts field hockey team will take to the road to play a pair of turf games.

The Minutewomen will square off against the University of Rhode Island on Saturday and then will clash against the undefeated James Madison Colonials at Boston College on Sunday.

UMass, after knocking off previously undefeated North Carolina will be looking to repeat their stunning feat against an equally powerful foe in James Madison.

The Colonials enter this weekend with an impressive 11–0– 1 record, which is good for a No. 2 national ranking.

UMass coach Megan Donnelly expects a tough game against the Colonials, but insists that the Minutewomen will go into the game with the same frame of mind as they did against the Tar Heels.

"JMU is very similar to North Carolina, they are one of only two teams that have defeated [No. 1] Old Dominion this year," said Donnelly. "They are extremely fast, have great stick work, and have a dangerous attack."

Donnelly expects the Minutewomen to rise to the occasion by playing with high intensity and staying right with the Colonials to the final minute.

"We have a lot of strengths, I think they [JMU] are taking this game a bit more seriously because of what we did against Carolina," said Donnelly. "We play our best against the best. I'm not concerned about the intensity level or the confidence level, I think it's going to be another tremendous game and a very tight game."

If history holds true for the Minutewomen, they should come away with a victory against the Colonials. UMass holds a 2–0 lifetime record against James Madison.

UMass' main concern will be in stopping sophomore forward Carole Thate. Thate has scored an eye–opening 23 goals in 12 games and has assisted on seven others.

The UMass defense, anchored by sophomore goalkeeper Hilary Rose, will be called upon to contain Thate and the rest of the Colonials.

With Thate's staggering statistics, Donnelly views her as a huge threat, but insists that she has not faced a defense of the Minutewomen's caliber.

"She is an extremely dangerous forward. She's phenomenal, but she hasn't come across a defense like ours," said Donnelly.

"As great as I think she is, I like the way we match up against her. If she can get by Kyle [Rothenberger] and then get by Natalie [Hart] and then get by Hilary, then she has earned it."

Before the Minutewomen face off against the Colonials, they must contend with Donnelly's former team, the Rhode Island Rams.

Donnelly compiled a 7–27–1 record in her two–year tenure at URI, as she worked to rebuild the Rams' program.

"I'm not going to think about playing against Rhode Island too much before the game, but after

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 8

Women's soccer ready to face George Washington

By Mike Reiss
Collegian Staff

From fighting for the pride of the Northeast region against Hartford on Wednesday, the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team now sets its sight on Atlantic 10– Conference play.

Tomorrow, the team will fly out to George Washington University in the morning to face the Colonials in an all–important conference matchup (4 p.m.). Both teams are 3–0 in the A–10.

"They'll be one of the better teams we've faced," said Massachusetts head coach Jim Rudy. "They've improved by about four, five starters from last season."

As of Wednesday, Rudy was still in search of a practice field for his team to prepare for the match. While the normal practice field at Lower Boyden is available, Rudy has scanned the area for a playing surface like the one at GW.

"I'm looking for a terrible field," he said. "The field we're going to be playing on is just terrible."

The Colonials are anything but terrible. They enter the match with a No. 18 national ranking, while Massachusetts checks in at No. 7. At 8–4–0, what makes GW such a threat is the high–level of competition it has played.

This past weekend, the team participated in a four–team tournament at Duke, going up against No. 1 North Carolina and Duke. Although it came away with two 2–0 losses, GW has undoubtedly learned what it takes to compete at a national level of play.

"It helps that we know what it takes to play with the great teams," said GW assistant Carla DeSantis, a 1988 UMass graduate. "And UMass is another great team. You have to have respect for a team that advanced to the Final Four last season."

And in turn, Massachusetts has a great deal of respect for the Colonials. It's hard not to with a player like Chemar Smith leading the way. Smith has amassed a whopping 47 shots on goal, while scoring eight goals in the process. Her 18 points double GW's next scorer, and what's even more scary is that she's only a freshman.

For Massachusetts, the focus is on bouncing back and finding a groove. Another key will be health, as sophomore defender Erin Lynch had a colossal bag of ice ace bandaged to her right thigh after the Hartford match. The injury didn't appear to be game–threatening.

Lynch, who was named to Soccer America's Women's Team of the Week, has been one of the Minutewomen's most consistent performers throughout the season. Offensively, Rebecca Myers, Nicole Roberts and Rachel LeDuc are Massachusetts top point scorers.

Consistency and depth is what GW thrives on. Kristin Davidson (3 goals, 3 assists) and Kristin Robertson (2 goals, 4 assists) are also scoring threats, while goalkeeper Traci Jensen has been rock–solid in goal. Jensen has posted a 7–3 mark between the pipes and boasts an impressive 0.72 GAA. Altogether, it's safe to say to say that the Colonials are a team on the rise.

"For us, this is the first year we've been in the Top 20," said DeSantis. "It would be nice for us to stay there, and maybe even make it to the NCAA Tournament.

"UMass is coming to play us then leaving. That shows us a lot of respect and we show them respect. They're a top– class club."

COLLEGIAN FILE

The University of Massachusetts women's soccer team will travel to Washington, D.C. to take on George Washington Saturday afternoon.

Water polo looks to grab top seed in Eastern Championships

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

This weekend, the University of Massachusetts men's water polo team will be hosting the third and final leg of the Eastern Water Polo Association Varsity North Division Tournament in its home pool at Amherst College.

With a sweep of the prior two tournaments, the Minutemen will look to establish the top seeding for next month's Eastern Championships held at Harvard University the weekend of November 5–6.

The round–robin format of this tri–meet setup is organized to shape the competition for the Easterns, which then leads to a post–season NCAA berth.

Riding a eighteen game–winning streak, second longest in UMass water polo history, as well as a No. 11 ranking in this week's NCAA Collegiate Water Polo Poll, the men's team hopes to continue their good fortune. Since the Minutemen's three game losing streak at the beginning of the season, it has been nothing but victories.

So far, it has been a easy ride for UMass in North Division play. At the first EWPA Tournament held at Brown University last Sept. 17 in Providence, RI, UMass outscored Queens College and Iona University by a whopping margin of 45–12.

In the second tournament held at the beginning of this month, at Fordham University in Bronx, N.Y., the Minutemen also blew U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, Saint Francis, and Fordham out of the pool with another offensive outburst of sixty–nine tallies.

What becomes apparent, though, is the fact that these teams were not exactly the best competition for a program that has played and beaten Top 20 favorites like Air Force [8–7], Villanova [14–5] and Bucknell [15–7]. Also, a stark realization has become evident to Coach Russ Yarworth the past few weeks.

The lack of concentration.

It then leads to easy scoring opportunities for their opponents. Last weekend at the Villanova Invitational, UMass let No. 16 Princeton and mediocre Queens College back in their respective games with late game defensive letdowns. To Coach Yarworth, one hand shakes the other.

"Beside defense is intensity. We have to play intense every minute. If we want to be one of the better teams in the country, we have got to do that. Not only in games, but every single practice, and that is what I am on them about," Yarworth said.

"You got to make a team that you're playing not want to play. You want to make them want to get up, get in the locker room, and go home."

To the team this concept has neither gone unnoticed nor unheard.

"That's what we have to go by, intensity. The coach stresses that. The way you practice is the way you play," said senior co–captain Adolfo Oliete. "Which is true. If you do something right in practice, you got to do it right in the game. He emphasizes intensity, that is the key buzz word."

This weekend's matches at the Amherst College pool will be the last homestand for UMass. From this point, the Minutemen travel across the country to Claremont, CA, with a match against No. 10 Air Force on Oct. 21, and then compete in the Baldyview Tournament on Oct. 22 and Oct. 23.

The times for Saturday's matches are 11:30 a.m. against Harvard University, and 5 p.m. against Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Sunday's matches begin with the Boston College Eagles at 10 a.m., and Brown University at 1:30 p.m.

Trax On Trax Off not keen on Ween

The newest release from wacky popsters Ween as well as many more new releases are critiqued in this week's album reviews. (Arts & Living, page 5)

Martin Jones changes tune

Former UMass student, Martin Jones changes his position on the UMass mascot, the Minuteman (Story on page 3).

Minutemen upset No. 7 William & Mary

Cornerback Tony Williams [pictured] and the UMass football team defeated William & Mary 23-14. See related stories on page 10.

Extended Forecast

Sunny and mild today with light winds, highs between 55- 60. Tonight mostly clear, low near 30. Tuesday sunny with high clouds, high near 60. Increasing clouds Wednesday, high 53.

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 45	HIGH: 60 LOW: 48	HIGH: 53 LOW: 40

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 24 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Monday, October 17, 1994

Aristide supporters murder two

By Anita Snow
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti—A day after President Jean-Bertrand Aristide came home in triumph, violence Sunday marred his message of reconciliation and illustrated the challenge of putting Haiti's tragic past behind.

Two people were killed in the violence that began when two dozen vigilantes wielding machetes, clubs and rocks went from house to house in a Port-au-Prince slum, looking for members of a paramilitary group known to have killed and brutalized Aristide supporters.

Led by a man with "Lavalas" shaved into his head, the name of Aristide's popular movement, the vigilantes found a member of the Front for the Advancement and Progress of Haiti (FRAPH), Lorreuis Francois, and bloodied his wife's face as she told them to leave her husband alone. A neighbor persuaded them to leave, but less than two hours later, witnesses said, Francois came outside and angrily whacked a machete into the first person he saw, a pull-cart driver named Jean, killing him. Witnesses said the vigilantes came back, found Francois in his house and killed him with a single machete blow. They brought a Haitian army helmet and a uniform out into the street and set them ablaze. Standing in the street, people watched the flames in silence. The rampage Sunday afternoon came less than 24 hours after Aristide preached peace and reconciliation to the Haitian people in a victorious speech at the National Palace.

On Sunday, a crowd of hundreds waited while Aristide met with Maj. Gen. Jean-Claude Duperval, then yelled and pounded on the interim army chief's car when he left. Duperval said he and Aristide discussed reducing the size of the army.

Aristide's government already was moving to identify human rights violators among Haiti's military so they could disarm and fire them, sources close to the government said Sunday.

"That first process ... is supposed to be happening now," Mike Levy, an American aide to the Aristide government, told The Associated Press on Sunday.

He said special attention would be paid to the anti-gang units, which arrested and tortured Aristide supporters during the military regime that ended this month with the departure of the men who orchestrated the 1991 coup.

Aristide plans to trim the 7,450-member army to 1,500. Some of those identified for retirement will be assigned to U.S.-funded retraining or re-education programs.

But the large number of Haitian soldiers abandoning their posts in recent days makes the number uncertain.

"There may not even be 1,500 people in the army right now," Levy said. Army officers accompanied coup leaders Raoul Cedras and Michel Francois into exile, and whole contingents in the Cap-Haitien and Les Cayes areas have disappeared.

Parts of the military, particularly several notorious police divisions, will be eliminated. The rural sheriffs whose feudal rule was restored after Aristide's ouster were outlawed upon his return.

Still, fear of pro-army militia remains high in this country, long cursed by tyranny and violence. Many were surprised that only some 10,000 people - instead of hundreds of thousands - showed up for Aristide's homecoming speech on Saturday.

COURTESY OF ASSOCIATED PRESS
Jean-Bertrand Aristide

Surgeon General set to speak at Smith

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

U.S. Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders will speak on her perceptions of our nation's health care system and goals in upgrading health education this afternoon at Smith College.

Elders, the first woman and second African-American to hold her position, will give her lecture on "Women's Health in the Era of Health Care Reform," the Smith College Press Office said.

She was sworn in September 8, 1993 and has, since then, helped to bring national attention to health care and education. She is known for touching on sensitive topics, such as drugs and sex education, the press office said.

She advocates distribution of condoms to adolescents and studying the pros and cons of drug legalization, the press office said. Elders has written more than 150 articles for medical research publications.

"I want to change the way we think about health by putting prevention first. I want to change the behaviors and attitudes of Americans by promoting programs and policies which will enable each of us to be responsible for our own health. I want to be the voice and the vision of the poor and the powerless. And I would like to make every child born in America a planned and wanted child," Elders said at her Senate confirmation hearings.

Elders, the oldest of eight children, is a native of Schaal, Arkansas.

At 15 she received a shcolarship to attend Philander Smith College, and at 18 she entered the U.S. army.

In 1987, then-Governor Bill Clinton named Elders director of the Arkansas Department of Health. During her time in office she worked at increasing early and regular prenatal care, widened the expanse of HIV testing and counseling services throughout the state, and did the same for breast cancer screenings and in-home services for terminally ill patients, the press office said.

Early childhood screenings in Arkansas increased from more than 4000 in 1988 to 45,000 in 1992 while she was in office, and the immunization rate for two-year-olds increased from 34 percent in 1989 to 60 percent in 1992, the press office said.

Her speech will be held at 4 p.m. in John M. Greene Hall at Smith College.

Anti–Semitism the subject of Hillel workshop

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

It was a "recognition of the kind of commitment that the school has in dealing constructively, sensitively and firmly with the issue of anti–Semitism," according to keynote speaker Leonard Zakim, that we were there on the gorgeous autumn day in mid–October.

"There" was the Hillel House, where a workshop on Confronting Anti–Semitism on the College Campus took place yesterday from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Rabbi Saul Perlmutter of the University of Massachusetts Hillel, began by speaking on why the conference had been organized. Perlmutter spoke to a crowd of 80 people of the "three Ps" that had caused the conference. The first P was Problems on campus, then Progress that had been made, and lastly, new Possibilities for the future.

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN
Leonard Zakim

Perlmutter spoke of the problems in the past, citing a survey done by the University in October of 1991, that said four out of five Jewish students had experienced some anti– Semitic harassment while at UMass. He went on to list problems with teachers, anonymous graffiti, students being threatened, and anti–Semitic speakers who come to campus, as examples of harassment. He also mentioned problems that Jewish faculty and staff have with anti–Semitism.

Perlmutter went on to talk about the progress that has been made, saying student leadership has brought around many of the changes, and that anti–Semitism is no longer seen as a problem of just the Jewish Community.

Perlmutter then went on to talk about the possibilities for the future, saying "anti–Semitism has not disappeared on this campus." Perlmutter said the reason we were here today was "to think about and dream together about what else could be happening on this campus."

Combatting anti–Semitism

Zakith, the Assistant National Community Service Director for Special Projects and the New England Regional Director of the Anti–Defamation League, spoke on more specific ways to fight anti–Semitism.

Zakim began by saying anti–Semitism is a 1000 year old disease, and that it can not be dealt with alone. But eventually, he said, "if you keep plugging away, change will occur."

Zakim went on to say, "Let no one distort the first amendment when it comes to this issue. . .Some people say if you criticize someone for speaking you're trying to censor them. Well, for those of you who understand the meaning of the word, there's a difference between censure and censor." Zakim added we have a right to raise our voices and say we don not like what they're saying.

He said there was a need to correct negative

Turn to ANTI-SEMITISM, page 3

Workshop speakers look for unification among ethnic groups

By Henry Brier
Collegian Staff

Joshua Walker, a Jewish undeclared freshman, attended Hillel House's discussion session entitled "Building Coalitions" because he wanted to be constructive.

"My roommate is Black, and we discuss our relations," he said.

This discussion session was a smaller part of Hillel's "Confronting Anti–Semitism" workshop, which took place on Oct. 16.

This discussion was led by Mr. Leonard Zakim, who was also the workshop's keynote speaker. In his keynote address, Zakim encouraged Jews to "speak out intelligently" in efforts to elicit "rational debate, based on facts, fairness and decency."

During the discussion after the address, attendants had the chance to speak of their ideas on how to unify the sentiments of different organizations on campus.

The discussion was a vital opportunity for interaction, and to understand, from each other, what ideas would and would not work.

Emily Gold, a Junior history and journalism double–major, spoke of her experience on the Black/Jewish Relations Committee.

"I joined because I was upset and surprised at the ethnic separation," she said, citing the residence halls, the dining commons and the parties she attended.

Gold went on to discuss the formation of coalitions which naturally resulted after building friendships.

Delphine Quarles, an African–American employ-

Turn to REACTIONS, page 2

Amherst business granted variance on smoking ban

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

The Amherst Health Department agreed Thursday to grant a partial exemption to its ban on smoking in Amherst work places by giving the manager of the downtown restaurant and bar permission to allow smoking in his establishment during certain hours.

The department voted unanimously at its Thursday night meeting to grant a variance to the ban to Jerry Jolly, manager of The Pub.

Jolly was given permission by the department to allow smoking in The Pub between 10 p.m. and 1 a.m., if he agrees to install an air filtration system and pay for periodic testing of the building's daytime air quality.

Jolly said after the meeting that he's unsure if he will use the variance, citing the costs of installing the equipment and paying for the testing.

"My feeling is that if Jerry [Jolly] wants to go ahead and do this, than I would be willing to figure out some constraints and let him try and get this to work," said Amherst Health Department Co–Chair Samuel Gladstone.

Jolly estimates smoking should be allowed in The Pub between 10 p.m. and 1 a.m. on approximately December 1 if he decides to install the filters and pay for the testing.

"I don't know if I'm going to do it," said Jolly following Thursday's meeting. "But it's nice to know they put something on the table we can look at."

The conditions of the variance require air testing one month after the filters are installed and every three months thereafter until a smoking ban goes into effect in Amherst bars on July 1.

The health department ban, instituted on September 1, includes restaurants but not bars. Bars are defined by the department as establishments earning more than 60 percent of their revenue from alcohol sales.

While The Pub falls under the category of restaurant, Jolly told the health department in late September that The Pub stops serving food at 9:30 p.m. and thereafter becomes a bar.

Jolly said he estimates the cost of the air filters at $3000 and the cost of each test to run between $1500 and $2000.

The testing of the air will occur during The Pub's opening hours to ensure

Turn to PUB, page 2

Professors nominated for awards

Tate and Wideman among finalists for National Book Awards

By John Williams Jr.
Collegian Correspondent

Two University of Massachusetts professors and distinguished authors were recently selected as finalists in the 1994 National Book Awards for fiction, nonfiction and poetry.

Pulitzer Prize winner James Tate and prize–winning author John Edgar Wideman are finalists among 740 other nominees.

Both men, who teach creative writing in the master of fine arts program at UMass, were chosen among 740 other nominated authors for works written within the past year.

"I'm honored," Tate said. "It's wonderful when your peers recognize your work in a special way."

The winners will be announced Nov. 16 at the 44th National Book Awards ceremony to be held at the Plaza Hotel in New York City.

Each winner will receive $10,000 and a bronze commemorative sculpture commissioned especially for the occasion.

"Something like this can be great for the students as well as the nominees," Tate said. "Hopefully things like this will attract the best possible writing students to the University."

Both of UMass' nominees have distinguished histories, claiming numerous prizes and awards.

Distinguished Histories

James Tate has been a UMass faculty member since 1971. His work Worshipful Company of Fletchers (Ecco Press) was nominated in the poetry category.

Tate's previous work Selected Poems (Wesleyan University Press, 1991) won both the Pulitzer Prize and the William Carlos Williams Award.

In 1989, he was named a Distinguished University Professor by the UMass Board of Trustees for achievements in his fields.

Previously, Tate had published 10 collections of poems. His first, The Lost Pilot, won the Yale Series Of Younger Poets Award.

John Edgar Wideman has been a UMass faculty member since 1986. His book, Fatheralong: A Meditation on Fathers, Sons, Race and Society, was nominated in the nonfiction category and is a memoir about ancestry, color, time and language.

"The book is about family, race and history. It was inspired by a trip I took to South Carolina with my dad," said Wideman.

Wideman gave the graduation address at last year's commencement ceremony.

Wideman previously won the American Book Award for Fiction for his 1990 book, Philadelphia Fire which also won a PEN/Faulkner Award.

The PEN/Faulkner Award was also given for his work Sent For You Yesterday.

In 1991, Wideman won the Lannan Literary Fellowship for fiction, and in 1993 he was awarded a "genius grant" from the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation.

Wideman said he is "very pleased and proud" to be nominated.

A Boost to the University's Recognition

Professor Stephen Clingman, the chair of the English Department, said, "The department is delighted and very proud, it speaks very well of the department.

"These professors have achieved quite an honor. The University should be advertising this. It can only benefit the University and its students," Clingman said.

For being finalists, the two will receive $1000 apiece.

Let the games begin!

PAUL BEDDEAU / COLLEGIAN
The men's basketball team held its first practice during the Midnight Madness festivities Friday night. Here, teammates slap five prior to the start of an intrasquad scrimmage.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Monday Ticker

Market Closes as of 5pm Friday,October 14, 1994

Index	Close	Change
Dow Jones Industrial Average	3910.47	+20.52
Standard & Poor's 500	469.10	+1.33
Nasdaq Composite Index	767.08	-0.81
AMSE Index	458.50	-0.07

Market Reports

Compiled by Andrew Ferguson

Trade report fuels gains in crop prices.

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures prices rose moderately Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade as the export sales picture brightened.

Wheat futures rebounded from an early drop below $4 a bushel - a two-week low - on signs Russia and Egypt were closer to buying U.S. wheat.

An anticipated Russian purchase of 400,000 metric tons already has been factored into the market, analysts said. Egypt boosted its bid for 450,000 metric tons of wheat at subsidized prices after the Agriculture Department rejected an earlier Egyptian bid as too low. Corn and soybeans rose on news from the USDA of strong export sale last week. Those rallies may be short-lived, though, in light of forecasts for record production of those crops, said John Kleist, agricultural research director for Quantum Financial Services Inc.

Inflation under control, stocks end mixed.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks finished mixed Friday, with the Dow jones industrials in solidly positive territory after a fresh round of economic data showed inflation under control.

The Dow jones industrial average rose 20.52 to 3,910.47, up 113.04 for the week and within shouting distance of 4,000. But the best gains were concentrated in blue chip issues. Declining issues edged out advancers by 1,052 to 1,026 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 779 unchanged. Volume was light at 251.7 million shares, down from 269.55 million on Thursday.

Broader market indexes ended mixed. The NYSE's composite index rose 0.56 to 257.99. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 1.33 to 469.10. But the Nasdaq composite index fell 0.81 to 767.08. And the American Stock Exchange's market value index slipped 0.07 to 458.50.

Dollar slumps against soaring German mark.

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar slumped broadly Friday, falling to a 3-month low against the mark because of surging demand for Germany's currency ahead of the country's weekend elections. Confidence that German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's center-right coalition will win Sunday's vote sparked a broad rally in the mark, with trading between European currencies largely driving the foreign exchange market, analysts said.

Gold prices rose. On New York's Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery settled at $387.60 per troy ounce, up $1.50. Republic National Bank quoted gold 90 cents higher, at $387.40, at 4 p.m. EDT.

The dollar began sliding on Asian markets, where the trading day begins, continuing its downward trajectory when activity shifted to Europe and the United States.

"What you saw today was people buying marks rather than selling dollars," said David de Rosa, a director at Swiss Bank Corp. in New York.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, Oct. 17

Meeting — First meeting for the Turkish Student Association in Campus Center, Room 801, at 7 p.m. For information, call 546-0564.

Volunteers — Help hang 120 shirts representing the daily U.S. death rate caused by advanced breast cancer. Herter hall, UMass, 4:30 p.m. to 5:30.

Lecture — Jews are Not White: Blacks and Jews in American Life, Neilson Library Browsing room, Smith College, 4:15 p.m.

Talk — "Normal" Sex: The Poetics of Gender and Desire, Dickinson House, MHC, free, 4:30 p.m.

Film — Ivan The Terrible, Part II, 202 Dwight Hall, MHC, 7:15 p.m.

Lecture — Politics of Meaning: A Jewish Perspective, Converse Assembly Room, Amherst College, free, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — Writing as Sacrament, Helen Hills Chapel, Smith College, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — From Mapu to Mendele: The Growth of the Hebrew Novel, Wright Hall common room, Smith College, free, 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Tuesday, Oct. 18

Event — Honor "Women's Answers to Breast Cancer," outdoors west of Herter Hall, UMass, 4 p.m.

Meeting — Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance, Campus Center room 803. 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Meeting — Prospective new Exercise Science undergraduate majors, 5 p.m. to 6 p.m., Boyden room 249.

Attention — Attendance will be taken in Psychology 217, Cruelty and Kindness: The Psychology of Good and Evil.

Exam — Psychology 305 exam will be today for Professor Harry Schumer, Bartlett 65.

Social — LBGA Info-Social, Campus Center room 803, 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Film — Not at the Mall: A Series of Film Experiences You Won't Find Anywhere Else, Bartlett Hall, UMass, 7 p.m.

Music — Faculty Recital: Ravel's World, Bezanson Recital Hall, UMass, 8 p.m.

Wednesday, Oct. 19

Meeting — Lesbian Bisexual Woman's Union, LBGA office, 413B Student Union, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Seminar — Dr. Ron Booker, "Regulation of postembryonic neurogenesis in the moth," Morrill-South room 203, 4 p.m.

Lecture — Richard Ryan, Rayerweather 202-203, Amherst College, free, 4:15 p.m.

Video — Mephisto, Hooker Auditorium, MHC, 7:30 p.m.

Thursday, Oct. 20

Meeting — The Grief Survival Group, a support group for those who have suffered loss., Campus Center, UMass, 7 p.m.

Multi-Arts — Arts Council, ARTeVENTives at the maze, UMass, Maze is located at the Stadium Stop of the PVTA Campus Shuttle.

Meeting — Bisexual Rap Group, 4th floor lounge, Mary Lyon House, Northeast, UMass, 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Film — Fantastic Cinema: Legends, Myths, Adventures, Herter Hall 227, UMass, free, 7:30 p.m.

Symposium — The O.J. Simpson Case: A Deconstruction of Legal and Media Issues, Main Lecture Hall, HC, 7:30 p.m.

Local center targets violence against women

The Men's Resource Center offers three programs to help males deal with emotions

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

Amherst — The Men's Resource Center (MRC) of Western Massachusetts offers programs to battle violence against women and create an atmosphere for men to release their feelings.

Located on Main Street, the MRC has been supporting men since 1982, becoming incorporated as a non-profit organization in 1988.

"We work in two dimensions," said Steven Botkin, co- director for the center. "The first is supporting men, and the other is confronting violence."

Men Overcoming Violence

The MRC offers three main programs. The first is the Men Overcoming Violence Program (MOVE), a Department of Public Health Certified batterer intervention program.

"We work with men who have been violent or abusive," said Botkin. "The abuse can sometimes be emotional or verbal more than physical."

Botkin said that men either come on their own, or they are mandated by the Hampshire County District Court in Northampton. The majority of men come by court order.

The $750 program meets once a week for 24 weeks. There is also a follow up program for men who have completed the program.

Overcoming a Lack of Funding

The financial problem arises for MOVE because some people claim it is so expensive, according to Botkin who said the state does not provide any funding for the program, even though the program is often court mandated.

"It's one of the biggest problems we face," said Botkin. "A lot of the people who come through the courts are people who are in financial need, and can't afford the program."

Acting Chief Probation Officer Eugene Sheehan of the Hampshire County District Court said he could not give any explanation as to why the state does not fund MOVE.

"The state provides funding for drinking and driving programs — if you can't pay for it, the state helps out," said Sheehan. "There is no such help for this program and there should be."

Education at the High School Level

The second program offered by the MRC is the High School Education Project. Botkin said the program works in two sections — training for men and workshops for local high schools.

"The training is for men who are interested in giving and leading workshops," Botkin said.

The workshops are given at high schools across western Massachusetts and focus on respect in relationships.

"There are a lot of men who would love to both develop their skills as a leader, and make a contribution in some way," said Botkin. "They have strong feelings about sexism and violence against women."

Men's Group Meetings

The third MRC program is the Men's Group Project (MGP), a free, drop-in men's group which meets every Sunday night.

Max Rivers, coordinator of the project says that the MGP is a multi-faceted program designed to show men how to teach men's groups, learn what a men's group is, and make available a regular men's group.

"A group of men are always in competition with each other," said Rivers. "The difference with a men's group is we switch it around. If you show me who you are, I will show respect and do the same."

River's said he encourages men to use the MGP as a stepping stone to create their own group, either to get members, or learn how to operate a men's group.

"Our belief is a closed men's group can go deeper than an open one," River's said.

According to Botkin, the MRC offers other small projects besides the three main programs.

"Twice a year we go on weekend retreats, and we have a fatherhood project that offers an educational resource for fathers," Botkin said.

Rape Workshops

They also offer workshops at schools that deal with rape.

"It's intense," said Botkin. "Because of this workshop some men realize that they've raped, and some women will realize they've been raped."

The MRC will be holding a fall membership meeting at the Bangs Community Center at 7:30 p.m.

Auction helps to fight domestic violence

By Laura Schmidt
Collegian Correspondent

HOLYOKE — People at a recent auction did more than bid for goods — they were helping area women in need.

The Womanshelters Companeras, a support organization for abused women, held its fourth annual benefit auction last week at the Wharehouse in Holyoke to raise funds for its various support programs.

"The act of giving can be done in a number of ways," said auctioneer David Mendel. "The truest act is when you can give as much as you can give."

The Womanshelter is an organization in Holyoke which focuses on reducing and preventing violence against women. The organization seeks to help women through support and educational resources such as an emergency shelter, a 24- hour hotline, counseling, support groups and legal advocacy.

The shelter also offers services for teen violence and awareness.

Cheryl Criscio, executive director for the Womanshelter, said 180 local area businesses donated their services for the "action auction," the largest fund raiser of the year for the Womanshelter.

Last year, Criscio said the auction raised nearly $8,000. Criscio said she hoped to raise around $12,000.

All proceeds go directly to the Womanshelter.

Examples of donations included a plane ride for four adults and a script of the recent movie Speed, starring Keanu Reaves.

Other donations included various precious gem stones, a script of the final episode of "Family Ties," and gift certificates to Mt. Tom Ski Area in Holyoke.

University of Massachusetts men's football and basketball tickets were also donated by the UMass Athletic Department.

Criscio said the community of Western Massachusetts has been extremely helpful. "The community really comes together to pull this auction off," she said.

Kate Hamilton, a member of the board of directors of Mass Cohiliition for battered women shelter and Jane Doe Service said she encourages students to volunteer at the center and to use it as a resource.

"It's extremely important to recognize the early prevention signs especially for young women in a dating and college environment," said Hamilton.

"No one deserves to be hit or hurt. Domestic violence is a prevalent community problem," Criscio said.

■ Pub

continued from page 1

the filtration system removes most of the nicotine and particulates released into The Pub's air by smoking customers at night.

The health department wants to ensure to the air quality will be similar to that of other non-smoking establishments when The Pub opens as a restaurant in the morning.

Jolly said at a September 29 health department meeting that the ban placed him at a "competitive disadvantage" compared to other bars and that sales and customer counts were down from earlier years at the same point in the University of Massachusetts semester.

The health department's ban on smoking in Amherst work places is part of an effort to decrease smoking in the area and shield non-smokers from adverse health effects linked to indirectly inhaled or "second-hand" tobacco smoke.

Tobacco smoke has been linked to lung cancer, heart disease and the inflammation of certain respiratory problems.

■ reactions

continued from page 1

ee at the University of Massachusetts Center for Organization, Advising and Programming in attendance at the discussion, has served on many different campus organizations in her efforts to diversify the community. Quarles is also a graduate of the University of Massachusetts.

"We need to engage in more intelligent conversation about race," she said.

Quarles also encouraged listeners to "take risks in building coalitions," and the best time is "privately, one-on-one." Here, she said, friendship and appreciation has the chance to develop.

Ken Schoen, a Jewish professional in the Pioneer Valley, attended the workshop and discussion due to his concerns about anti-Semitism. Schoen sells books oriented towards Judaic affairs and history in South Deerfield, and he spoke of constructive student tutorial efforts between Blacks and Jews in New York which he was a part of during the 1960s.

"We built coalitions by coming together," he said.

Is there anything good here?

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

Amherst residents peruse old records during Sunday's Vintage Vinyl sale on the Amherst Common. Compact discs were selling for $4 apiece, while records were sold for $2.

BE A TEACHER.
BE A HERO.
Call 1-800-45-TEACH.

SHOOT FOR THE COLLEGIAN
New photographers are always welcome at the Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England

It's Time To Sow; Dig It!
aMAZE yourself and help us plant bulbs in the wildflower meadow of the MAZE on October 20 from 3:30 to 6:00
An Arts Council ARTeVENTive with flutes and food and earthly delights.
Sign up for this SunSet celebration
At our CC Tables 10/14 & 10/17
At the A.C. Office, 103 Hasbrouck
For More Info Call 545-0202

1. What's different on Tuesdays in Amherst?
A. $10 Haircuts for U Mass Students?
B. Only $2 extra for long hair.
C. Shampoo and Blowdry included.
D. All the above.
REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS
253-9526
On the PVTA Route

Eating Disorder Programs • 1994/95
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Call for more information 549-2671, Ext. 232.
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phoneline for help around eating disorders - yourself, or someone you know. 549-2671, ext. 168.

A solemn reminder...

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Volunteer Alexandra Debarros, an undeclared sophomore, looks down as organizer Sunny Miller hands her a shirt to hang as part of Breast Cancer Awareness Month. The clothesline strung outside of Herter Hall represents women who have died from the disease. The line will be up all week and a vigil will be held on Tuesday at 4 p.m.

PIRG states Puffer's Pond is not polluted

By Kathryn Silver
Collegian Correspondent

Volunteers working with the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group, a student group at the University of Massachusetts, determined Puffer's Pond was not polluted.

The group held a streamwalk this past weekend at the pond in North Amherst to survey the water for high levels of pollution.

"Puffer's Pond was not polluted, but the clean up was really educational in showing how a river that was not polluted might be by near by parking lots," said Jill Roughnan, a UMass sophomore and a member of MASSPIRG. "Basically the clean up helped people become aware of water pollution and natural resources."

Roughnan said she was pleased with the number of volunteers.

"There was a lot of support from students from Amherst College, Smith College and UMass," she said.

Puffer's Pond is a recreational area which offers fishing, swimming, a small beach on two sides of the pond as well as a number of hiking trails in the area.

"Students swim in the pond," Roughnan said. "But there are also a number of people who pollute it. This campaign will hopefully help people see that even a place like Puffer's Pond can be polluted."

Peter Westover, director of conservation in Amherst said the pond and its surrounding area are well-maintained in the summertime.

"Care takers do clean the pond, but the season ended Oct. 1," said Westover. "Spring is when cleaning is really needed, but if they [MASSPIRG] are willing to do some work to clean up the pond and have the resources to do so, that's great."

"There was a lot of support from students from Amherst College, Smith College and UMass."

–Jill Roughnan

The streamwalk lasted about two hours Saturday afternoon and included Jerry Schoen of the University Water Research Center who instructed the group on how to survey water.

Roughnan said some things to watch for in preventing water pollution include open pipes, sediment, and cigarette butts.

"If rivers and ponds are not protected from pollution by some sort of barrier, pollution can leak from the lots to the water," Roughnan said.

MASSPIRG is a student-run organization which has about 27 chapters on college campuses throughout the state. The group works for environmental preservation as well as consumers' rights.

Roughnan said she only recently became involved with MASSPIRG. "I hadn't heard much about MASSPIRG last year. Up coming campaigns and events are helping to raise awareness and support for MASSPIRG."

MASSPIRG will have a series of events throughout the semester, including a visit to local gammer schools to address environmental issues.

BUCCI HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 a pleasant st amherst 256 0733
145 main st northampton 586 0155

My eyes teared as I hacked my desert dry cough at the road dust that swirled up from behind the passing semi. Yes, I was lost... a long way from the rotting New York cul-de-sac I had called my home. Why HAD I eaten that moldy bread. Why DID I let that circus bear break my heart.
Mass. Daily Collegian
Wherever you go, There you are!

DAVID GRAY
FLESH
The new album out now
On tour now with Shawn Colvin
©1994 Virgin Records Ltd., T/A Hut Recordings. Issued under exclusive license in the United States by Virgin Records.
FOR THE RECORD
FOR THE RELORD
104 N. PLEASANT
AMHERST, MA
413 256-8134
Main St Records
MAIN ST. RECORDS, 213 MAIN ST
NORTH HAMPTON, MA
413 586-5726

News Briefs

Compiled by Arthur Stapleton Jr.

Israel–PLO to resume talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel agreed Sunday to resume talks with the Palestinians on extending autonomy in the occupied lands, after they were suspended last week over the kidnapping of an Israeli soldier by Islamic militants.

A spokesman for Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said negotiations would resume in Cairo, Egypt, on Tuesday. PLO leader Yasser Arafat declined comment, but Palestinian sources said privately that they would attend the talks.

The Israeli Cabinet also reopened the Gaza Strip, sealed off during the kidnapping crisis. But ministers emphasized they expected Arafat to continue with his crackdown against Hamas, the militant fundamentalist group that captured the soldier.

Talks were suspended following the abduction of 19-year-old Nachshon Waxman, who was killed by his captors Friday night when Israeli commandos stormed their hideout near Jerusalem. A commando and three militants also died in the raid.

Fallout from the raid was still felt Sunday in Gaza, where hundreds of Palestinian police blocked roads in central Gaza City to prevent riots, then joined Israeli soldiers in defusing protests by hundreds of Islamic militants near an isolated Jewish settlement.

Violence also was reported in the West Bank, where soldiers shot and killed a Palestinian, 22-year-old Emad Edabe, near Hebron after he refused orders to halt. The army said Edabe had appeared to be committing a theft.

Hundreds mourn slain Israeli soldier

NEW YORK (AP) — Hundreds of people gathered outside the PLO Mission to the United Nations on Sunday to mourn the death of Nachshon Waxman, the 19-year-old Israeli soldier slain by Islamic militants.

"We insist that Nachshon Waxman's murder have meaning," Rabbi Avi Weiss said. "And so we gather this morning not only to cry, but to cry out, because there are other Nachshon Waxmans, there are other Jews who are being held hostage."

About 250 people prayed out loud together. Some held signs above their heads reading "Operation Nachshon: Remember Other Israeli Hostages" and "Arafat - Ignoble Peace Prize." Many left their signs behind at the mission's doorstep.

Cpl. Nachshon Waxman had been taken hostage by the fundamentalist group Hamas, which opposes the Israel-PLO peace process. Waxman, three of his captors and an Israeli officer died in a Friday night raid, about an hour before the militants' deadline for killing Waxman if Israel didn't release 200 Arab prisoners.

Weiss, the president of the Coalition for Jewish Concerns, said the peace talks between Israel and the PLO should stop until other hostages are released.

"It's beyond words, beyond expression ... the events that occurred in the Middle East, particularly the indifference and the callousness of the PLO," said Jack Freidman, one of the mourners. "It's very sad what's happening in Israel and it shouldn't be going on," said another, 14-year-old Mark Hershenov. "If this so-called peace process is a peace process, it just shouldn't be happening."

Police chief dead at age 59

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — After 30 years of rising through the police ranks from patrol officer to chief, Ernest Stelzer faced another challenge - disease.

He battled a heart attack and a bout with cancer in recent years, but it proved too much for the 59-year-old, who died early Saturday morning.

"He was a very strong and integral man and will be sorely missed," said Henry Thomas, chairman of the city's Police Commission. "He was a very good servant and came through the ranks to reach the pinnacle of his career."

Stelzer, who had been chief since 1990, died at 2 a.m. at Baystate Medical Center, said Lt. Richard Duffy. Due to his illness, he had been on unofficial leave since September.

After taking over from Thomas Fitzgerald, Stelzer had led the department through a controversial period involving deep cuts in the police budget. He had said he would not retire for another 2 1/2 years in order to keep the city from "imposing some outsider" on the department, a colleague said.

It was unclear Saturday who would succeed Stelzer, as the city is grappling over whether to keep the chief's office within civil service - meaning the position is earned through a testing process - or to make it an appointed position, Thomas said. Meanwhile, Deputy Chief Daniel Spellacy has been named acting chief.

Among those remembering Stelzer was Lt. Richard Labelle, who had worked with the chief for more than 20 years and remembered him as an aggressive young homicide detective who solved many murders. "He was a good man and cared about the other person. You could go to his office and talk to him. ... (His opinion) wasn't made in stone; he was very flexible," Labelle said.

"Yesterday was just the time when he couldn't hold on any longer," Thomas said.

A memorial service has been scheduled for 10 a.m. Tuesday at Sacred Heart Church.

Protestor admits to 'ignorant mistake' last year; Jones now sees the Minuteman in another light

Amherst – One year ago, the mascot at the University of Massachusetts was under attack as being a racist and sexist symbol. Last week, Martin Jones, a leader of the group which tried to ban the Minuteman, is saying that he made "an ignorant mistake."

Jones, who is not registered as a student at UMass, held a press conference yesterday at the Bangs Community Center at which he explained his plans in "Operation Restore America," involving his support of the Minuteman as a symbol of patriotism.

"Under the banner of 'Operation Restore America,' I am calling on good and faithful Americans everywhere to support and contribute to this very important crusade," Jones said in a speech.

In the first phase of "Operation Restore America," Jones visited Lexington and Concord, the site of the Minuteman National Park, last Saturday.

Following his trip to Lexington and Concord, Jones will initiate the second phase of his "Operation," by unveiling a proposal in an attempt to establish a national holiday honoring the Minuteman, and other American heroes. The holiday will be based on the Patriots Day.

At the press conference, Jones explained his reasons for a complete turn around of his views about the Minuteman in the course of a year. Jones admitted that one night during the summer he came to the realization that his views about the Minuteman were wrong.

"I then realized immediately that I was wrong about the Minutemen. They were not 'racist, sexist and violent.' They were the original liberators of America," Jones said.

–Justin Doyle

■ anti-Semitism

continued from page 1

images, and that, as in business or politics, people must respond or they will fail. Zakim emphasized the need to rebut falsehoods by quoting the Nazi propaganda minister, Joseph Goebel, who said, "The more often a lie is repeated, the more swiftly it becomes the truth."

When combatting anti–Semitism, though, Zakim said, one should be polite and fair, and not to forget the audience. He said to try to attack the exclusive focus on Jews by using humor or sarcasm. He used, as an example, that "if all Jews are cheap, then are all African–Americans lazy or good athletes, are all Italians members of the Mafia or are they romantic, are all Polish people lacking in intelligence, are all women only capable of being barefoot and pregnant in the kitchen? Those images and those stereotypes would be rejected outright." Lastly Zakim said not to demean others' pain, and to reject all forms of bigotry.

After Zakim's speech the group broke up into four student and adult led discussion groups to form proposals for ways to combat anti–Semitism in the future.

Future Proposals

After their individual discussion sessions, the four groups reunited to discuss the ideas they had. The first group spoke on supporting the individual student. They suggested creating speakers bureaus, both of students and members of the Jewish faculty group, to speak out about misinformation in classes or elsewhere on campus. They also spoke about letting students know how to combat anti–Semitism through campus media, as well as outside sources. Lastly they said to let students know to document any problems they had with teachers or staff, so as to facilitate dealing with the problem in the future.

Group two dealt with the problem of anti–Semitic speakers coming to campus. They suggested holding some other event at the same time as the speaker, although said it may be more profitable at times to host a different speaker than to stage a protest. Lastly, they said, they should try not to polarize the campus into two fighting factions.

Group three talked about creating a positive campus climate for Jewish concerns. They suggested joining various groups, or becoming Resident Assistants, so they could help positively educate the campus about Jewish issues. They also spoke of trying to get role models, not necessarily Jews, from the staff and faculty at the University.

The last group spoke on building coalitions. They talked of how it can not be assumed that other groups are sensitive to Jewish issues, and that they might need to educate others about the problems. They said bridge–building is a year long process, not just something that could be done in crisis situations. They said we need to go to other groups' activities and build relations. Lastly they said that there could be no "compromise with standards or truth."

Yes, it's always a fine day for a barbeque. Ahh nothing like the hot coals to cause a man to break down in a fit of hysterical crying. "WHY DIDN'T I LISTEN TO MY MOTHER AND BECOME A DOG GROOMER!!!!"
COLLEGIAN
NEVER TOO LATE TO CHANGE

BEE BOP
If you've got a good vibe you can snap your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum.
Mass Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

Book NOW for the holidays!
LONDON $173
AMSTERDAM $215
PARIS $229
MILAN $239
TEL AVIV $369
CARACAS $215
BANGKOK $468
Fares are each way based on a round trip purchase from Boston. Student or Faculty ID may be required. Taxes and surcharges not included. Fares subject to change
79 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-1261

Why live in an old, unkept apartment, just because you want to live off campus?
Sugarloaf Estates
has newly renovated, two bedroom apartments that feature:
• Free heat & hot water
• New designer eat-in kitchens
• New wall to wall carpeting
• On-Site laundry facilities
• On PVTA busline
There's no comparison . . .
Modern Apartment homes for a student budget!
Call Today To See Our Model Apartment
665-3856
Rt. 47 Sunderland, MA

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darrenne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gurley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bruce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Emily Marino Women's Issues Editor
Andrew Ferguson Business Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Jen Rozde Circulation Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Ada Michelle Lugo Multicultural Affairs Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Kelli Sparg News Editor Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1958. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

U.S. role should be limited in Haiti

Jean-Bertrand Aristide's return to Haiti marks the joyful re-birth of a democratic nation and the death of a three-year stretch of violent oppression. For his people, it is an end to the militant dictatorship and the hopeful beginnings of a promised democracy.

For the Clinton administration it is a foreign policy victory, although one that took three years, several policy reversals and eventual dispatching of military force.

While today the light of democracy shines brightly in Haiti, tomorrow that light might flicker. As with all newly established democratic nations, the road ahead is a long and potentially rocky one. The torch to light the right way cannot be carried by involving U.S. military force. Aristide's administration has been restored, and it is now a matter of human interest, not national security for the United States. While the United States should give Haiti economic and technical support to make the goings easier, it is important that the military units deployed to the country, remain only on the sidelines as a recognition to the international support given to Aristide.

As long as Haiti lives up to its promise for democracy and human rights, the U.S. military involvement should be taken out as soon as possible, to avoid long term entanglement and to allow Haitians the opportunity to govern themselves without outside interference.

When McDonald's was a restaurant

Sitting in the Campus Center is a real eye opener. Watching the droves of people herded into their appropriate ATM lines, getting caught in that massive mob, me-bee-ing towards the munchy store. I realized something important as I watched people aggressively pushing others aside to get to their classes.

We are a society of utter convenience. We are a remote-controlling, Auto-Teller Machining, fast-food eating, and computer generated society. Not that this is any kind of revelation to me, but I will say that it has occurred to me recently just how lazy we have become. It seems as if nothing can be fast enough, easy enough, or powerful enough to please us anymore.

Taking the PVTA is just not fulfilling, using a library card catalog is just too tedious to figure out and getting up to change the channel just takes too much effort. We have become the slackers our parents have predicted we would be.

I can't really remember when this decline began, but from a personal perspective I can remember the existence of manual televisions. In fact, I can remember when the oven was the only source to warm up leftovers, only being able to withdraw money from the bank during its posted hours, and people who were content with their local public transportation system.

At some point though we forgot sitting on the couch without a small black device with numbers on it attached to our hands. With the advancement of technologs came our dependence on machines. There is no longer a real need for human companionship, we've got computers that talk back.

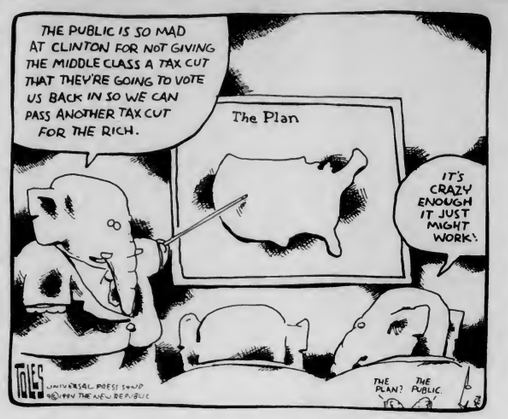
My big question is, when did this become the norm? Technology has become a downfall for our generation. The more we create the less ambitious we become. The Home Shopping Networks are our leaders, and McDonald's is our ambassador to the world. These are two major contributors to our immediate response obsessed society. Both of these organizations have helped to promote many of the effortless and convenient way we choose to operate.

We don't have to leave the comforts of our own homes to enjoy a meal or purchase jewelry. Why should we? They both offer the culture we crave, after all. With the promotion of these industries, we have also lost important assets to our society. We cannot appreciate art or literature anymore. It takes far less effort to watch mindless sitcoms and game shows. All of our culture comes from programming that resolves itself within the hour. No brain required. This is not the best way to sustain a generation. At some point between the invention of television and the concept of music videos, we have become slackers.

The point is that we cannot keep accepting our indulgences of convenience. We cannot become complacent with our modern vices. It is time to become a little less self- absorbed and a lot more ambitious. We do not need the faster cars and the ultra fast food. There must be a way to advance technologically without destroying the next generation's viability.

The way we use these conveniences is the greatest concern. It is a problem to become too dependent on our technology, not knowing how to appreciate something that may take longer than 30 minutes, or not being able to talk to someone without the T.V. on. It's comforting to know that if you lose the remote control to your couch, there's still numbers on the television that are accessible. To me it's a matter of moderation, like anything, too much of a good thing is too much. We don't need to become addicted. Instead of going home to eat your Big Mac and watching info-mercials, try talking to people who won't shut off if the power goes out.

Tara Ruelle is a UMass student.



THE PUBLIC IS SO MAD AT CLINTON FOR NOT GIVING THE MIDDLE CLASS A TAX CUT THAT THEY'RE GOING TO VOTE US BACK IN SO WE CAN PASS ANOTHER TAX CUT FOR THE RICH.
The Plan
IT'S CRAZY ENOUGH IT JUST MIGHT WORK!
THE PLAN?
THE PUBLIC
Talbot
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND
©1994 THE NEW REPUBLIC

Watching as the cows swim away

Woke up from a dream this morning.

I was walking through the streets of New York City along the river. Skyscrapers stretched forever into the hazy horizon, grey towers melting into a grey sky. Across the river was a huge glass walking bridge, and I could see thousands of people crowded inside running back and forth.

Then I was on the water, on some kind of cement island, looking back at the same city. All around me was crystal blue water in which floated with the many monuments that should have been in Washington D.C. Cruising through the bay were two jet black killer whales, arcing periodically into the air. I glanced back at the city and shrouded in the mist was the towering form of Parliament with Big Ben.

Then I noticed something else swimming in the water. It swam slowly and gracefully underwater, and as it approached the surface I saw it was a black and white mottled cow. It leapt into the air straight up, took a breath, and plunged back in after graceful arc. I thought it was the most beautiful cow I had ever seen. I told this to my sister who was sitting next to me and she smiled.

Previously that night I was sitting on a couch at a party. A couple dozen people who I did not know were mingling, standing, playing 5-man, all within my visual range of observation. Among the people who were on the couch with me was a girl who was visiting from NYU. She was aghast at the proportion of plaid-shirted-baseball-hat-wearing men and perky "oh my gawd you are soooo smart" women.

I had for a moment an image of New York as a social Mecca. Guys with shaved heads and baseball hats mingled. Girls talked of Shakespeare and its relevance to modern pop music. Everybody drank cognac and downed it with Rolling Rock. Nobody listened to Pearl Jam. "Eddie Vedder is different because you know he means it. He's so deep."

Somehow this later transformed itself into floating monuments, misplaced foreign government buildings and elegant swimming cows.

There is a common saying that, after a bout with such visions, one wakes up and says "boy, I had a weird dream last night." I have no qualms about the attitude that seeing a cow leap out of the water with gusto only to plunge back in again and swim about in the crystal blue New York harbor might be considered weird. The event itself is highly unlikely I would imagine. However, it is wrong to disregard the bovine imagery as simply just another useless vision about a cow that happens to plague your nights.

We tend to throw away our dreams, disregarding them as things outside ourselves that creep into our minds and make us act out ridiculous scenarios. I don't tell as many people about my dreams anymore because they usually look at me like I am insane, primarily because I find them exactly the antithesis of weird. I think, in fact, it is an exceptionally normal thing for us to do.

What we create in our subconscious in the dark of night is our own world of our own creation. We create the characters and the scenes, the interaction and the conversation, everything down to the last cow.

Yet why do we not dream about, say, talking about the weather with Janet from Management?

Because for the exact reason that Janet is not a cow that swims. Janet is dull. You see Janet every day. Janet wears hues of olive green and maroon and has an annoying nasally voice. In fact, Janet is part of the world that you live every waking moment of your life. Janet is the world. Janet is the sun. All our society revolves around Janet and her bad hair.

The really weird thing is the shock that people tend to display when they found out you don't dream about Janet. You dream instead about mysterious cities that bring on feelings of fear and wonderment. You dream about clear waters and the cool mist coming off the surface after the whales have resurfaced. You even dream about then have to run from secret agents that are trying to kill you, sprinting through dark and narrow streets as you try to repair your jammed revolver. (Yes, that is what happened.)

There is nothing weird about what we create. What is weird is that we do not try to recapture it afterwards. That we slough off those visions that echo in our minds, and dismiss them as absurd. It is absurd to not wish for them. Janet is not my god. I do not sing hymns to Janet. I pray instead to a Swimming Calf, and try my best to withstand the wrath that might come down on me for my paganism.

Janet on the Mountain be damned.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Bus driver answers critic

To the editor:

I just have a few things I'd like to say to Dave Copeland in response to his article "The pleasure of public transportation."

1. The bus system is not meant to be your personal taxi service. The next time YOU are responsible for driving a bus through rush hour traffic on campus and downtown, tell me all about how easy it was to stay on schedule.

2. The next time YOU have to spend all day in a bus, driving the same route over and over again, tell me all about how it wouldn't have made your day anymore bearable to have some of your favorite music with you.

3. Bus drivers are not members of a "clique" that you will never be able to join. " I know, because I joined. All I did was notice the signs on the buses that said "UMass Transit now Hiring." I had to pass a driving test to become a bus driver, not an "acceptance into a cool clique" test. The next time YOU apply for a job as a bus driver and are told that "you're not cool enough to be in the clique," tell me all about it.

4. UMass Transit bus drivers do wave to each other AND to other PVTA drivers. AND to school bus drivers. AND to Peter Pan drivers. AND to any friendly looking person driving a large vehicle. AND even to people in cars if they are particularly courteous. The reason bus drivers haven't waved back to you is that it's really hard to see people in cars (the cars all seem very tiny and far away when you're driving a bus.) I've also tried waving to bus drivers while in my car. They never wave back to me either (because they don't see me.) and I'm "in the clique." The next time YOU are responsible for safely transporting hundreds of people tell me all about how you were able to peer into every car that you passed, just in case the driver might be waving.

5. If you weren't drinking yourself into oblivion the night before, you wouldn't be bothered by the children who may be on the bus. It is not the responsibility of the bus driver to cater to your drinking habits. The next time YOU drive a bus, I'm sure you'll be eager to tell me all about how screaming children are wonderful passengers compared to drunk people who vomit and pass out on the bus.

6. Have YOU ever spent hours in a bus listening to the bell ring? The next time YOU spend all day driving a bus, tell me all about how you never missed a stop because you didn't hear the bell - especially above the din of rowdy, drunk passengers or the screaming children you mentioned!

7. Bus drivers are far too busy to put as much effort as you think they do into "banning" you from "the clique."

8. The next time YOU become a bus driver, tell me all about how sorry you are that you complained so much about bus drivers.

Tania Reppucci
Sunderland

Generation X has no voice

To the editor:

I am writing to comment on the Oct. 13 article written by Erin Barnes. Her insight on our generation, as well as her biting honesty should serve as an alarm clock for us all. A wake-up call to the now cliched "Generation X," that we have not found our voice. But can we find our voice?

What we need is a calming voice, a rational one that can cut through the angst and negative energy. Yet as long as we cannot define ourselves, then we are still unable to find ourselves. Today's feelings, trends and attitudes are but echoes of the past. "Retro" is a term and a lifestyle that is more popular everyday as more and more people find solace in the stability of the past, rather than toiling through the tumultuous present.

So, as long as we let our parents and the media dictate to us what our voice is, then we will have to flock like lemmings to such established Media Darlings like Kurt Cobain or the Generation X concept. We should not be so weak as to accept this willingly.

Evan T. Whitney
IQA

Magazine still has great coverage

To the editor:

Is Matt Vautour reading the same magazine as I am? His article regarding the lack of quality found in the pages of Sports Illustrated is way off base. "Features and profiles have become more fluff than substance?" Try reading my favorite SI article of 1994, "A Life in the Shadows" about college basketball's all-time winningest coach — SUNY- Binghamton's Dick Baldwin (found in the '94 swimsuit issue).

As for UMass getting overlooked, the A-10 has only recently stepped up in stature. UConn is the longest established hoops program in New England, if only since 1988. If Dan Cyrulik could make the cover of SI (January 1992), then surely Lou Roe could, but don't count on it this year. Once again UConn will steal the limelight in New England without Donyell, but with a fantastic backcourt of Ollie, Shelfee and Ray Allen.

Ethan Givert
Sunderland

Double standards abound at UMass

It's Tuesday afternoon and I'm heading towards my English class. As I turn a corner I see a swarm of people standing outside the student union. My first impression was What are those <expletives> liberals complaining about now? Do they oppose the observance of yet another holiday? Do they want to rename a building on campus? Or which building have they taken over now? All these thoughts quickly ran through my head.

I was curious about this scene and decided to ask the person standing next to me. "It's the 'out-of-the-closet' rally," I was told. Without a second thought I turned and quickly walked around the mob to my next class — quickly so that I wouldn't be late, of course.

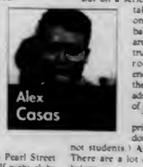
As I was walking to my lit class I realized something: I'm an oppressed minority. I have three things going against me: I'm a white, straight male. Where's my support group?

At first I didn't take this thought seriously, but then several things came to mind.

Well, for one thing, might clubs such as Pearl Street hold gay nights. So when is straight night? If night clubs are going to have special nights for those on one end of the sexual preference spectrum, then they should have special nights for those of us on the other end. That is discrimination based on sexual preference.

Also, what about the 2 in 20 housing option for homosexuals and their "allies?" Why isn't there a 0 in 20 option those who don't consider themselves "allies?" One might argue that there are several other dorms on campus — but none are strictly devoted to heterosexuals.

Everyone knows we have a Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance on our campus. I'm still looking for the "Heterosexual Support Group" but unfortunately I still haven't found it. I'm also still waiting to find out when the heterosexual pride rally is going to take place.



But on a serious and sadder note, some people have taken over the public bathroom facilities on our campus. The defense is that the bathrooms are a safe haven for those who are still in the closet or in denial of their true orientation. Whenever I use a bathroom facility I'm afraid whether I'll encounter two people coming to grips with their latent homosexuality. It's sad that the administration has to resort to the posting of signs on the doors.

The saddest part is that most of the culprits are middle- aged men! What are they doing here on our campus? (No, those are not students.) All I can say is watch out. All of you. There are a lot of people here who don't necessarily belong.

Does this make me "homophobic?" I don't think so. I don't have a problem with the "alternative lifestyle." I don't care what, or who, people do in their private lives. I'm just questioning why the heterosexuals are left behind — bringing to light several examples of a double-standard in our society and here at UMass.

Alex Casas is a UMass student.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

HI, KIDS! WELCOME TO THE KICK-OFF OF NATIONAL "CHARACTER COUNTS" WEEK! ALL THIS WEEK, WE'RE GOING TO BE EMPHASIZING CHARACTER!
BY PRESIDENTIAL PROCLAMATION, THIS WEEK HAS BEEN DESIGNATED A TIME TO CELEBRATE AND PROMOTE VIRTUES AND VALUES ESSENTIAL TO GOOD CHARACTER!
OVER 30 STATES HAVE SIGNED ON TO PROMOTE THE SIX PILLARS OF CHARACTER": RESPONSIBILITY, TRUSTWORTHINESS, RESPECT, CARING, FAIRNESS AND CITIZENSHIP!
UM... WHAT ABOUT THE OTHER 20 STATES?
BUSINESS AS USUAL! PARTY ON, YO! (G'NITE!)

Arts & Living

Luscious Jackson disappointing at Pearl Street show

By Emily Marino
Collegian Staff

After spending much of the summer being lauded as the "best band" on Lollapalooza's second stage, one should have expected last Thursday's Luscious Jackson at Pearl St. show to be a raucous, no-holds-barred, groove fest.

However, while the groove was firmly in place, the band seemed lacking in energy and enthusiasm, and the show moved along at a lackadaisical pace that belied the very purpose of a live show.

Luscious Jackson has spent much of the time in their newly found spotlight compared with Grand Royal labelmates the Beastie Boys.

Both groups have a knack for creative and eclectic tunes that combine the best of funk, hip-hop, and r&b.

The difference is that while the Beasties infuse their show with tremendous animation, bounding around excitedly, the women from Luscious seem content to sit back behind their instruments and groove.

They do groove nicely, however.

Each song was tight, anchored by the drumming of Kate Schellenbach, and had a unique flavor ranging from strict, organ-flavored funk to disco, complete with wah-wah guitar and serious hip-hop jams.

The crowd bounded around amiably, and gave the biggest cheer when the women let the DJ take control and stepped out to add some Four Tops/New Edition style dance steps to the performance.

Luscious Jackson is a solid band, and gives a nice and tight live show, though the slow jams need to be translated to the stage with more excitement, more creativity, and more life.

The real highlight of the show was opening act Ben Harper.

Jamming original blues from his debut album, Welcome to the Cruel World, Harper boasted a unique sound that commanded the audience's ear and soul.

Unlike Luscious Jackson's unimposing, almost canned effect, Harper injected energy and emotion into each note struck on his Dobro, balancing unabashed joy with down- and-out blues.

Throughout most of his performance Harper, like the audience, remained seated and virtually motionless.

He stared down at the guitar in his lap preoccupied with it, as if his actions had nothing to do with the miraculous sound filling the room.

Harper's final song was marked by the abandonment of his guitar to spin rhythmically upon the stage, his two side braids acting almost as wings to perpetuate him on some kind of spiritual journey. The audience that was previously sitting was, by this time, on the same trip.

The Dobro did not play tunes "Whipping Boy," "Like a King" and "I'll Rise," it oozed and wept them.

Harper's distinct moan sailed high above his melancholy instrumentals, creating a sound that was impossible not to feel.

Harper is currently touring, and will likely become quite well known within a short amount of time.

A sound like Harper's is difficult to keep a secret, and, as most Luscious fans will tell you, it only takes one listen to be sold on his music.

Ween fails to draw laughs with their latest release

CHOCOLATE AND CHEESE
Ween
Elektra Records

Ween has always courted a sort of "love them or hate them" relationship with the general music public. Always acting as more of a thorn in the side of current rock music than anything else, they have managed to successfully play the part of the fool without ever taking that "we know something you don't" smirk off their faces.

In the past their music brilliantly alternated between witty parody of rock n' roll history, and insane mind-numbing rave-ups that left the listener in a state of disarray but always beckoned for more. Sure they could be seen as just a musical Beavis and Butthead for a generation saturated with maybe a tad to much irony, but what set these two overgrown class clowns apart from the rest of the novelty pack was their ability to craft the catchiest of tunes.

So when their uncompromising 1992 major label debut Pure Guava went on to sell in the six-figure range, it was clear that Ween hadn't finally caught up with the world, the world had caught up with Ween. That is why their latest release Chocolate And Cheese may be seen as somewhat of a disappointment. While in the past the brothers Gene and Dean were happy to just sit back and try to let their audience figure it out, now they have settled down with their most straight-forward record yet.

Gone are most of the weirdo epics that made Ween once seem refreshing and original, and in their place are a group of well-written and nicely polished pop songs that are more content to just parody than reinvent. While musically the album is far and away the most sophisticated the group has done, there is still a sense that something is missing. Sell out? No. Less interesting? Definitely.

It is true that Ween have always operated in some sort of parallel universe from our own where being bizarre is an art form and absurdity is a way of life. But with Chocolate And Cheese one can not help but feel that this time around they may have drifted a bit to close to home. B (Matt Audette)

THE PLOT THICKENS
Galliano
Talkin loud/Mercury

Rap, jazz, funk, folk, soul and blues; Galliano have a well- worn shell-toe placed firmly in each of these genres.

The Plot Thickens, their third and most focused album, sees them slipping between these influences effortlessly. Each of these thirteen tracks, lay down grooves so infectious they should be kept in quaratine at Logan for at least a month. Whether it is the minimalist folk-rap of "Blood Lines," the hashish inspired humor of "Believe," or the funk re-working of David Crosby's "Long Time Gone", Galliano hit the mark time after time.

Galliano mix the eco-friendly positivity of the Stereo M.C.'s with a much clearer political vision and multi- instrumentation, and have none of that group's denim/cheese factor.

In Valerie Etienne, the group has a bona fide diva, who peppers their jazz-funk stew with honeyed harmonies. Her voice is often underscored by mellow, meandering guitar work and an understated beat which only serves to underline the laid-back groove of the whole album.

The whole jazz-funk scene is massive in Britain at the moment and Galliano could be just the band to bring it across the Atlantic. So this fall why not let The Plot Thickens add some funky, green consciousness to your joint. A (Gareth Curtis)

Galliano

COURTESY MAC ETIENNE

COURTESY DANNY CLINCH

Ween

EVERYONE'S GOT ONE
Echobelly
Fauve/Rhythm King

The suspicion has lurked that white male writers on the music magazines in Britain are elevating Echobelly to prove that they can see beyond palefaced white suburban boys with floppy fringes, middle class angst-ridden lyrics and guitar pedals.

I say this because the splendidly named lead singer Sonya Aurora Madan is Asian and guitarist Debbie Smith a black lesbian. Yet the supreme irony is that musically the band are in the quintessential tradition of Anglo-Indie guitar pop. This is why they are Morrissey's favorite new group, a tag which due to the attention of magazines like NME (oft referred to as the New Morrissey Express because of its Smith's obsession) has become a hinderance rather that a help.

And let's face it, Echobelly initially sound a lot like the Smiths. However, in a white-boy-white-noise kind of way, the songs are such unrefined gems that Echobelly transcend the legacy of their primary influence due in part to Madan's lyrics. Her racially affirmative and (positively) feminist lyrics will ensure her being endorsed spokesperson for an Anglo-Asian society white male writers (including myself) do not understand.

Though the album sags a little in three of the last four songs, this debut stands mighty, tall and multicultural. Echobelly are not post-riot girl, New Wave of New Wave, Asian alternative, or the Smiths' heirs; rather a fine band in their own right. And judging from the enthusiasm Echobelly appear to have been generating in the US, you Yanks already know that better than we Brits. B (Martyn Bone)

Shawn Colvin to bring her folk stylings to Smith College

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

This Tuesday night at 8:00 p.m. in John M. Greene Hall, on the campus of Smith College, the distinct folk stylings of Shawn Colvin will be presented for her Pioneer Valley fans.

The Northampton Center for the Arts presents this Grammy awarded artist, and with the material from her latest release Cover Girl, "folkies" from the Five-College area shouldn't be disappointed.

Influenced by her father's love of the music, of such diverse artists as Harry Belafonte, Pete Seeger, and the Kingston Trio, the Vermillion, South Dakota native has cast a unique presence over the genre that she so dearly loves.

Since her debut album in 1989, Steady On, both sides of the commercial music sphere has enlightened upon the sounds of Colvin. When her first single, named after the title of the release, hit the air waves, and video-land on both MTV and VH-1, the comparison between her and Michelle Shocked (whose debut came out around the same time) seemed to be unavoidable. But they are different, even in the simplest of ways that entail both song writing style, and choice of material they base themselves off of.

This Tuesday night, fans of this talented composer and skilled live performer, can witness first hand what exactly sparks Shawn Colvin's musical repertoire and stylings. Premiering material from Cover Girl, which is twelve songs that showcase her own interpretations of both famous and obscure songwriter's material, you will be able to hear the internal influences that have effected her in her brief, yet prosperous, musical career.

General admission tickets for Tuesday night's Shawn Colvin show, with opening act and special guest David Gray, at John M. Greene Hall on the Smith College campus start at $20.00. Special front/center donor seating tickets at $27.50 are available by calling the Center for the Arts at 586-7282/584-7327. For further information on general admission seating, call the Northampton Box Office at 586- 8686.

From Hitchcock to Ed Wood, Martin Landau has done it all

By Douglas J. Rowe
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Martin Landau's film career auspiciously began with Alfred Hitchcock's North by Northwest, then it headed south. These days, though, the compass needle on "S" stands for success.

He received an Academy Award nomination for best supporting actor as the business manager in Francis Ford Coppola's 1988 movie Tucker: The Man and His Dream and again the next year as the adulterous (and murderous) ophthalmologist in Woody Allen's Crimes and Misdemeanors.

Now his Bela Lugosi portrayal in director Tim Burton's Ed Wood has critics gushing that he'll get his third Oscar nod in seven years.

For a decade starting in the 1970s, however, Landau went from one bad role to another in such forgettable flicks as Black Gunn, A Town Called Hell and Meteor.

It could have been worse.

"I was acting," he said. "I wasn't driving a taxi cab or waiting on tables, which people do, gladly. No. I was playing mindless, one-dimensional villains in stupid movies."

Those heavies simply couldn't be depicted as human beings with complexities, he said.

Landau fondly recalls one textured bad guy he got to play: the gaunt, icy Leonard in North by Northwest.

"Yeah, that was an interesting guy...Here's the contained, economical deadly homosexual character. The homosexual was my idea," he said.

A daring move, certainly in 1958 for a young actor who's heterosexual, but Landau said the henchman's jealousy of Eva Marie Saint, who portrayed the evil James Mason's mistress, added to Leonard's dangerousness.

Leonard eventually plummeted off Mount Rushmore, and Landau's film career looked like it might take off, with roles in such films as the big-budget Cleopatra.

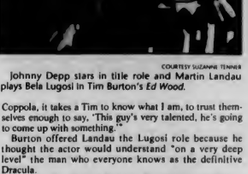
Instead, his movie career languished. During that time, he said, "I never did anything that embarrassed me, really embarrassed me. But there's a lot of stuff I would like to turn into guitar picks."

The 6-foot-2, sixtysomething New York-born actor probably is best remembered as the disguise expert, Rollin Hand, in the 1960s TV series "Mission: Impossible." Those protean proclivities carry over into a chameleonlike quality in real life, he said.

"My outline isn't that clear. What I mean — and these are wonderful actors I'm going to talk about — but...Joe Pesci — maybe the hair will change a little, but the outline's clear. Danny Aiello; Harrison Ford — clear.

"Young directors who typecast would not think of me quickly. It takes a Hitchcock, it takes a Woody. It takes a Coppola, it takes a Tim [Burton] to know what I am, to trust themselves enough to say, 'This guy's very talented, he's going to come up with something.'"

—MARTIN LANDAU



COURTESY SUZANNE TENNER

Johnny Depp stars in title role and Martin Landau plays Bela Lugosi in Tim Burton's Ed Wood.

Coppola, it takes a Tim to know what I am, to trust themselves enough to say, 'This guy's very talented, he's going to come up with something.'"

Burton offered Landau the Lugosi role because he thought the actor would understand "on a very deep level" the man who everyone knows as the definitive Dracula.

Burton, who directed Batman, Beetlejuice and Edward Scissorshands, told Landau: "Your career's been a roller coaster. You've been down on your luck, like he has been. You've made comebacks...You did tacky television; you've done horror movies. All of that."

Landau said he could empathize with Lugosi, whose sad last years consisted of feeding his drug and alcohol addiction and playing incoherent parts in movies by Ed Wood Jr., acknowledged as the worst Hollywood director of all time.

Landau researched the role by watching about 25 old Lugosi movies and studying the Hungarian accent, which he characterized as hard to acquire and hard to lose. The heavy accent contributed to Lugosi's downfall as an actor.

He also drove around to Lugosi's various residences, seeing the descent of a once great star who wound up in a seedy hovel.

"I began to respect this guy and pity him. I saw the humor in him. This for me became a love letter to him, and almost a homage to him, because he never got a chance to get out of that," Landau said.

"I got a chance to make a comeback in my career. And I'm giving him one. I'm giving him the last role he never got."

The biggest challenge, Landau said, may have been assiduously avoiding even the tiniest hint of caricature in playing Lugosi — "so I wouldn't be laughed off the face of the Earth."

Lugosi endures as such a pup-culture icon and may be better known now than ever before, what with his movies viewable again and again on cable and video, Landau observed. Also, Lugosi has been the source of many an impressionist's shtick.

"My whole idea of acting has always been that all I want the audience to feel ever is what they're seeing is happening for the first time...We know the phone's gonna ring and we know there's no voice on the other side of it and that no voice is telling you your wife and family have been killed in an airplane crash. It's a lot of work to do, you know.

"I use to tell my students: You know what acting is? Acting is laughing at the same joke every time as if you're hearing it for the first time."

Jack Nicholson and Harry Dean Stanton have been among the students he's taught.

Laudau studied art at the Pratt Institute and at 17, he became an artist on the New York Daily News, illustrating a column and drawing comic strips. In his early 20s, he left the paper to study acting and got into Lee Strasberg's Actors Studio.

Now divorced from actress Barbara Bain, who co-starred with him in "Mission: Impossible" and the '70s syndicated series "Space: 1999," Landau said he's not one to live in the past.

"The thing I love about acting is the now...It's not like: I think I'll go to sleep now and I'll do it in the morning. No, you don't have that," he said.

And when people ask him why he doesn't write a book, he tells them: "Because I don't want to spend all this time in the past...I love the present and I love the promise of tomorrow."

Tarantino's #1 'Fiction' beats weekend box office to a pulp

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Pulp Fiction was No. 1 at the box office this weekend with a $9.2 million take.

The gritty underworld adventure directed by Quentin Tarantino and co-starring John Travolta, Samuel L. Jackson, Uma Thurman and Bruce Willis was followed by The Specialist, a mob drama starring Sylvester Stallone and Sharon Stone. It took in $8.9 million, according to studio and industry estimates on Sunday.

Newcomers Little Giants, Wes Craven's New Nightmare and Exit to Eden also debuted in the top ten.

Final box office figures will be released Monday.

The Top 10 weekend movies:

1. Pulp Fiction, $9.2 million.
2. The Specialist, $8.9 million.
3. Wes Craven's New Nightmare, $7.1 million.
4. The River Wild, $5.5 million
5. Little Giants, $5.4 million.
6. Only You, $4.3 million.
7. Forrest Gump, $3.3 million.
8. Exit to Eden, $3.1 million.
9. The Shawshank Redemption, $2.5 million.
10. Quiz Show, $2.3 million.

Accepting Writing Submissions

The Collegian is now accepting submissions for a new fiction and prose column, "REL Fiction." We are looking for thoughtful, intelligent, intriguing short fiction of 75 to 300 lines in length.

Those interested may send works c/o Dave Polanzak, Collegian Arts & Living, 113 Campus Center, UMass. For more information, please call Dave at 546-0082 or Jon at 545-1361.

ANNOUNCING THE DISCOVER® CARD $25 NEW MEMBER REBATE.

(Hurry, it won't be here for long.)

Apply for the Discover® Card
by November 10.
Spend $75. Get $25 back*.
NO Annual Fee.

IF YOU DON'T GOT IT, GET IT.SM

MEMBER NOVUS NETWORK ©1994 Greenwood Trust Company. Member FDIC

*This offer valid for Discover Card applications received by 11/10/94, that are approved and enrolled between 9/21 and 11/21/94. Offer valid for purchases made by 3/31/95. Cash advances/balance transfers excluded. Offer limited to one rebate per account.

WHERE TO GO TO GET IT:

University Store in the Campus Center, 9am - 5pm, Monday & Tuesday, October 17 & 18

■ football

continued from page 10

one– yard TD, with Brian Shallcross hitting the PAT.

On the next drive, two penalties hurt William & Mary, and aided the Minutemen. A 15–yarder for roughing the passer and a personal foul for 15 yards gave Massachusetts substantial yardage down field, leading to a 28–yard field goal by Eric Oke, narrowing it to 14–10.

The Tribe then attempted to bounce back, only to have Matt Byrne [10–21, 80 yards], the replacement for injured starter Shawn Knight, throw in the hands of Minutemen cornerback Tony Williams. The senior returned it 20 yards into William & Mary territory.

"[Byrne] overthrew it, and I broke out to catch the pass," said Williams. "It was kind of a gift."

A gift that set up another Massachusetts touchdown drive, as Ingoglia scored on a seven yard run to make it 16–14 with 11:57 left in the fourth quarter. Oke's PAT was no good.

Four punts later, Knight, doubtful prior to kick–off, replaced Byrne as the Tribe QB. On just the third play of the drive, a second down and 11 on the two–yard line, Williams picked off another pass, and returned it 31 yards for a touchdown. Oke's PAT made the final score.

Needless to say, the Minutemen were pleased with knocking off the YanCon leader.

"This is definitely the biggest win since I've been here," said Williams. "[William & Mary] has been in the league for just over two years, and they have just dominated everybody offensively.

"We knew our backs were against the wall, and we had to get this game."

"It's great, we're all estatic," said defensive tackle Ben Albert. "We knew that if we lost this game, it would've been hard to make the playoffs. It was a one–game season.

"We knew it was do–or–die, and the guys stepped up to the situation."

■ William & Mary

continued from page 10

picked off two passes, and returned one 31 yards for a touchdown. Williams' partner at the corner, junior Broon Parker, had an interception of his own in the first quarter, and registered eight tackles.

"They just did a super job," said Hodges. "[Tony] and Broon [Parker] have been playing great all fall. We're playing so much man–defense, I get scared. And yet, we're able to do it because of the pressure we're giving up front."

The safeties, Jason Tudryn and Jason Mumford, both had an outstanding game. Free safety Tudryn had 11 tackles on Saturday afternoon, while Mumford made some key hits in crucial moments of the game.

As for the Tribe offense, Byrne started most of the game ahead of the injured Shawn Knight [sprained ankle]. Knight, the standout senior who owns the NCAA Division I–AA record for passing efficiency rating [204.6], played at the tail end of the fourth, but did not complete a pass in four tries, and threw Williams interception that turned into a Massachusetts touchdown.

In last season's Minutemen–Tribe contest, Knight threw for 318 yards and three touchdowns. The usually dangerous Knight was wounded, and the William & Mary offense faltered against the deep Massachusetts defense.

Hodges, defensive coordinator Jerry Azzinaro and the Minuteman defense planned around the assumption that Knight would play the game.

"We planned on Knight playing in the game," said Hodges. "I mean, [Byrne] threw for 251 yards last week, he's not a bad player. He's just not Shawn Knight. We knew we had to play well with which ever [William & Mary] quarterback was in the game."

Hodges praised Knight the whole week leading up to the game, saying Knight's "the best quarterback I've seen in my 17 years here at Massachusetts." "A huge factor was Knight not playing in half of the game," said Hodges. "He's just a great, great player."

The Massachusetts defense excelled in every area on Saturday afternoon against arguably the toughest offense they have faced so far this season, even without Knight.

Hodges has total confidence in his defensive unit.

"If we can stay healthy," said Hodges, "the way we're playing defensively, we're going to be in football games."

■ Donnelly

continued from page 10

The only doubters remaining are the six coaches that vote in the NCAA poll. After upsetting North Carolina, the Minutewomen only moved up one spot in the poll. They will have to wait until Tuesday to know if their second upset had a better effect on the rankings.

In the middle of the most successful stretch in her coaching career, Donnelly had what was, perhaps, her most sentimental game.

After coaching two years at the University of Rhode Island, Donnelly came to UMass to replace coach Pam Hixon, while she was on a two year leave as coach of the national team.

Saturday's game marked the first time Donnelly had returned to coach against her former team.

The Minutewomen wasted no time in nitpicking Donnelly about the connection. The coach had unknowingly worn a blue sweater [Rhode Island's color], and the team forced her to remove it in favor of her team jacket.

"I had mixed emotions," said Donnelly. "It's very hard to stay objective. Everytime I would say something, I didn't want the Rhode Island kid taking it personally. I love these kids. They played with a lot of heart.

"It's hard to separate. I didn't even want to look at them. We're just trying to do our job, but it's hard when you're doing it against people you care about," she said.

The game was not easy for her former players either.

"It was hard thinking about it during the week, thinking that we were going to see her on the other team," said Rhode Island co–captain Leslie Caito. "We had a team meeting and tried to focus on the fact that she's just another coach. We miss her but we're glad she's happy at UMass."

■ volleyball

continued from page 8

that of our match with George Washington."

Once again, Rivera led the team in kills with 20, and managed 11 digs. This was the 13th time this season that Rivera has reached double–figures in both kills and digs.

Nash, meanwhile, led the team with 14 digs, while also collecting 10 kills in only 21 total attacks. Nolan came through for UMass again, totalling 17 kills and eight digs.

"Well, it was a long weekend," said Kenny. "We did a lot of travelling, that's for sure. But there's no question I'm extremely happy with the way my team played."

With the two victories, UMass improved its overall record to 17–2 overall, 5–2 in the A–10.

■ field hockey

continued from page 10

University of Rhode Island. On the strength of Natalie Hart's third career hat–trick, the Minutewomen defeated the overmatched Rams 3–0.

The game had special significance because it marked Donnelly's return to Rhode Island as an opposing coach, after being at the helm of the Rams for two seasons [1992– 93].

The home team came out fired up trying to upset their former coach and the No. 8 Minutewomen in front of a loud and unusually large home crowd.

The Minutewomen have had trouble this year putting inferior teams away and playing their best for the entire 70 minutes. There were no such lapses on Saturday, as UMass dominated the URI from start to finish.

"Our biggest problem has been the consistent intensity level," said Donnelly. "We've been trying to get a [offensive] flurry every five minutes. I thought they did a good couple of their key players recuperate for Sunday evening's big match against Brown University. Senior co–captain Adolfo Oliete found himself in goal while the regular goalie, Engin, was on the offense for a change. The Minutemen got the victory by a close score of 11–10.

However, the match of the weekend was against Brown. In their first match–up of this season on Sept. 10, the Minutemen defeated them 19–6 at the Cambridge Invitational at M.I.T. Limardo had five goals in this game while Oliete had three goals and two assists.

The first quarter was tight with a lot of passing but few scoring opportunities. It seemed that both teams were holding back, ending the period with a 1–1 tie.

"It took us a while to get into it," Oliete said. "Brown is the toughest, but we're better than them. It shouldn't be close."

The intensity soared in the second quarter. Luis Limardo had an outstanding game, in scoring as well as in assists. Three minutes into the quarter, the Limardo brothers teamed up to score on a fast break. Luis swam hard down the right, meeting freshman Juan Carlos, who shot for the goal.

With a little more than a minute left in the quarter, Menton shot from beyond the two–meter line. With some help from Luis, who was waiting in front of the net, the ball was tipped in for the score. But the most arousing point was scored at the buzzer, when Gonen shot a two–pointer ending the quarter with a score of 8–4.

However, late game inconsistency plagued them once again in the third quarter. UMass let Brown back in it less than two minutes into the period by letting them get a two– pointer.

Yarworth knows these symptoms all too well.

"We let them take too many shots. [Paul Engin] set a record with 21 saves in one game," Yarworth said. "We must maintain the intensity. You don't let teams get back into the game. You got to make them want to go back to the locker room."

Senior co–captain Javier Gonzalez, in the last home game of his career, was ejected in the fourth quarter for fouls. Gonzalez holds UMass records in goals with 246, shot attempts with 471, and points with 330.

This upcoming weekend UMass faces No. 9 ranked Air Force in the Baldyview Tournament in Claremont, California.

The Minutemen squeaked by Air Force in their last match– up 8–7.

Menton said the team is ready.

"Coming off good games this weekend," said Menton. "We're now tuned up to play the better teams in California."

Water polo wins four matches

Tempers flare against Harvard, Yarworth ejected from match

By Allison Connolly and Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

This weekend at the Eastern Water Polo Association North Division Tournament, held at the Amherst College pool, the University of Massachusetts men's water polo team's morning matches were filled with action.

The play was hot, and so were the tempers.

At their Saturday morning contest with Harvard University, the Minutemen came away with a close, down to the wire, 12–10 victory. In Sunday morning's match with Boston College, UMass pulled away with their fourth victory of the season against the Eagles in a 18–8 win.

Against Harvard, the play was neck and neck for the entire match, but the most interesting scenario evolved in the fourth quarter. At the 1:17 mark of the fourth, for the first time in three years, UMass Coach Russ Yarworth was booted from the game for disputing offensive zone calls.

And that was just the start of it.

With 12 seconds left in the 11–10 game, sophomore Greg Menton converted brilliantly on a Ron Gonen pass from the perimeter. As the teams met at the center of the pool, an altercation between junior Luis Limardo and a Harvard player broke out. With Limardo's ejection, the Crimson had an automatic penalty shot from the four–meter position. The home crowd cheered wildly as sophomore goalie Paul Engin made the save, and UMass was able to run out the clock. Close, indeed.

"What happened at the end of the game, that is not good for any sport. The referees escalated the tension by running me off the deck, which I thought was unwarranted," Yarworth said. "I thought the ref's calls were inconsistent. Every time we were on the offensive, we were getting fouls called on us. I don't mind if you call offensive fouls, just call them both ways."

The problem of the lack of consistent intensity, that has been plaguing the Minutemen lately, was again a factor. It was apparent once more, since UMass let in two 2–pointers in the final frame to make it a lot closer than it should have been. But in the final analysis, they still got the victory.

"It's been an up and down experience, and we've been taking two steps forward, one and a half steps back. That's what the coach has said, and I agree," Menton said. "In a situation like that, when the coach is kicked out of the game and we find a way to win, that shows we're a good team."

* * *

Saturday evening's game against M.I.T. proved to be the calm before the storm. After a savory win against Harvard in the morning, the team used this match to let a

Madness brings back hoops

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

When Lou Roe, Derek Kellogg, Mike Williams and Jeff Meyer were freshmen, few Massachusetts hoop fans dreamed of how good Minuteman basketball would become by the time they were seniors.

But if the team is anywhere near as good as the hype that has surrounded them so far, there will be plenty of "madness" this year in Western Massachusetts.

At 12:01 a.m. Saturday morning, that team officially came together at Midnight Madness. Roe down–played the significance of the event but is looking forward to the season.

"This is sort of a semi–pep rally," said the senior forward. "This practice should be a jump start for me and some other guys to get ready for the season. The pressure isn't on when you're playing games. The pressure is on right now to prepare. We're in the right frame of mind to get ready for the upcoming season."

The event began with performances by the UMass Dance Team, the Funk Club and the Cheerleaders. The ice hockey team and women's basketball teams were also introduced.

"The Road to the Final Four begins now," said channel 40 sports anchor Mike Ratte, who served as the event's master of ceremonies.

The crowd was raucous at the beginning of the night, giving the loudest cheers to the introductions of sophomore center Marcus Camby, who was sporting a freshly shaved head, Williams and Roe.

Roe remained the center of attention through a large part of the night, highlighting the intrasquad scrimmage with some powerful dunks.

The night marked the unveiling of three new Minutemen. Freshmen Andre Burks and Inus Norville, who Ratte called "the next warrior," and sophomore Tyrone Weeks made their Mullins Center debuts.

Burks displayed his vaunted leaping ability to the delight of crowd during the open drills and the slam dunk contest.

With the three additions, there will be a battle for playing time at almost every position.

"If I like coach said, 'Those who are supposed to play will play,'" Roe said. "The guys who work the hardest will play, and right now a lot of guys are working hard so it will be hard to find minutes for everybody."

The Minutemen open their season on Nov. 25 with the Tip–Off Classic at the Springfield Civic Center against defending National Champion Arkansas.

ATKINS FARMS
Country Market
Corner of Bay Road & Rte. 116, South Amherst
Open Daily 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. 253-9528

THE PICK OF THE CROP NOW IN AT ATKINS

From a full line of home-grown, just picked apples. Our apples are just about all picked an available for your enjoyment. Crisp, juicy and full of flavor!

CORTLAND MACOUN
EMPIRE IDA RED
SPENCER MCINTOSH
RED DELICIOUS
GOLDEN DELICIOUS
NORTHERN SPY MUTSU
Now is the best time to ship apples – just call!

PICK OUT YOUR OWN JUST PICKED
ORCHARD RUN APPLES 69¢ LB.
Spencer Northern Spys Empire Ida Red Red & Golden Delicious

ATKINS PEARS
Bosc & Barllett for eating or canning

Limit per visit
SWEET APPLE CIDER
with no preservatives. Delicious and tangy for any time of the day

LOCAL HARVEST of MASSACHUSETTS VEGETABLES at ATKINS

LOTS O' PUMPKINS! From 1 to 200 pounds!!
Winter Squash (5 varieties) Potatoes
Carrots Cabbage (89¢ head)
Onions Mini Pumpkins Gourds

HARVEST WEEK SPECIALS 10/14 - 10/20

Canadian SHARP CHEDDAR CHEESE $3.50 lb.	Red Oval STONED WHAT THINS $3.50 lb. 10 oz.	Atkins APPLE BUTTER $3.99 19 oz.
APPLE CINNAMON BREAD PUDDING $2.50 lb.	APPLE STUFFED ACORN SQUASH $2.75 lb	APPLE CINNAMON CRUNCH ICE CREAM CONES $1.15 small $1.70 large
Fresh Made APPLE STRUDEL $3.25	— BAKERY — APPLE BARS with Cream Cheese Frosting 95¢ or 3/$2.65	CALIFORNIA CELERY 79¢ bunch
Salmon-fleshed CANTALOUPES 99¢ ea.	Thompson or Flame SEEDLESS GRAPES 99¢ lb.	Mass. Native YELLOW ONIONS 4 lbs. / $1

Massachusetts Daily Collegian

named

1994 College Newspaper of the Year in the daily category of the New England Newspaper Association competition.

Kristin St. John
Staff member was re-elected president of the N. E. Collegiate Newspaper Association

Geri Sahn
Collegian Training Director was elected
co-vice president of NECPA

NEWA
NEW ENGLAND NEWSPAPER ASSOCIATION, INC.

Men's, women's soccer enjoys success in important weekend action

• Women eye A–10 crown, must win final game on Oct. 28

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's soccer team took a big step in its attempt to secure its second straight Atlantic–10 regular season title with a 1–0 win over George Washington on Saturday.

UMass	1
GW	0

The No. 7 nationally ranked Minutewomen now need to win their final A–10 game at St. Bonaventure on Oct. 28 to take the regular–season title for the second year in a row.

Both teams came into the game with identical 3–0 records. Last year, when the two teams met, the game ended in a 1–1 tie.

The Minutewomen had to play the Colonials without head coach Jim Rudy, who was unable to make the trip due to personal reasons.

"I think it was a good win, a good A–10 win," UMass assistant coach April Kater said. "It was a good win on the road at probably one of the worst fields to even play a collegiate game."

The Minutewomen scored the only goal of the game when forward Nicole Roberts scored at the 37:27 mark on a rebound off of her initial shot.

The goal was Roberts' fourth game–winning goal of the season, as she has scored in three of the last four matches. The junior has seven goals on the season to go along with three assists and now leads the team in total points with 17.

"[Nicole's] played composed. She's getting the job done," Kater said.

The Minutewomen dominated the first 45 minutes of play, outshooting the Colonials 14–2 as Rachel LeDuc and Melissa Mitchell combined for nine of the 14 shots. But they were not as dominant in the next 45 minutes of play, getting off only three shots.

"The girls had a great first half," Kater said. "The second half was a little weak."

Freshman goalkeeper Danielle Dion once again was impressive in net recording another shutout with three saves on the day. She has 55 saves for a 0.887 save percentage and the shutout was her 6.5th on the year.

"[Danielle] had a tremendous game," Kater said. "She had three key saves. She was really, really strong."

Overall, Kater felt that the team played well and that it was a good win in terms of the A–10 standings.

"Our midfielders dominated," said Kater. "They played a very strong game. Our backs played very, very smart."

"That's great [leading the A–10]. We needed a boost right now. We beat a very good A–10 foe. I'm sure we'll see them again in the A–10 tournament."

UMass has yet to lose a match in two years of A–10 play. The Minutewomen's record in that span is 7–0–2.

UMass' record for the year now stands at 10–3 overall, and 4–0 in the A–10.

The Minutewomen's next opponent is Dartmouth University tomorrow at Richard F. Garber at 3 p.m.

Dartmouth, ranked No. 14 in the country, will be another tough match for the Minutewomen considering Dartmouth on the road on Oct. 19. The Big Green are consistently a power in New England, and Koch said he expects a tough game. He also said he is concerned that they will have to travel to the University of Rhode Island on Oct. 22, and then return home for an Oct. 25 game against St. Bonaventure. The Minutemen will combat the fatigue factor by resting some of their playcrs who have been seeing a lot of playing time and using their bench more, Koch said.

"We are getting better, we are much better now than we were three weeks ago and we are on schedule," he said. "We missed a few opportunities. I am always shooting for perfection but you have to be realistic. Hopefully by the end of the season we will finish the plays we didn't finish [Saturday]."

Massachusetts' next opponent is

COLLEGIAN FILE

The University of Massachusetts women's soccer team, who defeated George Washington 1–0 this past weekend, has to defeat St. Bonaventure in its final conference game on Oct. 28 to clinch the Atlantic 10 title.

• Men post second straight shutout, defeating Maine 1–0

By Brian Gormley
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team shut out its opponent for the second straight game Saturday, defeating the University of Maine 1–0 in Orono.

Massachusetts' win over the Black Bears improved their record to 8–4–1, while Maine dropped to 8–2.

The Minutemen scored their only goal at 27:06 of the first half on a penalty kick by forward Dave Siljanovski. The goal came about because forward Hossein Giahi set up defender Karstin Bremke with a pass in the zone, where he was taken down by a Maine defender. Siljanovski then booted in the ensuing penalty kick from the left corner, giving Massachusetts a permanent lead.

UMass	1
Maine	0

Siljanovski's goal was his fifth of the season, and he increased his team–leading point total to 14, (five goals, four assists).

Massachusetts Coach Sam Koch praised his team for defeating a tough team on the road, and he said the defense played a big role. The Black Bears managed only six shots on net.

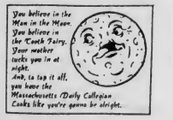
"I am very pleased. It's a six–hour van ride up to Maine but we were ready to play and I think we caught Maine flat," Koch said. "We had a great defensive game. [Defender] Dan Chagnon did a super job on their front runner. Eric Gruber won his second game in goal and he made a couple of great saves. And [defenders] Joe Jacobson and Benny Shealy did a great job to make his job fairly easy."

The Minutemen were without their starting goalkeeper Mark Wolf. But senior Eric Gruber has started the last two games in his place and has shut out both of his opponents. Koch said coming off the bench to start two consecutive games at goalkeeper is a big challenge. But he also said Gruber was more than prepared for his opportunity.

"It's tough when you haven't played much to come in and start at goalkeeper, but if there is any kind of person who can do it is him," he said. "He was the MVP of our spring season and he has improved 100 percent."

STEVE PEDULLA / COLLEGIAN

Mike Butler [6] and the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team defeated Maine 1–0 in Orono, ME, on Saturday afternoon. The game–winning goal was scored by Dave Siljanovski.



You believe in the Man in the Moon.
You believe in the Tooth Fairy.
Your mother tucks you in at night.
And, to top it all, you have the Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Cooks like you're gonna be alright.

UMass volleyball wins two on road

By Steven Grant
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts volleyball team enjoyed a successful weekend, winning both of its Atlantic 10 matches against the George Washington Lady Colonials and the West Virginia Mountaineers.

The win against GW was big, seeing that the Lady Colonials had seemingly forgotten how to lose.

GW, 19–2 overall, entered Friday evening's contest against the Minutewomen with a 17–match winning streak, as well as a 22–match winning streak at home.

However, on this night the Lady Colonials were unable to sustain a good start against the Minutewomen, who upset their host in four games, 8–15, 16–14, 15–12, and 15–6.

"It was just a tremendous team effort," UMass Coach Bonnie Kenny said. "The key was that every single person contributed, including our bench, who provided some great defense. Our team showed a lot of character out there and we were able to stay focused throughout the match."

Early on, things were going as expected. The Lady Colonials, shooting for its 21st straight A–10 win, won the first game rather easily, 15–8. In the second game, UMass had to fight hard to pull out a 16–14 victory.

In game three, with the match tied up at one game apiece, GW, which had not lost a match in over a month, seemed to have regained control of things, as the Lady Colonials stormed out to an 8–2 lead.

But fueled in part by the strong serving of freshman Lesley Nolan (three service aces), UMass shut off GW's momentum immediately. The momentum swing would prove to be permanent as the Minutewomen went on to win both the game and match

Nolan had a career day. In addition to her serving, the outside hitter amassed a career–high 20 digs, and totalled 17 kills.

Sophomore outside hitter Gina Rivera led the Minutewomen with 24 kills, to go along with her 14 digs. It marked the 14th time this season that Rivera has led her team in kills.

"I cried out of joy after the game was over," said outside hitter Dionne Nash. "We played hard, and everybody was able to come through for us."

Against an unheralded West Virginia squad, UMass had to work just as hard, if not harder, to earn this win.

But when all was said and done, they did in fact earn it, winning three games to one by scores of 6–15, 16–14, 15–12, and 15–7. With the defeat the pesky Mountaineers' record fell to 8–17 overall, and 2–5 in the A–10.

"We kind of struggled in this one," Kenny said. "A major factor here was the fact that our team, thanks to previous experiences, knew how to win. We simply did what we had to do in an atmosphere much different to

Turn to VOLLEYBALL, page 7

COLLEGIAN FILE

Susan Maga [11] and the University of Massachusetts volleyball team [17–2 overall, 5–2 in Atlantic 10] knocked off defending A–10 champion George Washington and defeated West Virginia this weekend.

Get Acquainted Special $12.99 Reg. price $25.17 OIL & FILTER SERVICE SPECIAL*
HONDAS and 4CYL. ACURAS only
HONDA SureThing PARTS & SERVICE
*Offer good with this ad only. Expires 11-30-94
171 King Street Northampton 586-8626 HONDA
COUPON

IN EASTHAMPTON
Incredible Deals
On brand new Oldsmobiles and Pontiacs
Many New '94s In Stock
'95 Oldsmobile Starting Prices
Achieva S Cp $13,995
Cutlall Ciera $14,995
Cutlass Supreme $17,995
Aurora $31,995
'95 Pontiac Starting Prices
Sunfire SE Cp $11,559
GrandAm SE cp $13,399
Firebird Cp $15,359
Grand Prix SE Cp $17,919
Service Specials For GM Cars & Trucks
Check Your Car For Winter
•Test Coolant
• Check Heater Hoses & Belt
• Test Battery $19.95
Offer Expires 11/30/94
Lube, Oil & Filter Change
Includes up to 5 qts Quaker State Motor Oil, Lube all fittings, Install GM AC Oil Filter, Check All fluid levels $19.95
Offer Expires 11/30/94
Shuttle Service to Downtown Northampton Shops
FEDOR Oldsmobile Pontiac
228 Northampton St. (Rt10) Easthampton
Call Marty, Edward or Chuck
527-4461 584-3544

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
•Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
•Users of Sikkens paint products.
•Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
Remember
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

INSTITUTE FOR STUDY ABROAD
BUTLER UNIVERSITY
UNDERGRADUATE STUDIES IN GREAT BRITAIN
AUSTRALIA
IRELAND
NEW ZEALAND
Fully integrated study at British, Irish, New Zealand and Australian universities
FALL OR SPRING SEMESTER • FULL YEAR
INSTEP • SUMMER PROGRAM • INTERNSHIPS
Study Abroad Information Session
Representative: Carolyn Watson
Date: Tues., Oct. 18
Location: 1:30 p.m. Campus Center 803
For further information please contact: Your Study Abroad Office on campus or the Institute for Study Abroad, Butler University, 4600 Sunset Avenue, Indianapolis, IN 46208, Tel: 317/283-9336 or 1/800-858-0220

What Porpoise By Kennet Dall

NOW WE CAN HELP WILLOBY OVER HIS HEARTACHE OLIVER, JD SAYS HE KNOWS A GUARANTEE CURE
DID YOU BRING THE CURE JD?
GOT IT RIGHT HERE IN THIS BOX.
PICTURES OF MANDY, OLD LOVE LETTERS, HOME MOVIES, AND OTHER LITTLE REMEMBRANCES. DON'T WORRY BROTHERS, WE'LL SET HIM RIGHT.
AND NOW WILL ALL THIS SET HIM RIGHT.
...WELL IT PROBABLY WON'T—I JUST KINDA LIKE TO WATCH ELLIE SQUIRM.

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

HAVE YOU SEEN MY SHOES? I THOUGHT I HAD THEM OUT RIGHT HERE.
YOUR SHOES? I DON'T KNOW.
THEY WERE RIGHT HERE WHERE COULD THEY HAVE GONE?
WE'RE GOING TO BE LATE
WELL I CAN'T GO ANYWHERE WITHOUT MY SHOES! HELP ME LOOK.
THEY'RE NOT LEAVING US WITH A BABY SITTER TONIGHT!

Stick-Man By Matt Bellucci

I'VE BEEN WATCHING STICK-MAN FOR DAYS.
WHEN I, SUPER-VILLAIN, THE MAN OF STEAL GET STICK-MAN OUT OF THE WAY...
I'LL BE FREE TO UNLEASH MY CRIME WAVE UPON THE WORLD!
hah, heh, heh

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

YOUR MOM SURE WAS CHEERFUL THIS MORNING.
HMPH
I'VE NEVER SEEN HER HUMMING AND SASHAYING AROUND THE KITCHEN LIKE THAT.
HMPH
HOW LONG HAVE WE BEEN WAITING FOR THE BUS NOW?
ABOUT TWO AND A HALF HOURS.
I THINK MOM PUT ME OUT HERE THIS EARLY ON PURPOSE

Jim's Journal By Jim

I had to get out my winter jacket today.
In a pocket I found an old grocery list.
one of the things on the list was horseradish sauce.
horseradish sauce chips cheese cereal
I couldn't remember ever needing horseradish sauce.

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

1968 MUSTANG

Classic '68 Mustang Way Cool Wheels FOR SALE!!! Electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, 2 door, great way to pick up chicks and studs alike. Best offer call Beth at 6-4434.

ACTIVITIES

NECAC Karate Club Shotokan style - coed. Tolman 101 MnWe 8-9:30 1 7-9. All levels welcome! Call Jessica at 549-4729

ANNOUNCEMENTS

If interested in becoming an International Students Association executive committee member call Rachael 549-0615 or Grace 546-0010

Learn to bartend with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools right here in Amherst. Classes start Wed. Oct. 12th. Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX to register today.

Psych 205
with Prof. Harry Schurmer— the exam cancelled on Oct. 13 will be given in class on Tues., Oct. 18

AUTO FOR SALE

1988 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Beth at 6-4434

1974 Ford Maverick. 2 door, 6 cylinder, 76 K. Brown w/ beige int. No underbody rust. Am/fm cassette. Runs well. $1000 or b.o. call 4753-7104 mornings only.

1979 Chevy Impala. Runs well. $800 or bo. 256-8194

1983 Plymouth Reliant automatic, air, looks good, runs great. $895 256-8162

88 Plymouth Horizon. 4 wheel drive New clutch. Excellent condition Asking $1,300 or best offer Call 256-3052

89 Chevy Cavalier automatic, white coupe, good shape, great sound $3700 532-3184

Volkswagen Quantum 1986 excellent condition, 5 speed, 115K, power brakes, windows, steering, locks, a/c $2300 253-9508

BOXING LESSONS

Recreational & competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Dunn Burnpus 549-5752

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? WE have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service, 2 Oakhurst Terrace East, N. Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

FOR RENT

Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery$29.00

Take over my lease. Call 665-7498

FOR SALE

1984 Buick $1200/neg call 8-2031 Dorm fridge $70 call 8-2031

Brother Word Processor WP-2200 Spell and grammar check, spread sheet Excellent for papers $200 Debbie 253-0967

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $500 Call Chris at 800-289-5685

Papers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549-7231

Shades for less name brand sunglasses 30%-50% off Campus Center MWF 800-985HADES

Solid oak triple dresser
Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-8354

Tandy computer system w/ drives, mon, printer Tons of software Asking 325 or bo Call Joe 8-7248

Tandy computer system, inc 512K comp rgb mon., drives, printer, many extras Asking 250 firm Call Joe 8-7248

Tori Amos great seats 253-6935

FOR SALE:AUDIO/VIDEO

Stereo equipment, tv's, vcr's, etc. used/reconditioned, area's largest selection, priced to sell! Buy/sell/trade at Stereo & Video Exchange. Sundays 10-5 at Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt 9 , Hadley. Other days call 256-0941

FOUND

Black dog found 10/11/94 Call Sarah at 546-4805. Please leave message

Woman's Seiko watch with leather band in lot 26 Call 665- 3627 and describe

HELP WANTED

14 openings due to expansion local company has part time openings $9.00 up to $15.00 to start No experience necessary, training provided, advancement potential, flexible schedules, scholarships possible For application details call 413 733-0057.

$363.88. Sell funny college T shirts. Profit $383.60. Risk free Choose from 19 designs. Free catalog 1-800-700-6760

Alaska employment Fishing industry Earn up to $3,000 $5,000+ per month Room + board! Transportation! Male/female No experience necessary (206)545-4155 ext. A5001

Bartender wanted at Trattoria Geppetto Italian restaurant Apply in person after 4:00pm 1177 N Pleasant St., Amherst 549-7777

Childcare for 11 yr old boy 1 evening per week plus some overnights Car required Call 548-9057

Cruise ships hiring- earn up to $2000 + mo. on cruise ships or land- tour companies Seasonal + full time employment available No exp necessary For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext. C5001

Earn $6/hr light politics. Work for political change with Clean Water Action environmental campaign staff On bus lines Paid training, P/T or career opportunity Call 584-9830

Earn$ Start your own business selling jewelry Call 1-800-700-3008 for info

Earn $2500 & free trips Spring Break! Student Holidays, the nation's leader in spring break vacations, seeking enthusiastic, highly motivated students and organizations to promote and sell all- inclusive 4 star Cancun trips! From only $498 call now 1-80-395-1989

Jobs for the environment. Grassroots political organizing Earn $40-60/ day Flexible hours/ casual atmosphere Call Alex 256-8434

Now hiring experienced waitstaff and driver Apply within Ka Chi Restaurant

Part time 15 hrs a week evenings S. Hadley co seeking responsible individual who possess high math skills; computer knowledge, the ability to work alone Call Michael or Wendy at 533-2700

Pinocchio's a hiring full and part time drivers Apply in person, after 4:30pm any day.

Receive up to 288,000 dollars in 18 months! For our amazing free report call 413-525-5480 Mon-Fri 8am- 5pm

Start a vet cash business, turn straws into dollars!, money while you sleep, public service machine - raises people's awareness Minimum investment $1,285 Serious inquiries only George 617-837-0609

Seeking student to design and/or market hand-made shoes Call Sharon, 259-1748

KRISTIN POYNTON

Kristen Happy Birthday! lots love, Your sisters at KGU

LOSE WEIGHT

Dieting is dangerous & depletes muscle- including heart muscle! Use our all herbal products- FDA safe/effective/Dr recommended Make peace with your body. Call the Herbal Loft 256-2018

LOST

I lost my purse on 10/10 at Bart's If you found it, please please call me 546-3875.

Lost wire rimmed eyeglasses in Campus Center early morning 413 239-4038

Pair of bifocal glasses. If found contact 546-0345 reward

Ray Ban sunglasses. Rectangular, wire rim. Lost at Bonducci's cafe Cash reward Call Thad at 253-7281

MOTORCYCLES

Kawasaki EX 500 '88 Good condition 900/bo. 549-4251

PERSONALS

Cuba. I hope that when we go to Florida in the winter you'll treat me shorta This is Hera.

Congrats to the new members of Delta Zeta Kim, Jen, Ann Marie, Tara, Christina, George, Tammy, and Erin. Get psyched for a great semester!

Happy Birthday B.A. You're the best!! Love, K.t. Kel, Sah, + Col

Stephanie P. You don't know me, but I know you, so ALPh's welcome you, to good times and great friends- good luck to you! Phi love- Your Phi friend

To the Saloon witches. Thanks for having me every night. Gerge

Tree, I'm crossing that bridge with lessons I've learned, Impalying with fire and not getting burned. I may not know what you're going through, but time is the space between me and you. Love always. Peter.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Someone to share newly remodeled 2 bed apartment. Beautiful area! 267/mo + electricity Call Jason 865-3726

SERVICES

"Balloon view" cartoon characturas Makes great gift! $75, full color. Satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 585-6447

Call the playground bbs! 256-6685 Meg basso, files, online games etc New bbs etc welcome!

Fundraising. Choose from 3 different fundraisers lasting either 3 or 7 days No investment. Earn $$$ for your group plus personal cash bonuses for yourself Call 1-800-932-0528 ext 65

Medal search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues Local test shoots now being conducted by Erin Fitzpatrick Photography. Beginners and experienced models Males, females, all categories welcome. 617-923-0267

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549-1906

Purchasing a used car? Having your car appraised? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

SHAREWARE

Free!! Shareware listing hundreds of quality software programs only $3.49 each Call 584-2782

TRAVEL

1995 Spring break 95. America's #1 Spring break company! Cancun, Bahamas, Daytona and Panama! 110% lowest price guarantee! Organize 15 friends and travel free! Earn highest commissions! (800) 32-TRAVEL

Travel free! Spring break '95! Guaranteed lowest prices Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida Book early + save $$$! Organize group travel free! 1-800-426-7710

WANTED

Actor, Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, puggilars, armourer to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and deems for a good time. Bill/ Irene 584-4703

Campus representative Kodak products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales Call 1-800-272-4432

Experienced drummer Must own kit 253-4907

F.Y.I.
Bring your listing down to the Newsroom, and we'll make sure it runs in Amherst's only Daily Calendar
If it happens in Amherst, it's in the DAILY COLLEGIAN

On the day of the apocolypse Gail finally revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her Mrs. Pretty" make up kit in the 3rd g. ydr
Mmm Daily Collegian
"Make Amherst New"

MICHAEL'S Billiard & Sport Bars
Rt. 9 Amherst 256-8284
21 and older-positive ID required
MONDAY
Pink-Emerald-Blue
ZIMA $1.75
On the 60" Big Screen: Football and Melrose Place at 8:00 snacks and munchies

University Barbers
(Campus Center)
549-0123
Hours: Weekdays 9 am - 4:30 pm
Sat 8 am - 1:45 pm
No Appointment Necessary

Research Interviewers
Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Monday-Friday, 5pm- 10pm, Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 5pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Interested candidates, please call between 9am-7pm, Monday-Friday (413) 586-8615.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer
Abt

Daily Crossword

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Yield
5 Hope chest wood
10 Touch
13 Saudi
14 Albee's "Tiny —"
15 100 percent
16 Ceremony
17 Employe
18 Persie
19 Keepsake from high school
21 Amuse
23 Boom
24 Hitler Aaron
25 Lowest of the low
26 "Show Boat" role
32 Yelled
33 Avowed
35 Scrimp
36 Pointed
37 Fedora
38 Blanc
39 He's celebrated in Niagara-on-the-Lake
41 Sharpens
43 — up on
44 Carolinians
48 — tree
46 At rest
48 — Rabbit
50 Handgun
53 Eastern
57 Actor's goal
58 Panama port
60 Verdi specialty
61 Post Retired
62 Passe
63 Arena for Penguins
64 Plug
65 Bulls and Bears
66 Adore, with "on"

DOWN
1 Grant
2 Lake port
3 Information
4 Crooners Bob and Rey
5 Im — in league
6 Nobelist poet
7 Dagger
8 Half of Former Perker
9 Produce again
10 Ottomen
11 Asian sea
12 Wilder
15 Bully
20 Darien, and Jackson
22 B & B piece
24 Brat
25 Beauty's love
26 Brightest star
27 Indian lute
28 Sighs
29 Dud
30 Goodnight girl of song
31 Eagle, in Berlin
34 Complete
40 Blanch
41 Shrew
42 Track meet events
43 New York City college
45 Tokyo once
47 Light-Horse Harry"
49 Sweeper
50 Blow
51 Hawkeye state
52 Luge
53 Gymnast Korbut
54 The Bee Gees
55 — It a Shame?"
56 Dark red
59 Metel

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Deli Beef Sandwich	Pork Ginger Stir-Fry
Chicken Sandwich	Shells n' Cheeze Sauce
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Tri-Bean Casserole	East-West Lasagna
Chicken Sandwich	Shells n' Cheeze Sauce

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Brian Gormley
Copy Editor.....Jeff Crofts
Photo Technician.....Jessica Taverna
Production Supervisor.....Marni E. Heffner
Production.....Jonny Lupo, Christina Levere, & Mark Mitchell

"The freshest in town."
"Ambiance galore"
"The waiters are always friendly"
"Best I've ever had"
Collegian
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Fresh news, friendly service

Back School 101
This 2 session program (classes one week apart) includes information on exercise, some anatomy, massage, treatment options, posture tips and pain relief methods.
Wednesday, October 26 and November 2
6:00-8:00 p.m.
University Health Center Room 302
For Information and Registration Call UHS Physical Therapy at 549-2671 ext. 158

The Far Side By Gary Larson

"Excuse me? Excuse me? ... I believe the biggest set of fang marks belong to me, my friend!"

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): A new financial arrangement could make it easier for you to meet certain obligations. Be conservative in your living and spending habits. Loved ones may follow your lead. Stay upbeat when discussing pending changes with children.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20): A devil may care attitude could result in monetary loss or romantic complications. Remain true to your principles. Discussing any worries with your mate or partner will bring you closer together. Guard marital confidences.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): Be careful not to fan the flames of discontent or domestic disharmony today. Adhering to sound economic policies is a must. Give loved one extra attention tonight. Buy tickets for a movie or drama.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): Make waves on the career front! Become your own public relations expert. The fields of history, science and economics hold exciting opportunities. Give odd sessions the brush off. Get to know the neighbors.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): Keep your own counsel today. People in workplace should not be misled on staffers. Drop materialistic urges in favor of spiritual growth. Team sports are a great way to make new friends. Join up!

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): An upbeat attitude helps you bounce back following a disappointment. Refuse to be flustered by efforts from the past. Invest time and effort in literary projects. Your creativity will bring both respect and prosperity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): Implement the steps you know are necessary for a financial recovery. The road to success will be surprisingly smooth once you get better organized. Be meticulous about your personal appearance. Look like a professional!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Be careful who you choose to represent you. Your future is in your hands. Troubled hearts can be repaired. Look for the silver lining if a plan is stymied. A delay works to your advantage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Replacing bad habits with good ones will result in a longer and happier life. Say "no" to self-indulgence. A hobby that keeps you on the go will introduce you to interesting people. Be hospitable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Get professional assistance when necessary. A wise move can be more than you can handle. Bring to the occasion if you have been given new duties. Dynamic action will improve your home life. Make changes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): An intriguing phone call leaves you speculating about the future. Complete any unfinished projects before launching new ones. Your efficiency on the job is being evaluated. You will pass a test with flying colors!

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Thinking about things is not enough. It is follow-up action that counts. Remember the lessons of the past when planning for the future. Arrange a fun evening for you and mate. Live it up!

Quote of the Day

"This course is like a miniskirt. Short enough to get your attention, but long enough to cover the bare essentials."
—A UMass Professor

Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
ZIMA CLEARMALT
COACH'S CORNER
every Monday night
7:30-8:30
Talk UMASS Football with Coach Hodges.
Live from
Rafters Sports Bar & Restaurant
University Drive, Amherst
T-Shirts, Prizes, 1/2-time appetizers.
Tune into CNN WTTT AM 1430
University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Sports Weekend

Monday, October 17, 1994

Minutemen hoop opens up season in style

The University of Massachusetts men's basketball team, led by senior Lou Roe [pictured], held Midnight Madness on Friday night at the William D. Mullins Center. See story on page 7.

Women's soccer looks to win Atlantic 10 title

The University of Massachusetts women's soccer team, who defeated George Washington 1-0 this weekend on a Nicole Roberts goal, needs a victory in its final A-10 game against St. Bonaventure to clinch the conference's regular season title. See related story on page 8.

Men's water polo wins four matches during weekend

The University of Massachusetts men's water polo team defeated Harvard, Boston College and Brown at the Eastern Water Polo Association North Division Tournament held this weekend at Amherst College this past weekend. See related story on page 7.

Volleyball team defeats two A-10 opponents

Dionne Nash [pictured] and the UM volleyball team upset defending A-10 champion George Washington on Friday and defeated West Virginia on Saturday. See related story on page 8.

UMass knocks off William & Mary

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

WILLIAMSBURG, VA — After a game of missed opportunities against New Hampshire two weekends ago, the University of Massachusetts football team seized the opportunities it had in defeating William & Mary 23-14 at Zable Stadium.

Massachusetts 23
William & Mary 14

In front of 9,042, the Minutemen [4-2 overall, 3-1 in Yankee Conference] were victorious in a must-win game, for Division I-AA playoff reasons, beating the Tribe [5-2, 3-1 in YanCon] for the first time ever, and handing William & Mary its first loss in conference play. The loss was the first at home since 1991, snapping a 14-game streak.

The Oct. 8 meeting with UNH was marred by Minutemen mistakes — three missed field goals, two interceptions, a fumble. Each miscue added up to a 14-11 defeat.

Saturday afternoon, however, was a different story. Instead of missing or turning over the opportunities, Massachusetts grasped its chances against the Tribe. In a penalty-filled game [20 total], the Minutemen coverted on crucial drives following William & Mary penalties.

Massachusetts did not dominate with its ground game, gaining 138 yards as compared to the Tribe's 128. And William & Mary only passed for 80 yards, while the Minutemen gained 66 yards with the air game. The possession time was almost the same for both teams, with the Tribe's 30:11 to Massachusetts' 29:49.

It came down to particular situations in the game — and that's where the Minutemen were successful.

The first half was miserable for the Massachusetts offense, as they had just 63 total yards [compared to William & Mary's 154]. The Minutemen defense, however, only let up one score in the half. Tribe running back Troy Keen scored on a three-yard touchdown with 5:50 left to play in the first quarter.

"We had nothing going at halftime. Absolutely nothing," said Massachusetts coach Mike Hodges. "We had just three first downs. We struggled."

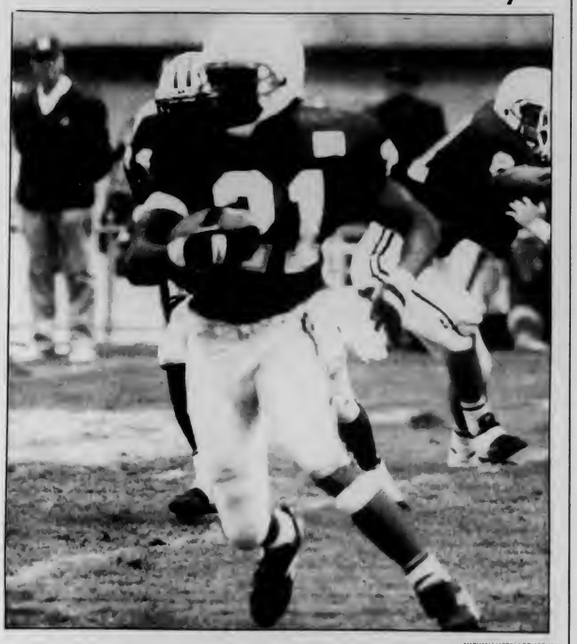
"[Massachusetts] has a good defensive line," said Tribe coach Jimmye Laycock. "They get after the ball very well."

The second half was a different story. On the first drive of the third quarter, Massachusetts came out running. After a Frank Alessio [12 carries, 47 yards] three-yard run, a personal foul was called against William & Mary.

The ball was moved up to the Tribe's 18-yard line with first and 10. A string of Rene Ingoglia [23-72 yards] runs was culminated by a one yard TD for the junior fullback. With Eric Oke's extra point, the score was tied up at seven apiece.

With 7:14 left in the third quarter, Keen scored on a

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7



NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

The University of Massachusetts football team, led by the two-interception day of senior cornerback Tony Williams [21], upset No. 7 William & Mary 23-14 in Williamsburg, VA.

"Our defense is playing with such poise right now."
– MIKE HODGES, UMASS FOOTBALL COACH

Depth of defense aids Minutemen

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

WILLIAMSBURG, VA — "Defensively, what can you say," asked coach Mike Hodges after the University of Massachusetts football team defeated William & Mary 23-14 on Saturday at Zable Stadium.

Actually, much can be said about the Minutemen defense after its outstanding effort aginst the powerful Tribe squad. How they held William & Mary to just 208 total yards. How they recorded four sacks, and picked off three passes. How they led Massachusetts to do two things to the Tribe that had yet to be done by any Yankee Conference team — [1] control their passing attack and [2] beat 'em.

"Our defense is playing with such poise right now," said Hodge. "They're playing with a lot of confidence right now, and they're playing very, very well."

Of the 208 yards accumulated by William & Mary, 128 were gained on the ground [122 by junior tailback Troy Keen]. That leaves just 80 yards gained in the air, as junior QB Matt Byrne completed 10 of 21 passes. Obviously, the fifth-ranked defense in the country and the YanCon's No. 1- ranked unit proved its worth.

The depth of the defense was exhibited by four different Minutemen of the defensive front sacking the quarterback. Senior tackle Ben Albert had one, to go along with his team-leading 12 tackles. Junior end Ken Bello had one, as well as 10 tackles. Senior tackle Silas Burke had another, as did junior linebacker Trejo Rust.

"I think that's one of the strengths at what we're doing right now," said Hodges. "When someone gets popped, like when [Vernard] Fennell went out during the [Rhode Island] game, there are guys that have been playing. That helps us later in other games. The kids are coming off the ball fresh, and they're able to keep pressure them."

As for the defensive backs, the depth was evident there, as well. Senior cornerback Tony Williams

Turn to WILLIAM & MARY, page 7

Donnelly quiets critics as team rolls to its fourth straight win

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

After one loss, three ties and consecutive drops in the polls, questions were surrounding the University of Massachusetts field hockey team. Despite the fact that the Minutewomen had only lost once [to No. 1 Old Dominion], people were jumping off the bandwagon.

The successful tradition that exists in the field hockey program at UMass has made the fans greedy. They expect nothing less than wins and had begun to look for someone to point the finger at.

Those questions often pointed at first-year coach Megan Donnelly. Was she preparing them well enough? Were the players motivated?

"I'm not concerned with what people think of me or my coaching ability," said Donnelly. "What matters to me is that people don't get on the kids backs. If people want to point a finger they can point it at me."

12 days have past since the last tie [1-1 against Syracuse], and the doubters have, for the most part, been silenced.

Since the Syracuse game, her team has won four in a row, including wins over No. 1 North Carolina [1-0 in OT on Oct. 9] and No. 2 James Madison [2-1 in OT yesterday]. Both teams were undefeated entering the games.

"I'm happy for the kids," Donnelly said. "They're a great team and they're showing it. They're the ones who are playing the games and doing the winning."

Donnelly's rigorous conditioning has had the team ready for overtime. But more importantly, her confidence in her players has made them believe they can win.

"She instills confidence in every player on and off the field," senior co-captian Kyri Sparks said. "Her belief in our ability to win is contagious. Her enthusiasm and intensity is part of why we're successful."

After losing four starters, including three All-Americas from last year's team, the 1994 Minutewomen entered the season considerably inexperienced. Donnelly's plan for the season was to let the team build as it gained experience, and have it ready for a run at the Final Four by the end of the season. If the past two weeks have been any indication, the team is ready for that run.

"For each team there is a learning cycle, and we were on that in the month of September," said Donnelly. "We keep getting stronger every game. There are September teams and there are November teams. We want to be a November team. We should be very confident the rest of the season on. We've seen the best that's out there and we know that we can beat them."

"If our recent successes aren't proof enough for the doubters, I don't know what is," Sparks said.

Turn to DONNELLY, page 7

UMass upsets No. 2 James Madison

Streya Volla and Kyle Rothenberger provide heroics in 2-1 victory over the Lady Dukes

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

BOSTON—There are no more undefeated teams in NCAA Division I field hockey, and the University of Massachusetts is to blame for it. The Minutewomen [10-1-3] pulled off their second upset in as many weeks, defeating No. 2 James Madison 2-1 in overtime yesterday.

UMass 2
Madison 1

Halfway through the first overtime period, Streya Volla collected the ball in the midst of chaos in front of the James Madison goal and drove it past JMU goalie Heather Colbert to give the Minutewomen the victory.

"This is a great win because, we were down," said Massachusetts coach Megan Donnelly. "We didn't get down after they scored. We just stayed very even and started executing. As a team we're starting to believe in what we're capable of doing."

Things looked bleak for the Minutewomen early on as they dug themselves an early hole. The Lady Dukes use a four player attack, a style that UMass had not seen so far this season. For the first three minutes, the Minutewomen looked confused and committed errors that led to three early penalty corners.

Only 1:18 into the game, JMU's top gun Carole Thate collected a rebound after the third penalty corner and shot it past UMass goalie Hilary Rose to give the Lady Dukes a 1-0 advantage.

The Minutewomen got on track shortly after the goal and began attacking. Freshman Missy Sweeney, who made a successful debut against against North Carolina, once again provided a spark off the bench.

Following UMass' first penalty corner of the game, a JMU defender saved a potential goal in the with her foot, but the officials awarded UMass a penalty stroke.

Like she has done time and time again, sophomore Kyle Rothenberger stepped up when it counted most. She flipped the stroke past Colbert to knot the game at one.

"As soon as the stroke got called I wanted Megan to give it to me," said Rothenberger. "I was trying to intimidate her [Colbert], but when she stalled, I just tried to retain my composure and be confident."

After both teams started cautiously in the second half, the Lady Dukes began to attack. Despite the pressure, the Minutewomen defense came up big.

With less than 20 minutes remaining in regulation, the Dukes were attacking the UMass net. Rose kicked the ball out of harm's way, bringing the crowd back to life.

Shortly after, the Lady Dukes threatened again. With Rose out of the net, it looked as if the Dukes would score, but Colleen Duffy rushed across the crease to save the goal.

With less than three minutes remaining, JMU had two more penalty corners, which Rose thwarted to send the game into overtime.

With four previous games in OT under its belt, UMass was confident heading into the extra period. They controlled the overtime until Volla's heroics.

"Once I saw the goalie going down, I knew I had to get it in," said Volla, who downplayed her roll. "We all played together. That's why we won."

"Everyone's playing well together," said Rothenberger. "That's what a team is. We're headed to the Championships."

****

Overshadowed by the magnitude of Sunday's win was Saturday's win over the

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 7

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Streya Volla's [35] goal, 8:30 into overtime, propelled the University of Massachusetts field hockey team to its second upset in two weeks, as the Minutewomen upset No. 2 James Madison 2-1 yesterday.

UMass forwards searching for goals

Returning scoring leader Rob Bonneau and his fellow forwards will try to solve Hockey East Goaltenders this year. (Sports, page 10)

"New Nightmare" thrills don't chill

Wes Craven returns to the helm as yet another Freddy Krueger flick slashes its way into theaters. But is it any good? (Arts & Living, page 7)

Jeans and T-shirt a rousing success

This weekend's 16th annual fundraiser for the BMCP was a sell-out with students from all over in attendance (Black Affairs, page 6).

Extended Forecast

Today will be partly sunny with a few scattered clouds. Wednesday will be mostly cloudy. Thursday won't be much better with partly cloudy weather. Stay in bed all week.

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 65	HIGH: 65	HIGH: 65
LOW: 55	LOW: 58	LOW: 50

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 25 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Tuesday, October 18, 1994

Surgeon General pinpoints education to improve health

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

The United States should educate rather than legislate morals, to improve our nation's health care and reduce ignorance in poor communities, according to U.S. Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders.

Elders spoke of initiating nationwide education and awareness in her speech on "Women's Health in the Era of Health Care Reform" at Smith College yesterday.

"If we spent as much time trying to educate America on the HIV virus as we did watching the O.J. Simpson trial on television, we would already have a far more educated society," Elders said.

Prevention should be an emphasis

Elders said to effectively educate and yield hope for generations to come, prevention of problems should be the emphasis. By preventing social problems before they get out of hand, the nation could save lives and money, she said.

"Our children are out swimming in an ocean surrounded by sharks and we are sitting on the shore, sipping from fountains of 'Just Say No'," Elders said.

With it costing more than $1 million dollars to keep someone detained in prison and each prison tolling in at $35,000, it ends up being cheaper to put kids through four years at Smith College than it is to keep them in prison, Elders said.

Societal problems are to blame

Society needs to deal with the heart of social and behavioral problems causing a rise in prison rates, widespread poverty, disintegration of the family unit and an increase in teen pregnancies, Elders said.

"We can't control who their parents are or the neighborhoods they live in, but we can enrich their lives at school," Elders said. This entails offering sex education.

Unprotected sex and teen pregnancies are the main causes of poverty, and the other problems result from this, Elders said.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

U.S. Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders

"Sex at an early age leads to more than one million pregnancies of girls 19 years and younger a year," Elders said. "There are 400,000 abortions a year and more than three million teen-agers catch sexually-transmitted diseases a year."

If both male and female teen-agers were educated, the number of unwanted pregnancies would be reduced and Elders would come closer to her goal of making every child planned and wanted before it arrives, she said.

Elders also said the education process is the responsibility of everyone — schools, churches, businesses, government and the media.

"In order to have a healthy society, we all need to reach out and be responsible," Elders said. "We need to offer people the skills on how to survive and thrive."

She urged the women in the audience to grasp the opportunity to give someone in need a "voice in their ear, a vision in their eye and a song in their heart."

Turn to ELDERS, page 3

Two sides of one issue

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Smith junior Megan Flanagan, who is pro-choice argues with Massachusetts Citizens for Life member Barbara Zalot, across from John M. Greene Hall in Northampton. The pro- life group was protesting Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders, who spoke at Smith College yesterday. They said they felt that the "other side" of the abortion issue needed to be presented, according to one member who declined to give her name. Elders is in favor of legal abortion. A group of Smith College students later made a pro-choice banner in response to the protesters.

Program moves to help violence against women

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

Editors Note: This is the second in a four-part series looking at the services available for men involved in domestic violence.

Amherst- — The Men's Resource Center (MRC) of Western Massachusetts struggles to fight men's violence against women through their Men Overcoming Violence program (MOVE).

Started in 1989, MOVE has been a regular program of the MRC. The program was certified in 1991 by the Department of Public Health as a batterer intervention program.

According to Steve Botkin, co-director for the MRC, 30 percent of the men that go through the program come on their own accord, and 70 percent are mandated by the Hampshire County and Ware district courts.

Overcoming violence

The 24-week program starts out with an initial one-on-one interview with the batter, according to Botkin. Approximately 120 people go through the interview process yearly.

"The in-take interview is a pretty extensive process," said Stephen Trudel, a MOVE counselor. "We ask the man questions about the relationship and about the incident that took place."

Trudel said the weekly meetings then operate in two different areas. The first is confronting the abuse and violence, and the second is a support measure for the men.

"We don't support the violent actions, but we are supportive to them as individuals," Trudel said.

Trudel also said a major part in the program is teaching a process called "time out."

"It works in three parts," Trudel said. "The first part is we have them identify their worry signs, like biting their nails."

According to Trudel, the next step is for a man to realize the significance of worrying signs in relation to abusive patterns, and to take some time out.

"Like an hour," Trudel said. "It's important to make an agreement with the partner that you will be back, and that it's not her fault."

Partner interaction

Another part in the MOVE process is to have interaction with a man's partner.

Sara Elinoff, the partner contact coordinator, said her job is to contact the current partner, and past partners of the man in the program.

"Most men tend to minimize level of abusiveness," Elinoff said. "Part of the process is to get a more complete picture."

The counselors do not tell the man what information they received from the partner. According to Elinoff, it could be risky for the woman if specific information was relayed to the man.

They also offer a free weekly meeting for women who have partners in the MOVE program, Elinoff said.

"Most women are cooperative," Elinoff said. "Some don't want to talk and we respect that."

Financial difficulties

Of the 120 people who are interviewed a year, about half actually go through the entire 24-week program.

According to Botkin, the biggest reason people do not complete the program is because of financial issues.

The program is $30 per weekly session, which amounts to $750 for the entire program.

The state does not give any funding to the program.

"It's one of the biggest problems we face," Botkin said. "A lot of the people who come through the courts are people who are in financial need, and can't afford the program."

Botkin said there are two slots per session which offer a $15 fee, but those fill up quickly.

Occasionally men don't want to participate

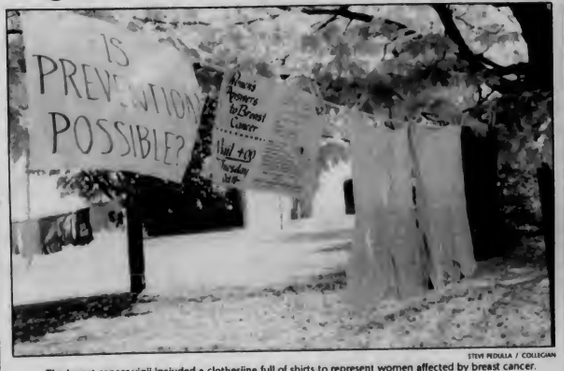
Because the program is often court mandated, Botkin said the MOVE program occasionally has to tackle with some some men who have a negative attitude toward participating.

"Often people come with a negative attitude. The system is not particularly compassionate, people often end up feeling jerked around," Botkin said.

Trudel said it is unusual for someone to go through the entire six-month program uncooperative.

"Part of our job is to help men see there is an opportunity for them to get something that is useful for them. Not just punishment," Botkin said.

Vigil set for women affected by breast cancer



STEVE PEDULLA / COLLEGIAN

The breast cancer vigil included a clothesline full of shirts to represent women affected by breast cancer.

By Emily Marino
Collegian Staff

The hanging shirts range from tie-dyes to stripes, sweaters to button-downs. Each represents a woman who will die today from breast cancer in the United States.

The t-shirts are part of a public art works project called "Women's Answers to Breast Cancer, II."

The project is a two-part art installation created to promote discourse via an esthetic context on breast cancer.

"The emphasis on this project is public discourse," said Project Coordinator Sunny Miller. "I am interested in women offering advice to one another about all aspects of breast cancer."

Last week students were given the opportunity to leave their impressions on clay stepping stones, to be accompanied by 1,400 squares of red masking tape. Each square will represent the 1,400 women who were affected by breast cancer in Massachusetts last year.

This second week of the project features the t-shirts, which have been donated by members of the community, including international students from the Department of Education.

The t-shirts symbolically remind viewers that breast cancer affects women of all backgrounds, regardless of class, race or even lifestyle.

Since the cause of this deadly disease is still unknown, Miller said there is a need to develop a "context of community in which discussion helps solve problems," in a society in which all women are vulnerable to breast cancer.

"Last year, [at the project vigil] when we heard the story of a student in her early 20s having a double mastectomy, students became aware that this disease could affect them now, as well as in their 40s and 50s," Miller said.

A graduate student who participated in the project last year also told the story of her mother who died of breast cancer after having lived near orchards that used pesticides.

Miller, an artist who has worked in Boston and who is a graduate student in ceramics at UMass, reported on an earlier talk given by epidemiologists. The lecture revealed findings that three out of 10 U.S. Census Districts with the highest nuclear reactor emissions also happen to have the highest breast cancer mortality rates.

"This leads us to consider what responsibility we have to one another in pressing for careful environmental monitoring and effective controls," Miller said.

> "This leads us to consider what responsibility we have to one another in pressing for careful environmental monitoring and effective controls...but a question of strategies we can develop to reverse this epidemic." — Sunny Miller

The final installment of Miller's project is a vigil which will occur this afternoon at 4 p.m. outside of Herter Hall.

During the vigil, survivors of breast cancer will share their stories, and participators will commemorate National Breast Cancer Awareness Day. Miller said she hopes to create an environment at the vigil which is both a solemn and delicate context for discussion.

Miller said listeners will likely draw strength from hearing survivors' stories, and a circle will be formed to honor the connections in life.

"It's not just a question of finding our lumps early, but a question of what strategies we can develop to reverse this epidemic," Miller said.

Miller created this project last year after having discovered that the rate of women who develop breast cancer annually jumped from 1 in 9 to 1 in 8.

"That really jolted me," Miller said.

She also said that rather than push for more research to be done, she wanted to work within the community to draw support on a local level.

Survivors of breast cancer and others who have been affected by this disease are welcome to speak and share songs and poems at today's vigil.

Miller said funds are still needed to match the grant given by the UMass Arts Council. Miller can be contacted at the vigil today at 4 p.m.

New treatments allow victims to feel empowered

By Liz Solet
Collegian Correspondent

The subject of breast cancer can arouse feelings of fear, anxiety and powerlessness for women.

Most women have had some contact with the disease, through family, friends or general awareness. Cancer in general is frightening in its mysteriousness, its prevalence, and the harm it does.

News Analysis

Breast cancer is particular frightening because it is potentially mutilating, potentially deadly, and because women are mainly at risk.

According to Health Magazine, the average woman today has an 89 percent chance of not getting breast cancer.

But still the mystery and the fear of breast cancer remains. As with any other type of cancer, there is no clear answer as to the cause of breast cancer.

Any combination of factors may be attributed to the disease — from a family history of disease, environmental carcinogens, to stress and diet.

One large study found that nearly 70 percent of women with breast cancer had none of the major risk factors generally associated with the disease.

Studies have linked female hormones, both natural and taken into the body, with breast cancer.

Most cases of breast cancer begin when a breast cell mutates, exposing it to unrestrained growth and reproduction.

Benign cell growth is fairly slow and does not attack healthy nearby cells. Malignant cell growth is quicker and destructive.

Breasts contain almost all the kinds of tissue found in the body. Breast cells are varied, have many functions, and undergo constant changes and hormone influx, which makes them more vulnerable to mutation.

Most breast cancer occurs in older women, and studies have

Turn to CANCER, page 3

Police Log

Compiled by Kelly Spang from University reports

Assault
Oct. 5
Maria Cabone, 18, of 78 Thayer Road in Monson was arrested on Eastman Lane for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon.
Oct. 14
An individual reported a vehicle being operated erratically which endangered his safety and that of his vehicle resulted in two subjects pounding on his vehicle and threatening him when he stopped for a light on Amity Street. The case is under investigation.

Liquor Law Violation
Oct. 14
Amy Howard, 18, of 265 Dover Road in Westwood was arrested for a minor carrying alcoholic beverages.
Hossein Bayat, 18, of 159 Whitewood Road Westwood was arrested for a minor carrying alcoholic beverages.
Jeffrey Hodge, 18, of 119 Carlisle Road in Westwood was arrested for a minor carrying alcoholic beverages.

Fire Alarm
Oct. 11
A trash can fire of the third floor of Pierpont Residence Hall was responsible for an alarm to which the Amherst Fire Department. Occupants carried the basket into the bathroom to extinguish it.

Drug Offense
Oct. 11
John Kelly, 19, of 26 Dutra Ave. in South Dartmouth was arrested in John Q. Adams Residence Hall for illegal possession of a class D substance.

Vandalism
Oct. 3
An individual reported some type of projectile broke her window in her dorm room in James Residence Hall.
Oct. 12
Homophobic graffiti was written on a poster advertising National Coming Out Week.

Intoxicated Person
Oct. 7
An individual who was found intoxicated in the lobby of Herter Hall was issued a trespass notice after refusing to leave the campus voluntarily.
Oct. 8
An 18-year-old individual found outside Kennedy Residence Hall was place into protective custody.
Oct. 14
A 18-year-old individual was placed into protective custody in Lot 40 near Boyden Gym.
A 23-year-old individual found unconscious in the fifth floor bathroom in Field Residence Hall was placed into protective custody after being checked by ambulance personnel.

Disorderly Conduct
Oct. 11
Staff reported an individual exited through the north doorway of the Whitmore Administration Building, forcing through the door and breaking the glass.

Motor Vehicle Traffic Stops
Oct. 3
Loren Miller, 24, of 63 Gothic St. in Northampton was arrested on Commonwealth Avenue for operating without a license and operating an unregistered motor vehicle.
Oct. 8
Julian Brida, 21, of 37 Fair St. in Northampton was stopped on Stockbridge Road for operating without a motor vehicle license.
Mosheer Rashid, 18, of Wethersfield, Conn., was arrested for operating after his license or right to operate a motor vehicle was suspended, operating under the influence of alcohol, operating a motor vehicle without license in his possession, speeding, and operating under the influence of drugs.
Oct. 9
John Robertshaw, 47, of 171 Pomeroy Lane was arrested on Lincoln Avenue for operating an unregistered trailer, operating an uninsured vehicle, operating a motor vehicle without a license, and attaching plates to a motor vehicle.
Oct. 14
Michelle Meuller, 20, of Winthrop, Maine was arrested on Fearing Street for operating under the influence of alcohol, operating on a sidewalk, speeding, violating the seat belt law, and malicious injury to state property.

Larceny
Oct. 2
An individual reported her credit card was stolen from her room in John Adams Residence Hall.
Oct. 3
An individual reported a microwave oven and a toaster oven were stolen from an office in Middlesex House.
Oct. 4
An individual reported six bundles of cattails stolen from the outside courtyard by Machmer Hall.
Oct. 5
An individual reported her wallet stolen from her unlocked room in Patterson Residence Hall.
Oct. 12
An individual reported a diamond ring stolen from the dresser in her room in Leach Residence Hall.
Oct. 13
An individual reported a room key and the key to her vehicle stolen from her room in Kennedy Residence Hall.

Bike Theft
Oct. 11
An individual reported his bike stolen from the outside railing of Worcester Dining Commons where it was locked.

Suspicious Activity
Oct. 2
Staff reported a problem with an individual who is taking food from Franklin Dining Commons.

Correction

In yesterday's Collegian, the headline for the front page story about Haiti was incorrect. The first killing was committed by a member of an anti-Aristide paramilitary group.

The Collegian regrets the error.

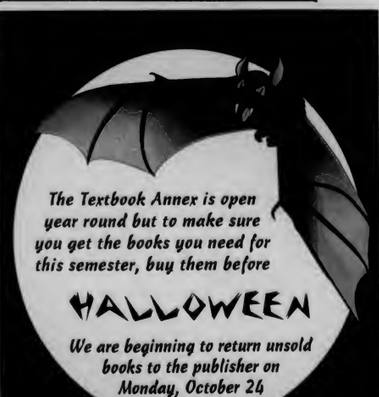
Black Affairs needs writers

The Daily Collegian's Black Affairs page is an integral link between the community and the UMass campus.

We are revitalizing our coverage of campus life, and you can be a vital part of it.

Contact Black Affairs Editor Chris Conner 545-1749 or 545-1851



The Textbook Annex is open year round but to make sure you get the books you need for this semester, buy them before

HALLOWEEN

We are beginning to return unsold books to the publisher on Monday, October 24

University Store's
TEXTBOOK ANNEX
Monday-Friday: 9 am to 4 pm
545-3570
WE ACCEPT VISA, MASTERCARD & DISCOVER

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Oct. 18

Event — Honor "Women's Answers to Breast Cancer," outdoors west of Herter Hall, UMass, 4 p.m.
Meeting — Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance, Campus Center room 803, 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.
Meeting — Prospective new exercise science undergraduate majors, 5 p.m. to 6 p.m., Boyden room 249.
Attention — Attendance will be taken in Psychology 217, Cruelty and Kindness: The Psychology of Good and Evil.
Exam — Psychology 305 exam will be today for Professor Harry Schumer, Bartlett 65.
Social — LBGA Info-Social, Campus Center room 803, 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.
Film — Not at the Mall: A Series of Film Experiences You Won't Find Anywhere Else, Bartlett Hall, UMass, 7 p.m.
Music — Faculty Recital: Ravel's World, Bezanson Recital Hall, UMass, 8 p.m.

Wednesday, Oct. 19

Meeting — Lesbian Bisexual Woman's Union, LBGA office, 413B Student Union, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.
Seminar — Dr. Ron Booker, "Regulation of postembryonic neurogenesis in the moth," Morrill-South room 203, 4 p.m.
Lecture — Richard Ryan, Bayerweather 202-203, Amherst College, free, 4:15 p.m.
Video — Mephisto, Hooker Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College, 7:30 p.m.

Thursday, Oct. 20

Meeting — The Grief Survival Group, a support group for those who have suffered loss., Campus Center, UMass, 7 p.m.
Multi-Arts — Arts Council, ARTeVENTives at the maze, UMass. Maze is located at the stadium stop of the PVTA Campus Shuttle.
Meeting — Bisexual Rap Group, 4th floor lounge, Mary Lyon House, Northeast, UMass, 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.
Film — Fantastic Cinema: Legends, Myths, Adventures, Herter Hall 227, UMass, free, 7:30 p.m.
Symposium — The O.J. Simpson Case: A Deconstruction of Legal and Media Issues, Main Lecture Hall, HC, 7:30 p.m.

Friday, Oct. 21

Lecture — Visiting Lecturer Series in Geology, Morrill Science Center room 131, UMass, 3:30 p.m.
Lecture — Gendered Social Knowledge: Domestic Discourse, Jane Addams, and the Possibilities of Social Science, Neilson Library Browsing Room, Smith College, 4:15 p.m.
Film — Nazarin, Wright Hall auditorium, Smith College, free, show times: 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.
Community — Rub Shoulders with Royalty — The Shabbat Queen is here, Chabad House, 7 p.m.
Film — Treasure of the Sierra Madre, Campus Center Theater, Amherst College, $1.75, show times: 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.
Dance — Shapiro and Smith Dance Company, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m., ticket information: 545-2511.
Theater — The Swan, Fayerweather Studio, Amherst, free, 8 p.m.

President pleas for reconciliation

Mob burns down houses and stores in the city of Gonaives

By Michael Norton
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — President Jean-Bertrand Aristide preached anew for reconciliation from behind his bulletproof shield Monday, hours after a mob torched the family home of Haiti's new army commander.

Fifteen buildings were set afire and one man killed in the coastal town of Gonaives after a false rumor spread Sunday night that Maj. Gen. Jean-Claude Duperval had led a coup attempt against Aristide.

After three years of army rule, Aristide faces a major challenge in persuading his nation to put aside the desire for vengeance.

At the same time, concern for Aristide's security has practically made him a prisoner of the National Palace, where his appearances have been from behind a bullet-proof shield on the palace steps.

The mob attack in Gonaives, 100 miles north of Port-au-Prince, occurred after Aristide summoned Duperval to the National Palace on Sunday to discuss how to dismantle the military, including cutting the army roster by 80 percent.

U.S. troops guarding the palace unloaded Duperval's normal sidearms, prompting unfounded rumors to spread that the army chief had tried to topple Aristide.

At least 10 houses and five stores were burned in the city of Gonaives, including one belonging to Duperval's mother and another belonging to the grandmother of former junta leader Lt. Col. Michel Francois. A grain depot owned by the Brandts, one of Haiti's richest families, was looted.

Radio Signal FM said U.S. and Haitian soldiers arrested 109 people in putting down the violence in Gonaives.

In a brief speech Monday at the National Palace, Aristide urged "creating a state of law like all modern societies."

Underlining Aristide's plea for reconciliation, Duperval joined the Haitian leader on the palace stairs and helped him hoist the Haitian flag.

Then Duperval offered Aristide a crisp salute and energetic handshake. The army chief was promoted last week to replace coup leader Raoul Cedras, who fled into exile.

Enthusiastic crowds briefly prevented Aristide's motorcade from leaving the palace to lay a wreath at Haiti's national museum to commemorate the assassination in 1806 of Jean-Jacques Dessalines, one of Haiti's founding fathers.

Aristide's motorcade retreated, then used a back exit to get to the nearby national museum.

Later Monday, Duperval ordered all soldiers on leave to return to their posts on Tuesday. Only a small fraction of Haiti's soldiers have been reporting for duty since Cedras' resignation.

Aristide plans to cut the forces from 7,450 to 1,500.

Aristide officials sought Monday to put an end to the violence.

Information Minister Herve Denis said anyone caught looting or targeting the homes of Aristide's political opponents would be arrested.

The lower house of Parliament protested the violence in a statement. "It doesn't seem that President Aristide can control the people," said Emmanuel Reyme, an opposition legislator and secretary of the Chamber of Deputies.

Violence has been compounded by the disappearance of many of Haiti's soldiers and police, putting American troops and international police monitors in the middle of disputes that are difficult to decipher.

During one street dispute in Port-au-Prince Monday, a pregnant woman told American troops that a man had threatened her. But a crowd told the Americans she was using them to settle a business quarrel.

Meanwhile, the U.S. military said the bodies of two slain men were discovered Sunday near the Cite Soleil area. A spokesman, Navy Lt. Mark McCaffrey, had no further detail.

UMass Arts Council Presents performance interventions at public art sites & courtyards

artEventives
October 20

To celebrate the ReMaze... Maze Interventions: Reclaiming a Campus Public Art Site.
A 1994 Collaborative Project of the University Arts Council and Pystical Plant

3:30 - 6:00

Beginning with the musical sounds of Flutes on the Meadow with Gordon Korstange and Rajesh Ranganathan, South Asian flute and drum; Barney McElhone of "The Bards" on the Irish tin whistle; and HAWK (Nipmuc), Native American Flutes.

3:30 - 6:00 "Before the First Frost" bulb planting. Planting and resowing of wildflowers in the meadow of the Maze. Student volunteers needed for this momentous planting event – s(ign-up before or just be there to participate.

5:00 Dedication and appreciation of this ReMazed public art site.

All throughout this artEventives there will be ReMazing refreshments of crisp orchard apples, popped corn, and cider.

The MAZE is located near the Stadium stop on the PVTA Campus Shuttle (southbound) running every 15 minutes

ReMazing assistance and support from: UMass Arts Council; University Pystical Plant; South Asian Music & Dance Program of the Fine Arts Center; Monique Fordham (Abenaki) of WMUA's "Kita"; Department of Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning; Laura Wilson (MLA '95) and Lori Kissinger (MLA '95); Mike Davidson, Stockbridge School of Agriculture; and many other gardener friends and faculty.

Shoot for the Daily Collegian

Not only are we New England's largest college daily, but we have the nation's nicest photo editor, Nathan Martin

Stop by 113 Campus Center and see for yourself, or call the photo desk at 545-1701

"What I really want to do is teach"

GRADUATE PROGRAM OPEN HOUSES

Master of Arts in Teaching English as a Second Language
November 1, 1994—5:00 p.m.

Master of Arts in Teaching Elementary, Middle, and High School Education
November 2, 1994—5:00 p.m.

Master of Science in Education Special and Intensive Special Needs
November 2, 1994—5:00 p.m.

Come to Simmons College in Boston and learn about our masters degree programs leading to teacher certification. Explore whether teaching is what you really want to do.
Call (61) 521-2810 for more information about the Open Houses program brochures or for directions

Office of Graduate Studies Admissions · A 300 The Fenway Boston MA 02115-5898

Phon–a–thon helping to bring the money

By Mike Matondi
Collegian Correspondent

The Newman Center at the University of Massachusetts is well on its way raising the funds necessary to keep the center going.

The annual phon–a–thon held at the center targets alumni to donate money. Already half way through the annual event, which began Oct. 9, volunteers have raised about 60 percent of the $140,000 goal.

The Newman Center, located on campus, is not supported by the state or the University. A wide variety of services are offered, including Roman Catholic masses and counseling.

"I feel very confident that we will reach our goal", said Ken Gordon, economics major and the student director of the phon–a–thon. "The phon–a–thon is a great way for me to gain experience in my major and Father Francis(Lavelle) really makes the experience special."

Rev. Francis P. Lavelle, the Catholic student Center's director, said he is pleased with the phon–a–thon's quick start.

"The phon–a–thon is critical in our efforts to keep the Newman Center open, as it accounts for almost one–third of our annual income," Lavelle said. "The kids have been great."

Maxwell Soda, a phon–a–thon volunteer for the past three years, said the phon–a–thon is like a team.

"Honestly, I'm just happy to be here and always glad to help the team," Soda said.

Volunteers are always needed, regardless of religion.

Gordon, who is Jewish said, "The Newman Center is not just for Catholic people. I'm Jewish and I have come down here and found a second home."

While the phon–a–thon appears to be starting strong, Lavelle said about half way through the fund raiser, donations typically drop off.

"We count on the particular alumni, who did in fact use the Newman Center in their years at UMass," Lavelle said. "But we understand how the recession has made things difficult."

Within the UMass campus, the Greek community has been very much involved with the phon–a–thon, particularly Sigma Phi Epsilon, according to Gordon who also a member of the fraternity.

"I try to get the guys down here as often as possible," he said. "And it seems to be paying off because no other fraternity or sorority is even close to us."

Fraternities and sororities compete against each other to raise the most money towards the phon–a–thon. Teams of people also enter the competition.

According to a poster announcing contribution standings, Sigma Phi Epsilon has raised over $7,000 dollars and is well ahead of all other Greek and team competition for raising the most money.

UMass professors give new, helpful incite to group

Class teaches EPA economic analysis in making environmental policy decisions

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Staff

Professors of the University of Massachusetts resource economics department are teaching an environmental economics class to some very influential students — officials of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Professors Barry Field, Thomas Stevens, John Stranlund, and Cleve Willis offer a course entitled "Economics and the Environment" every Wednesday at the EPA headquarters in Boston.

According to Field, the EPA approached the University last December to discuss putting together a proposal for the class. Field said UMass was not the only school approached with the idea.

"It was identified that we needed to be more knowledgeable on the topic [of environmental economics] in a training needs assessment," said Cindy Maynard, a human resource development specialist for the EPA Region I office.

Forty members of the EPA's Region I office are taking the class.

Region I is a federal branch of the EPA comprised of the New England area.

"What we are trying to do is provide an introduction to use economic analysis in making environmental policy decisions," Stevens said. "Policy that provides industry with an incentive which might be cost cutting."

The class is mostly based on Field's book Environmental Economics. It is one of three published texts in the field of environmental economics.

"This is a very popular topic these days," Field said. "It is becoming a popular subject around the country." He also said University enrollment in environmental economics classes has risen in the past few years.

According to Willis, the class introduces the officers to some "fairly new notions to them" concerning "new environmentalism."

Willis said the class focuses on incentive based environmental policy instead of command and control.

"[The class] gives them a chance to come, sit down in a class, and get a fresh prospective," Field said. "A lot of them like it."

According to Fields, the class will include such topics as emission taxes, transferable emission permits, and environmental standards for the control of pollution.

The class will also discuss environmental issues beyond the New England area, including international environmental issues and the founding on international environmental agreements, Field said.

■ Elders

continued from page 1

Women should empower the country

Women should serve as the voice and vision of the poor and powerless, and work to nurture and empower the disadvantaged in this country, Elders said.

The role of educating impoverished kids in America is the responsibility of everyone, though, and there needs to be wide-spread effort to really make an impact, Elders said.

Around 300 people attended Elders' lecture, the majority of which were women.

A male UMass student was a little disappointed with Elders' speech and said he felt that she was too vague.

"What she said made good common sense, but some things were too simplistic and needed more detail," Hassan Hashimi, a senior biochemistry major, said.

"Education is an easy answer; I would've liked to hear her address how to get more education and the reasons why we don't have it already," Hashimi said.

■ cancer

continued from page 1

shown an increased risk age, especially after menopause.

Early detection is extremely important. Through self–exams and mammograms, a woman can detect lumps in the breast up to two years before she can feel them.

The earlier the cancer is found, the better the chances for treatment. Methods of treatment include radiation, removal of part or all of the breast(s) and anti–cancer drugs. Mastectomies are not performed as automatically as they used to be, but are still very common.

Although there is still a long way to go, many women have changed the way breast cancer is treated by the medical world, by challenging accepted ideas and demanding an active role in treatment. As more is learned about what causes breast cancer, including the body/mind connection, prevention and less destructive treatments will be more common.

Syria still refuses to make peace with Israel

By Jamal Halaby
Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan — President Clinton will be on hand next week when Jordan and Israel formally end nearly 50 years of hostility, but the man perhaps most important to expanding Mideast peace won't be there — Syrian leader Hafez Assad.

Assad "should look around," Israeli President Ezer Weizman said in Jerusalem. "He may be the last in line" to make peace with Israel.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin also said the accord initialed Monday would increase pressure on the Syrians. "I think it will also have repercussions where Syria and the Palestinians are concerned," he said upon his return from Jordan Monday.

But in Damascus, Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa dismissed the Israel-Jordan pact as insignificant.

"Irrespective of the number of agreements they have signed with the Arabs, all Arabs and Israel realize that peace has not been achieved so far," he said.

He put responsibility for making peace squarely in Israel's court.

"We hope the Israeli government will realize the fact that without achieving peace with Syria and Lebanon, there will be no peace in the region," he said. "This is the reality."

Syria fought Israel in 1948, as well as in 1967, 1973 and during Israel's 1982 invasion of Lebanon.

Syrian state-run newspapers Monday warned that the Jewish state's motives should not be trusted.

The papers said Israel's stalled peace talks with Syria and Lebanon, under effective Syrian control, demonstrated that Israel is still playing for time, seeking to pick off the Arabs one by one to weaken their bargaining positions.

Syria has said repeatedly there must be a comprehensive peace settlement, rather than the series of bilateral treaties that has long been Israel's strategy.

"If there were any truthful intentions on the part of Israel, the Middle East peace process would not have stumbled on the Syrian and Lebanese tracks," the Tishrin daily said in a front-page editorial.

The Syrian-Israeli talks have been stalled since February, despite U.S. efforts to get them going again.

Peace talks with Syria are snagged on Damascus' demand that Israel relinquish the Golan Heights captured in the 1967 Middle East war. Polls show most Israelis oppose giving up the Golan.

Israel has offered a phased and partial withdrawal over several years and wants complete normalization of relations. Syria rejects the offer.

Hangin' on a high wire

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Jason Nietopski, an ROTC cadet and senior business major, demonstrates rapelling skills to the rest of the squad.

INCO
Instituto Internacional de Cobán
Guatemala
Learn Spanish by the "natural approach"

- One instructor per student
- Individualized curriculum
- Year-around; begin any Mon.
- Bilingual rep meets you airport
- Special winter rate: Room & board with local family, 20 hours instruction per wk, two excursions per week — just $120 per week!

—In Guatemala contact
Manolo Sanchez, Ed.D., Dir.
Apartado Postal #22
Cobán, A.V. 16001
Tel/Fax: 011-502-9-511-497

—In USA for free brochure:
Dr. Calvin Gruver
TEL: 612-252-0036
FAX: 612-654-0632

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
for travel beginning November 1

	One Way	Round Trip
LONDON	$183	$345
PARIS	$214	$428
MADRID	$250	$500
SAN JOSE/ COSTA RICA	$224	$448
TOKYO		$749

Roundtrip

Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Eurail passes issued on the spot.

Customs immigration & maximum stays apply. Fares subject to change without notice. 10 student / 8 cards may be required.

PRISM TRAVEL
800-272-9676
212-986-8420

100% BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
Great Burgs!
Great Deal!
QUARTER POUNDERS® OPEN YEAR ROUND
585-0241 ROUTE 9 HADLEY MA
PETE'S

THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE AND WORLD SECURITY STUDIES
presents:

"UPROOTING DICTATORSHIP IN HAITI: THE DEMOCRATIC MOVEMENT AND U.S. INTERVENTION"

A lecture by:
ALEX DUPUY
Wesleyan University
Tuesday, October 18th
7:30 PM
Main Lecture Hall, Franklin Patterson Building
Hampshire College

This event is free and open to the public. For information please call PAWSS at 582-5519.

YOUR FAVORITE BANDS ON 100% COTTON
BEASTIE BOYS, BLACK SHIRT #4012
REM
STONE TEMPLE PILOTS, BLACK SHIRT #2043
REM, WHITE SHIRT, M, L, XL #3038
SOUL ASYLUM, WHITE SHIRT #2060
PANTERA, BLACK SHIRT M, L, XL, #4028
JAR OF FLIES
ALICE IN CHAINS
BUTTHOLE SURFERS, WHITE SHIRT #3014
ALICE IN CHAINS, BRICK RED SHIRT #3002
ALICE IN CHAINS, WHITE SHIRT #3004
PRIMUS
PRIMUS, OFF-WHITE SHIRT, M, L, XL #4033
INDIGO GIRLS, MAROON SHIRT #3021
CURE, BLACK SHIRT, OVERSIZED ONLY #1048
ALL SHIRTS ARE AVAILABLE IN L AND XL UNLESS OTHERWISE NOTED

☎ USE YOUR VISA, MASTERCARD, OR DISCOVER CARD TO ORDER BY PHONE ☎
WE HAVE TONS OF OTHER SHIRTS, CALL US! (413) 746 6877 FROM THE FIVE COLLEGES AREA, DIAL 1 413 FIRST

TO ORDER BY MAIL... VISA, MASTERCARD, AND DISCOVER
- FILL OUT THIS FORM, DETACH, AND MAIL
- WRITE THE ITEM NUMBER, BAND NAME, AND SIZE YOU WANT FOR EACH SHIRT
- SEND CHECK OR MONEY ORDER FOR $15.00 FOR EACH SHIRT, OR USE YOUR CREDIT CARD
- INCLUDE $3.00 FOR POSTAGE PER ORDER
- MA RESIDENTS NEED TO ADD 5% SALES TAX
- MAKE CHECK PAYABLE TO C.S.I.

CARD NUMBER · EXPIRES · SIGNATURE · SHIRT 1 · SHIRT 2 · NAME · ADDRESS · CITY · STATE · ZIP ·

CYPRESS SLOUGH, INC. 40 LINCOLN STREET SPRINGFIELD MA 01109 (413) 746 6877

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gurley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Chris Taylor Corner Black Affairs Editor Emily Marino Women's Issues Editor
Andrew Ferguson Business Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor John Khachadourian Finance Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Ade Michelle Lugo Multicultural Affairs Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Kelly Spang News Editor Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Nathan R. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Peace efforts should continue

The Nobel Peace Prize was awarded last week to Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and leader of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, Yasir Arafat, for their signing of a peace accord.

Within a matter of days, the kidnapping and killing of a 20-year-old Israeli soldier, by a radical Muslim organization, cast a dark shadow over reasoning behind the granting of such a prestigious award. Such violence is exactly what the peace agreement, signed last summer, was supposed to prevent.

Arafat has yet to prove that he can effectively uphold such an agreement and that he can deliver a sense of security for both his own people and Israel, on which peace is based. The violence of this past week poses serious questions on how Arafat will hold up as a leader of "peace" within his Palestinian community.

The Nobel Peace Prize is an award for outstanding and extraordinary achievement. And while Arafat's effort may be a step in the right direction, it has not been proven to be a lasting hike.

BILL CLINTON WAS FORCED TO RESPOND TO THE CRISIS IN IRAQ...
...TO REMIND SADDAM HUSSEIN...
...THAT GEORGE BUSH TAUGHT HIM A LESSON HE'D NEVER FORGET...
...ABOUT THREATENING HIS NEIGHBORS WITH FORCES THAT GEORGE BUSH EFFECTIVELY DESTROYED.
ONCE AND FOR ALL. AGAIN
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND

Drug legalization is the only solution

This is the third in a three-part opinion series on crime.

Peter J. Orvetti

There is a grade school in Washington D.C. Remarkably, it is drug-free, through the hard work of parents, teachers and students. Every day, after the first bell, the door is padlocked and not opened until the end of the day. This is to keep out drug dealers and their guns. The students — third-graders, fourth-graders — like the chains. It makes them feel safe.

People will do drugs. That is a fact. Children who don't do drugs must be locked inside their own schools so they won't be shot. This is what we call fighting crime.

When Surgeon General Jocelyn Elders proposed legalizing drugs, she was laughed at. People also laughed at Baltimore Mayor Kurt Schmoke, ACLU Director Ira Glasser and conservative leader William F. Buckley. But this is the only solution to the drug problem and to crime. It crosses the political spectrum. It is not liberal or conservative. It is common sense.

- According to FBI data, one out of three robberies is committed to obtain money for high-priced illegal drugs.
- Up to 40 percent of murders in major cities occur in the drug trade. This includes children, bystanders and police officers.
- One-third of U.S. AIDS cases are due to infected needles.
- Over $150 billion has been spent on the drug war since 1981. Another $150 billion will be spent in the next three years. The drug crisis is still getting worse.
- At least $40 billion in drug profits goes to crime syndicates each year. This does not necessarily include all drug vendors on the street.
- Illegal drugs are easier for children to obtain than legal, regulated drugs like tobacco and alcohol.
- Approximately 60 percent of those in prison are non- violent drug offenders, or were arrested for non-violent crimes related to drugs.

Why was Elders laughed at? Because it is easy to refute the pro-legalization position. It sounds bad on the evening news, and a proponent of legalization can be declared "pro- drugs." In reality, legalization will even reduce juvenile drug use. So why do people oppose Elder's proposal? Because the government is afraid of drug legalization.

The drug war is profitable. It keeps police in business, and the underworld on payroll. It keeps the illegal gun trade in business. It provides a platform for upstart conservative politicians. And it profits some politicians directly. If you remember Iran-contra, you know that many government officials have been directly involved in the importation and sale of illegal drugs, including Senator de facto Ollie North.

Just as the end of alcohol prohibition did not lead to an epidemic of alcoholism, the end of drug prohibition will not mean that everyone will be shooting up on the corner. In fact, a responsible government policy towards drugs, including treatment centers of the sort Elders has proposed — which would gradually take an addict off heroin by medical methods, rather than yank it away and leave the junkie sick and crumpled on the floor — will provide help for those who want to end their addiction.

Drug legalization will allow for the regulation and taxation of drugs. It will eliminate drug crime, which will drastically reduce all crime. It will make drugs harder to get, especially for children. It will allow real treatment for addicts. It will end one major source of political demagoguery. It will end some of the corruption in the police station and the Capitol Building. It will save wasted government funds. It will empty out prison space that can be used for real criminals. It will mean less eight-year-olds with holes in their heads, less bystanders blown away in drive-bys, and less dead cops.

And it will mean that those kids in D.C. can open the front door of their school, and go outside.

Peter J. Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

Moving slowly toward destruction

In five years, I have tried to kill myself 147 times. It seems I have many addictions, but the overriding one is the need for self destruction. My suicides are subtle. Guns and razor blades are too certain for my confusion.

Instead, I favor a slow death. I drink until I'm blind or bet until I'm broke. I have a lifestyle that will ruin me, and it seems the only comfort I can take is that a good friend of mine seems to want to destroy himself, too. Our problems are wonderfully entertaining to friends. They laugh at our indiscretions as if we were a sitcom. It seems we've gotten into wacky trouble once again. Meanwhile, death entices us. We're trying to slowly blow our brains out.

A.J. Stewart

I have two books from the 80s that delineate this desire: Bright Lights, Big City and Less than Zero. Both tell the story of a man falling deep into his addictions. By the climax, the protagonist is overwhelmed with sadness. The books resolve this problem differently, but the appeal of the novels is a window on the annihilation of the human spirit.

It probably isn't a coincidence that these were penned in the 80s. The 80s were the decade to throw caution to the wind. Cocaine was in vogue; deficit spending became expected and accepted, and instant gratification was the catch phrase. As destructive as they were for America, they were at least interesting. That is about all I can say for my friend and myself. We give people something to talk about.

Where does this destructiveness come from? Ask River Phoenix. Or Kurt Cobain. Or James Dean, Jim Morrison, Marilyn Monroe, Ernest Hemingway, Sid Vicious. We are a nation that idolizes people who threw themselves away. All of the above people can be found gracing college dorms in the form of posters. One wonders how many would be there if they simply died of prostate cancer, or emphysema. I would guess that if Bob Dylan had died in his reckless motorcycle accident, he would have far more posters than he does. Can you imagine how many O.J. posters there would be if he shot himself in that Bronco? I can. It makes me sort of sick.

I know people are curious by nature. I also know that most people try to do the right thing when they can. But if someone is speeding toward the brink, don't spend your time gossiping and amusing yourself at their expense. Try to help them, to calm them down, to bring some sense of order to their lives. Hell, sedate them if you have to. But don't sit back and watch. This world has enough passive people to keep Lazy Boy in business forever.

By my own criteria, I haven't been very good to my friend lately. As fast as I'm throwing my life away, he's doing it quicker. I should be telling him all of this to his face. I should be helping him get through his problems. Instead, I'm joining him. We won't ever stop if we keep justifying our behavior to each other. It is time to stop our madness.

I don't understand much about this place. I don't know why we take so much pleasure in other people's problems. I don't know why some of us feel the need to go skating into oblivion. But I do know that many people go through this life burdened with sadness. Each of us should commit to doing more, to being more. We need to dispel the prophesy of self destruction, long before it can be a reality. Before our friends become posters, and their mistakes become a legacy.

A.J. Stewart is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

HI, KIDS! WELCOME TO DAY TWO OF NATIONAL "CHARACTER COUNTS" WEEK!
ALL WEEK, WE'LL BE DISCUSSING THE SIX PILLARS OF CHARACTER: TRUSTWORTHINESS, RESPECT, RESPONSIBILITY, FAIRNESS, CARING AND CITIZENSHIP...
FIRST UP, TRUSTWORTHINESS! HERE TO DISCUSS THIS IMPORTANT CORE ELEMENT OF CHARACTER IS OUR OLD FRIEND, ZONKER HARRIS! ZONKER?
UH... ZONKER? ZONKER!
WHAT? I'M IN THE SHOWER!

A difficult walk to happiness

Wendy Darling

A year ago I was in the closet.

I was living up in Orchard Hill. It was a long walk to get to my classes, it was a long walk to get to the dining commons. It was a long walk to get where I am today.

My first day at UMass, I wasn't thinking about being bisexual, I was thinking about getting along with my roommate and where to put my stereo and how to get to my classes. Getting adjusted to college life is tough enough, no matter what your sexual orientation.

On a piece of paper on the side of my bookcase, there was a list of things to do at UMass.

Top of the list: visit the 2 in 20 Floor for Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Students and Their Heterosexual Allies. A goal I'd set for myself sometime during the summer.

As school began, however, I lost track of this goal. I contacted a friend of mine from home and tried to hang out with her.

I went to a meeting of the German club. I spent five hours a night doing my homework. There was nothing else for me to do, no one for me to be with.

The people on my floor were nice. They ordered Chinese food and gave me some, too. They watched TV and went out on Saturday nights.

All the same, I just didn't feel like I "fit in." Looking around campus, I didn't see how I was going to meet anyone like me.

One fateful day, however, I met another bisexual. It was at a special dinner for UMass honors freshmen. A week after, she introduced me to a gay man. We became fast friends. We ate together, we hung out together, we celebrated Halloween together.

We also grew together. We talked about being queer, trying to meet people, figuring out who we were. We spent a lot of time trying to figure out who else was queer, sitting around in the D.C. or standing at the bus stop. We wanted people to talk with. We didn't want to be the only three queers on campus.

Not that we really thought we were alone. We went to LBGA dances and events sponsored by the Program for GLB Concerns.

On National Coming Out Day, we went to the rally on the Student Union steps. We wore buttons sometimes. When we weren't too frightened, we stopped by the LBGA office.

Mostly, however, we were too scared.

A gay friend of ours kept inviting us to attend LBGA Info-Socials. We would stare at him frozen-faced. Tuesday night? Oh, we had something to do . . . Yeah, definitely. Bi Rap Group? Ummm . . . I have to study tonight. Sorry. We knew where the 2 in 20 Floor was. We kept away from that building, let me tell you!

We didn't want to be different. We didn't want our roommates to freak out. We didn't want to lie to our parents.

Most of all, we didn't want to hang out with queer people. They were scary. They ate together. Lived together.

They had their own clubs. Worst of all, they might actually have accepted us. If they did that, then we'd have to accept ourselves. And then we might have to do something about it.

Sometime along my walk, I started to realize that it wasn't so hard. Despite my own cowardice and shyness, I kept on meeting queer people — and liking them! They were nice to me: warm, accepting and fun. I started hanging out with them, eating with them, attending more events. Finally, they weren't scary at all. My friends agreed.

By the time I went home for winter break, I had come a long way on my walk.

I still had to deal with my parents and a lot of other issues, but I wasn't alone anymore. I moved to the 2 in 20 Floor.

I joined the LBGA. I took classes on GLBT issues. I started reading. I let myself go where I had never dared to tread. And I was happy.

Many people on this campus are on the same road as I was a year ago. To these people, I say reach out. I say assume your right to be happy. I say don't be afraid. Keep on walking until you reach your destination.

Wendy Darling is a Collegian staff member.

Letters to the Editor

The choice of a new generation is limited

To the editor:

During our stay here at UMass there has been relatively little to complain about. Through all of the controversies, and issues that this campus has faced in the past couple of years, we have remained relatively silent. That is up until now.

Much to our concern, the soda machine has been less than stellar, especially in regards to Mountain Dew. Daily we take a somewhat anxious walk from the Student Union machines, to the machines by the "Hatch," then on to the concourse, with the final stop at the machines by the bank.

Daily, we are haunted by the same orange "Sold Out" light. The same holds true for the rest of the campus. This situation is enough to drive the everyday student into a certain psychosis.

Much to our dismay, we must make this trek everyday to satiate our craving for Mountain Dew.

As many of us know, there is enough caffeine in a Mountain Dew to jump start a truck. It is this very jump start that we are in need of for our early morning classes. Those of you reading this who are chuckling need only to think about what life without coffee would be to understand this predicament we have been put in.

In short, there should be a call to arms by all students to join our quest to keep the Mountain Dew stocked on a more consistent basis. In the meantime, we must continue on in our never ending search for that one machine on campus that still has at least one can of Mountain Dew . . .

We shall be heard.

Steve Simmons
Mike Winn
Karl Miller

Risks exaggerated in recent story

To the editor:

The current hysteria "bathroom misconduct" in Thompson Hall is disturbing to the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization because of the AIDSphobic and homophobic sentiments underlying the surface issues. In your recent front page coverage of the issue, the absence of the words "penis," "semen," "AIDS," or "HIV" indicate an unwillingness to deal directly and openly with the real issues being discussed.

There seems to be a consensus among the administration that men having sex with men in a public bathroom presents a "health and safety risk."

Exactly what "health and safety risks" are presented by men having sex with men in a public bathroom? Do the men using the urinals fear for their safety? Do they worry about being sexually assaulted by desperate men unable to find a consenting partner?

How does the presence of "glory holes" (small holes cut in the walls of the stall) jeopardize the health and safety of those who do not engage in consensual sexual activities?

While perhaps undesirable in terms of protecting personal modesty (who wants to be peeked at while seated on the pot?) a hole in a stall cannot be construed as a "health hazard."

At most, it is an act of vandalism, but acts of vandalism occur regularly throughout the campus.

Why an uproar about this specific act?

We believe that it is the visible evidence of homoerotic activity which "threatens" the security and comfort of those who prefer that gay sexuality be relegated to some distant and closeted space.

What are the special health risks posed by the semen deposits that have been found in this bathroom? The building's maintenance staff is at extremely low risk of HIV infection even if they come into direct skin contact with semen.

But they have the common sense (if not the training) to use latex gloves when cleaning sinks and toilets in a public bathroom, a practice which virtually eliminates any risk of infection.

While it is not pleasant to consider, we know that the cleaning staff must on a daily basis cope with the potential health problems presented by vomit, menstrual blood, urine and feces.

To claim that the presence of semen presents a special health risk is ludicrous.

Having to look at a stranger's semen may be unpleasant and disturbing for many users of the bathroom, but it does not present a special health risk requiring emergency administrative meetings.

To behave as though it did is to give in to AIDS hysteria.

Hearing or seeing evidence of semi-public sex in a campus office building can be a disconcerting experience, but in this case it is primarily the irrational fear of gay male sexuality and HIV infection that is fueling a less than rational response. Contrary to popular belief, gay sex is not a health hazard.

GLBGSO Co-speakers
Darrin Shaffer
Deborah May

Education Secretary Riley diagnosed with cancer

By Carole Feldman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Education Secretary Richard Riley has been diagnosed with prostate cancer and will undergo surgery Tuesday.

"It was picked up at the earliest, very curable stage" during a routine physical exam, Riley's spokeswoman, Kathryn Kahler, said Monday. "We expect an uneventful recovery."

The surgery will be performed at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. Riley, 61, is expected to remain in the hospital five to seven days.

He had been scheduled to be on the road campaigning in the final weeks before the midterm election. Some of those trips will be made by Deputy Secretary Madeleine Kunin.

Riley was appointed education secretary by President Clinton at the outset of the administration, and has overseen congressional approval of a wide-ranging package of educational programs.

Among them is the Goals 2000 education reform program, which both men helped fashion when they were governors.

South Carolina's first two-term governor, Riley is known for his behind-the-scenes coalition building.

Though he lacks the flashy speaking style of his predecessors as education secretary, Riley is known to hone in on a topic and not let up. For months now, he has been urging parents to slow down their lives and take a more active role in the education of their children.

Riley and his wife, Ann, have four children.

He often refers to his grandchildren in his speeches.

Prostate cancer is diagnosed annually in about 162 of every 100,000 American men over the age of 65. If the lesion is very small, contained within the organ and causing few problems, doctors often advise patients to "watch and wait" rather than pursuing aggressive treatment. Other options include surgery and radiation.

Come down to the Collegian...
We're waiting for you.
Come down to the Collegian,
we like to write the news. We want you to join us,
the Collegian and you. Your new campus home.
113 Campus Center Basement 545-3500

Test Your Detector for life!
Fire Prevention
National Fire Protection Association
Batterymarch Park, Quincy MA 02269

Did you get your Collegian today?
Look for our convenient distribution boxes, located in Amherst and Northampton.
The Collegian.
We're everywhere.

EVEN WHEN AN AIRBAG IS YOU'RE NOT COMPLETELY COVERED!
YOU COULD LEARN A LOT FROM A DUMMY. BUCKLE YOUR SAFETY BELT.

The Collegian understands your needs. We hear your concerns and are sympathetic to your worries. In fact we have taken measures to insure that we deal with these issues...
The Collegian ...
Looking out for our readers who are looking out for us as we are looking out for them who are...

HEY YOU, GUESS WHAT... YOU'RE IT

K N O W M V X D
B Z T T D G H L
I P W H O P G D
I L J K E C N F
O M Z C O D E SM E

dial 1 8 0 0 C A L L A T T

ALWAYS COSTS LESS THAN 1-800-COLLECT.

Hello? Want the lowest price for a collect call? Lower than that other number? Then dial this one. Because THE CODE always costs less than 1-800-COLLECT.

Your True Voice.
AT&T
©1994 AT&T FOR ALL INTERSTATE CALLS.

Black Affairs

Anthony Crayton — an activist returns

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Former director of the Office of Third World Affairs, Anthony Crayton, returned to campus last Thursday to speak.

Improvising and impassioned, well–spoken and well– dressed, Anthony Crayton took the stage as a laid–back jazz player might, thus commencing his lecture.

The crowd rumbled slightly in that manner that suggests a certain familiarity between audience and speaker; there was a palpable reverence for the University of Massachusetts alumnus and former director of the Office of Third World Affairs.

In a move dissimilar to most lecture formats, Crayton requested that the people "talk back" to him; a woman yelled out, "Call–and–response!" a reference to the African tradition of participatory performance.

Crayton laughed as he repeated the phrase.

.. true man of the people.

As a child growing up in Roxbury, considered by many the mean streets of Boston, the Crayton family was among the few Latino families in the then–predominantly White area. Gradually, the neighborhood changed.

The Whites moved out, mostly to be replaced by Blacks; Roxbury's reputation soured as the race dynamics shifted. Crayton, for one, resented the bashing of his hometown.

Opening his jacket during the lecture, he quipped, "See, no gun, okay?"

Determined to restore pride to Roxbury, Crayton, then a paralegal researcher and advocate, fought social injustice with Roxbury Defenders, Inc., a legal group committed to cutting through government bureaucracy. Five years later, in 1976, he returned to the University as director of the Office of Third World Affairs.

To say there were a few problems would be an understatement, according to Crayton; true to his nature, however, he leapt into the fire.

"Effectiveness above everything," was his trademark strategy.

During his time at the University, he successfully tackled the administration and trustees on issues varying from the general education curriculum to the lack of representation of Latino music on the five–college radio station.

In one anecdote, Crayton remarked that the committee who had dropped the programming from their schedule resorted to having meetings in other New England states to avoid the persistent Third World Affairs representatives.

The tactic failed.

The committee son relented to the unyielding pressure applied them by Crayton and his people, who had trekked to the various out–of–state meetings in a show of crushing defiance.

There was one defeat, however, that did disturb Crayton. His good friend and UMass professor, Jeanetta Cole, left the University under circumstances he described as "a loss to politics" in his lecture.

Yet, the situation did turn out for the best in Crayton's eyes: Coleman became the president of prestigious Spelman College, the predominantly Black women's institution in Atlanta.

Crayton perhaps put it best in his lecture: "Fight is what you always have to do."

After leaving UMass in 1986, Crayton shifted his focus from the social ills of Amherst, to those of Boston, specifically Roxbury.

As an administrative analyst for the Boston Employment Commission, Crayton began to absorb the political atmosphere of the "city of neighborhoods," as he refers to it. From 1987 to 1992, he prepared for the greater challenge that lay ahead of him.

"Politics can either bring you together or polarize you," Crayton said.

With this knowledge, Crayton once again leapt into the fire, emerging in 1992 as City Councilman Anthony Crayton, a position he held until 1994.

"We've been afraid of power," he said, noting the reluctance of many Blacks to get involved in community politics. "Watch how we act."

Presently, as vice–president of Diversity and Management Associates, Crayton continues to impact his city of neighborhoods.

His message to current UMass students: "You need to see the fire come down from the sky. You empower yourself as an individual by building self–esteem."

An open letter to the UMass student body

To the students of the University of Massachusetts:

I just wanted to take this opportunity to welcome you to the new face of the Black Affairs page.

Having been made painfully aware of the troubled history of the page, I felt as though I might be able to breathe life into a forum that has sadly only been temporarily resuscitated a number of times. My goal is to keep it alive this time around.

However, I'm going to need some help.

First and foremost, I am still lacking a full staff. I know there are quality journalists lurking around somewhere on campus. If you're interested in writing features, covering lectures, reviewing music, or just want to be involved somehow, please feel free to visit me at the Collegian office. Although I can't promise staff positions to everyone, I will certainly try to find a way to make you a part of Black Affairs.

Every now and then I'm sure you'll find something that Black Affairs prints with which you will not agree. When this occurs, I urge you, as my second request, to throw in your input. No one learns and develops without opposing views to shape and challenge them, and Black Affairs won't either.

(Sending in the positive stuff would be nice, too!)

My final request is perhaps the one requiring the least participation on your part.

Read the page.

There is a common mode of thinking among some students that "Black Affairs" applies only to Blacks: They couldn't be more wrong. Although the page, as its title suggests will focus on Black life, it is also intended to be wholly accessible and richly diverse in content. The Collegian is a student newspaper, and, in just accordance, the Black Affairs section is a student section.

On this same note, I realize that there exists a longstanding tension between the Black community at UMass and the Collegian. I want nothing more than to eradicate that tension. Permanently.

I also realize that it will take time and effort to achieve that goal. People must be willing to bend and flex in order to return to an acceptable level of civil and consistent communication. Trying to undo decades of knots won't be easy by any means, but progress can assuredly be made.

Well, that's about it for me.

I hope you enjoy the new Black Affairs page and I hope to hear from all of you.

Sincerely,

Chris Conner
Black Affairs Editor

BEE BOP

If you've got a good vibe you can snap your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum.
Mass Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

BMCP fundraiser serves its purpose, draws in students

By Evelyn Aquino
Collegian Staff

The 16th annual Black Mass Communications Project–sponsored event, "Jeans and T–Shirt Party", had an excellent turnout Saturday night in the Campus Center Auditorium.

The party vibe could be felt early in the day.

Visitors checked in from institutions all over the Atlantic Coast. People congregated on the Campus Center Concourse as early as 6 p.m.

By 10 p.m., the place was packed.

The members of the BMCP security, along with Amherst police, were in position wearing their much–coveted security gear, fashionable T–shirts rewarded to those dedicated security volunteers for their service.

"The party started rocking around 11," said Mildred Cherfils, a junior at Barnard College at Colombia University.

Tickets were sold out before everyone got in, so there were some disappointed partygoers. But from past experiences, many have learned to buy their tickets early because the house is usually full by the middle of the night.

The overall response to the long awaited fall semester jam was positive.

"I would like to say thank you to all those who helped make the night a success," said BMCP's General Manager Shannan Magee, who said she will now begin planning for Funk–O–Thon, the spring semester fundraising party.

An indication of Jeans and T–Shirts' success: "You know I'll definitely be back for the Funk–O–Thon!" said Domini Bryant, a Indiana University junior.

Gain Valuable "Real World" Experience on Campus!

The Collegian Business Office is looking for ambitious, organized Sophomore SOM majors for the position of

Associate Business Manager

Direct supervision received from the Collegian business manager, as well as the assistant business manager. Applications may be obtained at:

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center (the basement)

Resumes and cover letters may be directed to:

Michael McRae, Business Manager

Application Deadline is Friday, November 4

The Collegian is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer

F.Y.I.

Bring your listing down to the Newsroom, and we'll make sure it runs in Amherst's only Daily Calendar

If it happens in Amherst, it's in the DAILY COLLEGIAN

You know Bobby, copying those answers from our family encyclopedia for your entrance project reminds me of my college days. Ahhh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my ivy league shoulder, passing off the students at the state asylum to take my exams. Summa Cum Laudes. God bless those anything started! I did love them so!
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Your school coverage five days a week

Macintosh® or IBM® it's your choice

with this coupon

$2 off per hour on computer rentals

Bring this coupon into the Kinko's listed and save on in–store self–service Macintosh or IBM computer rental time. One coupon per customer. Not valid with other offers. Good only at the Kinko's listed. Expires November 30, 1994.

kinko's the copy center

AMHERST: 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2543 Open 24 Hours
NORTHAMPTON: 34 Bridge St., 585-5000 (Across from the Post Office) Open 24 Hours

FREE
Medical School Admissions Seminar

→ Admission criteria by school
→ An overview of the MCAT
→ Take home materials/MCAT prep
→ Time for questions and answers

FEATURING:

M. Lynne Wootton, Dir. of Admissions
Yale University School of Medicine

Jane Cronin, Dir. of Admissions
University of Mass.-Worcester Medical

Keat Sanford, Ass't Dir. of Admissions
University of Connecticut Medical School

Dr. Foster, Dir. of Admissions
Harvard Medical School

Dean Graziano, Director
Kaplan Education Centers

November 4, 6pm-9pm

KAPLAN, 150 FEARING STREET, AMHERST, MA

Limited space. Call and reserve by October 26, 1994.
549-5780 or 1-800-KAP-TEST

Kaplan is proud to sponsor this special event.

Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT

SHARK NIGHT
☞ IS HERE
Single Elimination Pool Tournament
• Free Pizza for Players
• $2.00 Entrance Fee
Sign Up: 7:30-8:00
WINNER TAKE ALL!!!

University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549 4040

Arts & Living

Craven's post–modern chills fizzle

Filmmaker, actors play themselves in a creaky 'New Nightmare'

By Daniel Pellegrini
Collegian Staff

WES CRAVEN'S NEW NIGHTMARE
Directed by Wes Craven
with Heather Langenkamp, Robert Englund

It has been a decade since Wes Craven boldly invited us into his first Nightmare on Elm Street movie, introducing to the world of pop horror culture a new idollic and hip version of the "boogie man," Freddy Krueger. As a hero of slash, a brutal but loveable killer who everyone rooted for, New Line Cinema had no choice but to resurrect him into five ghastly sequels and one not–so–grand finale called Wes Craven's New Nightmare.

Heather Langenkamp (Nancy from the original), returns, this time as herself, as do most of the cast members in the film. This being the 10th anniversary of Freddy and the Nightmare series, she is thrust back into the limelight with her counterpoint Robert Englund, known to most of us as "Freddy." With her revived fame also comes a slew of crude anonymous phone calls by "someone" who is disguising himself as the one and only man with the dirty brown hat.

Now Heather's nightmares begin. Although her husband, a stud special effects wizard appropriately named Chase, assures her they're a result from the phone calls. Heather remains skeptical — primarily because her son, Dylan, begins sharing the nightmares as well. At first it's assumed the reason for Dylan's nightmares is because he stayed up late watching his mother's old movies. But when Chase comes home one night in a bodybag with four slash marks from his chest to his naval, we know that Freddy's back.

The New Nightmare has its plusses, such as the old–fashioned comedic jolts that provide you with a quick scare and then a reassuring chuckle. Seeing Robert Englund out of costume as a gentle sympathetic humanitarium–type is a pleasure as well. But the reflexive (that is, the movie in a movie deal) chance that Craven takes is a big gamble. And in order for it to pay off, there has to be a strong consistency in the screenplay that slash/thrash horror movies usually lack.

But the real disappointment of New Nightmare is in its ending, which is a fade instead of a close. There are rumors that Craven had conflicts with the studio regarding the ending, losing to the studioheads, and it shows. While the better part of the film is a somewhat amusing tribute to the first, the climax looks like a tribute to the part 5, The Dream Master.

This last installment has its moments, but it still proves to be a little more than just another sequel. C–

Author John Irving: working it all out

By Hillel Italie
Associated Press

NEW YORK — John Irving is running on a treadmill.

His hands clenched, his mouth contracts to a small circle, creases form on his thick, smooth neck. His chest bulges, to borrow an image from David Letterman, like a large canned ham.

Showing only a hint of strain, Irving talks shop. The setting seems right for a sermon on physical fitness, but for now this treadmill serves as a pulpit for literature, a comparison between Irving's works and those of 19th–century novelists.

"If I had been a writer 100 years ago I would have seemed a little more common than I am now," said the author of such best–selling novels as The World According to Garp and the new A Son of the Circus in a recent interview.

"I don't think there's anything particularly experimental about my books. I think I'm very old–fashioned, very imitative of the 19th–century writers who believed in developed characters, the passage of time, the collision of characters."

Even as he looks to the past, Irving thrives in the present. He's a writer of 19th–century ambition and 20th–century fame, a million–selling author of long, complicated novels at a time when reading is supposedly on its way out.

The interview began in Irving's hotel suite, then moved several floors below to the workout room. A conversation with a sweaty Henry James would be absurd enough for, well, a John Irving novel, but Irving seems a natural both for the world of literature and the world of the locker room.

He is a former wrestler and a former writing teacher. He has been photographed in gym shorts as well as a suit and tie. And he may be the only nominee for the Pulitzer Prize for fiction to be mistaken by his doorman for former baseball star Bucky Dent.

"You're looking at an old man in therapy here," Irving joked, referring to a shoulder he injured weeks before.

But his confident grin says otherwise. Only the gray in his thick head of hair hints that he's 52. His olive skin is relatively unlined, and his flat stomach and muscular build would be the envy of men half his age.

On the treadmill

Fiction writers face the increasing difficulty of inventing stories as fantastic as real life, but Irving boasts he's way ahead. He just doesn't see how tabloid scandals compare with the wild tales in his novels, with the floating dog's head in The Hotel New Hampshire or the bold–faced prophecies of the title character in A Prayer for Owen Meany.

"It is the obligation of the novelist, the obligation of the storyteller, to come up with something more than commonplace, that is better than average, something you can't find in an everyday newspaper," he said.

"I mean the O.J. Simpson story . . . is a really bad story. There's not enough motivation, not enough complexity to the characters, too much repetition in the chase scene, which was very boring and nothing came of it."

Light Weightlifting

A native of Exeter, N.H., Irving has published eight novels, dating back to Setting Free the Bears, released in 1969. He followed with two more novels, The 158–Pound Marriage and The Water–Method Man, that repeated the pattern of respectful reviews and limited sales established by Setting Free.

After the release in 1978 of The World According to Garp, Irving became something rare for a contemporary literary writer: a pop star. He was nominated for several awards, including the Pulitzer Prize, and photographed bare–chested in Time.

"I don't dispute I may be more of a celebrity than other writers . . . but many people seem to recognize me without knowing who I am," said Irving, who has homes in Vermont and Toronto.

Floor Exercises

Garp, and the novels that followed, made millions of readers familiar with the Irving melting pot of adultery, assassination, disfiguration, dislocation, transsexuals, prostitutes, bears, dwarfs, writers and wrestlers.

As much an insider as any literary writer could hope (or not hope) to be, Irving identifies with outsiders.

He sees himself working in the tradition of Dickens, a comic novelist with a social conscience, giving dignity to characters and situations ordinarily ridiculed or sensationalized.

"I'm amused at the insistence of some people who refer to freaks or freakishness in my novels. It doesn't seem to me I've ever used the word. It's not my attitude the characters are freaks," he said.

At more than 600 pages, A Son of the Circus is Irving's longest novel and includes the author's usual tangle of storylines. The main character is Dr. Farrokh Daruwalla, a 59–year–old orthopedic surgeon. Like so many Irving heroes, he is a man of many worlds: born in India, educated in Europe, living in Toronto with a Viennese wife.

Turn to IRVING, page 8

Local Favorites back in the Valley

COURTESY MARGARET STEWART

Max Creek return to the Valley for a performance at Pearl Street, Northampton at 8:30 p.m. The show is 18+.

'Open Wounds' examines culture

By Hernan Rozemberg
Collegian Correspondent

On Oct. 15, the University of Massachusetts was offered a taste of original and fascinating theatre. Open Wounds on Tlalteuctli was performed by a duo of sisters who are founding members of the Coatlicue Las Colorado theatre company. The event was presented by the New World Theater, a program of the UMass Fine Arts Center that recognizes and opens roads for the theatrical talents of people of color.

Hortensia and Elvira Colorado are two Chichimec women from Mexico who have been working together on and off Broadway, and all over the country, for over 10 years. They both are on the Board of Directors of the American Indian Community House in New York City.

The play presented the audience with a different and often overlooked perspective of many issues dealing with United States/Mexican relations and with Mexican internal dilemmas. In a very witty, objective, even sarcastic and aggressive manner, the Colorado sisters have proven that the need for alternative and less conventional points of view are badly needed in a society that says to be democratic and that boasts of freedom of expression.

The performance involved a series of acts which connected different issues in contemporary Mexican life and (retroactively) what the consequences of Mexican domestic policy has been on its Indian population.

In examining relationships between both sides of the border, a serious critique of American attitudes was put forth. Myths and stereotypes of Mexican immigrants to the Unites States, and some outcomes from these misconceptions were all thoroughly weaved through a series of vibrant and thought–provoking acting.

For example, the duo pointed at the issue of how tourist enterprises are set up and encouraged by the Mexican authorities. They also showed how various "vacation spots," such as Cancun or Puerto Vallarta, are all centers of land exploitation and points of attraction for poverty, disease and trash landfills.

Tijuana was also another example of a place used for capitalist purposes, thus disregarding its historical significance. The actresses used this right–across–the–border "hot spot" to bring some hidden realities to the surface, such as the high numbers of people who live literally like rats in the trash dumps surrounding the town.

The piece also looked at internal Mexican problems, especially those dealing with racism and discrimination of the indigenous Mexican citizens. The performance also highlighted their social–economic degradation and dehumanization vis–a–vis the majority of the population.

However, as the play proved, the Mexican Indians have been no longer accepting this subjugation. The play offers the primary example of the recent uprising in Chiapas — "land of the forgotten," as Hortensia Colorado called it. Not only has the Indian population risen, but also has the Indian woman, and their role in the community.

By continually stressing the fact of the strenuous plight for freedom and equality of Indian peoples in Mexico — one may even expand it beyond Mexican limits — the two sisters came back to the significance of the political evolution of their society, examining what changes have actually not happened since 1910 when Mexican "democracy" was allegedly installed. During one act they kept saying: "What was the Revolution for? What did all those people die for?"

Overall, one must give Open Wounds on Tlalteuctli the highest of grades. The way that many different transcultural issues like domestic violence, AIDS, racism, ancestral traditions and destruction of the earth were enacted by this performance, aimed to leave the audience with many uplifting, enraging and profoundly provoking thoughts about our world, and its evolution from the past to the present — and even what our future could bring.

The Colorado Sisters and the New World Theater will be bringing an activist from Chiapas, Isabel Juarez Espinoza, when the act eventually comes back to the Pioneer Valley. For more information contact Roberta Uno at the New World Theater in the Hampden Center, Southwest Residential Area.

Immigration Law

Hans & Curran, P.C.
30 Years of Experience in Immigration Law

163 Main Street, Springfield, MA, 781-4370
13 Old South St, Northampton, MA, 584-3232
50 Congress St, Boston, MA, (617)722-0043

Free Consultation for Five-College Students/Faculty

Book NOW for the holidays!

LONDON $173

AMSTERDAM	$215
PARIS	$229
MILAN	$239
TEL AVIV	$369
CARACAS	$215
BANGKOK	$468

Fares are each way based on a round trip purchase from Boston. Student or Faculty ID may be required. Taxes and surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.

79 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-1261

Hunan Garden 家湖園南湖 Restaurant
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15

NEW
BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 p.m.
Sunday Brunch 11 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3 p.m. - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup

TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

Come Join The GRACE Team

If you believe the future is what you make of it, we're giving you the opportunity to make it exceptional.

As the world's largest specialty chemical company, with a leadership position in specialized health care, W.R. Grace & Co. provides an environment where imagination thrives and contributions on all levels are encouraged.

Established in 1854, Grace is a Fortune 100 Company with over 34,000 employees in 50 countries. Grace serves global markets with high-technology product lines in flexible packaging, catalysts and other silica-based products, construction products, water treatment and process chemicals, container sealants and dialysis and other health care services and products.

At Grace, our goal is to achieve innovation through superior skills, knowledge and determination. If you possess these qualities, this is your opportunity to share in our success.

We are seeking Ph.D. University of Massachusetts graduates from Polymer Science and/or Engineering programs, who are ready to assume a major role in the development of exciting new technologies in areas such as catalysis, material science, polymer technology, chemical specialties, biomedical devices and biotechnology. Positions are available at both our Corporate Research Center in Columbia, Maryland and our Lexington Research Laboratory in Lexington, Massachusetts.

Grace offers a competitive salary, an excellent benefits package and a rewarding growth-oriented environment. To find out more about Grace, visit us on campus

Wednesday, October 26, 1994

At that time, one of our representatives will be available to answer your questions. Visit your career counseling center for details.

GRACE
Equal Opportunity Employer

CELEBRATING 26 YEARS 1968-1994
THE PUB
Fun, Food & Spirits

Tonight, Tuesday Oct. 18th
9:30 p.m.
America's Funniest Hypnotist

GEORGE KING

15 EAST PLEASANT·AMHERST

■ Irving

continued from page 7

Every few years, Daruwalla returns to Bombay to work at a hospital that draws blood from crippled dwarfs. He's also a screenwriter for a popular Indian detective series. But the movies become so controversial that they cause the beating death of a member of the Duckworth Sports Club.

That's just a fraction of what happens: Look out for the transsexual serial killer.

Cooling Down

Irving likes confrontation.

At times, he sounds like a wrestler in search of somebody to pin to the mat. His desired opponents include racists, warmongers, religious fundamentalists in general and anti-abortionists in particular.

"In my view, the only thing we should be intolerant of is intolerance," Irving said, his voice rising. "Why back off? They don't back off! I like the bumper sticker that says, 'You don't like abortion? Don't have one!'"

Irving next goes after anti-pornography crusaders Catharine MacKinnon and Andrea Dworkin. He unfavorably compares them to the Ellen Jamesians of Garp, the feminist cult whose members have cut off their tongues.

"The behavior of people like Catharine MacKinnon and Andrea Dworkin make the Ellen Jamesians look logical, even sensitive," he said. "When Catharine MacKinnon is called a 'First Amendment expert' in the pages of The New York Times . . . if that's a First Amendment expert, the Ellen Jamesians are pro-FOUND."

Irving smiles with satisfaction. He wishes MacKinnon were around to hear it. He'd like nothing better than to start an old-fashioned feud.

■ NFL

continued from page 10

though, and quarterbacks like Jeff Hostetler get creamed play after play, somebody picks up on it. The announcers, coaches and fans who see Hoss screaming at the Raiders' offensive line after he was planted into the ground by Miami's Bryan Cox for the third consecutive time sure noticed the poor pass protection.

One thing should have crossed Hostetler's mind — yelling at them sometimes isn't the best way of getting them to block for you. Maybe one of those times Kevin Gogan decided to let Cox fly by and shut Hoss up.

There is no way Art Shell should have benched Hostetler. Leading by 10 points over a superior coach like Don Shula, Shell benches one of his only bright spots on offense because he didn't like Hoss' attitude and criticism of the Los Angeles offense. Maybe if Al Davis took off the sunglasses and used his money to get a real running back, Hostetler wouldn't be scrambling for his life, looking down field for Tim Brown, Raghib Ismail and an assortment of track and field stars.

Arthur Stapleton Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

■ soccer

continued from page 10

UMass goalkeeper Danielle Dion, who was named A-10 Rookie of the week, will be looking for her 7.5 shutout of the year.

"She's shown that she can do the job," Swanson said.

Earlier in the year Dartmouth played Hartford, a team that beat UMass last week, to a 1–1 tie.

"It will be a very, very tough challenge," said UMass Assistant Coach April Kater.

"Dartmouth is doing very well, they've been winning big. They can play. If they beat us, it's a ticket [for them] to the NCAAs."

"Simplify, simplify."

Henry David Thoreau

"Hey, that's not a bad idea."

AT&T

AT&T Universal MasterCard.
The credit, cash and calling card. All in one.

The AT&T Universal MasterCard. No annual fee—ever. Access to cash at over 350,000 locations. Plus an AT&T calling card. Because life should be contemplated. Not complicated.

Call 1 800 438-8627 to request an application.

Look For FREE Stuff at The AT&T Universal MasterCard Table

AT&T

Urban Shocker By Deg

DOES ANYONE REALLY CARE THAT IT'S OCTOBER AND THERE'S NO WORLD SERIES?
I DON'T CARE!
I DON'T CARE!
DO YOU HEAR ME?!
I DON'T CARE!
HE CARES. HOW SWEET.

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

DING DONG
IT'S ROSALYN!
ANSWER THE DOOR. WILL YOU PLEASE, CALVIN?
HI ROZ. MY PARENTS CHANNELED THEIR MINDS ABOUT GOING OUT, SO HE WON'T BE NEEDING YOUR SERVICES. GOODBYE.
HI, ROSALYN. WHAT ARE YOU TALKING ABOUT CALVIN?
YOU CAN'T GO OUT IF MOM CAN'T FIND HER SHOES. RIGHT?
AND WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT THAT?
I'D LIKE TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE. TONIGHT.
UH, NOTHING. HA HA! UM, WON'T ARE HER SHOES MISSING?

Bruno By C. Baldwin

AH MET BRAND THIS LESTER ARGUED FER YAH GRAD'N' NORTH. A FRIEND BACK AT UMASS I'M WRESTLIN'
YEAH, IET FROM CHEATIN'A IT SEEMS THAT FINALLY, SAME SEX DOMESTIC PARTNERS OF STUDENTS OF UMASS FINALLY GET HEALTH CARE BENEFITS. ALL THEY HAVE TO DO IS FILL OUT A FORM AT THE UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES
BRUNO, I'D RATHER YOU DIDN'T TELL ME THESE THINGS YOU KNOW THAT I'M REGISTERED REPUBLICAN
YES, AND I'VE FORGIVEN YOU FOR THAT. I JUST STILL WANT TO SEE IF I CAN SWAY YOUR VIEWS YOU'RE PARENTS HATE YOU BRUNO, DON'T THEY?

Jim's Journal By Jim

100 Lionshead on the Wall By Gleeson went to my brother to Preacher counting. the Cowboy Club Reign were fighting College

one trooper projectile hurled and kept trying to battle through the night.
I did it man I huddled but drank
He reached right up until he had to hit the bed though.
SMASH
101 Bedtime Cautionary

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

1968 MUSTANG

Classic '68 Mustang Way Cool Wheels FOR SALE!!! Electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, 2 door, great way to pick up chicks and studs alike. Best offer call Beth at 5-4434.

ACTIVITIES

NECKC Karate Club Shotokan style coed Totman 101 M-W 8-9:30 1-7-9 All levels welcome! Call Jessica at 549-4279.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

If interested in becoming an International Students Association executive committee member call Rachael 549-0615 or Chaze 546-0010.

Learn to harvest with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools right here in Amherst! Classes start Wed. Oct. 12th. Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX to register today!

Psych 305
with Prof. Harry Schurrer— the exam cancelled on Oct. 13 will be given in class on Tues., Oct. 18

AUTO FOR SALE

1968 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Beth at 5-4434.

1974 Ford Maverick, 2 door, 8 cylinder, 76 K. Brown w/ beige int. No underbody rust. Am/fm cassette. Runs well. $1000 or b.o. call #253-2104 evenings only.

86 Plymouth Horizon, 4 wheel drive New clutch. Excellent condition. Asking $1,300 or best offer. Call 256-3052.

89 Chevy Cavalier automatic, white cruser, good shape, good sound $3700 532-3184

BOXING LESSONS

Recreational & competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Dana Bumpus 549-5752.

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? We have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service, 2 Dashurst Terrace East, N. Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

FOR RENT

Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery$29.00

Take over my lease. Call 665-7498

Take over our lease Feb 11 Cool 3 bdr apt off Main Street - 750 mo call 256-4909

FOR SALE

1994 Buick $12000/neg call 8-2031

Dorm fridge $20 call 8-2031

Nothing like a fall day by a good old fashioned family barbeque. The ribs are on the grill, ale and brats
DAILY COLLEGIAN
You are our friendly neighbor!

MICHAEL'S
Billiard's and Sports Bar
Rt. 9 Amherst 256-8294
21 and older positive ID required
DAY
OKE
ng with ys $3/hr
PECIALS

Brother Word Processor WP-2200 Spell and grammar check, spread sheet Excellent for papers $700 Debbie 253-0967

Brother Word Processor for sale Last years model Like new $150 Call Pam 549-0089

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $500 Call Chris at 800-289-5685.

Papers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549-7231

Pianos for sale-- yet high upright, nice condition $700 call Jim at 549-5875 or 549-7635.

Shades for less name brand sunglasses 30%-50% off Campus Center MWF 800-WRHADES

Solid oak triple dresser
Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9264

Speakers brand new high quality linear phase studio monitors $149. 549-7728.

Star Trek Generations posters! 12 X 30 $10 or b.o. 665-7205

Tandy computer system, inc 512K comp rgb mon., drives, printer, many extras Asking 250 fm Call Joe 6-7348

FOUND

Women's Seiko watch with leather band in lot 26. Call 665- 3627 and describe

HELP WANTED

14 openings due to expansion local company has part time openings. $9.00 up to $15.00 to start. No experience necessary, training provided, advancement potential, flexible schedules, scholarships possible. For application details call 413-733-0057

$363.88. Sell funny college T-shirts. Profit $363.88. Risk free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs 1-800 700-4250

Alaska employment fishing industry Earn up to $3,000-$6,000+ per month Room + board! Transportation! Male/female No experience necessary (206)545-4155 ext. A5001

Bartender wanted Trattoria Gepetto Italian restaurant. Apply in person after 4:00pm 1177 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 549-1777

Childcare for 11 yr old boy 1 evening per week plus some overnights. Car required Call 548-1857.

Cruise ships hiring- earn up to $2000 + mo. on cruise ships or land- tour companies. Seasonal + full time employment available. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext. C50011

Earn $8/hr fight pollution. Work for political change with Clean Water Action environmentalist campaign staff! On bus lines. Paid training. P/T or career opportunity. Call 584-9830.

Stand Start your own business selling jewelry Call 1-800-700-3608 for info

Earn $2500 & free trips! Spring Break! Student Holidays, the nation's leader in spring break vacations, seeking enthusiastic, highly motivated students and organizations to promote and sell ski- inclusive 4 star Cancun trips! From only $499 call now 1-80-366-1TRIP!

Jobs for the environment. Grassroots political organizing. Earn $40-60/ day. Flexible hours/ casual atmosphere. Call Alex 256-6434.

New Amherst coffeehouse now hiring. All shifts available (413) 253-9441

Part time 15 hrs a week evenings S Hadley co. seeking responsible individual who possess high math skills, computer knowledge, the ability to work alone. Call Michael or Wendy at 532-7700.

Pinocchio's hiring full and part time drivers. Apply in person, after 4:30pm any day.

Receive up to 288,000 dollars in 16 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am -5pm

Start own cash business, turn straws into dollars, money while you sleep, public service machine-- raises people's awareness. Minimum investment $1,295. Serious inquiries only. George 617-837-0809

Seeking student to design and/or market hand- made shoes Call Sharon, 259-1748.

INSTRUCTION

Private English lessons Call Akron 253-9916.

KRISTIN POYNTON

Kristen Happy Birthday! lots love, Your sisters at KG

LOSE WEIGHT

Dieting is dangerous & depletes muscles- including heart muscle! Use our all herbal products- FDA safe/effective/Dr-recommended. Make peace with your body. Call the Herbal Loft 256-3016.

LOST

I lost my purse on 10/10 at Bert's. If you found it, please please call me. 546-3875.

Silver hrg ring. If found please call Christa 6-3787

PERSONALS

Coke I hope that when we go to Florida in the winter you'll frost my shorts. The H Hero

Happy Birthday B A You're the best!!! Love, K L Kel, Sari, + Cel

Happy Birthday Sis. You're the best!!!! I'm so glad we go to school together. Good luck with LAX! Love ya, Nancy

Jamie Thank you for making the last year of my life so special. Happy anniversary! Love always, Renee

Sarah, Erica, Christine, and Susi. Thank you for the great dinner! You guys are the greatest. We love you guys ---1008 white house boys

Sun Tzzu Happy 20th! Thanks so much for being a friend. "Crabs"

To the Salem witches. Thanks for having me every night. Gorge.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Suncast is there newly remodeled 2 bed apartment. Beautiful area! 267/mo + electricity. Call Jason 665-3726

SERVICES

"Balloon view" cartoon chancetures Makes great gift! $25, full color. Satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 586-6447.

Call The Playground Now! 256-6085 Active message bases, 17 Online Games Over 130 mega online!

Model search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues. Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Males, females, all categories welcome 617-523-0367.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906.

Spring 1994 internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands on experience in the legal field, work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary; training provided. Deadline for completed applications is Nov. 10. Contact Legal Services today. 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

SHAREWARE

Free!! Shareware listing hundreds of quality software's programs only $3.49 each. Call 584-2282.

TRAVEL

Travel free! Spring break '95! Guaranteed lowest prices. Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida. Book early + save $$$! Organize group travel free! 1-800 428-7710.

TYPING

Fast, inexpensive typing Call Joe 549-6798

WANTED

Attn. Drama and medieval performers ? UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jugglers, armourer to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. Billy Irene 584-4703

Campus representative Kodak products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives. Cancun, Nassau Jamaica. S Padre + Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1 800 222-4432.

Experienced drummer Must own kit 253-4987.

JOBS AVAILABLE
AT THE BLUEWALL COFFEEHOUSE
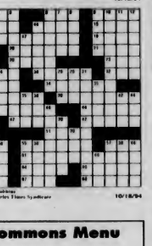
SUN-THUR SHIFTS
9 P.M.-12 A.M.
APPLY AT ROOM 820
CAMPUS CENTER

Daily Crossword
Edited byTrude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Book jacket information
6 Smash sign
9 Real estate unit
13 Emissions
14 Climb, in a way
15 French islands
16 Place of learning
18 Goes viral
19 Halves
20 Helen letters
20 "— days hath November..."
21 On the briny
22 Spanish painter designer José Maria
23 Utter
24 Kind of thread
28 Logical lead-in?
32 Pts. of a racket
33 Spend up, cut short
34 Scatter
36 Specialist in knowledge
39 Dismount
42 — at a time
44 More recent
45 Classic auto
47 Mechanical man
49 "— letter..."
50 Photo blowup
51 Show surprise
53 Ruth
55 Inability to make decisions
57 Royal art org.
60 Egyptian sun god
61 Juliette Low's organization
63 Perythings
64 Bohemian
65 Ancient dry measure
66 Gaelic
67 Ladies' melas Ambr
68 Noncom

DOWN
1 Crossquiz's comments
2 San — Rey
3 Pivot
4 Cheer
5 Popular novel
6 Felled electrically
7 Disneybook
8 Merely
9 Verdi opera
10 School cut-up
11 Echo
12 Thames
14 Chest garment
17 Guevara
24 — Vegas
25 Commerce org.
26 Curtain puzzle
27 Tenants of the White House
29 Hour dir. —
30 Wester binu ae
31 In Texas they're wide
35 Sword
37 Fuss
38 Heb. teacher
40 Dowel
41 Brother
43 Dairycase products
45 Money back
46 Win one's heart
48 Score
52 Family member
54 Start of Massachusetts motto
55 "— in Kalamazoo"
56 Emu or ernie
57 German industrial district
58 King of the land
59 Memorable ratman
62 Price org

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



10/18/94

By Nancy J. Kaboom
©1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate
10/18/94

Dining Commons Menu

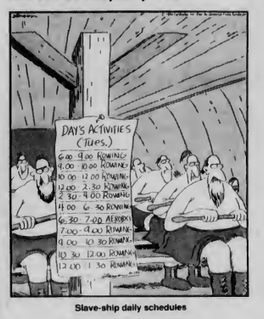
LUNCH
Top Your own Pizza
Assorted Droppings
BASICS LUNCH
Put stuff on Pizza
Healthy Droppings

DINNER
Roast Round o' Beef
Chicken Catch-a-Tory
BASICS DINNER
"Savory" Stuffed Pepper
F-Garden Sandwich

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Tracy Monahan
Copy Editor.....Geri Sahn
Photo Technician.....Steve Pedulla
Production Supervisor.....Tony Morse
Production.....Wendy Rae Nutter, Andrew Davidson

The Far Side By Gary Larson



Slave-ship daily schedules

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Tend to pressing matters first thing this morning. Knowledge is a wonderful thing when it is used to better society. Make a public excuse of uninterested in socializing this evening. Home holds strong appeal.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You learn as much from a lecture you give as the audience does. Travel enjoys highly favorable influences. A competitor's arguments defies logic. Be kind and when criticized you will see if you can.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep up the good work and you will attract the attention of those who count. A potential romantic partner could be a mischief-maker. Do not risk losing a long time friend for a casual flirtation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spend as much time as possible with confident and optimistic people. There are plenty of members' pleasures to be found. Creating a happy home remains a top priority. Yet romantic partner know how you feel.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasize the benefits of compromise. With the right approach it may be possible to get an imaginative assistant pulling in the same direction. Take aggressive steps to resolve a growing financial problem. Curb non-essential spending.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Two can accomplish a greater number of new ideas than one. Those who challenge or make up the all the harder to win. Loose thread concerns behind and zero in on your ultimate goal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Working for a higher purpose is much more fulfilling than just making a living. Your ambition is a positive, driving force. Stop thinking about the petty gripes and focus on your eventual success.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Good social connections are valued by those who see direction to get ahead. Host a party. Remember only what you want and not a word about it. Secrecy is essential for finalizing a business deal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): When some has fascinating fascism, one should make certain that it will not be forgotten. Prosperity is limited to who you know. Entertaining your neighbors and colleagues will help expand your social horizons.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Taking an extra work now could pay off handsomely. Save money for investment purposes. An ounce of financial caution could save you many headaches in the future. Verge having to borrow or overdraw.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A dispute must be persuaded that your ideas are sound. A determined, aggressive approach will help you obtain a favorable response by day's end. Be sure to pay attention and tap into considerable spiritual reserves.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March. 20): An approach that is too daring or reckless will invite a major setback. Learn to play a waiting game. Pushing someone too hard will only make them suspicious of your hidden goal.

Quote of the Day

"Well, he is my boyfriend, but he's not a god!"

—Overheard

ATLANTIC 10 Conference
Atlantic Ten
The source for Minuteman Basketball
No one covers UMass basketball like the Daily Collegian. From the pre-season tipoff to the Atlantic 10 Championships to the NCAA Tournament, the Collegian has all the shots.
Season Preview — November 21

NEWMAN CENTER
WELCOME TO THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHAPEL ON CAMPUS
YOUR PLACE TO WORSHIP ... TO STUDY ... TO LEARN ... TO MAKE FRIENDS AND HELP OTHERS ... AND TO EAT AND RELAX
Center Hours: 7:00 a.m. to 10:30 p.m.
Lord's Day Masses: Sat.: 5:00 p.m.; Sun.: 8:00, 9:30, 11:00 a.m. and 7:00 p.m.
Daily Masses: Mon. - Fri.: 8:00 a.m., 12:15 p.m.; Sat.: 9:00 a.m.
Campus Ministers: Rev. Francis P. Lavelle, Director; Rev. J. Joseph Quigley; Sr. Kathleen Keough, SSJ; Rev. Paul Manship, Spanish-speaking, Hispanic Ministry; Deacon Lucien Miller; and Rev. Bruce Teague, in residence.
Corner of Massachusetts Ave. and No. Pleasant St. 549-0300

Sports

Forwards aim to score in Hockey East

By Ted Kottler
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's hockey team outscored its opponents 176–94 last season. To be on the reverse end of that margin, 1994–95 might not be considered a success, but it is a realistic possibility.

Joe Mallen, the UMass coach and a former Boston College assistant, harbors no delusions concerning his team's immediate future as a first–year member of Hockey East, arguably the finest conference in the country. There will be some unsightly contests, hopefully a handful of surprises, and a whole lot of toil and stress in between.

UMass HOCKEY Season Preview

For all Mallen's certainty of how his Minutemen will fare, there's something he cannot say: where will the goals come from? Here we search for some conceivable answers among the expanded forward corps:

Sal Manganaro, RW, junior. This 5–foot–10 inch, 185 pound former Matignon (Cambridge) High School standout is the only man on the roster who has played a Hockey East game.

In fact, he logged 50 appearances during two seasons at BC. Manganaro netted two goals in Sunday's 10–5 exhibition victory over Seneca (Ont.) College while skating shifts at both wings.

"He's died and gone to heaven," Mallen said. "He's been waiting a year for this, and it's a great chance for him. I hope [the line of Tom Perry, Mike Evans, and Manganaro] is going to be a hell of a line for us."

Manganaro's two linemates were among the most productive members of the 1993–94 UMass outfit. Perry, a rugged, 6–foot, 200 pound left wing, topped all Minutemen with three hat tricks last season en route to 16 goals, coupled with 15 assists for 31 points.

"Sal gives us some experience," Perry said. "We have lines who can score and lines that are bangers."

Evans, an alternate captain who centers the trio known as "Red Alert," alerted all who saw him perform one year ago of his considerable talents. Of his 19 goals, seven came on the power play, five were shorthanded, and four were game–winners.

"We need to stay more in tune with each other," Evans, who also scored twice against Seneca, said. "But I think we're better than 9th [UMass' position in the pre–season coaches' poll]."

Rob Bonneau paced UMass last year with 26–21–47 totals, which included two hat tricks and a team–high six shorthanded tallies. Also one of the team's top penalty killers, this swift local talent (Springfield) earned team MVP honors for '93–'94 and is posed to do so again, even if he cannot stockpile his numbers.

"If I don't score ever, that's fine as long as we win," Bonneau said.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Blair Wagar is one of the returning forwards for the UMass hockey team who will be trying to score in the Hockey East.

The 6–foot, 170 pound sophomore appears settled on a line with Warren Norris and Blair Wagar, each of whom lit 20 lamps in UMass' return year on the ice.

Norris, a 6–foot–1–inch 185 pound native of St. John's, Newfoundland, made this serious hockey territory proud by tying Bonneau in 1993–94 for the team lead in points (47). Norris is not worried even though few of his current teammates have solidified their lines.

"Once we're into the flow of a game, it doesn't really matter who's on the ice," Norris said. "We've all got a job to do, and we can do it as long as we work together."

Alternate captain Wagar uses his speed well at both ends of the rink. Few can catch him when he cuts to the net, and he catches most forwards when coupled with Bonneau in penalty–killing situations.

Every team needs a physical presence, and no one embodies it more for UMass than 6–foot–3 inch, 200 pound winger Dennis Wright. He can also be counted on offensively, as he scored 11 goals and finished second in assists with 26.

Wright may see action on a line with center Blair Manning, another of UMass' top returnees. A tremendously skilled player, he tied for fifth in scoring (8–23–31) while centering UMass' top line. Manning bulked up a bit too, from 165 to 175 pounds.

Veterans Judd Smith, Gerry Cahill and Tom Sheehan (2 goals vs. Seneca) cannot be discounted, either, nor can newcomers Dean Campanaic, Josh Hoekstra, Chris Fawcett, Bryan Fitzgerald and Dan Juden.

It may just be a matter of Mallen turning the right screws to fine tune his attack for the rough Hockey East regimen.

"Last year I discovered I like to keep guys together for a long time, rather than move them around," Mallen said. "I'd like to see if they can really start to gel."

Sanders, Rison brawl is a joke

Let's get ready to rumble. In this corner, "Neeeon" Deion Sanders. His opponent, Annndre "Bad Moon" Riiisson . . .

Vince McMahon could not have created any worse of a farce which occurred in San Francisco's 42–3 demolition of Atlanta. The only things missing were Hammer and the controversy over which sideline he would stand on.

Art Stapleton on the NFL

This whole Sanders– Rison brawl was a joke. The officials should be ashamed of how they lost control of a game which they had a chance to keep in their grasp. The Bosom Buddies both should have been run off the field and into the locker room for early showers in the Georgia Dome.

How in his right mind can Commissioner Paul Tagliabue justify the officials' flagging of only Sanders, giving him a 15–yard penalty? With the score 21–3 in favor of San Fran and the Falcons threatening to pull within 10 points, albeit giving them the two–point conversion, Neon Deion picked off the Jeff George pass to the left pilon and streaked 93 yards for the score that broke Atlanta's back.

He shouldn't have had the chance to make that play. It would have been a totally different game if Sanders wasn't in there. He broke roughly seven yards to even get to the ball — Dana Hall or Tim McDonald would not have gotten that interception.

The fact that Sanders and Rison sell tickets shouldn't be an excuse for letting the pair stay in the game. It was the first half. Toss them both, send a message, and play the game without them. If it were Courtney Hawkins and Marty Moore in a tussle, the coaches would have been looking for replacements.

During a time when the game of football is at its peak, it's a shame guys like Sanders and Rison could make a mockery of the sport. With his performance in the post–game, Sanders proved he was truly classless.

*****

Running backs who pile up the yardage every year usually recognize their offensive line by buying them Rolex watches, gourmet dinners, trips to Hawaii . . . yet what do great quarterbacks who don't get sacked give to their offensive line?

Not much, except a pat on the back and thanks for doing their job. When the line doesn't do its job,

Turn to NFL, page 8

Men's tennis hopes to finish season with a win over BU

By Jamie D. Bearse
Collegian Staff

"Boston University is within our grasp."

University of Massachusetts men's tennis Coach Judy Dixon said this about today's season ending match against the Terriers.

But they will have to do it without top seed Tim Lipsky.

Lipsky was scratched off the lineup yesterday when his chronic back problem for the past two years got "progressively worse" during this past week.

"The past two months has been the first time I've been able to play without treatment," Lipsky said. "It just got worse this week. Getting healed up is my main concern right now so that I can play in the spring."

The absence of Lipsky for the match leaves the leadership role on the shoulders of co–captain and No. 2 seed, Keith Murray.

"We'll win," Murray said. "It's very important that we end the season with a victory. It's a confidence builder to go into the spring season with a winning record."

According to Murray, every member of the 3–3 Minutemen has played well at different times during the season but "they all need to play well at once."

"We got burned in a couple of close matches this season against the University of Vermont and UConn, but a win over BU is our chance to get back on track for a tough spring schedule," Murray said.

"Last year, a victory over BU would be unthinkable," Dixon said. "But the team has come a long way since last year and we should give them a good match."

> "Last year, a victory over BU would be unthinkable. But the team has come a long way since last year and we should give them a good match. We're a program in transition."
> — Judy Dixon

"We're a program in transition. We're starting to compete with the teams that would kill us last year. We're knocking on the door, now we just have to kick it down."

To put the improvement into perspective, junior Darren Tow was the No. 12 seed at the start of last year. And now, in the absence of Lipsky from the lineup, and an unsportsmanship suspension issued by Dixon on No. 4 seed Justin Lynn, Tow will be the No. 3 seed in the match against BU.

Tow credits the coaches for his improvement over the past year.

"We have a lot of volunteer coaches that spend a lot of time with us, working to try to perfect our form," Tow said.

Another UMass player that improves every day, that might see his first action of the year, is junior transfer Josh Freeman. Freeman also credits the coaches for his improvement.

"I'm really close to starting," Freeman said. "But the best thing is that the coaches have really helped me with my form. Now I'm one of the best players back home."

With Lipsky out with the ailing back, Murray moves into the No. 1 seed, and sophomore Ankur Baishya takes the No. 2 seed.

Both will team up to play the No. 1 doubles match.

Freshman walk–on Alex Aller will see action for the first time by teaming up with sophomore Greg Chow in the No. 3 doubles.

"Alex has come a long way in such a short amount of time," Dixon said. "We have many players like him, that's what makes the future of the team so promising."

Minutewomen finish second at Championships

By Derek Milosavljevic
Collegian Staff

You can see it either way.

One would think a second place finish, their best ever, at the New England Championships in Burlington, Vt. this weekend would be a cause for celebration for the University of Massachusetts women's tennis team. Instead, the Minutewomen are left to balance feelings of satisfaction with their performance, and the nagging thoughts of what might have been.

The 36 points UMass racked up in the tourney were second only to the 40 compiled by Providence College. The tournament's outcome was up in the air until the completion of the final matches of the day on Sunday. Central Connecticut State University finished in third place with 31 points.

Minutewomen head coach Judy Dixon said she was extremely pleased with her team's performance.

"It was great," Dixon said. "We did better than I expected. We came in a decisive second place and everybody played well."

Liesl Sitton paved the way for the Minutewomen's strong performance. The junior captain lived up to her No. 1 seed in the top flight of singles players, winning two, three–set, matches to claim the championship. In the tourney final, Sitton rallied after losing the first set, to defeat Jennifer Dullea of Providence College 2–6, 6–3, 6–4.

Despite winning the title, Sitton was very critical of her performance.

"I think this weekend was a rude awakening for me," Sitton said. "I just wasn't very into it—. It was like I was sleeping."

Still, Sitton remains undefeated on the season at 11–0.

Sophomore Liz Durant also earned the title of New England Champion, winning at the No. 4 singles position. Durant had an easier time of it, needing only two sets to beat each of her opponents from Providence and CCSU.

Durant is among those who were disappointed the team did not come away with the overall championship.

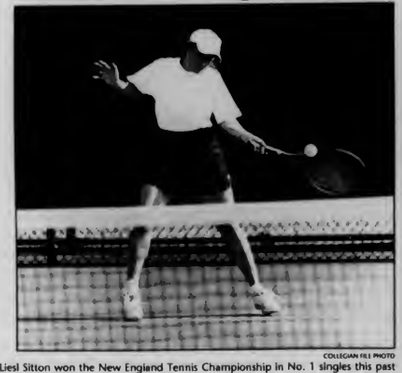
"I was kind of depressed that we didn't win," she said. "We were psyched up the night before, thinking that we could do it."

Durant said the Minutewomen did not receive any additional help from the other teams in the field of seven.

"I think everybody on our team put in a great effort and gave 110 percent," Durant said. "If the other teams had played better against PC, we could have won."

Beyond the victories by Sitton and Durant, Dixon said the entire lineup came through for the Minutewomen. Freshmen Noelle Orsini and Caroline Steele each placed third in the No. 2 and 3 singles flights, respectively.

In doubles play, Mary Edwards and Lana Goredeskaya claimed fourth place at the No. 1 slot, but Dixon said the big surprise of the weekend was the performance of her No. 2 team. Freshmen Leslie Kohen and Amy Sidran paired up to shock the field and bring home second place points for the Minutewomen.



COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Liesl Sitton won the New England Tennis Championship in No. 1 singles this past weekend at Burlington, Vt.

Women's soccer ready to host No. 16 Dartmouth

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Amy Powell, and the rest of the No. 10 nationally ranked women's soccer team, is hosting No. 16 Dartmouth today, 3:30 p.m., at Richard F. Garber field.

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

The No. 10 nationally ranked University of Massachusetts women's soccer team is hosting another big game today.

They will match up against No. 16 nationally ranked Dartmouth at 3:30 p.m. at Richard F. Garber field.

The Big Green comes in with an overall record of 7–2–1, 3–1–0 in the Ivy League. Last year when the two teams met at Dartmouth, the match ended in a 0–0 tie.

"It's a big game. It's always a big game," Dartmouth Coach Steve Swanson said. "It's a very strong rivalry. We respect all that UMass has done. Every time we play UMass it's a game that we look forward too. It's always a good contest, competitive and hard fought."

Leading the way for Dartmouth so far this season has been seniors Mya Mangawang and Brittanny Boulanger, and freshman Elizabeth Dobbin.

Mangawang has scored seven goals and served up two assists for a total of 16 points from her midfield position. Dobbin, also a midfielder, has scored six goals to go along with one assist for 13 points. Boulanger, a forward, has four goals and four assists for 12 points. Also playing well for the Big Green has been juniors Kate Andrews and Megan Owens. Andrews has four goals and one assist for nine points, while Owens has four goals, no assists, for eight points.

"We've got a lot of players who can score," Swanson said. "You can't focus in on just one or two."

Junior goalkeeper Heidi Hatchel has had 36 saves in the net so far for a .878 save percentage.

UMass has been led in the scoring department by Nicole Roberts who leads the team in points with 17. She is tied for the team lead in goals (seven) with Rebecca Myers.

"Obviously they have a lot of good individuals, but you can't focus on one," Swanson said. "They're very organized and they play well together. They move the ball awfully well, they go to the ball well and they're good in the air. We have to have our best effort. UMass is sound fundamentally everywhere. They've always been, and that's why I respect them so much. It's always a difficult game."

Turn to SOCCER, page 8

Sports notice

UMass

A vi... ...ats, including ... soft-ball and ... Monday, ...gh Thursday, Nov. 3, at 11 p.m.

The videos will be shown on the Housing Services Cable Network, channel 17.

Captain Jaynen Rissling to lead defense again

The UMass hockey team will rely heavily on Jaynen Rissling and the rest of the defense to succeed in its first year in Hockey East (See Sports, page 8).

Caring and Sharing shoots for $175,000

Three-week campaign is under way to urge University employees to donate to more than to 400 service agencies.

Ska lives on with The Toasters

Northampton's Pearl Street welcomes the band tomorrow night, but check out today's profile and preview (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast

Cloudy, 30 percent chance of rain today with highs in lower 60s and overnight lows in the upper 40s. Clouds, chance of rain and temps in the 60s through Friday.

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 63	HIGH: 62	HIGH: 60
LOW: 47	LOW: 45	LOW: 40

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 26 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Wednesday, October 19, 1994

'Save Our Schools' campaign registers 3800 students to vote

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

The campus-wide voter registration campaign at the University of Massachusetts has contributed to registering approximately 3,800 students to vote, according to Matthew Pavesi, commuter advocate and former undergraduate student speaker.

The Save Our Schools (SOS) campaign launched a voter registration campaign at the beginning of this semester to register student to vote for the upcoming elections on Nov. 8.

With the recent success of UMass students and administrators lobbying the statehouse for more funding last year, voter registration will only help empower the University, according to Pavesi.

"For the first time in the last 20 years UMass will not see a tuition and fee increase," Pavesi said. "UMass received a $15 million increase in state allocations and students can go to the Bursar's Office to get their refund checks.

"This is all because of the lobbying efforts of students and registered voters. The voter registration campaign is all a part of how we get these things done."

The SOS campaign included UMass organizations such as the Commuter Service and Off Campus Housing Office (CSOCHO) and Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG).

As part of the SOS campaign, CSOCHO and MASSPIRG registered students to vote both in Amherst and their home districts.

"We registered about 2,000 students to vote in their home districts and about 1,400 students in Amherst," Pavesi said.

Approximately 400 students also signed up for absentee ballots in cases where they could not vote in Amherst or vote at home.

"The difference in the number of students who registered to vote took out absentee ballots," Pavesi said. "And those who didn't were urged to."

CSOCHO and MASSPIRG worked together on the voter registration campaign, setting up a table in the Student Union and outside the Hatch.

"We had a great deal of success at the table, we registered a lot of students as voters," said Shannon Raborn, organizer for MASSPIRG.

The campaign also went out to the students, registering voters in classes and in the dorms.

According to Pavesi, the campaign received permission from Chancellor David K. Scott and professors to go into classes before and after classes to talk to students and register them to vote.

"Instead of me standing inside the Student Union, screaming for hours all day long and only getting registering about 200 students, we went to classes and got 200 students in seven minutes," Pavesi said.

The campaign also went out to the dormitories and knocked on doors, attempting to encourage students both to register and to go out and vote.

"We went door to door one night and covered several dorms trying to get students to register," Raborn said. "It was very effective because I think it is always better to have one on one contact with students."

CSOCHO and MASSPRIG will be involved in providing information about the campaigns and getting students out to the polling places to vote.

CSOCHO will launch the "Get Out to Vote Campaign," which will include a phone bank and offering students rides to and from polling places on election day, said Pavesi.

MASSPIRG will be involved with voter education at polling places in 26 towns across Western Massachusetts.

Vigil brings 'survivors' together

Second breast cancer awareness week highlights solidarity

By Erin Barnes
Collegian Staff

Low turnout didn't dampen the intensity of yesterday's vigil outside Herter Hall to recognize "Women's Awareness to Breast Cancer II."

Surrounded by the donated shirts representing women who will be victims of breast cancer, those in attendance showed solidarity with one another.

"We are all connected in the web of life, and all of us are survivors in one way or another," said Project Coordinator Sunny Miller. "Our awareness and preciousness of life contributes to the lives of other women."

The vigil opened with Sunny Miller sharing a poem by Audrey Lord, a 1993 breast cancer victim, titled "Today Could Be The Day." The poem discussed how laughter and friendships help to soften the edge of death by breast cancer, a disease that strikes more than 182,00 women every year and kills more than 46,000.

Following the poetry reading, attendees were encouraged to share personal stories about surviving breast cancer or to take time to remember loved ones who were victims of the disease.

Sandy Mendel, who works at the Everywoman's Center, talked about how she came to grips with her fear of breast cancer. She recalled how her mother's best friend, a breast cancer victim, removed her towel to reveal the results of her double mastectomy. The woman, at the age of 55, went on to law school to eventually become one of the top labor negotiators in the city of New York. Sandy tackled her fears, and now, she said, she thinks about survivors when she thinks about breast cancer.

Philosophy Professor John Brentlinger noted that as many women die annually of breast cancer as the number of people who died while serving in the Vietnam War. He said he believes deaths due to breast cancer are preventable and occur for many of the same reasons that inevitably cause war. He also said he was happy to see the vigil take place.

Sunny Miller said that women must demand answers to the problem of breast cancer and act together to ensure that those answers are found.

"We need to give support and assistance, and provide information to those women in need," she said. "This is not the best of times, but it is not the worst of times either."

Vigil participants also discussed the need to educate women about factors that increase the likelihood to developing breast cancer in order to be empowered.

Four women will share their stories as breast cancer survivors at a noon luncheon on Oct. 27 in the Campus Center.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Women shared personal stories yesterday about both victims and survivors of breast cancer as part of the awareness week project outside Herter Hall.

Nuclear deal leaves questions open

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S.-North Korea nuclear deal brings within reach a central Clinton administration goal of stopping production of nuclear weapons. But it leaves unanswered a big question: Is North Korea already nuclear armed?

In hailing the agreement Tuesday, President Clinton did not mention North Korea's current nuclear capabilities, but he said the accord would bring an "end to the threat of nuclear proliferation on the Korean Peninsula."

Earlier this year, the administration had threatened to push for United Nations economic sanctions against North Korea to force it to reveal its past nuclear activities. But now it is willing to wait several years to get the answer.

Clinton said the important thing was that North Korea would not make more weapons, and that a U.N. nuclear watchdog agency would be allowed to verify the ban.

Clinton said he was sending Robert Gallucci, the chief U.S. negotiator on the deal, back to Geneva on Friday to sign the accord, which the president said included U.S. agreement to ease long-standing restrictions on trade with North Korea.

Clinton also said the United States and North Korea would move toward establishing liaison offices in each other's capital — a step that could lead to creating full diplomatic relations. "This agreement is good for the United States, good for our allies and good for the safety of the entire world," the president said.

The CIA believes North Korea probably has built and stashed away one or two nuclear weapons. Would the Koreans use them? Would they threaten to? Such weapons would have little military utility, but even one crude bomb could be an effective terror weapon.

On the safe side

STEVEN PEDILLA / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore wildlife biology major Brandon Faneuf registered his bicycle yesterday with the help of Public Safety Officer Neil Lunney.

Men's and women's groups team up to fight against domestic violence

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

Editor's Note: This is the third in a four-part series looking at the services available for men to combat domestic violence.

AMHERST — The Men's Resource Center (MRC) of Western Massachusetts and the Everywoman's Center (EWC) at the University of Massachusetts have teamed up to promote positive role models in local high schools.

The High School Education Project at the MRC and the Educator Advocate program from the EWC provide local high schools with workshops that deal with respect and abuse in relationships, date acquaintance and rape, and sexual harassment.

Steven Botkin, co-director of the MRC, said the project not only helps high school students but provides training for men.

"It offers training for men who are interested in developing their skills in giving and leading workshops," Botkin said.

Tom Landis-Schiff, also an MRC co-director and coordinator of the high school program, said the 40-hour training process is stretched over a month. Twelve people are currently enrolled.

Root causes of violence

The focus of the training for the counselors is gender socialism, experience with violence and homophobia.

"Addressing homophobia is very important," Landis-Schiff said. "There is a strong connection between male homophobia and male violence."

Landis-Schiff said that trying to maintain the image of masculinity and getting frustrated when that does not succeed sometimes leads to violence.

"We have this image of masculinity. It begins to attack our self-esteem when we can't actually keep up the image, so we may end up being violent," he said.

Showing that the masculine image is created by society and impossible to keep up is very important in both the leadership training and in the high schools, Landis-Schiff said.

Similar program at Everywoman's Center

Patricia Mota Guedes, volunteer coordinator of the Educator Advocate program at the EWC, offers a training program similar to the MRC's high school program. There are currently 16 enrolled.

Guedes said the program is a 60-hour training process that takes two months. She said the training is longer than the MRC's because they also have to deal with University and Five College issues.

Turn to VIOLENCE page 2

Arafat charges Israel–Jordan pact a betrayal

By Allyn Fisher
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — PLO chief Yasser Arafat condemned the Israel-Jordan peace accord Tuesday, calling it an "outrageous infringement" of the PLO's peace agreement with Israel and a betrayal of Palestinian interests.

The Jordanian prime minister, meanwhile, said his country made a separate peace with Israel because it could not wait for other Arab states to move, and urged Syria to move toward peace with Israel.

Syrian President Hafez Assad said the formula used to resolve the land dispute between Jordan and Israel would never work when it came to Syria's claim on the Golan Heights.

The arrangement calls for Israel to return most of the 152 square miles of border land it seized from Jordan in 1948, but allows Israel to lease areas where there are Israeli settlements or farms. Israeli officials have suggested it could be a model for a similar arrangement with Syria.

But Assad said Tuesday that Syria would never agree to such a lease-back plan. Israel seized the Golan Heights in the 1967 Middle East war and Syria insists it must be returned in full.

"It is apostasy for anyone to speak of a nation leasing its land," Assad said at a news conference in Cairo, Egypt. "There will be no peace as long as the land is not returned fully." Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin chided Assad for rejecting such an arrangement out of hand.

"It is a mistake for Assad to stick to his stubbornness," Rabin said during an official visit in London on Tuesday. "Syria has remained alone in its hostility with Israel."

The agreement with Jordan, Rabin added, meant that Israel "will never claim a square kilometer or centimeter of sovereign Jordanian land."

Assad criticized Jordan for forging a separate peace with Israel, but said Syria would not do anything to upset it. "We can put obstacles and everybody knows that;" Assad said. "But this will only hurt us as Arabs."

Meanwhile, Arafat said he was outraged that Jordanian negotiators did not consult with the PLO before the accord was initialed in Amman on Monday. He was especially upset by a provision giving Jordan a "special role" in the disputed city of Jerusalem.

"This is an outrageous infringement of the declaration of principles between the PLO and Israel. . . in regards to Jerusalem, the holy Islamic and Christian shrines," Arafat said in a statement distributed Tuesday by the Palestinian news agency WAFA. The clash between Jordan and the PLO over the control of Jerusalem's religious sites broke into the open Tuesday when Jordan and Arafat appointed two different men as mufti for

Turn to JORDAN, page 2

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Wednesday Ticker

Market closes as of 4 p.m. Oct. 18

Index	Close	Change
Dow Jones Industrial Average	3,917.54	-6.39
Standard & Poor's 500	467.66	-1.30
Nasdaq Composite Index	764.81	-0.97
American Stock Exchange Index	456.72	-2.04

Market Reports

Compiled by Andrew Ferguson

Crop prices fall as demand is low

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures prices fell sharply Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade amid dimming demand prospects, including potentially lower Chinese demand than traders expected.

Corn and oat futures also fell. Soybean futures rose modestly. December wheat deliveries settled below $4 a bushel for the first time since Sept. 29. The selling was driven in part by a statement by the head of China's grain-buying agency, Ceroil, that China would not need the 10 million metric tons of wheat imports forecast by the U.S. Agriculture Department for the current marketing year, which began June 1.

The Chinese official, Li Guihua, did not say how much wheat China would import.

Greg Doud, research analyst for the trade group U.S. Wheat Associates, said later that China may have fulfilled most of its wheat import needs for calendar 1994.

Wheat traders have been awaiting Chinese business to revive a rally that took wheat to a 2 1/2-year high last week.

Dollar rises against key European currencies

LONDON (AP) —The dollar rose against most other major currencies in early European trading today, bouncing back from a two-year low against the German mark. Gold prices were higher. The dollar rose to 1.5026 German marks by midday in Europe, up from 1.4998 marks late Monday. Its close of 1.4990 marks late Monday in New York was the lowest level in that market since October 1992.

The British pound was quoted at $1.6115 at midday in London, up from $1.6103 late Monday. Its close of $1.6100 on Monday in New York was a two-year high there for the pound.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 98.05 yen, up 0.80 yen from Monday's close. Later in London, the dollar was quoted at 98.04 yen.

Other dollar rates at midday in Europe compared with late rates Monday included: 1.2495 Swiss francs, up from 1.2485; 5.1532 French francs, up from 5.1505; 1.6847 Dutch guilders, up from 1.6817; 1,533.35 Italian lire, down from 1,537.00, and 1.3540 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3565.

Interest rate concerns leave stock prices low

(AP) — Stock prices finished slightly lower today after a late-session rally erased much of a 20-point drop in the Dow Jones industrial average.

Prices climbed in the final hour of trading in a day dominated by quarterly corporate earnings news and new reasons to worry about the outlook for interest rates.

Analysts said the Dow was due to catch up with the broader market's recent losses. The Dow rose nearly 45 points between Friday and Monday, while at the same time declining issues outnumbered advancers.

Decliners continued to lead through most of Tuesday's session. Bond prices were lower and the weaker dollar renewed fretting for about interest rates.

"There are concerns about the decline in the dollar, which might force the (Federal Reserve) to raise interest rates without any concern for the economy," said Larry Rice, chief market strategist at Josephthal Lyon & Ross.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, Oct. 19

Meeting — Lesbian Bisexual Woman's Union, LBGA office, 413B Student Union, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Seminar — Dr. Ron Booker, "Regulation of postembryonic neurogenesis in the moth," Morrill-South room 203, 4 p.m.

Lecture — Richard Ryan, Rayerweather 202-203, Amherst College, free, 4:15 p.m.

Video — Mephisto, Hooker Auditorium, MHC, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — Judith LaBlanc, Student Union Ballroom, UMass, 7:30 p.m.

Meeting — UMass Theater Guild, room 911 Campus Center, UMass, 7 p.m.

Thursday, Oct. 20

Meeting — Grief Survival Group for those who have suffered loss, Campus Center, UMass, 7 p.m.

Multi-Arts — Arts Council, ARTeVENTives at the maze, UMass, located at the stadium stop of the PVTA Campus Shuttle.

Meeting — Bisexual Rap Group, 4th floor lounge, Mary Lyon House, Northeast, UMass, 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Film — Fantastic Cinema: Legends, Myths, Adventures, Herter Hall 227, UMass, free, 7:30 p.m.

Symposium — "The O.J. Simpson Case: A Deconstruction of Legal and Media Issues " Main Lecture Hall, HC, 7:30 p.m.

Assembly — Massachusetts Society of Professors General Assembly, Jim Braude will be speaking, Sudent Union Ballroom, UMass, 4 p.m.

Friday, Oct. 21

Lecture — Visiting Lecturer Series in Geology, Morrill Science Center room 131, UMass, 3:30 p.m.

Lecture — "Gendered Social Knowledge: Domestic Discourse, Jane Addams and the Possibilities of Social Science," Neilson Library Browsing Room, Smith College, 4:15 p.m.

Film — Nazarin, Wright Hall auditorium, Smith College, free, show times: 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Community — Rub Shoulders with Royalty — The Shabbat Queen is here, Chabad House, 7 p.m.

Film — Treasure of the Sierra Madre, Campus Center Theater, Amherst College, $1.75, show times: 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Dance — Shapiro and Smith Dance Company, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m., ticket information: 545-2511.

Theater — The Swan, Fayerweather Studio, Amherst, free, 8 p.m.

Movie — The Rocky Horror Picture Show, UMass Campus Center Auditorium, show times: 7 p.m., 9 p.m. and 11 p.m.

Meeting — The Alliance Christian Fellowship, Dave Crosby will be speaking on the topic of Godly character, Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 22

Music — Swing and ballroom dance with "Swingtime," Florence Community Center, Pine Street, 8:30 p.m., $7 admission.

Music — Benefit for Amherst's Open Pantry, Butterfield Basement, 8 p.m., $3 and two cans of food. Bands: Chisel, Radio To Saturn, Van Pelt, Showcase Showdown and The Gutters.

Volunteers — Make-a-difference day to help non-profit agencies across Hampshire Couty, information: 545-3368.

Music — Juilliard String Quartet, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m.

Theater — Ladies on the Couch, Hampden Theater, UMass, 8 p.m., information: 545-4824.

Film — Brigadoon, Gamble Auditorium, MHC, show times: 7 p.m. and 9 p.m., $2.

Lecture — "How We Fixed the Hubble Space Telescope," Mead, Stirn Auditoriu, Amherst College, free, 3 p.m.

■ violence

continued from page 1

According to Guedes, the MRC and EWC team up to offer workshops at local high schools after trainees complete their programs.

"Basically the way we work with the HEP [high school program] is by co-facilitating workshops on respect in relationships, date rape and sexual harassment," Guedes said.

Sexual harassment program

Landis-Schiff said the sexual harassment program has been most popular recently because of media attention.

"There is also a concern from school officials about the effect sexual harassment is having on students and the school environment," he said.

A 1993 national survey from the American Association of University Women reported that 81 percent of high school students surveyed received unwanted sexual attention — 19 percent from school personnel.

"Schools call us and say they want a workshop on a certain topic," Landis-Schiff said. "Sexual harassment workshops have been the most common."

Both Guedes and Landis-Schiff said there is a very positive reaction from the schools and that most students seem to find the workshops useful.

"We give evaluation forms at the end of a workshop," Landis-Schiff said. "Most are positive, but we definitely do get a couple that say we're a waste of time."

Landis-Schiff said the negative reactions from students usually happen because "they just don't want to hear it."

■ Jordan

continued from page 1

Jerusalem, a religious post.

Jordan has historically funded and supervised religious institutions in the eastern Arab sector of the city, which it governed until Israel captured it in the 1967 Middle East war. Israel says reaffirming Jordan's special role in Jerusalem merely cements a situation already in existence.

The Palestine Liberation Organization maintains it undermines the PLO's claim to Arab east Jerusalem as the capital of a future Palestinian state.

Correction

Kaplan Education Centers apologizes for the error in the Medical Admissions seminar advertisement printed in yesterday's Collegian. Harvard University will not be in attendance.

Yes, it's always a fine day for a barbeque. Ahh nothing like the hot coals to cause a man to break down in a fit of hysterical crying. "WHY DIDN'T I LISTEN TO MY MOTHER AND BECOME A DOG GROOMER!!!"
COLLEGIAN
NEVER TOO LATE TO CHANGE

TIME OUT

BUD NIGHT!
Bud Light Bottles $1.50
10 - 1 p.m.
FREE PRIZES, HATS & T-SHIRTS
FREE ANTONIO'S PIZZA
CHECK OUT FRIDAY'S FREE BUFFALO WINGS 5-7 PM

The Collegian understands your needs. We hear your concerns and are sympathetic to your worries. In fact we have taken measures to insure that we deal with these issues...

The Collegian ... Looking out for our readers who are looking out for us as we are looking out for those who are...

A+
...for the teacher.

OUTSTANDING TEACHER AWARD
COLLEGE OF FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES
students and faculty invited to submit nominations for the 1994-95 award

NOMINATION FORMS ARE AVAILABLE IN ROOM 113 STOCKBRIDGE HALL OR IN DEPARTMENTAL OFFICES

Faculty in the following departments are eligible for nomination:
Animal Science • Building Materials and Wood Technology
Apparel Marketing • Entomology • Environmental Design
Environmental Sciences • Family and Consumer Sciences • Food Science
Forestry • Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration
Landscape Architecture • Natural Resource Studies
Plant and Soil Sciences • Plant Pathology • Resource Economics
Sport Management • Wildlife and Fisheries Conservation

CLEAR ROAD AHEAD
50 Change Lanes NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns THE UMASS CAREER CENTER Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits No ONE WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

YOU DON'T WANT TO MISS THESE!!!

BIOLOGY / ZOOLOGY / BOTONY MAJORS: COME TO THE CO-OP INTERNSHIP PRESENTATION
OCT. 20th, 4 p.m., MORRILL 131
Listen to former co-op and internship students speak about their experiences
Meet a representative from . . .
AquaFuture Inc.

LEGAL / POLSCI / HIST / SOCIOL MAJORS: COME TO THE CO-OP INTERNSHIP PRESENTATION
OCT. 25th, 4 p.m., BARTLETT 65
Listen to former co-op and internship students speak about their experiences
Meet representatives from . . .
The Victim Witness Program
Amherst Area Chamber of Commerce
The Law Office of David Sullivan
FIND OUT ABOUT OPPORTUNITIES IN YOUR FIELD!!
Sponsored by the UMass Career Center
545-4934

University aims to donate $175,000

By Kelly Spang
Collegian Staff

George Parks, director of the University of Massachusetts Minuteman Marching Band, said the positive aspects of the University are enough incentive for employees to contribute to a statewide fund raiser.

COMEC, Commonwealth of Massachusetts Employee Campaign, is an annual fund raiser in which state employees make financial donations.

Donations are collected in localized divisions statewide and are then dispersed to the charities designated by employees.

The UMass COMEC campaign is called "UMass Caring and Sharing," according to campaign manager Celina Conway.

Parks, chair of the University campaign, said there are many good things about the University which he said he would like to influence donations by employees.

"This is a very good University," he said. "We have a lot to be thankful for. We need to stress the positive."

University employees and graduate student employees are asked to participate in the campaign which officially lasts for about three weeks, Conway said.

"Donations can be as little as they need to be if an employee can't be very financially giving," Conway said.

There is no minimum donation.

Donation cards are sent out to all employees of the University which an employee fills out to designate the amount of the donation and the charity of choice.

Conway said there are over 400 service agencies to which employees may donate funds, ranging from legal defense funds to food and homeless shelters.

"All employees can find a cause," she said.

To donate money, employees may either do a payroll deduction or return a check with the donation card.

Last year the University donated $157,000, about 10 percent of COMEC's statewide pledges of $1.5 million. The University donation increased 31 percent from the year before.

The University's goal this year is $175,000.

Conway said about 23 percent, or 1,500 employees, of the University participated in the fund raiser last year.

Conway said Chancellor David K. Scott set a goal of 50 percent employee participation by 1995, or about 3,000 employees.

Parks said the 50 percent goal is challenging, but he said he believes anything is possible. He also said he is hopeful that the last-year's increased participation will carry over to this year.

The UMass campaign began two weeks ago when donation cards were mailed out to all employees. Conway said the campaign officially ends next week but employees may donate throughout the year.

New Turkish Student Association setting plans for cultural, social events with cooperative spirit

By Amy Paradysz
Collegian Correspondent

"We are a small organization so whatever we do, we do it in cooperation," said Ozan Kandamar, president of Turkish Student Association.

Close to 20 students met Monday night for the first meeting of the Turkish Students Association (TSA).

TSA is a UMass-based graduate student organization supported by the Graduate Student Senate that aims to contribute to multicultural diversity and establish a basis for Turkish students to gather in a social atmosphere.

According to Kandamar, there are about 40 Turkish students at UMass, including graduate students.

Turkish was spoken almost exclusively at the meeting. The few words in English were "campus telephone," "e-mail" and "Collegian."

"We want to meet Turkish people and speak the language once in a while," said translator Evern Yilmazer.

"And we want to do things to make Turkey known," said her twin, Ozlem Yilmazer. "So many people here don't even know where Turkey is."

The International Fair is one of their strongest events, according to Kandamar. The various international groups on campus sold ethnic food and wore traditional clothing. Last year they showed Turkish movies all week.

On Nov. 11, the movie Yol, which means "the road" in Turkish, will be shown in Bartlett Hall.

During the TSA meeting, the officers talked about attending the exhibition game between the men's Turkish junior national basketball team against the Minutemen at the William D. Mullins Center on Nov. 17 at 7 p.m.

Another social activity is planned for the day after Turkey's Independence Day.

A ball for Turkish students will be held Nov. 29 Northeastern University, sponsored by that school's Turkish student association.

Boston College and Boston University will also participate.

"I haven't heard of any other celebration in the region," Kandamar said.

Many of the students in TSA are international in the sense that they grew up in more than one country.

Sophomore Sibla Tumkaya's father is Turkish and works for the United Nations in Pakistan. Her mother is Philippine and speaks Turkish.

When asked what about her nationality, Tumakaya said, "I am an American citizen. But this is my first time living in the U.S."

Another student in TSA is the daughter of the Turkish ambassador in Athens, Greece.

Geez,.. working for the Collegian has been the best thing I've done in my four years here at UMASS. The 2nd best activity was yodelling till five a.m. with the Chancellor. DWP'88

News Briefs

Compiled by Arthur Stapleton Jr.

New book suspends Simpson jury selection

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An explosive new book threatens O.J. Simpson's right to a fair trial, a judge said Tuesday as he abruptly suspended jury selection and ordered prospective jurors to avoid newspapers and TV — and to stay out of books ,ees.

Earlier, Superior Court Judge Lance Ito handed the prosecution a major victory in refusing to throw out DNA tests on a bloody glove and other key evidence.

Ito dismissed prospective jurors for four hours while he and lawyers reviewed the book Nicole Brown Simpson: The Private Diary of a Life Interrupted, which was released Monday and co-written by Faye Resnick, a friend of Ms. Simpson's. Afterward, he sent them home until Thursday.

The book portrays Simpson as stalking his ex-wife and threatening to kill her if she ever slept with another man. Simpson, 47, is accused of the June 12 murders of Ms. Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Capping disabled employees' insurance illegal

BOSTON (AP) — Health insurers providing benefits to businesses cannot impose selective spending caps on disabled workers, including those with AIDS, a federal appeals court ruled.

Monday's ruling set an important precedent for interpreting the 1990 Americans with Disabilities Act, which bars discrimination by employers, said Marc Elovitz of the American Civil Liberties Union.

"The benefits that an employee gets, like your paycheck and, in most cases, health insurance, are covered as part of the employment relationship," Elovitz said.

The First U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling overturned a lower federal court decision that said insurers weren't subject to the anti-discrimination act. The reversal stunned insurance lawyers.

TV violence blamed in stoning death of girl

OSLO, Norway (AP) — No one knows if the "Mighty Morphin Power Rangers" played a role in the death of a 5-year-old girl who was stoned and kicked by playmates and left to freeze in the snow. But the networks didn't take any chances.

The Scandinavian network TV-3 moved quickly Tuesday to drop the wildly popular U.S. children's show from its broadcasts in Norway, Sweden and Denmark in response to debate over violence in children's shows.

The show has not been directly linked to the death of 5-year-old Silje Marie Redergard, who froze to death Saturday on a playground in the western city of Trondheim after a game with three boys her age turned ugly.

Still, Norway's prime minister, Gro Harlem Brundtland, said Norwegians should think twice before allowing such "free market" violence to be broadcast by commercial networks.

Nobody — not even Silje's mother — seems to put the blame on the boys who are too young to be charged with any crime under Norwegian law.

Swing, swing, swing

EMILY RILEY / COLLEGIAN
Karen Pocalyko, a sophomore majoring in music education, took a little time for clarinet practice outside Old Chapel yesterday.

Book NOW for the holidays!
LONDON $173
AMSTERDAM $215
PARIS $229
MILAN $239
TEL AVIV $369
CARACAS $215
BANGKOK $468
Fares are each way based on a round trip purchase from Boston. Student or Faculty ID may be required. Taxes and surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.
79 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-1261

Research Interviewers
Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Monday-Friday, 5pm-10pm, Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.

We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Interested candidates, please call between 9am-7pm, Monday-Friday (413) 586-8635.

Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer

Abt

FIGHT FOR HUMAN RIGHTS!
1. I'd make a Spotted Owl homeless for a new house
2. I'd make Mary jobless for a plate of lamb chops
3. I'd imprison Willy for an afternoon's entertainment
4. I'd maim Thumper for some better luck
5. I'd kill Smokey for a new rug
6. I'd kill Flipper for a tuna sandwich send check or M.O., size L or XL to JEBCO COLLECTABLES T-Shirts $16
P.O. box 194 Posters $10 Free Catalog
Weedon, IL 61882 Bumper Stickers $2.50

The Dean of Students Office
Invites you to a lecture by
Dean Robert Thornburg
Marsh Chapel, Boston University
"The Good News and Bad News About Religion"
Memorial Hall
Wednesday, November 2
7:30 p.m.
Sponsored by the Dean of Students Office

The Textbook Annex is open year round but to make sure you get the books you need for this semester, buy them before
HALLOWEEN
We are beginning to return unsold books to the publisher on Monday, October 24

University Store's
TEXTBOOK ANNEX
Monday-Friday: 9 am to 4 pm
545-3570
WE ACCEPT VISA, MASTERCARD & DISCOVER

CONTACT LENS SERVICE
At The University Health Services

We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.

All fittings are done by an eye doctor with experience in contact lens care and in solving contact lens problems.

Unlimited follow-up visits are available to you under the UHS Eye CAre Savings Plan at no additional cost.

Reduced costs on contact lenses are available to you under the UHS Eye Care Savings Plan.

If you tear or damage a contact lens within 45 days of receiving it, we will replace it for you at no extra cost.

Same day replacement of contact lenses in many cases due to our large in house inventory.

Contact lenses can be mailed to you at no extra charge for postage.

Convenient hours and on-campus location.

Free sample start-up solutions, as available.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over 19 years has been consistently excellent.

"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."

Eye Care Program
University Health Services
Call 549-2671 ext 244
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Graphics Chief Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gurley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Emily Marino Women's Issues Editor
Andrew Ferguson Business Editor Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Tracy Mumbah Editorial/Opinion Editor John Khachadourian Finance Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Ada Michelle Lugo Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Mizerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Kelly Spang News Editor Marty Peppas Classified Advertising
Nathan S. Mertin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1996. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Memories of fun–filled half days

Last month, the state of Massachusetts Board of Education gave preliminary approval to regulations that would add an hour of class time to most Massachusetts public school days.

Currently, the state regulations require five hours of instruction time a day for elementary school students and five and a half hours for middle and high school students in the core subjects such as math, science, English, music and art.

Some schools will be affected more than others. Presently, some schools play hard and fast with the instruction time requirements.

At my high school, classes began at 8:30 a.m. and ended at 2:30 p.m. Subtracting 50 minutes for lunch and 50 more for each of the two study halls I enjoyed during my senior year at Cambridge Rindge & Latin, my "core instruction time" amounted to only three and a half hours a day.

New regulations would require schools to adhere more strictly to the instruction time minimums while increasing them by an hour. One can almost hear the shrieks of anguish echoing throughout the hallways of secondary schools across the Commonwealth.

Perhaps the most drastic and dastardly measure proposed by the board is the elimination of early release days. These days, which currently occur monthly, dismiss students after only a half–day of classes.

The rationale behind the days is that they allow teachers to get together and chat about whatever teachers chat about and plan curricula, attend workshops, and effectively get those damned students out of their faces for a few hours.

Kathy Greeley, an elementary school teacher in Cambridge, told the Boston Globe, "We are being asked to change our practices, but [the board] is proposing taking away time to learn how to do that."

Of course, teachers get paid, and therefore have much less ground for complaints than students do.

I asked my handy public school student example, my 13–year–old brother Brian, if he had heard about the proposal.

"We talked about it in social studies," he said, "and I think it stinks. We work hard 180 days a year, and we need a break besides weekends."

Brian says his friends like to go out on the afternoon of a half–day and hang out at pizza parlors and flirt with the girls. Sounds like a post–1 a.m. night uptown to me.

To me, early release days are representative of the stage of life I was at during each period of my schooling. So many of my most vivid memories occurred during those days.

In the earliest years of school, a half–day meant extended playtime. I would bolt out of the school doors at 11:30 a.m. and race up the street with my best friend to his house. The entire afternoon would consist of parent–sanctioned second grade gluttony.

Hours of Atari–playing, bologna sandwich and Twinkie–consuming, and Star Wars figure–manipulating action followed. Working on penmanship all day at school had even less luster after binging on creme filling the previous afternoon.

When I got to be around Brian's age, my half–day activities were similar to his. It was around seventh grade that I discovered Harvard Square.

My friends and I would head to "the square" and gawk at the green and purple mohawks, munch pizza and guzzle Coke at the now–defunct Pizzeria Regina.

In May, the release day often coincided with one of the Red Sox' home day games. Off I'd go to worship Messrs. Boggs, Rice and Hurst. Discussing Wuthering Heights the next day had even less appeal after an afternoon of binging on Fenway franks.

High school was when release days became really special. I remember one such day my senior year when a friend and I (two of the few high schoolers with good IDs) decided an afternoon keg party was in order.

We took off around 10 a.m. and got a head start before the masses arrived at his house. At about 3 p.m. I decided I wanted to be sick in the privacy of my own home.

After asking for and getting a ride from a friend, in my car, I got out, relieved myself on the wall outside my house, and yelled at my chauffeur. What did she think she was doing? I couldn't let my mother see me like this. Needless to say, after that binge nothing in school was very appetizing the next day.

Unfortunately for Brian and his cronies, they may never get the chance to experience most of those memories.

As he said, "It's not fair that you got to have them, and they're taking it out on us."

Better you than me, Bri.

Derek Milosavljevic is a Collegian columnist.

Censorship is wrong for video games

With the recent release of the ever controversial Mortal Kombat II for your favorite Nintendo and Sega systems, the argument for video game censorship arises again. Video games are too violent. They corrupt our youth. We need to ban these games.

Sen. Joel Leiberman (D–Conn.) has gone so far as to run a re–election ad that, to paraphrase, says, "We have laws that prevent people from abusing kids' bodies. Why don't we have laws that prevent games from abusing their minds?"

Well, let's at least be honest about it. Yes, Mortal Kombat II is a very violent, bloody game. But it is just that — a game. You've undoubtedly heard about ripping out your opponent's spinal column.

Tony Morse

In Mortal Kombat, this is true. In Mortal Kombat II, you have such mortifying choices as slicing your victim in half with a razor–edged hat, crushing their skull between your hands, ripping their arms off, or decapitating them in a variety of ways.

That's the bloody side. What most non–gamers don't know is that Mortal Kombat II is also a very silly game. When you emerge victorious, you do not need to maim your opponent. Instead, you can perform a "friendship" finish, like offering your defeated foe a nice birthday cake, a present or a flower. This is true, folks! You can even turn the loser into a helpless infant — a "babality." And no, you can't brutalize the baby.

Why shouldn't this or any other video game be censored? Well, for the sake of the game companies, first off. Nintendo removed all the blood and modified the fatalities in the original Mortal Kombat. Sega kept in the gore and outsold Nintendo better than two to one, despite inferior graphics and sound.

Let's also consider realism, folks. Aside from the violent finishes, various warriors can throw fireballs from their fingertips, melt into the ground, and create earthquakes with their fists. Is this possible in the real world? No. Likewise, can you really cut someone in half with a hat? In the world of MK2, yes. In ours, of course not. If you can't see this distinction between fiction and reality, it is not the fault of the game.

Another popular pro–censorship argument is that these games desensitize children; they believe to begin violence is commonplace. Truth be told, this is correct. However, the same type of violence is present on our television screens, in our movie theatres, and across the pages of our daily newspapers. No one suggests banning or censoring those. Like other forms of media, video games are protected under the First Amendment.

Assume, for the sake of argument, that all the previous words are meaningless and these games are the bane of society. Mortal Kombat II retails for $69.99. If you don't have a job, you don't have that kind of money. Any child old enough to be able to afford this game should be old enough to know the difference between reality and his video screen.

Anyone younger needs to get the money from good old Mom and Dad. If they choose to ignore the "May not be suitable for players under 17" warning, so clearly emblazoned on the box, or the depictions of the game on its reverse, then they have no right to complain when the word "fatality" issues forth from their TV speaker.

So until there is a news report that says some 12–year–old tore out his best friend's spinal column with his bare hands (in one piece no less), this subject is frivolous.

And for those of you who do play the game: "FINISH HIM!"

Tony Morse is a Collegian staff member.

Letter publication policy

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

Guest columns will only be printed if arrangements are made in advance. If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue, contact the Ed/Op staff before submitting anything longer than a standard letter.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

WELCOME BACK TO DAY THREE OF NATIONAL "CHARACTER COUNTS" DAY! TODAY'S PILLAR IS RESPONSIBILITY — AS EXPLAINED BY OUR GOOD FRIEND MARK!
THANKS, MIKE. I'M HAPPY TO TRY TO EXPLAIN THE IDEA OF RESPONSIBILITY, BUT WHAT IF I CAN'T? WHAT IF I CAN'T COME UP WITH A MEANINGFUL, WORKING DEFINITION?
"ELL, TOO BAD! I HAVE A RESPONSIBILITY TO TRY! I'VE MADE A COMMITMENT AND I HAVE TO HONOR IT!
AND YET, ODDLY, YOU HAVEN'T.
WELL, WE'VE RUN OUT OF SPACE! IT'S NOT MY FAULT!

Opinion/Editorial

Adultery is no excuse for murder

Thirty–six–year–old Kenneth Peacock came home unexpectedly during a February storm and caught his wife in bed with another man. So he killed Sandy Peacock, 31, with a single shot to the head after drinking alcohol and arguing with her for hours.

Understandable, said the Maryland judge who sentenced Peacock to 18 months in prison.

"I seriously wonder how many men married five, four years would have the strength to walk away without inflicting some corporal punishment," Circuit Judge Robert E. Cahill said at the sentencing Monday.

"I am forced to impose a sentence. . . only because I think I must do it to keep the system honest," he said.

Darienne J. Hosley

But don't think Judge Cahill is too soft — Peacock will also perform 50 hours community service in a domestic violence program "which could be spent allowing his dreadful and tragic experience to help others."

The same day Peacock got a sympathetic hug from the judge, a 50–year–old former New York City policeman was arraigned in Plymouth, N.H., charged with murdering his wife.

Sheila Anderson, 47, disappeared in June 1993. Her husband James said she went shopping. Her burned, headless body turned up in a pile of brush outside the couple's home. Their daughter found some of her mother's bones and a charred piece of her shoe in the yard.

The head was discovered two weeks ago in a plastic bag 1,000 feet from the residence.

James Anderson was found in Wyoming, where he was living with a woman he met in Florida.

By Judge Cahill's reasoning, if Mrs. Anderson was fooling around on her husband and he killed her, she got what she deserved and her family should pick up the charred remains of their lives and move on. And her killer deserves a supportive shoulder to lean on.

Archaic laws forbidding adultery still exist, but if there's a scale of appropriate corporal punishment for that and other marital sins, Judge Cahill is the only one who's seen it.

So here we are again: The statistics on relationship violence have been publicized widely, the tactic of blaming the victim has repeatedly been exposed, ridiculed and condemned. . . and a man who pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter will serve just 18 months because his wife couldn't keep her pants on while he was away.

Unlike sexual harassment and date rape, where the possibility of an accuser's motive is always raised, domestic violence seems like one of the few "women's" issues that should be cut and dry.

A bruise, a broken arm, a corpse — how can anyone say that's deserved? In the middle of national hysteria about crime in the United States, it's difficult to understand how the Judge Cahills can continue to exist.

The Bobbitt and Simpson cases have focused national attention on domestic violence — in the form of crude jokes about severed penises, "We Still Love You O.J." lighters and O.J. Simpson and Nicole Brown Simpson Halloween costumes.

Television commercials addressing domestic violence tell battered women what they already know — that they're victims. Studies and statistics tell women what they already know — they're victims.

Groups like the Men's Resource Center in Amherst tell violent men what they need to learn — that violence doesn't settle anything.

But their message faces a lopsided battle against the authority of the Judge Cahills and the money of the Simpson trial profit–makers.

Darienne J. Hosley is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Lone preacher doesn't speak for all

To the editor:

We are writing in response to the photograph that was on the front page of Oct. 14's Collegian. The photograph showed Tom Carlisle from Campus Ministry, USA, holding a sign that basically said, "God hates everyone that sins" (and who doesn't?). We are members of Intervarsity Christian Fellowship, a Christian group here at UMass, and we do not condone this message at all! We believe God loves the homosexual, the abortionist, the adulterer, the liar, etc. Yes, God does hate sin, but He loves the person/sinner.

Tara Hazen
Amherst
Wendy Ingles
Knowlton

To the editor:

After seeing the front page picture in Oct. 14's Collegian, I just wanted to ask, who does that guy think he is? I am deeply saddened by that man's (Tom Carlisle, of the Campus Ministry, USA) sign he was carrying and the damage it does to the reputation of Christianity. Christians are normal people, with normal problems just like everyone else. We are not perfect. Now, yes, God does hate sin, and he punishes sinners, but He does not hate sinners. He loves all people no matter what they do, and He forgives all sinners if they ask for forgiveness.

Matt Promise
President
Chi Alpha Christian Fellowship

Personal double standard, shows in editorial

To the editor:

Alex Casas' editorial in Monday's Collegian reeks of his personal double standard. On one hand, he states that he has no problem with the "alternative lifestyle." On the other hand, his language implies intolerance for people with sexual orientations different from his own. It seems he is attempting to say how he really feels under the guise of describing a double standard.

Alex, an "alternative lifestyle" directly implies that it is not of the mainstream. I am stunned by your statement that heterosexuals are being "left behind." Open your eyes! A bright, young student like you should be able to recognize what is going on. See many images of homosexuals in your life today? Check the paper — nothing there. How about the magazines — not much in them either. Maybe the TV — a token representation at best. We are inundated with heterosexual imagery in our lives.

Please attempt to expand your vision beyond the Campus Center in the future.

Tom Doughton
Sunderland

To the Editor:

Poor Mr. Casas (Oct. 17, "Double Standards"). I nearly shed a tear, knowing that he, as a "straight, white male" was facing so much oppression. I never knew that straight males, in general, faced the oppression that homosexuals face in our society. If that is the case, I'm sure people hurl insults at him as he walks through downtown Amherst. I'm also positive that he has, on occasion, been threatened with physical harm. And all of this just because he is part of that vast population of oppressed, straight, white males.

If your life is so difficult and you feel you need your so–called "heterosexual support group," why don't you start your own? It would only take you and nine of your buddies to become a University–acknowledged student group. And before you know it, you would have your long–awaited "heterosexual pride rally." You would also have yourself a force to lobby the campus for a "heterosexual floor." And, Mr. Casas, I respect your right to do all of these things. Just as I believe you should respect my rights to do those same things as a homosexual.

Brian S. Boudreau
Thatcher

To the Editor:

Alex Casas' editorial that appeared in Monday's Collegian sheds light upon the amount of misunderstanding some people have concerning the need for a visible gay community, as well as highlighting a significant amount of homo–hatred that remains in our society.

Casas states that he is entitled to have a support group for being a victimized straight male. He certainly has every right to form a group, but I doubt that he'd need one. He, (like most straight people) has likely had incredibly vocal support groups justifying his heterosexuality all his life. His family, church, government, community and the mainstream media have always condoned the attractions he has toward people of the opposite sex. Most straight people do not realize or appreciate this "taken–for–granted" luxury that gays are not afforded.

I'd find it highly unlikely that Casas was ever surrounded by a gang of people in high school taunted him for being straight. I also doubt that he or any of his straight friends have ever been beaten or stabbed by a marauding gang for their sexuality. If this weren't enough, I wonder if he was ever unfortunate enough to be thrown out of his house for being straight. His identification can only be classified as hysterical.

If Mr. Casas had to grow up in a world as queer, he would understand the need gays have for a visible, unified community. This is what Coming Out day is all about; rejecting heterosexism, and forming a new community that respects gays, unlike the mainstream community that continues to reject them.

Chris Talbo
Webster

Arts & Living

Gallery subs art for films focusing on the fantastic

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

The University Gallery has always been a key part of promoting and displaying various genres of art, from abstract oil paintings to sculptures.

Due to the current renovation of the University Gallery's home in the Fine Arts Center, the exhibit hall had to be closed but the gallery wanted to maintain some sort of presence on campus.

The result is the University Gallery's Fantastic Cinema Series, which began three weeks ago and includes an introduction of each film by a faculty member.

The series was created by Regina Coppola, curator of the gallery, to fill the gap created by the closed exhibition space.

"We couldn't do exhibitions, but we wanted to maintain visibility and continue to contribute to the University," Coppola said.

A personal interest in fantasy film led her to the goal of highlighting the long history of the industry.

Coppola researched the fantasy genre and came up with more than 30 films she could possibly show. But due to the limited time and space available, she had to restrict the series to 12 films.

"I chose them according to time periods to give a mini– survey," Coppola said. "I also wanted to bring in films from different countries: Germany, Japan, America, China and Russia."

So far, the series has presented: A Student at Prague, directed by Paul Wegener and Stellan Rye; Vampyr directed by Carl Dryer; The Invisible Man, directed by James Whale; and The Bride of Frankenstein, also directed by Whale. Each film was introduced by a UMass faculty member.

Coppola said the series has enjoyed fairly good attendance since it began three weeks ago, and that people seem to be interested in the films' subject matter.

Encouraged by the positive response, the gallery intends to carry on this idea even after the gallery re–opens, Coppola said.

"I'd very much like to carry this on using commercial film and a certain theme," she said. "Maybe not every semester, but I'd definitely like to make it part of programming."

Other films scheduled include Ugetsu Monogatari, Lancelot of the Lake, Juliet of the Spirits, Stalker, Blade Runner and Johanna d'Arc of Mongolia.

The next film being shown will be Orphee, a French work directed by Jean Cocteau with an introduction by Edward Phinney. It will be shown Oct. 20 in Herter 227 at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free.

Ska faves The Toasters aim to warm up Noho

By Matthew Justin Foerber
Collegian Staff

COURTESY MOON RECORDS

Ska legends The Toasters will play Pearl Street on Thursday.

Tomorrow night, New York City ska legends The Toasters will return to Pearl Street in Northampton as the headlining act on this year's highly–anticipated Skavoovee bill.

The show also features The Scofflaws, The Pietasters and Spring–Heeled Jack.

Begun last year by The Toasters and ska–originators The Skatalites, this tour (accurately billed as "The Ultimate Ska Train") met with such enormous commercial and critical success that it has been expanded this year to cover no less than 42 cities with the guys from N.Y.C. leading the way.

The Toasters have proven time and again that they are indeed America's greatest ska band. Over the past 10 years, they have worked their way up from the clubs of the lower East Side to playing to capacity crowds at 1,000–person–plus venues in over a dozen countries.

Without the help of MTV and with very little radio airplay, the band has established their reputation the hard way by releasing seven albums on their self–owned Moon Records label and touring virtually non–stop.

It is at these shows that the band truly shines. You haven't really heard The Toasters until you've experienced them live.

From opening note to exhausted finish, The Toasters' frantic rhythm section and irresistible songwriting combine with the sheer charisma of frontman Coolie Ranx to bring out the dancing fool in anyone. Few other bands have such a close and genuine rapport with their audience.

"The bottom line is that we have a good time and that everyone have a good time," said sax player Freddie Reiter. "That's why we're here. . . for everyone to dance, skank it up, get loose, relax and enjoy the whole scene."

In addition to traditional Jamaican ska, The Toasters also combine elements of funk and jazz (the latter is most evident in their recent decision to cover the Dizzy Gillespie classic "Night in Tunisia") to create their own distinctive and eclectic sound.

Also on the bill will be label mates The Pietasters and The Scofflaws, both renowned ska acts in their own right. Opening the show will be the up–and–coming New Haven group Spring–Heeled Jack, a band which has been receiving a lot of attention in the ska world lately, so it's worth getting there early.

Tomorrow night promises to be one of the most exciting live shows of the year. So whether you've seen The Toasters before or not, put down those books, put on your dancing shoes and get ready for a study break in the form of what is possibly the best live dance band on earth.

The Skavoovee tour featuring The Toasters will arrive at the Pearl Street nightclub in Northampton Oct. 20. The show is 18+ and tickets are available at the Northampton Box Office and at the door. For ticket prices and more information, call 584–7771.

Terence Stamp on fame, Australia & going drag in Priscilla

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It could certainly rank as the offbeat casting of the year: Terence Stamp as a transsexual touring the Australian outback in a musical drag show.

The virile British actor stars with Aussies Guy Pearce and Hugo Weaving in The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert, which is enjoying a leisurely release across the United States. He admits that he initially resisted the assignment. Why?

"It was like fear manifesting itself as a desire to be perfect," he said. "When projects came up in the past where there was no question of being perfect, then I would pass. So that during my career I missed a lot of wonderful opportunities because this characteristic was in place, and probably in place most of my life. Probably put there by my mother.

"I remember the great Josh Logan begging me to do the film of Camelot. I remember this fear that my voice wasn't up to it and I would be re–voiced and that would be the end of me as a serious actor. Not true. My voice is as good as Richard Harris'." Friends urged him to accept Priscilla as a rare challenge and a chance to escape "the smiling face of fear."

A telling argument came from the film's director–writer, Stephan Elliott, who counseled: "If you don't take this chance, all you have to look forward to is playing English villains in Hollywood movies for the rest of your life."

Stamp has been cast that way in most of his more recent films: Superman and Superman II, The Sicilian, Young Guns, The Real McCoy.

His first day on Priscilla had him dressed in high heels, stylish gown, glamour makeup and wig, dancing and lip–syncing to "Shake That Groove Thing" with Pearce and Weaving. "After that, the project became fun," he said.

At 55, Terence Stamp no longer evidences the boyish beauty he showed in his early films. The eyes are the same — piercing blue — but the face now has a mature handsomeness.

Born into a cockney family in London, Stamp saw no ladder for his acting ambitions.

"I couldn't get on the first rung," he said.

England still clung to elegance in acting, and young Terence couldn't even get cast in school plays. He worked in advertising until he saw James Dean in East of Eden.

"Dean was the first actor I'd ever seen that I could totally empathize with," he recalled. "In the past, my fantasies had always been about Gary Cooper, Errol Flynn and Cary Grant. They were heroic and ideal–looking, not how I looked."

Stamp was emboldened to try for an acting scholarship, which he won. He began playing in West End plays, including The Long, the Short and the Tall with another cockney, Michael Caine.

In 1961, Peter Ustinov was planning to star in and direct Billy Budd, the Herman Melville tale of tyranny on a sailing ship. Stamp recalled his audition for the title role:

"When I got into the room with Ustinov, his aura and stature were so enormous that every time I opened my mouth I could say nothing that made sense," he said. "So very quickly I stopped answering questions. Every time I thought of something, I felt it was not worth saying.

"That's what got me the part. He was looking for somebody who could convey being bereft of speech."

His first movie brought Stamp an Academy Award nomination for supporting actor. Three years later he was named best actor at the Cannes Film Festival for his chilling psychotic in William Wyler's The Collector.

Stamp flourished in the 1960s, his directors including John Schlesinger (Far from the Madding Crowd) and Federico Fellini.

Stamp admitted that he hated Australia when he made his first visit in 1965. His trip to Australia for Princess proved far different.

"It's extraordinary the changes that have taken place. Nowadays It's just the most magical place. And I think it will be ruined when people discover how wonderful it is."

Ray Mason Band's enthusiastic debut effort more than 'Okay'

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

BETWEEN BLUE AND OKAY
Ray Mason Band
Bullet Records

Remember rock n' roll? You know that combination of guitar, bass and drums plugged straight into the amplifiers, minus all the extra frills. Local hero Ray Mason does, and with his debut release Between Blue And Okay, he is not afraid to let it show.

The album, which nicely collects 20 modest rock gems that Mason has been nurturing live for quite some time, is written testament to the fact that good old–fashioned songwriting and sweat can still triumph in today's "faster, louder" music world.

By taking music and stripping it back down to its bare essentials, Mason proves that he isn't afraid to let his songs stand on their own. With the warm strum of his antique Sears Silvertone guitar accompanied by a steady but solid rhythm section, Mason leads the listener down rock n' roll memory lane without a hint of longing for time past.

By refusing to cash in on even the subtlest of music trends, Mason's tunes almost come to personify the spirit that once made rock music seem so exciting and vital in the first place. This could be due in part to his experience in the rock n' roll world, since he has been avidly playing and listening to music since he was a small boy.

Songs such as "We Don't Get Along Anymore," "She's Wearing Her Hair Like Donna Reed," and the title track bounce along, unashamed to bask in their pop sensibilities. On the same note, tracks such as "Since Him" show that Mason is not afraid to mess around a bit with his style by injecting a dose of horns into the mix.

While it does seem that Mason is the type of performer who could probably pull these no–nonsense tunes off even better live, the tracks presented here still manage to come off sounding fresh and alive.

Basically with Between Blue And Okay what you see is what you get, and thanks to Mason's obvious songwriting gift, the payoff is a group of pop songs so earnest and sincere only the stodgiest of music fans could be turned away.

"I just play the songs that I hear in my head," Mason once said. Thankfully for us, Mr. Mason is so honest with himself as well as his art. A–

COURTESY DAVID OSIPOWICZ

Ray Mason of Ray Mason Band

This coupon good for one FREE
COLLEGIAN™ brand student paper
Offer good while supplies last. One COLLEGIAN brand student paper per person per day.

MICHAEL'S
BILLIARDS & SPORTS BAR
RT 9 AMHERST 256-0284
21 and older Positive ID Required
CA$H POOL TOURNAMENT
ALL LEVELS WELCOME
$5 entry double elimination
RESERVE AMBER ALE
$5.00 PITCHER

"What I really want to do is teach"
GRADUATE PROGRAM OPEN HOUSES
Master of Arts in Teaching English as a Second Language
November 1, 1994—5:00 p.m.
Master of Arts in Teaching Elementary, Middle, and High School Education
November 2, 1994—5:00 p.m.
Master of Science in Education Special and Intensive Special Needs
November 2, 1994—5:00 p.m.
Come to Simmons College in Boston and learn about our masters degree programs leading to teacher certification. Explore whether teaching is what you really want to do.
Call (617) 521-2910 for more information about the Open Houses, program brochures or for directions
SIMMONS COLLEGE
GRADUATE SCHOOL OF MANAGEMENT
Office of Graduate Studies Admissions · A 300 The Fenway · Boston, MA 02115 5898

HELLCATS
JOIN THE PACK RIDE WITH DEATH
THE COLLEGIAN

Do I have a case?
The attorneys at your Student Legal Services Office can answer fee-paying UMass/Amherst students' questions on a variety of legal problems, including: Housing, Criminal, University, Civil Rights, Consumer, Labor Relations, Personal Injury, and Family Law
STUDENT LEGAL SERVICES OFFICE 545-1995
The Student Legal Services Office is your first source of law-related assistance. Whether you need information, advice or referral, call for an appointment. Located in room 922 of the Campus Center, the SLSO is open Monday through Friday, from 9am to 5pm.
Do I need a lawyer?

SEPTEMBER 1968 26 YEARS 1994
THE PUB
Fun, Food & Spirits
TUESDAY
Live Entertainment with
New Horizons
and special guest
Mentos
Reggae - Calypso
9:30-1:00
Nachos $2.00
9:30-10:30
15 EAST PLEASANT·AMHERST

Red Sox hire Kevin Kennedy

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

BOSTON — Kevin Kennedy made a speedy return to managing Tuesday when he was hired by the Boston Red Sox six days after losing his job despite winning his division.

The same day he was fired by the Texas Rangers, Kennedy spoke last Wednesday with Boston general manager Dan Duquette, who had worked with Kennedy with the Montreal Expos.

"One day you get let go and then the next morning at 6 a.m. you're on a plane," Kennedy said. "I'm glad to get it over with because I want to get back to doing what I do."

Said Duquette: "We had an inkling he would be available a couple of weeks ago."

Kennedy, the fourth manager fired since the strike-shortened season officially ended, was the first to land another job, agreeing to a two-year contract.

He might still be waiting had Tony La Russa not agreed to a three-year contract extension as manager of the Oakland A's. That was announced Tuesday, depriving Duquette of the man widely assumed to be his first choice.

Asked if the timing of the announcements was coincidental, Duquette smiled and said, "purely."

Kennedy, 40, succeeds Butch Hobson, who was fired Sept. 20 after leading the Red Sox to a 54-61 record in his third season as manager. They finished fourth in the AL East, 17 games out of first place.

The Rangers had a poorer record, 52-62, but finished first in the much weaker AL West, one game ahead of Oakland despite losing their last six games.

"Even though we were 10 games under (.500), I was a better manager this year than last year," said Kennedy, whose Rangers finished second in the AL West last year with an 86-76 record. This year there was grumbling in the Texas clubhouse, some of it directed at Kennedy.

"Anytime you struggle and you lose six straight and you have a team that had high expectations, you're going to have some people that are unhappy," Kennedy said. "I know Jose Canseco said some very nice things (about Kennedy) on the air in Texas the other day. I'm a disciplinarian but I'm also a players' manager."

"If you're a no-nonsense manager, you're going to have some grinding," Duquette said. "His relationship with the players will be fine as long as we win games."

Duquette also interviewed Johnny Oates after he was fired as manager of Baltimore and New York Yankees coach Rick Down. Kennedy managed eight seasons in the Los Angeles Dodgers organization.

Less than two months after Duquette became general manager of the Expos on Sept. 19, 1991, he hired Kennedy as director of minor league field operations. Seven months later, on May 22, 1992, Kennedy was named major-league dugout coach under new manager Felipe Alou.

The Rangers hired him as manager on Oct. 26, 1992 and he was 138-138 in two seasons.

"I was a long shot there and, all of a sudden, I was managing in the big leagues," Kennedy said.

Another fast move brought him to Boston, where he'll manage a team that has had three straight losing seasons, its longest stretch without a winning record since 1959-1966.

■ Cabrals

continued from page 8

switching to track for her junior and senior years. Between them, the Cabrals collected 21 varsity letters.

As their athletic reputations grew, the opposition began to associate Somerset High teams with the Cabrals.

"If a team that we were on had the reputation for being physical," Andrea said. "Then it was always, 'The Cabrals are physical.'"

Despite being heavily recruited elsewhere, Andrea said she always knew where she wanted to play collegiate field hockey.

"I just always thought it would be the greatest thing to play at UMass. My idol from home, Pam Bustin [UMass 1988] played here. As soon as I picked up a stick I knew it would be the greatest thing to play here."

After high school, Beth decided to put her athletic career on hold and headed to the University of New Hampshire.

"I played a lot of outdoor volleyball, but UNH only had a club team," Beth said.

After a year at New Hampshire, Beth decided to transfer to UMass and when the volleyball program was resurrected, so was the career of Beth Cabral.

"I came here thinking I'd try out for softball," she said. "I heard about volleyball and I just figured I'd try the new program. I like the fact that I'm part of the reinstatement of volleyball. We're bringing it back as something better than it was before."

Since their reunification, the sisters have been inseparable.

"We're together all the time," Andrea said. "We lived in the same hall on campus last year, and now we live together off campus."

"Because we both play sports, it's easier to talk to each other," said her sister. "If we went to talk to someone [who doesn't play sports] they have no idea what goes into it. We confide in each other."

"It was good working out together in the summer, because we could always push each other," Andrea said. "When Beth wasn't playing and I had to train by myself, it was so much harder to get myself out there."

Both Cabrals take pride in the work ethic that they share.

"We both have an attitude that probably came from our parents, that if you're going to go out, go all out," Andrea said. "Beth is a very hard worker. In volleyball she made herself much improved."

Beth describes Andrea as aggressive and outgoing. "She strives to do everything she can in her school work, field hockey, and meeting people."

Before their college careers end, both hope to elevate their teams to the next level.

"We'd like to make it to the NCAA tournament and see what we can do," said Beth.

"I just hope we stay strong enough to go to the Final Four," Andrea said. "That's what we're working for. Every game, every practice, every talk, every video session, we're looking to the Final Four."

■ women's soccer

continued from page 8

region. We better find some breaks real quick or find some leadership," Rudy said. "Or we might as well sign up to get into the ECAC playoffs at the end of the year. Actually, I threw that invitation away. Maybe I better find it."

The only chance UMass has of hosting the regionals — and it's a slim chance at that — is if it wins its final two regional games against UConn and Cornell. Along with that, Hartford and UConn have to lose at least one of their remaining regional games. Don't forget about Dartmouth either: If it wins its remaining games and the others factors occur, it could be No. 1 and host the regionals.

"Maybe people will start to respect us more as an up and coming team," Dartmouth forward Melissa McBean said.

"We have four games left, but anything can happen and so does everybody else," Swanson said. "It's such a short season and there are so many good teams in this region."

How good are the teams in the region?

Just look at the recent poll of the top 20 teams in the country. No. 6 Connecticut (12–2), No. 8 Hartford (10–2–1), No. 10 UMass (10–4) and No. 16 Dartmouth (8–2–1). Brown (6–3), although unranked, also received votes.

Although the outlook appears bleak now, UMass still controls its own destiny.

"We have to beat Connecticut and Cornell, and then I'd say we are in," Rudy said.

"This loss here today is going to be a setback but not anything that's going put us out of the picture yet," Roberts said.

A picture that right now is cloudy, but in a few weeks will be a lot clearer. And UMass can only hope to be a part of that picture, the NCAA championships.

■ ice hockey

continued from page 8

The versatile Armand Latulippe, who filled in for an injured Rissling last season, may again see some action as a defenseman. Keith O'Connell, a sophomore transfer from BC, can bring some offense to the UMass blue line.

"We have some very nice options on the power with Rissling, as well as O'Connor and Norton, who have power– play experience," Mallen said.

"If anybody thinks they can come into this building [William D. Mullins Center] and walk away with an easy victory, they've got another think coming," Rissling said.

Playoff bound?

COLLEGIAN FILE

After last week's upset of William & Mary, the Minutemen could be back in the hunt for a playoff spot if they can upset Delaware this weekend.

Gain Valuable "Real World" Experience on Campus!

The Collegian Business Office is looking for ambitious, organized Sophomore SOM majors for the position of

Associate Business Manager

Direct supervision received from the Collegian business manager, as well as the assistant business manager. Applications may be obtained at:

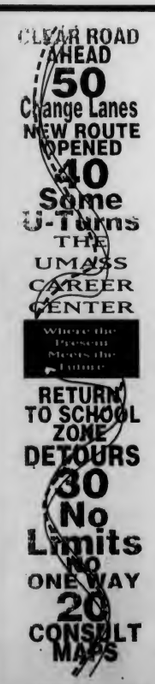
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center (the basement)

Resumes and cover letters may be directed to:

Michael McRae, Business Manager

Application Deadline is Friday, November 4

The Collegian is an equal opportunity employer.



ORIENTATION MEETING

FOR SENIORS
and Graduate Degree Candidates in the
COLLEGE OF FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES

COME TO HEAR ABOUT CAREER AND EMPLOYMENT REFERRAL PROGRAMS OFFERED BY THE UNIVERSITY CAREER CENTER

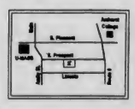
WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 19, 4 P.M.
AGRICULTURAL ENGINEERING BLDG., RM. 119

Consumer Studies, Entomology, Food Science, Forestry & Wildlife Management, HRTA, Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning, Nutrition, Plant & Soil Sciences, Plant Pathology, Resource Economics, and Veterinary & Animal Science

WELCOME!

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY

53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385



- Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
- State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
- Over 90 years staff experience
- Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
- Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems.
- We provide substitute transportation
- Users of Sikkens paint products

Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities

Shop Registration # RS1212

The Collegian understands your needs. We hear your concerns and are sympathetic to your worries. In fact we have taken measures to insure that we deal with these issues...

The Collegian ...
Looking out for our readers who are looking out for us as we are looking out for those who are...

HUGE SAVINGS
AT THE NEW SALVATION ARMY
SUPER
THRIFT STORE
STUDENT DISCOUNT
EVERY THURSDAY
ON CLOTHING
50% OFF WITH ID
159 N. Pleasant St
Amherst, MA • 253-4747

Vinyl Scratchs By Bill Porter

Urban Shocker By Deg

OOO! OOO! I GOTTA GO GO GO!
NOONE SHOULD MIND IF I WATER THIS BUSH
OOWOOOOOOO! OWOOOOOOO!
IF LOOKS LIKE OL' TURKYARD DOG HAS MET HIS HEDGEHOG ENDED

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today Ruth came over with a bunch of leaves.
"I want to put them in a book," she said.
She said she used to like doing that when she was a little kid.
So she got wax paper and pressed the leaves and put them in a book and everything.

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

PHOOEY. MOM AND DAD LEFT. NOW WE'RE HERE ALONE WITH THE BABY SITTER FROM THE BLACK LAGOON
HEE HEE! DO YOU THINK SHE REMEMBERS HOW LAST TIME WE THREATENED TO FLUSH HER SCIENCE NOTES DOWN THE TOILET?
HA HA HA! OUR FINEST MOMENT!
OK, YOU GET IN BED
WHAT?! IT'S NOT EVEN 6:30!
SHE REMEMBERS. ALL RIGHT.
SHE CAN'T GET AWAY WITH THIS. WE'LL CALL THE RESCUE SQUAD

Bruno By C. Baldwin

MY DAD PAUL, LISTEN TO THIS. "WE TAKE PRIDE IN OUR HERITAGE AS THE SAN FRANCISCO DESIGNED TO SHARE IT WITH YOU. WE'VE CAR TRAVELS."
SO WHAT? IS THAT BAD?
OH COME ON PAUL, WHO'D LIKE "PAUL'S HERITAGE" "SHARE" AND "SPECIAL CERAMIC CABLE CAR TRAVELS" ON THE BACK OF AN INSTANT-MEALBOX / WHAT OTHER AMERICANS HAVE I INSULTED WHILE AT COLLEGE?!?
BRUNO, I THINK YAH SHOULD GET OUT AND MEET SOME PEOPLE. REALLY, I MEAN IT.
CHRIST! IS IT SAFE OUT THERE?

The Far Side By Gary Larson

Scene from "Fiddle Attraction"

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/$ days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

10/19/94

1968 MUSTANG

Classic '68 Mustang Way Cool Wheels FOR SALE!! Electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, 2 door, great way to pick up chicks and study alike. Best offer call Beth at 6-4434.

ACTIVITIES

NECKC Karate Club Shorokan style - coed Tatman 101 M-W 8-9:30 F 7-9 All levels welcome! Call Jessica at 549-4229

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Attn: all UMass women!!! ALPhi is holding open rush Thursday night from 7-9 on Washington's 5th floor. Everyone is welcome!!! Questions call 256-8701 or 549-7980

If interested in becoming an International Students Association executive committee member call Rachael 549-0615 or Chaze 546-0010

Learn to bartend with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools right here in Amherst! Classes start Wed. Oct. 12th! Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX to register today!

Video rental now available at Hampden and Worcester munchie stores.

AUTO FOR SALE

1968 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Beth at 6-4434

1974 Ford Maverick, 2 door, 6 cylinder, 76 K Brown w/ beige int. No underbody rust. Am/fm cassette. Runs well. $1000 or b o call 253-2104 evenings only.

89 Chevy Cavalier automatic, white coupe, good shape, good sound $3700 532-3184

BOXING LESSONS

Recreational & competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Djeta Bumpus 549-5752

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? WE have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service, 2 Dearborn Terrace East, N. Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

FOR RENT

Fridge rentals 253-9747 free delivery$29.00

Take over our lease Feb 11 Cozy 3 bdr apt off Main Street-- 750 mo call 256-1409

FOR SALE

1984 Buick $1200/neg. call 8-2031

Dorm fridge $70 call 8-2031

Brother Word Processor for sale Last years model. Like new $150 Call Pam 549-6888

Computer Atari 520ST, monitor, word processing software. Also Toshiba 321 printer. Sold singly or together. Cheap! 253-8175

For sale futon $150 w/ frame, mattress and cover 70 gallon fish tank w/ stand. Hood, fish, plants, rocks, filter, net, cleaning hose $150. Call 253-2112 Sioban leave name. #

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $500. Call Chris at 800-289-5685

Pagers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549-7231

Piano for sale-- yet high upright, nice condition $200 call Jim at 549-5825 or 549-2535.

Shades for less- name brand sunglasses 30%-50% off Campus Center MWF 800-9604KOES

Solid oak triple dresser
Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354

Speakers brand new high quality linear phase studio monitors $148 549-7728

Star Trek Generations posters! 12 X 30 $10 or b o 665-7705

FOUND

Found- men's wedding band Gold Near library, 10/14. Call Jack2 586-8764

HELP WANTED

16 openings due to expansion local company has part time openings $9.00 up to $15.00 to start. No experience necessary, training provided, advancement potential, flexible schedules, scholarships possible. For application details call 413 733-0057

$363.88 Sell funny college T-Shirts. Profit $363.60 Risk free. Choose from 10 designs. Free catalogs 1 800 700 4250

Alaska employment fishing industry Earn up to $3,000-$6,000+ per month. Room + board! Transportation! Male/female. No experience necessary. (206)545-4155 ext. A50011

Bartender wanted Trattoria Gregorio Italian restaurant. Apply in person after 4:00pm. 1177 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 549-7777

Childcare for 11 yr old boy 1 evening per week plus some overnights. Car required. Call 548-9057

Cruise ships hiring- earn up to $2000 + mo. on cruise ships or land- tour companies. Seasonal + full time employment available. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext. C50011

Earn $$/Be fight pollution. Work for political change with Clean Water Action environmental campaign staff! On bus lines. Paid training. P/T or career opportunity. Call 584-9830

$Earn$. Start your own business selling jewelry. Call 1 800 700 3608 for info.

Earn $2500 & free trips Spring Break! Student Holidays, the nation's leader in spring break vacations, seeking enthusiastic, highly motivated students and organizations to promote and sell all- inclusive 4 star Cancun trips! From only $499 call now 1-80 360-7789!

Jobs for the environment. Grassroots political organizing. Earn $40-80/ day. Flexible hours/ casual atmosphere. Call Alex 256-8434

New Amherst coffeehouse now hiring. All shifts available (413) 253-9441

New hiring experienced waitstaff and drivers. Apply within Kai Chi Restaurant.

Part time 15 hrs a week evenings. S Hadley co seeking responsible individual who possess high math skills, computer knowledge, the ability to work alone. Call Michael or Wendy at 533-2700

Pinocchio's hiring full and part time drivers. Apply in person, after 4:30pm any day.

Receive up to 288,000 dollars in 18 months! for your stuffing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am-5pm

Start own cash business, turn straws into dollars, money while you sleep, public service machine-- raises people's awareness. Minimum investment $1,295. Serious inquiries only. George @ 617-837-0899

Seeking student to design and/or market hand made shoes Call Sharon. 259-1748.

LOSE WEIGHT

Dieting is dangerous & depletes muscles- including heart muscle! Use our all herbal products- FDA safe/effective/Dr recommended. Make peace with your body. Call the Herbal Loft 256-3016

LOST

I lost my purse on 10/10 at Bart's. If you found it, please please call me 546-3975

Silver frog ring. If found please call Christa 8-3787

OFF CAMPUS VOICE MAIL

Always get your messages! Many free options, access from anywhere. Only $9.95/mo. Call 549-5234

PERSONALS

Crew or Trick RIPPER SMOM and poor little (and!!) EEK Hi! From Grandma

Happy 21st Fabo Hope all your fantasies come true. Love Ladby + Lovestruck

Happy Birthday Amy. You won't live till your next. The squirrels

Happy Birthday Amy We heard nice shirt guy and Eddie Munster liked your shoes! Don't worry we'll protect you! Rachel and Jeremiah

Hey Bossy the cow. Do U want to play guardgirl tonight? Guess who?

Hey Dave-day. Only one year left! Happy 20th! Love Miss- Dane, Chew + Justin

Mortara This means legal Irish coffee. Today's cup is on me (as always!) Happy 21st. Satin Mendi

Murtara, Cheers! You're legal! Take care, love always, Tona

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female to share large bedroom in house Great location (behind Dairymart uptown) 258/ mo + utilities. Move in immediately. Lease ends May. No summer payments! Call Kristen 549-3982

Someone to share newly remodeled 2 bed apartment. Beautiful area! 267/mo + electricity. Call Jason 665-3726

SCUBA DIVING

Learn to scuba dive, earn credit 1-800-262-0877

Scuba Florida Keys Dec 28- Jan 3 Earn credit 1-800-282-0977

SERVICES

"Balloon view" cartoon charicatures Makes great gift! $25, full color! Satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 586-5447

Call The Playground bbs! 256 6085; Active message bases, 17 Online Games, Over 130 megs online!

Fundraising. Choose from 3 different fundraisers lasting either 3 or 7 days. No investment. Earn $$$ for your group plus personal cash bonuses for yourself. Call 1-800-932-0528

Model search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues. Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Males, females, all categories welcome $17-$23-0267

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906

SHAREWARE

Free!! Shareware listing hundreds of quality sitewide programs only $3 48 each Call 584-2282

TRAVEL

Spring Break $$**
America's #1 spring break company! Cancun, Bahamas, Daytona & Panama! 110% lowest price guarantee! Organize 15 friends and travel free! Earn highest commission! (800) 32-TRAVEL

Travel free! Spring break 95! Guaranteed lowest prices Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida. Book early + save $$$! Organize group travel free! 1-800-426-7710

TYPING

Fast, inexpensive typing. Call Joe 549-5738

WANTED

Attn. Drama and medieval performers ? UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jugglers, armourer to oversee games of skill and magick guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. BYU here 584-4703

Campus representative Kodak products spring break from "guaranteed" best prices + incentives Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica S. Padre + Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1-800-777-4432

Experienced drummer. Must own kit 253-4982

Eating Disorder Programs • 1994/95
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Monday (except holidays) 4:30-6:00 p.m. Campus Center Room Number posted by elevator.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phoneline for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know. 549-2671, ext. 188.

classé cafe'
Experience the Best Breakfast Around

Classé Where Everything's Homemade

Sunday Brunch 7am-3pm
Monday-Saturday 7am-10pm

Downtown Amherst • 253-2291

Daily Crossword

Edited by Trude Michel Joffe

ACROSS
1 Boa
6 Matures
10 Salmagundi
14 Author Alex
15 R and R word
16 Talented
17 Designer Simpson
18 Part of AM
19 Actress Crawford
20 Glenn Miller favorite
23 Expunged
24 Fencing sword
25 Madre a hermana
27 Paint additives
32 Inter —
36 Mine car
39 Man's man
40 Glenn Miller favorite
43 Straighten
44 Surfeit
45 Position
46 Table
48 Old French coin
50 Gaelic
53 Total resources
58 Glenn Miller favorite
62 Hogmae poem
63 Measured quantity
64 Bingo's cousin
65 Forum wear
66 Vicinage
67 "— Be"
Beatles song
68 Dutch cheese
69 Whoop
70 Memorable time

DOWN
1 Plastic rock
2 Lowest point
3 Prince
Valiant's wife
4 Cartoon salmon
5 Grommet
6 Saudi

7 Style of painting
8 Prevent
9 Besotted
10 Pilgrimage to Mecca
11 — Ben Adhem
12 Steelmaking residue
13 Coop dwellers
21 Revises copy
22 Gall
26 God of war
28 Namesakes of author Fleming
29 Israeli airline
30 Try again
31 Let it stand!
33 PDQ
34 Hummingbird
35 "What's — for me?"
36 Jason's ship
37 Botanist Gray
38 Apportion
41 Deduce
42 Summarize
47 Part of TGIF
49 Practicable
51 Succeed
52 Studio stand
54 Soak
55 Mass of love poetry
56 Gin mixer
57 Insolence
58 Footless one
59 Million pesos
60 Quiz
61 Actress Psimica
62 Consumed

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

By Jeanne L. Searcy
©1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

10/19/94

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): A phone call could alter certain social plans. Travel will help you conclude a business deal. Keep an eye on spending, but avoid acting stingy.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20): A sudden change in a work schedule could upset your personal plans. Be flexible. New financial rewards are possible. If necessary, call on a co-worker for help.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): You may need to turn over a new leaf to get your career back on track. Mixed messages can slow progress. Pull in your horns. A major love victory is possible if you overcome lovers' quarrels.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): Your chances of winning on losing a battle are about even today. Consult only those in whom you have great confidence in the conservative in your living and spending habits.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): Cannot endorse more you nearer to a cherished goal. Spending will benefit you. A financial bond or partner. Guard against becoming a victim of a youngster. Honesty is the best policy when the boss asks questions. A grumpy mate turns romantic.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): Go slow until you have verified that you are on the right track. Obtain partner's full consent before spending joint funds. Clearing chores will be time consuming.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): Candor is required. Go ahead and confront a family member. You need to clear the air. Business success depends on crossing all the t's, dotting all the i's. Resist snappings at someone who pressures you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): The memory of an emotional scene makes it difficult for you to concentrate. Luckily, tomorrow shows less. Cover someone some to cool off before trying to make amends. The romantic outlook is bright tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Proceed hand-in-hand with your partner and the danger of going astray will be greatly lessened. Do not deal with a warming up rival. Look within to discover an interesting secret about your goals and motives.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): The emphasis now is on creating lasting financial security. Say "no" to any investment related promises. However, Your reputation is much too valuable to jeopardize with shady deals. Be honest with each client.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Economy spending will benefit you. A financial bond or partner. Guard against becoming a victim of a youngster. Honesty is the best policy when the boss asks questions. A grumpy mate turns romantic.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Probe the motives of someone who makes an offer that sounds too good to be true. Adopting a more practical approach to financial management will be time consuming. Invest money only after consulting experts.

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Seafood Munchies	Charred Chicken Puck
Slop Sloppy Joe	Baked Ziti
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Seafood Munchies	Roman Rice and Beans
Vegan Slop	Rice & Cheesyfilled Cabbage

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Darienne J. Hosley
Copy Editor.....Caleb Cochran
Photo Technician.....Nathan Martin
Production Supervisor.....Greg Iafrate
Production.....Marni Helfner, Kori Carter, Kevin Farrar

Quote of the Day

"Murder is no laughing matter."
—Denise Brown, sister of Nicole Brown Simpson, in a statement asking people not to buy Simpson related Halloween outfits

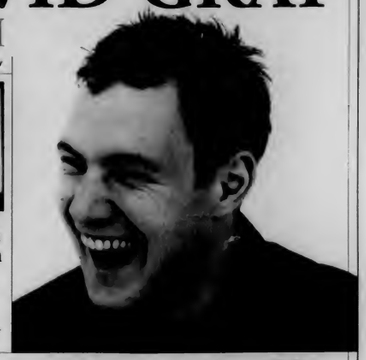
DAVID GRAY
FLESH

The new album out now

On tour now with Shawn Colvin

Hut Recordings U.S.A.

©1994 Virgin Records Ltd. 374 Hut Recordings, Ireland under exclusive license in the United States by Virgin Yard Recordings



FOR THE RECORD

FOR THE RECORD
104 N. PLEASANT
AMHERST, MA
413 256-6134

Main St Records

MAIN ST. RECORDS, 213 MAIN ST
NORTH HAMPTON, MA
413 586-5726

NCAA Division I Field Hockey Poll

1 Northwestern	6 Northeastern	11 Princeton	16 Maryland
2 North Carolina	7 Ball State	12 Delaware	17 American
3 James Madison	8 Connecticut	13 Syracuse	18 Virginia
4 UMass	9 Penn State	14 Iowa	19 Boston University
5 Old Dominion	10 Ohio State	15 Boston College	20 Michigan

Sports

Dartmouth takes UM in soccer upset

By Mike Reiss
Collegian Staff

The play in itself seemed harmless, much like the many trips up and down the field in the first 80 minutes that resulted in anything but a goal yesterday at Richard F. Garber Field.

Massachusetts	0
Dartmouth	1

"She was working hard on the sidelines and crossed it over to me," Dartmouth College's Melissa McBean said. "I got it, cut, and the defender went for the fake. I just aimed for the corner."

The shot, which couldn't have been hit any better, descended through the air curving inward, before landing over the outstretched hands of diving Massachusetts goalkeeper Danielle Dion. The seemingly harmless trip had suddenly done its damage.

McBride's tally would stand as the only score of the match, as No. 16 Dartmouth registered a 1–0 upset victory over No. 10 UMass in women's soccer action yesterday.

"I have a lot of respect for UMass because they play soccer the way I like it to be played," said Dartmouth Coach Steve Swanson.

"It was a good game that I thought was going to be decided by who made a mistake or who made the play. And that was a world class goal."

Dartmouth's defense made few mistakes, incorporating a compact set in which the entire defense followed the path of the ball. Early on, UMass had some trouble exploiting this, but later in the match it was not a matter of beating the defense but a matter of cashing in on the opportunities.

The best opportunity for the Minutewomen came at 67:12, when junior forward Nicole Roberts fed a nice ball to the right foot of freshman forward Elizabeth Rutherford, who had a step on the defense. Rutherford's shot skipped just wide of the low right corner, barely missing the post.

"Nicole was dribbling downfield and I was looking to help her out," Rutherford recalled. "I was anxious when I got the ball and shot it just wide."

Overall, the UMass offense had trouble generating scoring opportunities — the team's seven shots on goal are proof– positive of that. At 15:00, Melissa Mitchell blasted an eight– yard shot the near right post but was denied by Dartmouth goalkeeper Heidi Hachtel's diving stop.

Then there was Tina Lightning's long shot at 30:48 that was turned aside, along with two Roberts mini–breakaway's at 53:37 and 69:44. Other than that, the Minutewomen had few chances to break into the scoring column.

"I hate to say it, but we're rapidly moving toward self–destruction," said UMass Coach Jim Rudy. "Someone has to step up and say enough is enough. We're waiting for someone to provide that leadership."

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Nicole Roberts and the Minutewomen lost a heartbreaker yesterday, falling 1–0 at the hands of Dartmouth.

While she has little impact on the team's offensive play, Dion might be that player. The freshman goalkeeper played one of her best matches of the season yesterday, turning aside a tough eight shots.

After sophomore midfielder Sandy Shimogaki headed away a dangerous ball in front of the UMass net at 11:10, Dion was virtually flawless thereafter. Stopping some quality Dartmouth bids in the first half, she started off the second half just as impressively, making a diving stab at 47:32. She continued her excellent play throughout the match, and virtually had no chance at McBean's score.

UMass now gears up for a key regional battle, as it visits Connecticut Saturday afternoon at 3 p.m. "A must–win situation," said Roberts.

Indeed. As it stands, UMass needs to pick up its level of play and get back on track before the post–season.

"I wish we were a little sharper before this match," Rudy said. "We've got our whole group there, you see it and that's what we have. If we're going to come out of this, we're going to come out of it with these players.

"Even though we're playing hard, and at a feverish pitch, we're not playing with composure. We're playing too nervy, too tight, too tense. There's no Zen in our game," he said.

"Going from a team that had lots of finishers last year, we've become a team that's not finishing well at all."

And finishing strongly is exactly what UMass had to do — individually in its goal–scoring ways, and overall in the final four matches of its schedule.

Soccer postseason is clouded by loss

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

On one side of the field, a sea of green jerseys could be seen huddled together in celebration. On the other side, a scattering of white jerseys were spread across the field, in anything but a celebration.

The different displays of emotion shown on the field made evident just how important this game was. Dartmouth's 1–0 win over Massachusetts in women's soccer action yesterday at Garber Field made the Northeast regional race even more unclear.

"I think the [regional] picture is so clouded right now, it's not funny," Dartmouth Coach Steve Swanson said.

Cloudy indeed.

To receive an automatic bid to the NCAAs, a team must finish in the top four of its region. The top four teams in the Northeast region before yesterday's game were Connecticut, Hartford, UMass and Dartmouth.

Now it's anybody's guess as to who the top four will be. Not only does yesterday's game play a big part, but so does the fact that Hartford, the No. 1 team in the region last week, lost to No. 7 Cornell, 2–0.

"Any kind of loss for a team who beat us is good," UMass junior forward Nicole Roberts said of Hartford's setback that made the regional race tighter.

For Dartmouth, its chances of receiving an automatic bid are now obviously increased. With the loss, the Minutewomen must travel to Connecticut needing a win if they have any hopes of finishing in the top four in the region.

"This a terrible loss for us," UMass Coach Jim Rudy said in regard to regional standings. "Fortunately, we have another game to make it up."

"Basically what just happened is now we have to beat UConn on the road," UMass freshman defender Erica Iverson said. "And playing on the road is always harder than playing at home."

"It's a definite must–win situation," Roberts said. "We're both going to be fighting for a seed."

"We just put ourselves in a tight position," UMass senior defender Heidi Kocher said. "We have to win every other game in our region now to lock up a NCAA bid."

If the season were to end today, UConn, Hartford, Dartmouth and UMass would be heading to the NCAAs. Any chances of UMass hosting the regional finals as it did last year are virtually gone. In fact, UMass Coach Jim Rudy knows even participating in the NCAAs is not a definite lock.

"Right now we have nothing to show in this

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 6

Defense key to hockey game plan in UMass' first Hockey East season

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

The backbone of every good hockey team is a strong defense, especially when you are speaking of teams that compete in Hockey East.

UMass HOCKEY Season Preview

For the University of Massachusetts hockey team, defense will be critical in its initial year in the conference. With UMass entering its first year in Hockey East as unquestioned underdogs, the defense will be under constant pressure.

"The defensemen have very good skill and size, they just need to learn. They are eventually going to be a very good defense," UMass Coach Joe Mallen said.

For example, take Boston University, last season's runner– up for the National Championship. In the pre–season Hockey East polls, the Terriers had both of the first–team defensemen in Rich Brennan and Kaj Linna. BU is the unanimous pre–season favorite, thanks to its strong defensive foundation.

With the lack of scoring a potential problem for UMass, the Minutemen will have to pay special attention to things on the defensive end.

"We aren't going to play with five guys in front of the net, but we do look for players who can play both ends of the ice," Mallen said.

The defensive corps will once again be led by Captain Jaynen Rissling. The 6–foot, 185–pound sophomore from Edmonton, Alberta, again will provide leadership for a young backline.

Last season Rissling led all Minuteman defensemen with 22 points on five goals and 15 assists. His two–way skill will again be crucial on the power–play and penalty killing units.

"Our defense is working real well. The newcomers are fitting in real well complementing myself, Alger and Giusto," Rissling said. "We are definitely more mature and intense this year in training camp."

Rich Alger and Tony Giusto will also be key components on the blue line. Alger combines a steady influence with a big slap shot, racking up a plus–17 rating.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Rich Alger and the rest of the Minuteman defense will have to have a great season for the team to be successful in Hockey East.

Giusto (6–2, 195 lbs.) is the big intimidating force in front of the net, leading the squad with a plus–34 rating. The two sophomores also chipped in offensively, with Giusto recording 17 points in 29 games and Alger totaling 11 points in 27 games.

Three newcomers should figure prominently in their freshmen seasons. Tom O'Connor, Mike Gaffney, and Brad Norton all will be thrown right into the frying pan, learning as the season goes along.

"We will try to pair the freshmen with a returner from last year," Mallen said. "The idea of having two freshmen defensemen on the ice at the same time in Hockey East is something we want to avoid."

O'Connor, a Springfield native, was a fourth round draft pick of the Pittsburgh Penguins in the 1994 NHL draft. He has the size (6–2, 205 lbs.) and offensive skills to make a real impact on the defense. O'Connor came to UMass after scholarship confusion surrounded the Boston College program.

"We're going be inexperienced, but we'll learn from our mistakes. We feel a little bit of pressure, but it's all the same on the ice," O'Connor said. "We don't want to be in last place. We're aiming at the middle–of–the–pack."

Gaffney, who was drafted in the sixth round by the Ottawa Senators, is another solid defenseman at 6–1, 205 lbs. Norton, whose older brother is Jeff Norton of the San Jose Sharks, checks in at 6–5, 235 lbs. Norton figures to be the physical presence of the unit.

"The adjustment has been tough. Guys are so much bigger and faster at this level. I have to get ready and rise up to it," Gaffney said.

Tiger Holland is another defenseman who figures to see ice time. Holland, a product of Catholic Memorial High School, is a mobile defensemen who was second on the squad with a plus–27 rating.

Turn to ICE HOCKEY, page 6

Men's soccer faces Dartmouth

By Ted Kottler
Collegian Staff

In any sport, 6–0 would not be called a close score, save perhaps football. In soccer, it represents an absolute drubbing. That is what was given to the University of Massachusetts by Dartmouth last season on Garber Field.

Today at 3:30 p.m. the Minutemen face off with the Big Green in Hanover, N.H., with nothing but revenge on their minds. Last year's setback was UMass' only loss in its last eight games, but Dartmouth (4–3–1, 2–1 Ivy League) has long dominated this series, holding a 21–3–3 advantage.

"We're right behind them," UMass striker Dave Siljanovski said of the clubs' New England rankings (Dartmouth fifth, UMass sixth). "Last year was embarrassing. But we're a much better team this time."

Sam Koch's squad is much more sound defensively, to be sure. Through the first 13 matches of 1993, UMass surrendered 25 goals and won only three times. Now 8–4–1 (4–1 in Atlantic 10), the senior goalkeeping tandem of Mark Wolf and Eric Gruber has only failed to save 12 shots. Gruber earned A–10 Player of the Week honors for blanking Providence and Maine, but gave all the credit to the backs.

"It was made easy by the defense," Gruber said. "It's more of a defensive award."

Dartmouth's defense, backed by senior keeper Brian Wiese (who has played every minute of the Big Green's eight contests), is competent as well, having yielded but 16 scores. But its offense is languishing, with only 16 goals and three in its last five games, the past two of which were shutouts.

Part of the problem has been Dartmouth's performance outside the Ivy League. While first–year coach Fran O'Leary scheduled no non–league cupcakes (Virginia, New Hampshire, Connecticut on Nov. 4), the Big Green did most of its damage in its three league games. Junior midfielder Hunter Paschall, Dartmouth's leading scorer (4–1–9), has not recorded a goal against a non–league opponent. Nor has Chris Mitchell, who leads all active Dartmouth players with 16 career goals.

UMass would be wise to mark junior John Bosacco, a suddenly productive defender. He did not open his goal account until this season, in which he has struck on three occasions. The Minutemen will have more to worry about if junior forward David Moran, who has missed three matches, brings his 11 career tallies to the pitch.

At the conclusion of yesterday's practice, it was uncertain who will tend the Minuteman net today. Mark Wolf, who was rapidly assembling a career year before an injury at George Washington Oct. 9, practiced and appeared able to play. But Gruber is on a roll, sparking UMass to its biggest regional win, 1–0 over Maine last Saturday.

"We want to crack the top three in New England," Siljanovski said. "We feel we deserve it. With a win over Dartmouth we'd be on our way."

COLLEGIAN FILE

Men's soccer hopes to win their third straight game as they take on the Big Green of Dartmouth.

Cabrals shine on defense for UMass

Junior fraternal twins find niche in volleyball, field hockey

By Brian Perillo
and Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Fraternal and identical.

Beth and Andrea Cabral may be fraternal twins, but in their respective sports, their mentality is identical.

While most players look for the spotlight and glory that comes with being a scorer, the two juniors have found their niche playing defense.

Beth is one of only two defensive specialists on the University of Massachusetts volleyball team. When Coach Bonnie Kenny needs steady serving and dependable digging, Beth Cabral is the one she turns to.

"I've always liked defense. To stop somebody else feels really good," Beth said. "I like frustrating the other players."

Strong defense is a tradition in UMass field hockey. The success that the program has enjoyed has always been built around it. According to Coach Megan Donnelly, Andrea fits right into that mold.

"Andrea is a very proud defender. She's very much in the line of UMass backs," Donnelly said. "She is very tough and never gives up. She understands her contribution to the team, doesn't want to let anyone down, and has a very high standard for herself. She's a great worker."

Andrea actually enjoys frustrating her opponents.

"They'll have a game plan and you're ruining it," she said. "I just like to look at them and see that they're getting mad, and give them a little smile every now and then. It takes a strong mentality to not let them in. It's like you own something and nobody is coming near it."

Growing up, Ray and Elaine Cabral always encouraged their daughters' athletics.

"They started as two of five girls in a boys' basketball league," said Ray Cabral, who even served as their coach on occasion. "They've always been able to do just about anything."

Through junior high school, both sisters played field hockey, basketball and softball, but despite what everyone seemed to expect, there was very little rivalry between them.

"I don't think we [act as rivals] with each other," Beth said. "Other people do it to us. Everyone wants to know who gets better grades, who's better at softball, who's better at basketball. Every sport it was, 'who's better?'"

In high school, Andrea stuck with field hockey while Beth decided to try her hand at volleyball. Beth also played hoop and softball. Andrea joined her sister on the basketball court and tried softball for two seasons before

Turn to CABRALS, page 6

Three way race for starting goalie spot

Sophomores goalies Rich Moriarty (left), David Kilduff, and freshman Brian Regan are in a battle for the starting job for UMass hockey (Story, page 12).

Women making headlines

Check out a new weekly feature on women playing an active role in national and international news, (Feature box, page 3).

Film inspires 'Pulp' Friction

Our two film critics take aim at Quentin Tarantino's Pulp Fiction. One loved it and the other...well, you've got to read it (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast

Occasional showers today with a high near 60. Chance of rain, 80 percent. Tonight will be cloudy with scattered showers, low near 50. Showers continue through weekend.

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 50	HIGH: 60 LOW: 50	HIGH: 60 LOW: 40

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 27 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Thursday, October 20, 1994

Academic turmoil brings team attention

Newspaper article triggers debate over athletes' academic rights, mandates

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

The Boston Globe reported yesterday what one of its assistant editors described as academic "double standards" for players of the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team — four of whom the Globe said are on academic probation.

The Globe cited student transcripts as a source to disclose the students' grades for the past two semesters and their cumulative grade point averages.

According to the Globe, four players are on academic probation because their averages fell below the 2.0 standard, and three other members have received warnings.

The University basketball office, Coach John Calipari and the players all refused comment.

University officials said the basketball players are subject to the same academic regulations as all other University students.

"These guys are clearly public figures," said Ben Bradlee Jr., assistant editor involved in the investigative projects at the Globe. "They shouldn't be able to break policy."

University President Michael K. Hooker said he will be meeting with Chancellor David K. Scott, Athletic Director Bob Marcum and Calipari to discuss the academic standings of the team.

COURTESY MEDIA DAY

Men's Basketball Coach John Calipari

Scott said all student-athletes meet the eligibility requirements of the University and the NCAA.

The Registrar's Office refused to comment on how the Globe received the transcripts.

"You theoretically can't get someone else's transcript," said Sandy Harris-Graves, assistant supervisor for graduate records. "But you could authorize another person in writing."

According to the undergraduate rights and responsibilities handbook, The Family Rights and Privacy Act

Turn to ACADEMICS, page 2

Students' opinions vary on academic standards

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Students have different opinions on the Boston Globe's story on the University of Massachusetts men's basketball players' grade point averages in yesterday's paper. It has stimulated discussion on students' rights to privacy.

In its front-page article, the Globe reported that several basketball players are on academic probation. The article listed the students' names, grades, the classes they have failed and their cumulative GPA as of last semester.

The article provided a graphic in which six players' grades were listed from both semesters last year, citing anonymous sources and the students' transcripts as the source of information.

"As long as you're still enrolled at the University, you can play," Paul Silveria, a junior environmental science major, said.

Silveria, who used to play on the UMass Lacrosse team, said that he had gone on academic probation while still playing, and no one ever said a word about it to him.

The Daily Hampshire Gazette, based in Northampton, also ran a front-page article yesterday as well using all of the Globe's information and reporting.

"It's not fair to print anyone's GPA in the newspaper like that. Those are private matters and they are still students here; they should still have their personal rights," Noah Rosenbaum, a senior legal studies major, said.

The University is not allowed to release information on student records without the student's written consent, according to the University Undergraduate Rights and Responsibilities handbook.

Turn to STUDENTS' REACTION, page 3

Figueroa named as inter–Senate conflict subsides

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

Despite the recent internal conflict within the Undergraduate Student Senate which lead to tabled legislation, former senator and chair of the finance committee, Diego Figueroa, was finally voted to the judiciary last night.

The second Senate meeting of the year confirmed the remaining candidates Mirran Raphaely, president of the Student Government Association (SGA), appointed to the Senate judiciary. The Senate approved both Kathy Keelan and Figueroa, whose positions on the judiciary have to be confirmed by the Senate

What it could not avoid was the controversy caused by the events of the first meeting revolving around senator Charles Lenchner and Figueroa.

At the first senate meeting, the motion to confirm Figueroa as a judiciary was met by an unfriendly motion. Lenchner presented a motion to strike Figueroa from the list of appointees, and it went to debate in front of the Senate.

Lenchner presented two reasons to the Senate as to why Figueroa's integrity should be questioned and the senator's name be eliminated from the appointee list.

The first incident Figueroa cited, involved the final Senate meeting of last year where the budgets for Registered Student Organizations (RSO) and Agencies on campus were reviewed and voted upon.

Lenchner contests that after the Senate completed the RSO budgets, and the budgets for the Agencies were tabled, Figueroa intentionally sabotaged a motion that was presented by the Senate.

"I presented a motion that dealt with allocating money for a bus trip to Boston to protest a Neo–Nazi demonstration and the Senate," Lenchner said. "The Senate was in the process of recommending that it be brought to a vote, when (Figueroa) walked out, and stopped the motion."

"A lot of senators had already left, and then Figueroa walked out leaving his coat and bag in the meeting," Lenchner said. "Then Pavesi called quorum."

The members of Senate remaining did not meet the number of senators constitutionally needed to hold the meeting, and the motion was stopped. Both Figueroa and Pavesi denied involvement in the alleged conspiracy.

"I had nothing to do with the motion failing, it had nothing to do with my conservative ideological beliefs," Figueroa said. "Lenchner wants to make this into a political issue."

The real reason Lenchner made these accusations was because he does not want a conservative on the judiciary, said Figueroa.

"I am not against the Radical Student Union [now the Alliance for Student Power (ASP)], in fact I helped them when they came to the finance committee looking for money to publish their newspaper the Liberator."

"In the last week I have been accused of being a Nazi and a racist," Figueroa said. "This is ridiculous. I am a Black Puerto Rican, I'm no Nazi."

The second accusation Lenchner made, involved the illegal ballots which were found during the SGA election last semester.

The illegal ballots were in favor of Joe Vozza, former candidate for president, and Figueroa, former candidate student trustee.

The ballots were eliminated, and the results of the election were accepted, according to Christine Lopes, former election co-coordinator.

"Cam Tewksbury, who was also election coordinator at the time, and I met with the candidates, and we agreed that none of the candidates were responsible and none of the students working on the campaigns were responsible," Lopes said.

Lenchner conceded at last night's meeting that he had no substantial proof of the accusations and said that he would not vote against Figueroa as a judiciary, but he would abstain.

The Senate took into account both Lenchner and Figueroa's arguments, after a lengthy debate, and finally agreed to confirm Figueroa as a judiciary.

Pavesi, who was a guest at the Senate meeting, feels that the internal conflict within the Senate is "ridiculous" and simply said that those arguing should "get over it."

"I am glad to see we have a questioning Senate," Raphaely said. "It is a credit to the democratic process."

MOVE program is not accessible to all offenders

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

Editor's note: This is the fourth in a four-part series on domestic violence, and services available to men.

AMHERST — The Men Overcoming Violence Program (MOVE) from the Men's Resource Center (MRC) of Western Massachusetts is designed to fight domestic violence, but struggles as it receives no state funding.

The Department of Public Health certified MOVE program is a 24-week workshop used by men who have abused women or, in some instances children.

According to Steve Botkin, co-director for the MRC, 30 percent of the men that go through the program come of their own accord, and 70 percent are mandated by the Hampshire and Ware district courts.

Approximately 120 people are interviewed a year, and roughly half actually go through the entire 24-week program.

According to Botkin, the biggest reason people do not complete the program is because of financial issues.

The program is $30 per weekly session, which amounts to $750 for the entire program.

"It's one of the biggest problems we face," said Botkin. "A lot of the people who come through the courts are people who are in financial need, and can't afford the program."

Botkin said there are two slots per session which offer a $15 fee, but those fill up quickly.

The MRC tries to fund the program and its organization as a whole through membership fees, contributions and fund raisers.

Currently funds are not enough to make ends

Turn to MRC, page 3

Sports industry is taking away the fun

Former Celtic says money has replaced the love of the games

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

SPRINGFIELD — Basketball Hall of Famer Bill Walton said the money floating around in sports is crippling the industry and turning away many fans.

Walton said when he was a player 20 years ago athletes earned about five times as much as the average citizen — compared to today where athletes are making 50 or 60 times more than the general public.

"Today's sports' society has created an atmosphere where few people have a lot, and most have a little," Walton said. "It kills the joy, spirit and entertainment for the fans."

Walton spoke Tuesday on "Ethics and Sports Today" at Symphony Hall in Springfield as the third free lecture in a series of public forums.

Walton is widely known for his college basketball career for the UCLA Bruins. He was an All-American in each of his three years, leading the Bruins to three NCAA championships.

Walton went on to a storied career in the NBA, playing on two championship teams. He was named Most Valuable Player for the 1977 season, leading the Portland Trail Blazers to the championship.

The 6'11" center suffered through numerous injuries, but resurrected his career as part of the Boston Celtics' championship team in 1986.

In 1993 Walton was inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame which is located in Springfield.

Sports fans continue to be turned off by labor strikes in professional baseball and hockey, according to Walton.

COURTESY PEACHBASKET CLASSIC STARTER TIPOFF

Basketball Hall of Famer Bill Walton

Walton said money is the driving force of athletes — having replaced the love of simply playing the game.

The majority of today's athletes have had everything come easy to them, according to Walton. Being great athletes, they never had to learn the lessons of the average youth.

"Some of these guys today say 'If you don't pay me more I won't play' — that's a bunch of crap," said Walton. "Some of these guys couldn't get a job doing anything else."

All of the blame cannot be placed on today's athletes. Walton said he blames the owners for thinking all ills of sports can be cured by giving more money to the players.

"The owners have to stop the money machine," Walton said.

He laughed at the suggestion of stars such as Charles Barkley stating they were not role models, and cited a lack of role models throughout sports today.

"Everyone is a role model, we all have responsibilities, from the President down to a homeless man," Walton said. "Don't ever pass up an opportunity to be a role model and make a difference in someone else's life."

A big issue in sports ethics today is the idea of student–athletes getting paid while attending school, according to Walton.

"Paying students would be the biggest mistake to make," Walton said. "A college education is the most valued possession you could ever have."

The lecture was sponsored by the Peachbasket Classic Starter Tipoff game. The University of Massachusetts will be playing in this year's Tipoff basketball classic, against defending national champion Arkansas on November 25.

Support group helps students grieve

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

Death can come in many ways and at anytime. Sometimes it can come quickly and without warning, or it can come slowly, in the form of cancer.

Regardless, death always leaves friends and family behind to deal with the loss of a loved one. When a person close to you dies often there is the need to grieve and be consoled. The question is who to turn to.

Many students at the University of Massachusetts have faced this unpleasant reality, many of whom chose to keep their pain to themselves, because there does not seem to be anyone who can help, according to Ieihro Heiko, a senior in the philosophy department.

Heiko was a sophomore when he received news that his father was diagnosed with cancer. Heiko tried to balance school with taking care of his dying father, but the situation became difficult when his grades slipped, and he found little help on this campus. In July, Heiko's father died and he was forced to deal with the loss.

A year later, Heiko has recovered from the loss of his father, but realizes that there are many students who face the same pain he endures, without outside help. Heiko is trying to change this by starting a grievance support group for students at UMass.

The support group, which is sponsored by Gareth Matthews, a professor in the philosophy department, has had two meetings to date, and regularly gathers on Thursday nights. Everything is confidential and there is no obligation, according to Heiko.

"We have had five or six students show up at the meeting regularly, and I was really happy with how the last meeting turned out," Heiko said. "Students have even expressed gratefulness for offering help and support."

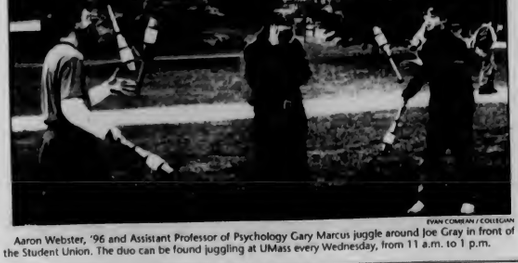
Heiko is working with local student, Brit Gufstason on organizing the grievance support group and the weekly meetings. They are working together to offer a supportive atmosphere on campus to help students cope with the loss of a loved one.

"There are a lot of good things happening on campus, in terms of different types of support programs offered to students," Heiko said. "Unfortunately, students just don't know about them because they are not getting the publicity."

With the help and support of faculty including Mary Anne Bright, associate professor in the School of nursing, and Albey Reiner, associate professor in the microbiology department, Heiko hopes the grievance support group will become an institutionalized program at UMass and last long after he has left.

The grievance support group will hold its third meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in room 902 of the Campus Center. Students seeking support are encouraged to attend.

In the line of fire



EVAN COMRAN / COLLEGIAN

Aaron Webster, '96 and Assistant Professor of Psychology Gary Marcus juggle around Joe Gray in front of the Student Union. The duo can be found juggling at UMass every Wednesday, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Oct. 20

Meeting — Grief Survival Group for those who have suffered loss. Campus Center, UMass, 7 p.m.

Multi-Arts — Arts Council, ARTeVENTives at the maze, UMass, located at the stadium stop of the PVTA Campus Shuttle.

Meeting — Bisexual Rap Group, 4th floor lounge, Mary Lyon House, Northeast, UMass, 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Film — Fantastic Cinema: Legends, Myths, Adventures, Herter Hall 227, UMass, free, 7:30 p.m.

Symposium — "The O.J. Simpson Case: A Deconstruction of Legal and Media Issues," Main Lecture Hall, HC, 7:30 p.m.

Assembly — Massachusetts Society of Professors General Assembly, Jim Braude will be speaking. Student Union Ballroom, UMass, 4 p.m.

Friday, Oct. 21

Lecture — Visiting Lecturer Series in Geology, Morrill Science Center room 131, UMass, 3:30 p.m.

Lecture — "Gendered Social Knowledge: Domestic Discourse, Jane Addams and the Possibilities of Social Science," Neilson Library Browsing Room, Smith College, 4:15 p.m.

Film — Nazarin, Wright Hall auditorium, Smith College, free, show times: 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Community — Rub Shoulders with Royalty — The Shabbat Queen is here, Chabad House, 7 p.m.

Film — Treasure of the Sierra Madre, Campus Center Theater, Amherst College, $1.75, show times: 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Dance — Shapiro and Smith Dance Company, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m., ticket information: 545-2511.

Theater — The Swan, Fayerweather Studio, Amherst, free, 8 p.m.

Movie — The Rocky Horror Picture Show, UMass Campus Center Auditorium, show times: 7 p.m., 9 p.m. and 11 p.m.

Meeting — The Alliance Christian Fellowship, Dave Crosby will be speaking on the topic of Godly character, Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 22

Music — Swing and ballroom dance with "Swingtime," Florence Community Center, Pine Street, 8:30 p.m., $7 admission.

Music — Benefit for Amherst's Open Pantry, Butterfield Basement, 8 p.m., $3 and two cans of food. Bands: Chisel, Radio To Saturn, Van Pelt, Showcase Showdown and The Gutters.

Volunteers — Make-a-difference day to help non-profit agencies across Hampshire County, information: 545-3368.

Music — Juilliard String Quartet, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m.

Theater — Ladies on the Couch, Hampden Theater, UMass, 8 p.m., information: 545-4824.

Film — Brigadoon, Gamble Auditorium, MHC, show times: 7 p.m. and 9 p.m., $2.

Lecture — "How We Fixed the Hubble Space Telescope," Mead, Stirn Auditorium, Amherst College, free, 3 p.m.

Sunday, Oct. 23

Film — Adam's Rib, Smith College, free, showtimes: 2 p.m. and 4 p.m.

Music — HC Chorus performs Bach Cantatas 140 and 79, Grace Church, Amherst Town Common, free, 3 p.m.

Reading — Gallery of Readers, Neilson Library Browsing Room, Smith College, 4 p.m.

Music — Dave Alvin and the Guilty Men, Campus Center Frontroom, Amherst College, 8 p.m.

Music — Massachusetts Chamber Players and Sussman, Bezanson Recital Hall, UMass, 8 p.m., information: 545-2511.

Special Event — Inauguration of Tom Gerety, Frost Library Steps, Amherst College, noon.

■ academics

continued from page 1

states that the University cannot permit access to a student's educational records. If this amendment is broken, the University could be cut from federal funding.

Steven Satell, a source quoted in the Globe who was identified as a former tutor for the basketball players, was unavailable for comment.

Satell told the Globe "the pressures of big-time basketball at UMass have gradually pushed academics aside."

Satell formerly worked with a UMass group, Bridging Worlds, which helps troubled high school students in Springfield and formerly had an office in the New Africa House.

The Collegian went to where his office formerly was located and was told he no longer works in the department.

The phone number listed with the student directory for Satell was incorrect. His address listed in the student phone book was also incorrect, and he is not listed in the Amherst directory services.

"There was a general feeling that it was unfortunate that private information was reported," said University Spokeswoman Karin Sherbin.

The Collegian attempted to find the number of students throughout the University who are currently on academic probation, but Sherbin said those figures were not yet available.

The Northampton Center For the Arts and John Peters Present

THE SAMPLES

TUES., NOV. 8 - 7:30 PM
$14.50 Advance General Admission
John M. Greene Hall, Smith College, Northampton

Advance tickets available at The Northampton Box Office, Strawberries Record Stores, For The Record in Amherst, About Music in Greenfield, and at Tix Unlimited in the U. Mass Campus Center. To charge by phone call 586-8686 or 1(800) THE-TICK

Mt. Holyoke College and John Peters Present

ANI DIFRANCO

THURS., NOV. 3 - 8 PM
$12.00 Advance
General Admission
Chapin Hall,
Mt. Holyoke College
S. Hadley, MA

Advance tickets available at The Northampton Box Office, Strawberries Record Stores, For The Record in Amherst, About Music in Greenfield, and at Tix Unlimited in the U. Mass Campus Center. To charge by phone call 586-8686 or 1(800) THE-TICK

HALLOWEEN PARTY
Oct. 29, 9pm - 1am
At Alley Oops (Located in Northampton Bowl)
$3 Cover Charge
COSTUME CONTEST • FIRST PLACE $100
Music by Mike "The Mummy" Perkins
Northampton Bowl
525 Pleasant St. • Northampton • 584-4830
(must be 21yrs or older - Proper I.D. required)

THE SPOKE
The Spoke Amherst, Mass
A DRINKERY TO MEET, RELAX AND ENJOY
Beer of the Month
16 OZ BUD BOTTLES
$2.00
Drink of the Month
JIM BEAM & COKE
$1.75
35 E. PLEASANT STREET

"TO BE EFFECTIVE, LEGAL EDUCATION MUST BE A SHARED ENTERPRISE."
Stephanie W. Willen
Assistant Dean and Director of Admissions
A.B., Mount Holyoke College, 1985
Dean Willen served Western New England College School of Law as assistant director of admissions before her current appointment. A graduate of Mount Holyoke College, she brings to her position strong management skills and significant human resources experience. Dean Willen serves on the Services and Programs Committe of the Law School Admission Council; this work includes development of programs designed to increase diversity in the Law School student population.
Meet with Dean Willen to learn more about our Law School, where faculty and students work together toward a common goal.
Graduate School Fair, Wednesday, Oct. 26
Campus Center Auditorium, 10 am - 3 pm
We invite applications from all persons regardless of race, gender, sexual orientation, or handicap.
SCHOOL OF LAW
WESTERN NEW ENGLAND COLLEGE
1215 Wilbraham Road Springfield, MA 01119-2689 413-782-1406

Come Clean With Us!!
Speedwash
11 Pray St. Amherst • 549-1665
Open 24 Hours
Drop-off service available:
Mon. & Tues. 2 p.m. - 10 p.m.
Wed., Thurs. & Fri. 2 p.m. - 10 p.m.
Sat. 10 a.m. - 6 p.m.
South Towne Commons Laundromat
479 West St. South Amherst
Open 7 days/week, 7 a.m. - 10 p.m.
Triple Load Washers

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
ICEHOUSE 12pk BOTTLES $6.99
FOSTERS LAGER 12pk BOTTLES $7.99
ROLLING ROCK BOCK $3.99/six
ELK MOUNTAIN Amber Ale $4.99/six
NANTUCKET ISLAND AMBER $5.49/six
POLAND SPRING Gen 5lt $5.99
POPOV VODKA 750ml $4.99
BACARDI LIGHT & DARK 750ml $7.99
SOUTHERN COMFORT 750ml $6.99
HOT DAM 750ml $6.69
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt.9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt.9E
VISA - MASTERCARD - DISCOVER Accepted

Available at: Store 24, Christy's, GNC, Star Market and Participating Sports Specialty Retailers

FUEL FOR OPTIMUM PERFORMANCE
Low-fat Sustained Energy
Suggested Retail: $1.69
Fat: 2.5 grams
Protein: 10 grams
Carbohydrates: 42 grams
In Chocolate, Malt-Nut, Wild Berry and Apple-Cinnamon flavors.
For a 12-page Guide to Nutrition and Energy, call 800-444-5156.
PowerBar

Celebration to mark the return of the Maze

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

A plentiful bounty of fresh apple cider and crisp apples will be enjoyed today during the re-opening celebration of the University of Massachusetts meadow Maze.

Bulb planting, resowing wildflower seeds and musical performances will all be a part of today's artEventives celebration dedicated to the restoration of the Maze. ArtEventives programs are supported by the Arts Council and present performances at public sites and courtyards.

Presently located at the stadium stop of the Southbound PVTA, the maze has been a popular public art site enjoyed by University students and the general public since its original creation in 1978.

With its most recent closing in 1993, members of the Physical Plant and the Arts Council have been involved in a year-long restoration program of the art site.

"We had closed it for a year because it was unsafe," said program coordinator of the Arts Council, Marlene Housner.

Over the past summer, members of the Physical Plant kept busy working on the installation of a new link chain structure, wood floors, benches and stone boulders for the maze.

Members of the Arts Council and student volunteers worked to redo the landscape in the areas surrounding the site and plant wild flower seeds.

Housner said tomorrow's bulb planting activities will allow students to enhance the appearance of the public art site.

Throughout the afternoon, student volunteers will have the opportunity to plant over 400 bulbs and resow wild flower seeds planted earlier in the year by members of the Arts Council.

"We want students to be involved in the bulb planting," Housner said.

Beginning at 3:30 p.m., a musical collaboration entitled, "Flutes on the Meadow," will feature flutist Gordon Korstange and drummer Rajesh Ranganathan of the group Kirtana; Barney McElhone of the Bards playing Irish tin whistle; and Hawk, from the Nipmuc nation, playing a selection of Native American flutes.

At 5 p.m., the revealing of a newly installed, silk-screened sign designed by UMass graduate student Lori Kissinger and faculty member Mike Davidson of the UMass department of landscape architecture and regional planning will take place.

"The sign will serve as a directory of the maze and describe what kind of bulbs are planted," project assistant Neil O'Brien said.

Clinton plans to head to Middle East for peace talks

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton condemned the bombing in Tel Aviv on Wednesday as "an outrage against the conscience of the world" and held to his plan to go to the Middle East next week to promote peace between Israel and the Arabs.

He urged other nations to deny haven and support for those responsible for the worst attack the city has sustained in nearly 20 years. In Damascus, U.S. Ambassador Christopher Ross urged Syrian foreign ministry officials to use their influence in militant circles.

"We are casting a wide net, appealing to friends and foes alike," said a senior State Department official of the renewed U.S. campaign to deprive terrorist groups of sanctuary and unhampered travel between countries.

Department officials said Hamas, a fundamentalist group funded mostly by Iran, apparently was responsible for the bombing that killed 22 people and wounded 48 on a main Tel Aviv thoroughfare. "It must be made plain that this kind of incident is not cost-free for Hamas," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said as he added his denunciation of "these really hideous acts against civilians."

Iran and Syria are among seven countries the State Department has identified as supporters of terrorism. "You can conclude that we have regular and direct conversations with the government of Syria on the subject," Michael McCurry, the department spokesman, said.

However, other U.S. officials said Syria was not being singled out. Hamas has support throughout the region and "we are asking for the help of government leaders everywhere."

Israel's ambassador, Itamar Rabinovich, said Hamas "is not a Syria-oriented outfit."

"Iran is the address," Rabinovich said at a news conference. Sudan also backed the group in the past, but the support is tapering off, the ambassador said.

At the same time, he called on the Palestinian authority in Gaza to dismantle Hamas' structure there and said Arabs were realizing Hamas was as much a threat to them as to Israelis.

Clinton is weighing a visit to Damascus as part of his trip. His main purpose would be to encourage President Hafez Assad to come to terms with Israel. When they met in January in Geneva, Switzerland, the Syrian leader declared peace was a "strategic option," but the two sides are in disagreement on territory, security and peace terms.

Clinton, in a written statement, said the bombing was "aimed at destroying the hopes of the Palestinian people as surely as it is directed at the people of Israel."

He called on world leaders to condemn the attack and "ensure that there is no haven or support for those responsible."

"Together we will ensure that the promise of peace for which we have worked so long is realized," Clinton said.

■ students' reaction

continued from page 1

"My guess is that the athletes did not release that information and that someone has taken information against federal law," said Glenn Wong, chair of the sports management department and former interim athletic director.

The Globe may not have violated the law in terms of producing the information, but there are some ethical and moral questions involved in their use of it, Wong said.

"I understand that they wanted to report it, but they didn't have to scandalize it, like a tabloid," Justin Beatty, a sophomore education major, said.

"It is a matter of respect for people and their grades, and an issue that should be taken up with the coach and the school," Dan Wilkes, a junior Hotel Restaurant and Travel Administration major, said.

The graduation rate of student-athletes has improved tremendously in the past five years, and the University is committed to increasing those rates, University President Michael Hooker said in a press release.

■ MRC

continued from page 1

meet for the MOVE program, leaving some men untreated. According to Botkin, state funding is the only answer to keep the program going.

Tom Mitchell, legislative aid for Sen. Stan Rosenberg (D-Hampshire and Franklin counties), said that Rosenberg supported funding batterer treatment programs, but could not explain why lobbying was unsuccessful.

"There is no funding for these things, and there should be," said Eugene Sheehan, acting chief probation officer for Hampshire County District Court.

"The state provides funding for drinking and driving programs," Sheehan said. "If you can't pay for it, the state helps out."

Botkin said he could not understand how the state uses the MOVE program as a court mandate so heavily, but does not receive the funding to service all the people that enter the program.

WOMEN making WAVES

Compiled By Colleen Shanahan

Election disrupts family life

The Associated Press reported that first lady Susana Higuchi of Peru should be allowed to run for president against her husband. Higuchi appealed a law that permits the president's immediate family members from running for national office. Higuchi has moved out of the palace and said she intended to challenge her husband, Alberto Fujimoro, for his job.

Trick or tacky

A battered women and children's shelter issued a "challenge" to the public to boycott Halloween costumes depicting O.J. Simpson or Nicole Simpson. Women's blond wigs have become hot sellers to women who want to dress up as Nicole Simpson.

Fashion statements speak out

Top models and actresses are sporting the "Fashion Targets Breast Cancer" T-shirts. Helen Hunt will be wearing the shirt on the Oct. 27 "Mad About You," and the cast of General Hospital will wear the blue and white target-design T-shirts on Oct. 21 and 25. Some proceeds go to the Nina Hyde Center for Breast Cancer Research at Georgetown University Medical Center in Washington, D.C.

A lost perspective leads to lies

A Claremont woman must pay a $50 fine and write a public apology to the men she falsely accused of sexually assaulting her. Brenda Hersey, 28, concocted the story that men posing as police officers sexually assaulted her. Hersey claims she lied because she did not want to admit to her boyfriend that she was late because she got lost driving.

Clark conjures new look

Prosecutor Marcia Clark has a $180 new look. The prosecuting attorney in the O.J. Simpson case recently had her hair cut by Allen Edwards, owner of seven California salons. Edwards said, "I think she decided she needed to be looking at herself with an eye to fashion, she thought, 'I'm going to be on TV every day.' She came off cutsier off camera. Not uptight. She's very feminine."

She said...

"I think this trend of looking like a little girl who hasn't developed yet and who is skin and bones isn't natural, except for the rare few who are born that way."
— Penelope Ann Miller, actress

Quotes and stories compiled from various newspapers and magazine articles.

Mike's Westview
Thursday Night is
LITE ICE NIGHT
$1.50 bottle
Free Appetizers starting at 9:00 pm
Free Hats and T-Shirts
Don't forget our
ALL YOU CAN EAT
Friday Night Buffet
starts at 6:00 for $1.00

PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Open 7 Days a week
20% OFF MEALS FRI. AND SAT. EVENING WITH COMEDY SHOW with this ad 北京園
Comedy Shows
Friday and Saturday
at 8:30 p.m. with dinner
Monday - Thursday
Dinner Buffet $5.99
Sunday Brunch $6.99
VISA/MASTERCARD FREE PARKING ON RT. 9 IN HADLEY 586-1202

Sugarloaf Estates
Why live in an old, unkept apartment, just because you want to live off campus?
has newly renovated, two bedroom apartments that feature:
• Free heat & hot water
• New designer eat-in kitchens
• New wall to wall carpeting
• On-Site laundry facilities
• On PVTA busline
There's no camparison . . .
Modern Apartment homes for a student budget!
Call Today To See Our Model Apartment
665-3856
Rt. 47 Sunderland, MA

Marsalis, Roberts make their pianos sizzle at Maryland Hall

CAPITAL, Maryland
By KATHRYN EDWARDS
Staff Writer

REVIEW

Steam may still be rising from the keys of the Steinways played at Maryland Hall Saturday night.

Jazz pianists Ellis Marsalis and Marcus Roberts brought their unique styles to Annapolis and thoroughly delighted a healthy-sized audience.

The evening started off with solo performances by each artist. Their styles, which at times seemed worlds apart, then merged beautifully for the second half of the concert.

Mr. Marsalis — patriarch of the jazz dynasty that has produced Wynton and Branford — started off with two covers and two originals. As he played, his easygoing style and complete mastery of the instrument made it clear why he has earned so much respect from fans and colleagues alike.

While his sons' names may be more recognizable, it's clear where their talent comes from. As chairman of the jazz department at the University of New Orleans, Mr. Marsalis is molding a new generation of jazz players, and they couldn't be in better hands.

After opening with Clifford Brown's "Joy Spring" and John Lewis' "Django," Mr. Marsalis played two selections from a self-produced album, "Syndrome." Both numbers were crisp and clean, and feet in every row were tapping along with the beat.

Mr. Roberts then lit the crowd on fire with "When the Morning Comes," a selection from his newest album, "As Serenity Approaches," due in record stores any day now. He followed with several songs by jazz legend James P. Johnson — "Arkansas Blues," "Carolina Shout," "Fascination" and "Keep Off the Grass."

The crowd was dazzled by his performance of "Carolina Shout," as Mr. Roberts no doubt felt they would be. After taking a bow, he admitted, "Yep, it's very difficult, believe me. That's what you paid your money for."

A much younger performer than Mr. Marsalis and not quite as relaxed, Mr. Roberts nonetheless played flawlessly. His accomplishments were that much more extraordinary when coupled with the fact that he has been blind since the age of 4.

When the two pianists performed together on their respective pianos, it was pure magic. Following a Broadway jam session and "The Man I Love" by George Gershwin, the pair moved onto another favorite of the night, "Lime House Blues."

Like the others, the piece featured interesting power plays between the pianists. They alternated bass and treble parts, and livened things up with a bit of improvisation.

They followed with the slower, moodier "Good-Bye" by Benny Goodman, which included a somewhat classical-sounding solo by Mr. Marsalis, followed by an equally enjoyable solo by Mr. Roberts.

Unfortunately, all good things must come to an end. After songs by John Coltrane and Randy Weston, a standing ovation and one amazing encore, the concert was over. But it was apparent that the audience gladly would have listened for hours longer.

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Family
Wednesday - October 26 - Room 902
(repeated on)
Tuesday - November 29 - Room 801
6:30 - 8:30 p.m.
Murray Lincoln Campus Center,
UMass Campus
I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest . . . Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid . . . What can I do to help?
If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call
549-2671, Clinic 4 - ext. 233 or 234
UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES - UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS - AMHERST

UMass Arts Council Presents performance interventions at public art sites & courtyards
Rain or Shine ArtEventives
October 20
To celebrate the ReMaze... Maze Interventions: Reclaiming a Campus Public Art Site.
A 1994 Collaborative Project of the University Arts Council and Physical Plant
3:30 - 6:30
Beginning with the musical sounds of flutes on the meadow with Gordon Korstange and Rajesh Ranganathan, South Asian flute and drum; Barney McElhone of "The Bards" on the Irish tin whistle; and HAWK (Nipmuc), Native American Flutes.
3:30 - 6:30 "Before the First Frost" bulb planting.
Planting and resowing of wildflowers in the meadow of the Maze. Student volunteers needed for this momentous planting event – sign-up before or just be there to participate.
5:00 Dedication and appreciation of this ReMazed public art site.
All throughout this artEventives there will be ReMazing refreshments of crisp orchard apples, popped corn, and cider.
ReMazing assistance and support from: UMass Arts Council; University Physical Plant; South Asian Music & Dance Program of the Fine Arts Center; Monique Fordham (Abenaki) of WMUA's "Kita"; Department of Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning, Laura Willson (MLA '95) and Lori Kissinger (MLA '95); Mike Davidson, Stockbridge School of Agriculture; and many other gardener friends and faculty

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Emily Marino Women's Issues Editor
Andrew Ferguson Business Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Maureen Mazerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Ada Michelle Lugo Multicultural Affairs Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Kelly Spang News Editor Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

University must be responsible

Any student who is enrolled at this University is entitled to a quality education. To ignore this right is irresponsible and sends students out into the job market without the skills they need to make a living. Student athletes are often expected to forego their studies to play games.

Coaches emphasize the requirement that their students study and attend classes, but athletes often times are too busy to do this. The problem is that they are students first.

The men's basketball program has turned into a booming industry for the University in a very short time and the student athletes' concerns haven't been taken into consideration. Instead of concentrating the spotlight onto the coach, the players have been forced to live their academic careers under a veritable microscope.

The students are stuck in a bad system. In exchange for an education, they play basketball and they play it very well. No one seems very concerned with their life after college. A lucky few will make the NBA, but those who don't will be ill-prepared for the task of supporting themselves after college.

The University should be concerned with giving these players good educations instead of expecting them to bring in money and increase enrollment figures. As students at this school, it is their right to get an education. The basketball program will do the school no good if players aren't able to come back for the spring semester.

To allow players' grades to slip below the academic probation line and still not take any action shows a lack of responsibility on the part of the University. Why wasn't this looked at before the grades got to the level they are at?

What the team needs is a tutoring staff, fully trained to deal with the unique aspects of having to travel and be a student at the same time. The University shouldn't be allowed to hang these students out to dry when it comes to their academics. Above all, the players should have the same rights to an education as all other students.

Violent actions of the enemies of peace

Adam Scott Roberts

At 9 a.m. a crowded bus exploded in the heart of Israel's largest city, killing 22 and injuring 48 innocent people. The explosion happened on Dizengoff Street, Tel-Aviv's busiest street. The bombing is the third such incident since Oct. 9, when terrorists opened gunfire in a Jerusalem Cafe. Izzedine al-Quassam Brigades — the military wing of Hamas, has claimed responsibility for Wednesday morning's terrorist attack and promises more attacks. A released statement by Hamas said, "God is great. God will torment them with your hands and the hands of the faithful."

Hamas is translated into English as meaning the Islamic Resistance Movement. Their charter calls for the destruction of the State of Israel. Hamas is destroying the hopes of peace in the region for the Israeli and Palestinian people.

Yesterday's attack was in retaliation for the three Hamas militants killed last Friday in Israel's attempt to free Nashon Waxman, an Israeli soldier who was being held captive.

Yasar Arafat has condemned Hamas for the kidnapping and murder of Waxman. Arafat did call Waxman's parents and told them at that time that he would do all he could do to find their son's kidnappers.

It should not go unnoticed that Rabin and Peres have indicated that Arafat had been helpful in the whole process. Ironically, on the same day it was announced Arafat, Rabin, and Peres were receiving a shared Noble Peace Prize award for their efforts in attempts to make peace in the Middle East.

Arafat condemned Hamas for yesterday's bombing. Despite Hamas' recent attempts to hinder the peace process, Arafat says that he will go after Hamas, the kidnappers, and the terrorists involved in the Tel-Aviv bus bombing.

It is now Arafat's duty to his people and the whole peace process to condemn terrorism. Furthermore, Arafat needs to do more than condemn such actions, he must combat them. These are the key tenements in his declaration.

Nashon Waxman and the 22 other innocent victims did not deserve to die the way they did. This is why U.S. policy must stand beside Israel as it takes dramatic risks on all fronts of the peace process. The U.S. must support Israel in all of their efforts towards making peace in the region.

The events that have transpired over the last ten days tragically brings to U.S. living rooms and the American public the chaos in the region that Israel has had to face since its birth into statehood.

It is Arafat's duty as a leader and peace maker to do the tough things and not the easy things. By going after Hamas, Arafat will show the world that he is aggressively seeking to make peace and that he will take action against those that try to derail it. The United States and Israel must hold Arafat's feet to the fire and must make sure that he takes tangible, visible, and measurable steps that will be tough.

These tough actions are necessary and are the foundations in supporting and encouraging peace as a movement in the right direction of combating terrorism.

Adam Scott Roberts is a Collegian columnist.

Public displays aren't necessary

They were suckin' face in the middle of the room.

In the room encompassing these two tonsil-divers, there were approximately one hundred people. A century of spectators there to witness the two horn-dogs as they groped each other in a fit of passion.

I hate public displays of affection.

What I mean doesn't pertain to hugging a loved one, or putting an arm around someone. I don't crucify people who are affectionate. In fact, I like affectionate people. But to stand there amidst a collection of people you don't know and fondle your mate is just plain annoying. And unnecessary. And obnoxious.

I've done it before, and you have, too, at one time or another. Hell, some of you did it together, and several of you still do it. Just think of the omniscient view of your actions. Think of the show you're putting on for the various spectators.

If you feel the need to get romantic, or the juices are flowing at an alarming rate, shack up. Go home, and do it there. Or get a room at the Friendship Inn. Don't slobber all over each other when strangers are present. God bless ya for the thrilling engagement of affection, but if you ain't going to include me, try and refrain from the necking bit.

Besides PDA's being in full effect, there are many other public displays I have witnessed as of late.

Public display of clumsiness — When I say you had to see my friend slip and almost fall on her backside, it means I will not be able to explain it properly. I will try, though.

I honestly have never seen someone lose their step so that their right leg wraps around their head — and still remained standing. It was like a Rockette Mary Lou Retton who was a black belt in karate finishing off a perfect-ten routine in a gymnastics competition.

It was just amazing. The speed, the grace, the beauty — it was breathtaking.

There was no ice, and the ground wasn't wet. There wasn't anyone close enough to trip her, and it wasn't on a set of stairs. It was like a spasm complete with flailing legs.

Andrew Bryce

I just wish she could do it regularly upon command.

Public display of idiotic action — The guy I saw in a bar this summer fits well into this category. There he was, drunk off his butt, filling out a karoake slip. He thumbed through the booklet only to find what he wanted, and spent the next fifteen minutes boasting about what he was going to sing.

The guy chose "Baby Got Back" by Sir Mix Alot.

But wait, it gets worse.

Sandwiched between a man wearing a ten-gallon hat singing Lynard Skynard's "Sweet Home Alabama" and a woman who painfully tried to sing "The Rose" by Bette Midler, this guy rapped the lyrical masterpiece. The crowd's reaction? Scattered boos, one clap from his buddy that was accompanying him, and silence from many of the patrons. Oh yeah, except for that one drunk who was hurling insults at the wanna-be rapper.

The guy, a.k.a. Mr. Mix Alot, began to breathe heavy and shake, and told me he was going to smash the man's face in. I nodded my head, and looked up at him as he said this, and I noticed he had a cigarette in his ear.

A lit one.

Public display of embarrassment — For me, anyway. My friend David and I went to a Sting concert a while ago. We were running to the car after the concert when it was dark out, and the parking lot was hilly. Anyway, we were running, and David didn't see the curb that I jumped over smoothly. David came down hard on his ankle, and it turned out he broke it.

He was obnoxiously writhing in pain, stuttering and complaining about the pain. He stubbornly wouldn't let me help him, until he realized that he couldn't walk without me.

There was just one small problem. The concert place was about 40 minutes from home. David's car was a standard. And when it happened, I didn't have my license yet. So, he had to use the clutch with the foot of his broken ankle. Every time he pushed down, he'd cry out in pain.

Sorry I couldn't help you, pal.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Fighting the urge to go back

Tom Akyali

It hits me when I let my mind wander, when I forget where I am and what I'm doing here. When I let myself go back.

It makes me tense up. When I get it, I want to run, I want to throw two pairs of jeans in my bag, grab my ATM card and buy a bus ticket. I want to go to Logan and get on a jet plane to anywhere, anytime. I want a four-engine, 350-seat 747 to fly me across the country, across the Pacific, back to where I was. But the feeling only comes when I forget my mission here at the University. When I forget why I'm spending four years in the woods. Four years away from the civilization that make me think, the natural beauty that leaves me in absolute awe of how much our planet has to offer. I feel it when I forget why I subscribe to the mental stagnation of learning in the conventional way.

Photographs can bring it on, letters and phone calls too. When I think of them, their uniqueness. The Japanese, the Dutchmen, the Australians, Portuguese, Italian and of course Taiwanese. Us, on an island 100 miles off the coast of China. When I forget my mission here, I want to go back. I need to go back. The life of airports, passports, visas, customs, stopovers, layovers, time zones, turbulence, hot towels handed out by Asian stewardesses to Chinese mothers with four children, none of whom cry during the thirteen hour flight. This life screams to me. It needs me.

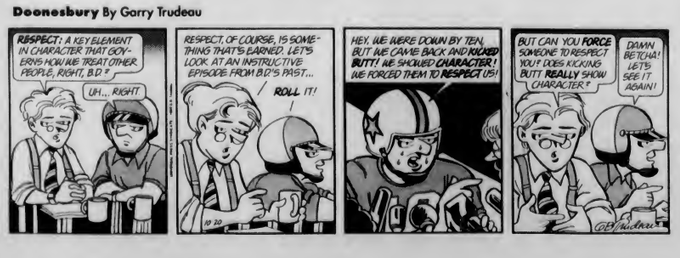
I try to relegate these thoughts to the sector of my conscious mind that deals with the past. But the photographs fight back. In the three years since I left the Island, I haven't been able to win the battle. Friends across the nation, across the ocean remain friends. As we've all come stateside to go to school, we've reacquainted and redefined. Spring Break, Christmas, we see each other. Reminiscing about being fourteen in a country with no drinking age, about being high school freshman spending our allowances in nightclubs. And about the difficulties of coming back to the states at age sixteen or seventeen, facing restrictions, being treated like a child after thinking you'd finally become an adult.

It's been three years since I left Taiwan. Three years since we stopped traveling. Since we settled down. I've been back now as long as I'd been gone, but three years as a global transient defined me. Memories of gliding into Hong Kong's Kai Tak airport, wondering how the landing gear stays clear of the hundreds of towering rooftops. Meandering through the suffocating streets of Bangkok, sleazy pimps imploring us to step inside their nightclubs. Joking with the elderly supervisor of a public toilet in Singapore, whose job it is to make sure you flush. The Blue Mosque of Istanbul, the turquoise waters of my father's Mediterranean hometown. Witnessing first-hand the emergence of Budapest from it's Communist-induced coma. Five star hotels on expense account, frequent flyer miles. Housing allowances, cost of living allowances. American Club memberships.

For now the University is my domain, and I fight the urge. I plan, I save. I don't renew my passport because I know that it will lead me away. I wait for the day when I have a degree in one pocket and an airplane ticket to anywhere in the other. On that day I will educated, liberated, young enough to travel and old enough to travel. Daily my itinerary changes, but the master plan remains the same. A few years on the road, a book of observations and adventures. For the present, however, I fight the urge and try to get my job done.

Thomas Akyali is a Collegian staff member.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau



RESPECT: A KEY ELEMENT IN CHARACTER THAT GOVERNS HOW WE TREAT OTHER PEOPLE, RIGHT, B.D.?
UH... RIGHT
RESPECT, OF COURSE, IS SOMETHING THAT'S EARNED. LET'S LOOK AT AN INSTRUCTIVE EPISODE FROM B.D.'S PAST...
ROLL IT!
HEY, WE WERE DOWN BY TEN, BUT WE CAME BACK AND KICKED BUTT! WE SHOWED CHARACTER! WE FORCED THEM TO RESPECT US!
BUT CAN YOU FORCE SOMEONE TO RESPECT YOU IF DOES KICKING BUTT REALLY SHOW CHARACTER?
DAMN BETCHA! LET'S SEE IT AGAIN!

Letters to the Editor

Headline incorrect in story

To the editor:

How does the Collegian staff decide upon a headline? Monday's article by Anita Snow of the Associated Press had the headline "Aristide Supporters Murder Two." This did not agree with the article and I assume was not written by Snow. Is it your policy never to change obviously wrong headlines? Or was the headline yours?

Jon Olson
Amherst

Column prompts community debate

To the editor:

Alex Casas wrote a wonderfully ignorant article for the Collegian on October 17. And despite what the author thinks, he actually helped the gay, lesbian, and bisexual community.

For that, I applaud him, as any slightly intelligent person can see right through the author's homophobic rhetoric. Articles like his prompt public discussion and get issues out of the closet. Discussion leads to education, and education is the GLB community's biggest ally. So thanks.

I believe that the author wrote the article because he is scared. He sees that straight white men are being challenged. He has noticed that they are losing their exclusive power and authority and it makes him nervous.

Their reality of what used to be isn't necessarily what is or should be now. In the past, being a straight white male assured many privileges and easier living; God forbid they have to work for that now. Is that oppression?

David Anderson
Mary Lyon

Letter doesn't show all sides

To the editor:

I am writing this letter in response to the "Risks exaggerated in recent story" in Monday's Letters to the editor, written by Darrin Shaffer and Deborah May of the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization. First, since point of view may be of relevance in this letter, I am a junior, student of UMass, philosophy major, and personally open to a person's sexual orientation, whatever it may be. So in retort to the previous editorial, I do not want my point of view to conflict with what I am about to say.

I would like to answer the previous letter's question of would I "worry about being sexually assaulted by desperate men unable to find a consenting partner." Before answering this question, I would like to restructure it.

The original question is a complex question, referring that men in the bathroom are "desperate" and unable to find partners. I would like to take this out, because I feel that any man, desperate or "happily married," could or wish to participate in sexual activity in the bathroom. Who is doing the activity is irrelevant. Now to answer the question, yes. I presently worry each time I use the stall here at UMass.

What happens if I am minding my own business, concentrating on finishing my objective in the stall, and from the other side, a penis came into view?

Or how would I respond to a situation, where I enter the bathroom, and upon entering the area I am immediately solicited to partake in sexual activity with a complete stranger? Lastly, what would I do if I were using the urinal and I abruptly hear sexual moans?

As you can see, I have avoided answering all of my questions. Why? Because I should not have to be put into a situation of answering any of them!

I should have the right to enter a public restroom, here on my campus, and use the facilities with no fear of sexual assault, semen on the toilet seat, a penis protruding through a "glory hole," or sexual solicitation.

I would like to praise the administration here at UMass for trying its best to stop the sexual activity in the bathroom. No student, myself included, should be put in a position to respond to sexual activity in the public bathrooms. A bathroom is for personal hygiene, not to have sex.

If persons would like to experience sex in a public restroom, then these interested persons should solicit the UMass administration to open a public facility that could be used for this purpose solely. However, to assume personal liberty and take advantage of my rights, and the rights of other students, is not fair!

Michael Irvin
UMass student

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Thursday October 20, 1994

Weekend Edition • Volume CIV Issue 27

COURTESY MIRAMAX PICTURES

'Pulp' delivers a masterful thrill-ride

BY DANIEL PELLEGRINI
Collegian Staff

Quentin Tarantino has finally gotten his revenge on Hollywood.

To be more specific, it is a vengeance towards the soft-edge, causeworthy and politically correct films that "win all the Oscars," as Tarantino's self-styled character Clarence from True Romance puts it.

Sharing the joyride, while Tarantino sits back with a smile and a nod, are the bazillions of apostles the 31 year-old filmmaker herded with his love it-or-you-burn breakthrough film, Reservoir Dogs. His fans will conquer any living movie-going stereotype around: From jocks to film geeks, Gene Siskel to Bill Clinton, Saddam Hussein to my grandmother — Quentin Tarantino has become the hottest thing in pop culture since "90210." Either you love him or you're out, it's as simple as that.

Now it's time to steer the media hype aside. Is the almighty praise and stirred uprising actually justified? Is this video store graduate really as good as his image? Worthy of all the acclaim? Or is he, in fact, just "cool." The answer is both. He's obviously got the "cool" thing down, that's a given, but he is also good, pretty damn good. And the proof is his latest, most ludicrous and no-holds-barred pulp collage of fiction that is, of course, Pulp Fiction.

Let me begin by saying, and this will hopefully in some way validate my opinion, that I was not too long ago a Tarantino pessimist. I first saw Reservoir Dogs as an insulting kind of pseudo-homage to the Grand Maestro of slick and compelling "in-your-face" underworld films, Martin Scorsese. There were too many blatant similiarities I thought, for a man who was already being labeled as a "neo- Scorsese" to call Reservoir Dogs an original.

Taking a plot that would undoubtedly appeal to anyone who admired Goodfellas (which is just about everyone) and compiling it with gritty acting, smart-mouthed dialogue and a hand-held camera I thought I was seeing Mean Streets twenty years updated. Eventually, though, I took the film at face value, gained a respect for it, even grew to like it, and then sold myself out to it. It was either that or my life.

The issue at hand though is Pulp Fiction, a film that buries any of Tarantino's earlier works (including that college thing called Natural Born Killers). This may be a sick and disgusting thing to say, but if it is possible to categorize this film into the closest genre that would take it, it would be the genre of comedy. Fiction then could be the funniest — not the greatest — but the funniest film to emerge in the last...17 years (I say 17 because to challenge Annie Hall would be pushing it.)

The fact is that Pulp Fiction itches all of our desires to unleash the dark side within ourselves and lets us look at and smile at a violent, trashy and immoral atmosphere. It's sheer hysteria, and for the first time in a while a film has come along that allows us to laugh at offensive subject matter while not having to worry about offending anyone. It's a universal nightmare, an unbiased roller coaster ride of a film that targets its satirical humor on every "happenin'" trend to hit the nineties so far — from body piercing to a 70's revival.

You get the sensation that Pulp Fiction generates within the first two sequences of the film. It begins with a conventional Tarantino diner scene, in which a spasmatic and British Tim Roth is almost nonsensically spurting out his ideology on the art of robbing to his girlfriend, the coveted Amanda Plummer. After Roth convinces her that holding up a coffee shop would be more unique and economical than holding up a bank, the two stare into each other's eyes, share a quick enamored moment and a kiss, and then shift to a spontaneous fury as the two jump on their chairs waving their guns and screaming — at the diner and the audience — letting both know what's in store for the next two hours and forty minutes.

But Tarantino doesn't stop there. The ending of the first sequence is so "bang-bang" that by the time you've helplessly stretched that overwhelmed and awe-struck smile across your face, Tarantino has already put into the film's opening credits, a combination of sequences so bizarre that it deserves as much attention as the rest of the movie, respectively. The soundtrack that runs behind the credits is this sort of new-wave flamenco guitar instrumental that captures the distorted intensity that flows, from start to finish throughout the entire film.

Turn to PULP, page 10

TWO VIEWS ON AMERICA'S HOTTEST (& COOLEST) NEW MOVIE

'PULP' Fiction

COURTESY MIRAMAX PICTURES

"Pulp Fiction itches all of our desires to unleash the dark side within ourselves and lets us look at and smile at a violent, trashy and immoral atmosphere...it jumps at you from every angle, blinding your every sense and restoring the word "fun" back into a night at the movies. — DANIEL PELLEGRINI

"What seemed fresh, exciting and entertaining in Reservoir Dogs and True Romance now feels gimmicky. Tarantino seems to be pumping out what people want and expect from him rather than going out on a creative limb... Tarantino may not be able to fulfill the promise he himself helped to create." — JON LUPO

Erratic 'Fiction' hardly a masterpiece

BY JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

I have always been accused of thinking about movies too much, being too critical. After all, how could someone not fall in love with Forrest Gump, not marvel at the "disturbing" nature of Natural Born Killers, or yes, not even join in the near-unanimous critical and popular acclaim for Pulp Fiction?

It's pretty easy: Gump and Killers were just plain bad movies. Pulp is better, but hardly a masterpiece. It's as simple — and as critical — as that.

Pulp Fiction is a good movie, make no mistake of that. Tarantino creates, for the most part dazzling characters with dazzling dialogue and sets them in improbably dazzling set- pieces — all with a white-hot, undisputed air of coolness: It's "one hell of a ride," as one critic enthused, but not without a more than fair share of bumps along the way.

What Tarantino does — and does best — is play with genres and genre cliches, spinning, deconstructing and generally warping our expectations. Tarantino did that effectively, even superbly in Reservoir Dogs and to a lesser extent in True Romance (he only wrote the latter).

There are flashes of that in Pulp Fiction — but they come in fits and starts. Fiction follows three intertwining tales and over a dozen characters through a two-day joyride of guns, drugs, money, murder, hit-men, fall-guys and femme fatales.

This kind of sprawling canvas allows Tarantino to indulge in superfluous monologues (from foot massages to the attractiveness of pot bellies), wild characters, random acts of violence and other various forms of decadent nihilism. This wide world is where Tarantino thrives. It's also (as one finds out as the movie progress) where he keeps stumbling.

When Tarantino's "on" he is a force to be reckoned with. The first section, where Vincent (John Travolta), an underworld button-man, must take Mia (Uma Thurman), the wife of his boss out on the town, is a prime example of the best of Tarantino's talent. It's a ritual tour de force, from the set-up at a retro restaurant to the, er, piercing payoff.

Thurman is a powerhouse, from her mannerisms to her slinky, cool attitude. When she goads Travolta into entering a twist contest, it's like entering a funky, hilarious pop- cultural time warp. And as if anything could top this exhilarating indulgence, Tarantino throws a killer twist of the plot, kicking the film into a white-knuckled sequence that manages to blend horror, suspense and nervous humor into one unbelievably kinetic thrill-ride.

Then that sound you hear is the movie thudding to a screeching halt.

From that point on, Fiction never regains the furious, electric momentum of the first sequence, and while the film picks up for a spell in the last third, we've first got a boring, problematic tale halting Fiction and accentuating Tarantino's shortcomings.

Bruce Willis plays Butch, a boxer who's slated to take a fall (at the request of Marsellus, Vincent's boss) during a big fight. He decides to win the fight and flees in a taxi (where he flirts...endlessly...with Esmerelda, the Columbian taxi driver) to meet his obnoxious French girlfriend (Maria de Medeiros) with whom he plans to run away.

After the aforementioned discussion of women's pot bellies, what they want to order for breakfast, and a good night's rest, and Willis realizes that his girlfriend forgot to pack Willis' gold watch; a family heirloom Willis needs. So he ventures back to his apartment, where he knows Marsellus and his thugs will be waiting. Zzzzz.

It's this frustratingly long, frighteningly dull subplot that drags Fiction down. An example of bad Tarantino is the set- up to the plot: an extended monologue by Christopher Walken explaining the significance of the gold watch to a young Butch. It's terribly unnecessary, and the ensuing punchline is lame and equally unimportant. (Mia's earlier "Fox Force Five" joke accomplished what Tarantino tries to do here funnier, more cleverly, and in, like, eight seconds. It takes Walken about eight minutes to ramble on and on.)

Not only is the above set-up problematic (in the way that it's a complete snooze), but the situation that Tarantino devises for a slam-bam conclusion is even more troubling. It's where Tarantino goes over-the-top and

Turn to FICTION, page 10

SHORT CUTS

Edited by Tara MK Connelly

Quotes of Note

"Don't knock masturbation. It's sex with someone I love."
—Woody Allen in Annie Hall

COURTESY TRI STAR PICTURES
Woody Allen

"I'm not like Jane Fonda or any of those other women who say how fabulous it is to turn 40. I think it's a crock of [expletive]. I'm not thrilled with it."
—Cher

"Working with Barbra Streisand is pretty stressful. It's like sitting down to a picnic in the middle of a freeway."
—Kris Kristoferson

People and Pop Culture in the News

Don't you just love it when people with no moral character or judgement get elevated to god-like status by mindless members of out society?

Well, John Wayne Bobbit is certainly milking it for all it's worth. The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences opened the door of its Beverly Hills theater to premiere Bobbit's skin flick, Shameful? Well, the screening also doubled as a benefit for run-away children. Nice. But wait, Bobbit also agreed to strip at a gay bar and judge a transvestite Lorena look-alike contest as well. He's in the running for a Noble Prize for idiocy.

Big trouble for you–know–who. Nicole Brown Simpson's personal diary was just exploited, ahh.. released with some not too nice accounts of life with the fallen sports star. Nicole Brown Simpson: The Private Diary of a Life Interrupted was snapped up by reporters within hours of it hitting shelves. Will it damage O.J.'s reputation or do we even care anymore? Recent polls say nix.

Ever have the craving for a tall frosty mug of chocolate? Whitbread Beer Company of England asked this when promoting their newest piece de resistance: Fuggles Chocolate Mild (mmm). The chocolate flavor is supposed to be light and subtle and guaranteed not to make you want to hurl at first sip. Tempting isn't it?

Beetle Bailey of the infamous comic strip Beetle Bailey (duh) made the Associated Press wire by being reunited with his brother Lois (?) Bailey Flagstone of "Hi & Lois" in a recent comic strip gimmick. That sassy AP! Up on Washington, cure for major diseases...and Beetle Bailey reunions, wow.

Happy day for Kim Basinger! Her appeal against New Line Cinema won in court and she is now a million dollars richer. Too bad the bankruptcy stamp lasts for seven years...she'll have to hold up on buying another town. Sigh.

Beavis and Butthead may have to wait for their big screen debut. Controversy over the two dorks' appearance is holding back final handshakes. Creator Mike Judge wants to keep them cartoons while Geffen is pushing for real life actors (as opposed to dead and decaying ones).

Marisa Tomei wants to elevate her acting ability to a new level (Only You wasn't quite Oscar material). Her next stellar performance will be as a Russian lesbian security guard who is protecting the brains of Lenin and Trotsky. Tomei's intellectual response, "It's going to be fun!"...No comment.

Material for this section has been compiled from various wire and news services.

Editors' Cuts

Books — Tom Clancy

Tom Clancy is one of those writers that seems to have stock in the New York Times Bestsellers list. Everytime you blink, this master of military subterfuge has another book hot off the press. Only to wonder though if anything is left to write about.

I recently had the time (?) to breeze through Clancy's Without Remorse and began to get that sinking feeling something wasn't quite right. Clancy still writes with the same clear–cut, no–nonsense style, but the content was tedious and even boring. Same old situation and same old characters. The plot tried to twist and ended up knotted.

The book revolves around Mr. Clark, CIA Special Agent and his first beginnings with the agency Although some moments caught me and had me turning pages furiously, I was constantly stopped by boring passages and nonsensical subplots. Unlike Cardinal in the Kremlin or Hunt For Red October I wasn't riveted. Hopefully Debt of Honor will bring back that missing element I first got hooked on.

—Tara MK Connelly

Video — Backbeat

Essentially expounding on a pop–culture historical footnote, Backbeat captures the early days of The Beatles as a knock–about rock group known for their enthusiastic riffs and boundless energy. Smack in the middle of this entertaining bio–flick lies the footnote: the relationship between a young John Lennon his best bud, early Beatles member Stu Sutcliffe and Astrid, the woman that came between them.

Backbeat explores this intriguing triangle and surrounds it with absorbing period detail and atmosphere. Couple that with some spirited musical numbers and you've got a solid evening's worth of entertainment.

Ian Hart makes a remarkable Lennon, Stephen Dorff (Judgement Night) plays Sutcliffe with a golden boy streak and Twin Peaks' Sheryl Lee is the German bohemian who tempts Sutcliffe away from the fab four.

Boasting a superb soundtrack and brimming with homoerotic undertones, Backbeat proves an entertaining renter than delivers.

—Jon Lupo

Concert — Tori Amos

With the release of Under The Pink early this year, the media and public spotlight on Tori Amos that showed signs of reaching critical mass after the release of 1992's Little Earthquakes finally surpassed the boiling point.

And tonight will be no different as she arrives at Smith College to a sold out John M. Greene Hall.

The one word that has possibly never been omitted in describing Amos' music would be passionate.

Little Earthquakes was an album which often times could even be described as disturbing, focusing on subject matter of sexual guilt, relationships and religion.

These straightforward looks at life, love and other feelings continue on Under The Pink, accompanied by more of the unusual melody patterns that made Earthquakes so appealing.

All of the people fortunate enough to get their hands on tickets will be sure to be holding their breath from the time she takes the stage to the final bow.

—Mike MacLean

Mike explores annihilation of moshing at social events everywhere

Mike's Mental Stew
—by Mike MacLean

Slamdancing, moshing or crowd surfing, call it what you will, but all of these activities have now become an integral part of youth culture in America today. Ever since Eddie Vedder's leap from the rafters in the video for "Evenflow," many who did not know that such activities even took place at concerts were awakened to the possibilities. But along with increased interest in these things came the down side of overexposure.

I myself have had my moshing experiences over the past two years since I turned 18 and could regularly go to clubs. Now, I am not the tallest of guys on the face of the earth, and being below average height for males has had it's disadvantages when it comes to various mosh pits. I thoroughly enjoy ska–type pits that mainly consist of a lot of bouncing, and very little violence whatsoever. But it is some of the more violent pits that make me think I must be a masochist for even considering entering.

Besides getting covered in dirt at Lollapalooza '93, I have had my share of moshing injuries. At the Stone Temple Pilots / Butthole Surfers concert in the summer of '93 I walked away with a swollen eye from being kicked in the face about four times. And at this year's Lollapalooza, during Luscious Jackson, three crowd surfers arrived at my particular place in the crowd at the same time. Have you ever tried to hold up three teenage guys at once?

Well, I can say I did...try that is, it didn't work out so well. At the precise moment they fell on me, someone's head cracked me in the back of mine. Do you want to know what happened next?

I was crushed.

But my stories aside, the recent interest in crowd surfing has made a lot of people eager to jump in and try their hand at everything. Unfortunately, most of these people have no clue what they are doing and end up ruining it for the rest of us. There are certain unwritten rules that have to be followed.

First off, you have to look out for fellow moshers. If someone falls down, you help them up. I observed a young woman at Lollapalooza this year who broke her ankle because some guy wouldn't stop moshing to let others get in to pick her up, and she got kicked around for a few minutes.

No one is moshing because they want to die, so don't try to end other people's lives. If you and a few buddies want to inflict pain on one another, fine, but otherwise, don't assume others are as sick as you are. Keep it to yourself.

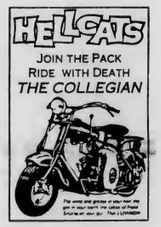
Don't get upset if you are six–feet tall, weigh 200 pounds, and no one wants to carry you around for more than a minute. And don't use that as an excuse to get hoisted up there about 20 times. Most people seem to have this problem with touching sweaty strangers for more than a minute or two.

As for the people passing others around, it is not funny to hurl someone smaller than you a great distance just because they arrive at your position. Once a person is up there, they cannot control their destination, so don't make them suffer for it. People are there to enjoy the music, moshing is a bonus. After all, would you pay 10 bucks to just mosh . . . with no sound?

Moshing can be an exhilarating experience for all of those involved, it is a way to release frustrations and enjoy the music at the same time. If respect is given to follow moshers it will allow everyone to have a sweaty good time and even get some healthy bruises in the process. Now however, due to people being inconsiderate of others I am already seeing signs at some clubs that set rules for moshing or have banned it altogether. So, prove the media wrong when they say that our generation is apathetic to everything, and start by caring about each other.

Mike MacLean is a Collegian Arts and Living Associate Editor.

HELGATS
JOIN THE PACK
RIDE WITH DEATH
THE COLLEGIAN



Today at an unlisted home from church our Normal announced that he had sold his complete set of cotton swarf figurines and made a big contract for a job getting fish in an Alaskan fish cannery.

Our daughter Williamina has decided to rush a poverty and is considering taking a journalistic position on the Arts & Living swaff.

My wife commented that we must have done something right raising our children. "Oh, Ha...", I said, "It couldn't have been anything we did. We're pacifists & have hurried individuals!" "Yes, your probably right Walter. It must have been that paper the children read. The one we use to wrap our fish."
Collegian
"Fish wrapping paper!"

Stuck in an office?
– learn woodworking

Carpenter?
– learn creative writing or photography

DIVERSIFY!

Speak only English?
– learn another language

Trouble with English?
– learn English as a Second Language

Need a job?
– learn bartending

Learn about yourself, about other people, other cultures, other languages, other times.

Nearly 100 noncredit workshops are offered this fall by the UMass Division of Continuing Education.

Call now for your free course and workshop catalog — 545-0474.

A quality education at affordable prices.

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

This coupon good for one FREE
COLLEGIAN™ brand student paper

Shear Bliss is open on Mondays!!!
SPECIAL
2 Full Service Haircuts For $25
• With Christie Towe
• New Clients Only
Regular Price:
Women – $20
Men – $17
Call For Appointments with Christie
Shear Bliss
(413) 253-2322
479 West ST. • Amherst, MA 01002

NEWMAN CENTER
WELCOME TO THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHAPEL ON CAMPUS
YOUR PLACE TO WORSHIP ... TO STUDY ... TO LEARN ... TO MAKE FRIENDS AND HELP OTHERS ... AND TO EAT AND RELAX
Center Hours: 7:00 a.m. to 10:30 p.m.
Lord's Day Masses: Sat.: 5:00 p.m.; Sun.: 8:00, 9:30, 11:00 a.m. and 7:00 p.m.
Daily Masses: Mon. - Fri.: 8:00 a.m., 12:15 p.m.; Sat.: 9:00 a.m.
Campus Ministers: Rev. Francis P. Lavelle, Director; Rev. J. Joseph Quigley; Sr. Kathleen Keough, SSJ; Rev. Paul Manship, Spanish-speaking, Hispanic Ministry; Deacon Lucien Miller; and Rev. Bruce Teague, in residence.
Corner of Massachusetts Ave. and No. Pleasant St. 549 0300

A look inside the Arts Council

Funding and support goals of longtime campus organization

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Art is a form of expression and beauty that can be seen everywhere and in everything. The Arts Council at the University of Massachusetts knows this and is dedicated to bringing it to the campus community. Marlene Housner, program coordinator explained the goal of the council.

"To bring art everywhere we can on campus, and to inspire [and] encourage through grant incentives, students to follow their dreams. To let it happen here and to share it with everyone," said Housner.

The Arts Council originally began as one of the Fine Arts Center programs. But when the building was completed, the council decided to branch away from F.A.C. and exist independently as an educational outreach center. The Arts Council is comprised of an 18–member committee. The committee is a mixture of undergraduate students, graduate students, faculty members and alumni.

"Those members are appointed by their separate senates. So, I have six undergraduate, six graduate and two professional staff, and one alumni," explained Housner. "Faculty terms are three years, alumni are two, and students are annually."

The Arts Council uses this committee to then determine a number of things such as beautification projects, upcoming exhibits, and awarding of grants. Grants are perhaps the most important function of the council in that they provide financial aid and counseling to anyone who is in need and presents an art–based proposal.

"We always see things we've never seen before. So many things go through us as far as proposal and projects and events on campus. And we try to reach out even farther than what comes through us to encourage others to come in and provide a center through guidance [and] project design. Then eventually the proposal goes through grant program and are received by the committee," said Housner.

The greatest portion of the money is ultimately given out to the University in these grants that range from $150 to $170 thousand yearly.

There are block grants and single events grants that are distributed to over 50 cultural programs from groups such as AHORA; American Indian Students Association; New WORLD Theater; Programs for GLB Concerns; Department of Women's Studies; and six campus galleries.

"The single grants are the smaller portion [of grants] we give out, but we give many of them, 35 to 45, in six cycles. And we advertise them a lot," Housner said. "We only turn people away if there isn't any art component to their proposal."

These various organizations and associations use the grants in a myriad of ways. Some sponsor lectures, fund dances, or create exhibitions or workshops. The council itself uses some of its Public Arts Fund monies and collaborate with the Physical Plant Department to develop and beautify several on–campus projects.

Their award–winning "William Smith Clark Memorial" received merit status in the design category from the American Association of Landscape Architects in November 1993. In May 1993 the council planted the "Helen Curtis Cole Commemorative Garden." They also moved the "Civility Memorial" to the Student Union/Campus Center interior courtyard. The council also refurbished the "Hampden Court Sculpture Garden" in Southwest. This year the Art Council sponsored an Autumnal Early Evening affair at two campus gardens.

Housner believes that a lot of the arts that is being displayed today can be classified as informational art. Universal issues such as environment, society and such are being expressed through many techniques.

"Art is a universal language people from many different backgrounds and values can relate to. It's a more instinctual response I would think," Housner said.

The most recent project that the council is working on is the remaking of the Maze by Southwest. The Maze was first installed as a temporary part of the University Gallery's public art and was designed by A. Richard Flichner. It deteriorated and the Physical Plant built the next one. The council then took it on as part of its maintenance of public art on campus. The council moved not just to fix it but make it better so people would visit it and respect it as well. The council and volunteers planted vines to climb the chain link and also planted various bulbs.

On Oct. 20, beginning at 3:30 p.m. the Arts Council will celebrate the reopening of the Maze. There will be music by Gordon Korstange and Rakesh Ranganathan, South Asian flute and drum; Barney McElhourn on the Irish tin whistle, and HAWK (Nimuc), Native American flutes. Planting and resowing of wildflowers in the Maze meadow will also take place. Students are encouraged to either sign up or just be there to participate. Refreshments will also be served.

Housner, an art teacher and artist herself (she recently had an exhibit at the Burnett Gallery in Amherst), sees the future of the Arts Council as a positive one.

"[Our future goal is] to continue with the mission that we now have. To bring art, to bring awareness to the arts and the art places on campus and to develop those. And to open communications through the arts to as many people as possible."

COURTESY ARTS COUNCIL
The artEventive in the Civility Courtyard is just one of the many things that the UMass Arts Council sponsors.

Romantic music entrances audience

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

This Saturday night at the Bowker Auditorium the internationally acclaimed Juilliard String Quartet will be performing works by Paul Hindemith, Ludwig van Beethoven and Bela Bartok.

Led by original member and violinist Robert Mann, this three–time Grammy award winning quartet, and recipient of both the Grand Prix du Disque and the German Record Critics Award for Lifetime Achievement, should do nothing less than impress the ear of the casual, and devout, listener.

Performing in all four corners of the world, from New Zealand to Boston to the concert halls of Europe, this quartet–in–residence has established a legitimacy toward the influence and broadness of American–based classical music.

Since the age of music during and prior to the Baroque period, Europe has been considered the "hub" of this genre of ephemeral compositions. From the period of the Romantics (not the rock group), and beginning with the time of the transcendentalist movement of the mid–19th century, the American cultural sphere has attempted to strike out on its own.

Established in 1946, in conjunction with their residence at The Juilliard School, this Sony Classical recording quartet has finally begun to set a standard from where other American artists can strive for. Working off a base of nearly 550 different works, which mixes the standards of Mozart, Haydn and Dvorak with more than 200 pieces written by 20th century American composers, diversity and clarity of performance is what they hang their banner on.

Teaming up with original member Mann are three other musicians of impeccable credentials. Emphasizing the aspects of being both American born and trained, Joel Smirnoff (second violin), Samuel Rhodes (viola), and Joel Kroshnick (cello) all have paid their dues in this field.

Smirnoff, the newest member to this quartet, attended the Juilliard School and was a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for six years. A faculty member at nearby Tanglewood, Rhodes has performed on numerous occasions at Carnegie Hall and premiered for the world works by both Milton Babbitt and Arthur Weisberg. Kroshnick has played live at the likes of places as New York's Weill Recital Hall, Symphony Space and the Miller Theatre.

Quality and standing–room–only concerts follow this quartet, from renditions of Bach's Art of the Fugue to John Harbison's "The Rewaking." they leave distinct impressions wherever they perform. Inducted into the Hall of Fame of the National Academy for Recording Artists in 1986, they will bring that experience to an area that has the ability to appreciate them that much more.

Tickets for the performance this Saturday night at Bowker Auditorium are $25 and $18, with half price tickets available for Five College students. Tickets for children 16 and under are $10. For tickets or more information call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545–2511/1–800–999–UMAS outside the local calling area.

Reach for the Power TEACH
Ad Council A Public Service of The Pulse.edu
Reach for the Power TEACH

HALLOWEEN ALL YEAR
"Thousands of Accessories"
Largest Halloween Shop in the Valley

CHILDS TOYS & HOBBIES
49 Russell St. (Rte. 9) Hadley • 584-2604
Open Mon.-Sat. 9-5 • Sun 12-5 • Oct.24-29, 9am-8pm

Test Your Detector for life!
Fire Prevention Week October 9-15 1994

University Barbers
(Campus Center)
549-0123
Hours:
Weekdays
9 am - 4:45 pm
Sat. 8 am - 1:45 pm
No Appointment Necessary

BUY BEER & WINE on SUNDAYS from Noon to Six
Montague Mini Mart
•SAM ADAMS Bottles $18.79 + Dep
•Only 10 Miles from UMASS
• Reasonable Cigarette Prices •
from Amherst: 10 miles north on Rt. 63 to Rt. 47N
from Northampton: 14 miles I-91 north to Rt. 116 to Rt. 47N
(Follow signs to Montague Center • Proper ID Required)
Open Mon-Sat 9-9 • 367-9551

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Lunch and Dinner Buffet
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful newly remodeled facility including our Sunny Greenhouse.
"Largest Chinese Restaurant in Hampshire County"
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30 AM - 10 PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS TILL 11 PM
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte. 9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte. 9 & University Drive • 256-8800

4 Seasons
Thank you for your patronage The Krupczak Family
Rte.9 • Hadley • 584-8174
HOURS: MONDAY - SATURDAY 9:00-11:00
SALE THRU 10/26/94
Not Responsible For Typographical Errors
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE

1/2 BBL ROLLING ROCK $43.99 Dep	1/2 BBL BUSCH $36.99 Dep	1/2 BBL NATURAL LT $32.99 Dep	KEG OF THE WEEK! BUD $36.99 Dep		1/2 BBL ICEHOUSE $39.99 Dep	1/2 BBL LITE, LITE ICE $39.99 Dep	1/2 BBL MICHELOB, LT $39.99 Dep
POPOV VODKA $9.99 1.75L	GO UMASS!		OLD CROW $7.99 1.0L	ZHENKA VODKA $8.99 1.75 L	WE MEET OR BEAT MOST SALE ITEMS ADVERTISED IN COLLEGIAN!		SAUZA "GOLD" $8.99 750 ml
LOWENBRAU 24-12 oz BOTT $12.99 Dep	ICEHOUSE 24-12 oz BOTT $12.99 Dep	BUD DRY 24-12 oz BOTT $10.99 Dep	M.G.D. & LT 24-12 oz BOTT $10.99 Dep	BUSCH 24-12 oz BOTT $8.99 Dep	PABST 24-12 oz BOTT $8.99 Dep	AMERICAN 24-12 oz CANS $7.29 Dep	MEISTERBRAU 24-12 oz CANS $7.29 Dep

Pearl Street Nightclub
• WEDNESDAY •
GAY NIGHT
Oct. 26 - Halloween Party
• Thursday •
18+ DANCE PARTY
HOSTED BY WHIP'S NICK DANGER
The Area's Biggest Dance Party
Music by Spin Inc
• Friday •
RETRO NIGHT
Dance Music From the Late 70s & early 80s with DJ Dennis
9:00pm-1:00pm
Free Admission With This Ad
Duran Duran, Wham!, Missing Persons, Rick James, Blondie, Human League, Funkadelic
• Saturday •
TOP 40 DANCE PARTY
WITH DJ LANCE
SATURDAY NIGHT DINNER & DANCE PROMOTION
Dine anywhere in Northampton on Saturday night, bring your receipt and receive free admission to the Dance Club.
•Saturday, Oct. 29 •
Our 10th Annual
HALLOWEEN PARTY
$500 CASH PRIZE
For Best Costume
Two floors of entertainment
Upstairs - 9:00pm - 2:00am
Pre-area begins and best parade of costume
DANCING WITH DJ LANCE
Costume Prizes at 11:00pm
Downstairs 10:00pm - 2:00 am
EXTREMO
"The Mysterious Floating Nightclub"
Halloween Release
w/ Dreadnaut & The Bombpops
LIVE MUSIC
Thur., Oct. 20 - 8:00 pm / 18+
SKAVOOVEE '94
The Toasters
The Scofflaws/The Pietasters
Spring Heeled Jack
Fri., Oct. 21 - 8:00 pm / 18+
MAX CREEK
Sat., Oct. 22 - 8:30 pm
JOHN CAFFERTY & The Beaver Brown Band
Sun., Oct. 23 - 8:00 pm / 18+
DEEE-LITE
Tues., Oct. 25 - 8:00 pm / w/o
KOKO TAYLOR
Mark Nomad Band
Thur., Oct. 27 - 8:00 pm / 18+/w/o
FRENTE!
Gigolo Aunts/Home
Fri., Oct. 28 - 8:30 pm
BLACK 47
Mon., Oct. 31 - 7:00 pm
BEAUSOLEIL
Thur., Nov. 3 - 8:30 pm / 18+
BIM SKALA BIM
Coming ...
11/4 JEFFERY GAINES
11/5 JAMES COTTON
11/11 HEAVY METAL HORNS
11/12 PHYSICAL GRAFFITI 7/8+
11/13 THE PROCLAIMERS
11/14 STEELE PULSE
11/15 G. LOVE & SPECIAL SAUCE
11/29 IDA WILSON
Advance Tickets Available at The Northampton Box Office, For the Record in Amherst, Strawberries Records and Stores, and Tix Unlimited at U. Mass. To charge by phone call 586-8686.
10 Pearl Street, Northampton 584-7771

Buchanan, Richter and medicine deliberated

Like every other TV junkie in the world, I spent most of last week fretting over the uncertain future of America's best-loved talk show sidekick — "Late Night"'s Andy Richter. We've all heard about the dark cloud that's hung over Conan O'Brien lately, with rumors flying that his days as host may be numbered.

But the outlook looks equally dissatrous for Andy, which is the cause of my own personal distress. I mean, Andy Richter is like George on "Seinfeld" — both represent the insecure, bumbling outsiders within all of us. If either of them were ever eliminated by the television industry and I was denied these meaningful representatives of the human struggle for acceptance . . . well, I just can't even think of the condition my life would be in then. Even my mother agrees, nothing would be the same.

When I wasn't worrying about that stuff, I watched a fair number of pretty mediocre sitcoms. There were a lot of unbelievable moments in CBS' "The Five Mrs. Buchanans," about the wives and mother of four unseen (but constantly referred to) brothers. Here are a few especially ridiculous highlights from last week's show:

1. The absurd discovery by all four wives that their wedding rings are fakes.

2. The equally absurd confession from Mother Buchanan that she was the one who bought all the rings in order to save her supposedly adult sons the trouble of performing such an unimportant task.

3. Mother Buchanan's oh-so-moving speech about how buying phony wedding rings for her daughters-in-law enabled them all to live happier, more productive lives.

4. The unfathomable absence of a proper stoning ceremony for both mother and sons Buchanan during the final credits. Now that would have been a great ending.

Don't even ask me what the Buchanan wives thought caused those big brown circles that formed on their fingers six months after wearing their K-mart wedding rings. They'll have to deal with that controversy in the next episode.

I also watched CBS' on-again/off-again series "Hearts Afire," and after come careful consideration I decided that even though Suzanne Somers (of Thighmaster mania and ABC's "Step by Step") is more famous, John Ritter does have the better sitcom. I can sympathize with Suzanne Somers — she's really had to pay the price for her celebrity. I mean, it's been more than a decade since the demise of "Three's Company" and she's still having to do that same old dumb blonde routine. Although I must admit, that seeing Somers and Ritter again on the small screen reminded me of one of my favorite "Three's Company" episodes — in which Chrissy gets a couple of dizzy spells and everybody naturally assumes that she's dying of some strange disease. But it turns out that she doesn't have any more brain damage than usual. What a relief.

I finally saw NBC's new hit "ER". And while it's not as dramatic as "St. Elsewhere," or as humorous as "Trapper John, M.D.," it's certainly good enough to top off the network's still strong Thursday night lineup. So I guess medical shows are back, in style again. An interesting bit of trivia: one of the doctors currently starring in "ER" spent last season languishing on the hysterically bad melodrama "Sisters," so that guy's really coming up in the acting world.

And speaking of laughable shows, I still haven't gotten over the fact that CBS cancelled the cheerfully silly celebrity whodunit "Burke's Law." I mean, there ought to be at least one show on T.V. that has the guts to bring a group of unrelated famous faces together onscreen, all for the sake of a hilariously corny plot. Which reminds me, I was so thrilled to find "Love Boat" on cable the other afternoon that I think one of the networks should start showing reruns instead of a less successful and entertaining current program. They could replace that "Urkel" show, for instance. But that's for another column.

Back to "Love Boat" now, I personally prefer the earlier episodes. The ones taped before actress Lauren Tewes was abruptly replaced as cruise director and Gopher began to lose his youthful good looks. Isaac the bartender, though, maintained his charm and wit from pilot to cancellation. And actor Gavin MacLeod's comedic genius, of course, is a given. In fact, he was so good portraying the tough yet tender Captain Stubing, that MacLeod has continued to perfect his characterization and take the role to new levels of meaning — as the current commercial spokesman for Princess Cruises. He's truly a master of his craft.

By the way, I recently heard that NBC's no-laughs comedy "The Martin Short Show" was being placed on something called 'temporary hiatus.' So the networks are finally listening to me. Now, if they only decide to take the rest of my advice regarding the fall schedule, we might be seeing more of the "Love Boat" than we ever dreamed possible.

Tracy Gavel is a Collegian correspondent.

Shawn Colvin croons for Smith College crowd

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

SHAWN COLVIN with DAVID GRAY
Smith College
Oct. 18

Tuesday night past the pillars of John M. Greene Hall, on the campus of Smith College, Five College area fans were treated to the sounds of "folk-angst" by the indelible Shawn Colvin, and her opening act David Gray.

It was a sort of homecoming for me. This was the first time I had seen this melodiously gifted lady perform live since her first major tour in 1989, after her first release Steady On. Needless to say, I was not disappointed.

From her opening song "Jake," the wondrous vocal range, and charismatic sense of humor, she possess was extremely evident throughout the evening's repertoire. From joking around with her guitarist Stewart Smith on a mock Barbra Streisand–Neil Diamond duet to the soft, sensual tones of "Object Of My Affection," the skilled on-stage presence of Colvin could not help but shine through on this dark, rainy night.

The clarity and tone of her own unique song writing style was helped vociferously by her supporting cast of Smith, and bassist Larry Klein. Switching from his Fender Stratocaster to hollow bodied acoustic Telecaster in the course of the set, Smith's textually astute finger-picking and laid back leads did nothing but accentuate the flow of conversation–like singing done so well by Colvin.

Supreme musicianship on Colvin's part was also witnessed. Nonchalantly, right before the beginning of a song, she changed the key to a lower range because of its similarity to the tune performed right before it. Before the amazed eyes of the audience, she adjusted to the new range and continued with the set.

As the night went on, the breakdown of folk music stereotypes continued with her own compositions, and the interpretations of other songwriter's material that encompass her new release Cover Girl. Featuring songs written by the bluesy

Turn to COLVIN, page 10

HADLEY TIRE AND BRAKE CENTER
439 Russell St., Hadley
253-9911 or 253-9054
Prices only with this Collegian Ad • Free Brake Inspection • Lube Oil Filter • Monroe Shocks/Struts

D.S.R. II 45,000 MILE

P155/80R13	$33.45
P165/80R13	35.69
P175/80R13	36.21
P185/80R13	38.18
P185/75R14	40.22
P195/75R14	41.34
P205/75R14	42.93
P215/75R14	45.61
P205/75R15	44.51
P215/75R15	46.10
P225/75R15	48.72
P235/75R15	50.82

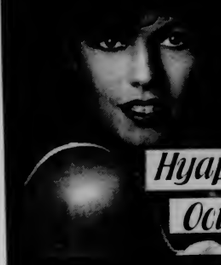
EXCELLENT GRIPPING ACTION FOR ALL WEATHER PERFORMANCE

HERCULES MERIT A/S 45,000 MILE

155SR12	$37.82
145SR13	36.36
165SR13	39.77
185SR14	48.81
165SR15	46.12
175/70SR13	44.85
185/70SR13	46.49
185/70SR14	48.79
195/70SR14	51.17
205/70SR14	53.94

ALL SEASON B/W DESIGN STEEL BELTED RATED TO 112 MPH

Anthony's
Adult Entertainment With A Touch Of Class



Coming Next Week Don't Miss This Show
Hyapatia Lee
Oct 25-29
Special Seating For 18+ Positive ID Required
Bachelor Party Specials
Tableside Dancing
Anthony's Is The Only Area Club That Presents Feature Entertainers Each And Every Week!
MON - WED: 4pm-2am
THURS - SAT: 12pm-2am
CLOSED SUNDAYS
500 New Ludlow Rd., South Hadley
Exit 5 MA Pike to 33 North. Take right at Jiffy Lube, 1/2 mile on left.
413 536-0502

Hunan Garden 安酒園南湖 Restaurant
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 p.m.
Sunday Brunch 11 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3 p.m. - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

Commander Jimmy to Space Command. OK. Yeah, it's me mom. Can you bring me and Tony some Notes and coke to the tent... Oh, and a book. Kiss Baby Orbaugh!!!

BE AN R.A.
HELP SHAPE YOUR PIECE OF THE WORLD
FOR MORE INFORMATION, PLEASE CONTACT THE BAKER AREA OFFICE AT 545-1333.
APPLICATIONS FOR SPRING 1995 RESIDENT ASSISTANT POSITIONS ARE NOW BEING ACCEPTED.
APPLICATIONS ARE AVAILABLE IN CLUSTER OFFICES.
APPLICATIONS MUST BE TURNED IN TO THE ORCHARD HILL/CENTRAL AREA OFFICE, B31 BAKER HOUSE, BY 5:00 PM MONDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1994.
APPLICANTS ARE ENCOURAGED (BUT NOT REQUIRED) TO ATTEND ONE OF THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION SESSIONS:
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 25TH 7:00 PM GRAYSON LOUNGE,
WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 26TH 7:00 PM 5TH FLOOR WASHINGTON

The Dean of Students Office
Invites you to a lecture by
Dean Robert Thornburg
Marsh Chapel, Boston University
"The Good News and Bad News About Religion"
Memorial Hall
Wednesday, November 2
7:30 p.m.
Sponsored by the Dean of Students Office

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
for travel beginning November 1
One Way / Round Trip
LONDON $183 $345
PARIS $214 $428
MADRID $250 $500
SAN JOSE/ COSTA RICA $224 $448
TOKYO $749
Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Eurail passes issued on the spot.
PRISM TRAVEL
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street
South Amherst

Pavement show full of 'Gold Sounds'

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

PAVEMENT
Amherst College Campus Center Frontroom
Oct. 18, 1994

Anticipation was high, the final show on Pavement's highly touted 150 date tour. And while indie–rock's favorite sons have successfully secured their reputation as an erratic live act, there was indeed a hint of excitement for the unexpected running through the air at the Amherst College Campus Center Frontroom.

For the last year Pavement have cleverly fooled with the notion of being "rock stars," always keeping their critics as well as audiences guessing. After their surreal stint on "The Tonight Show" in which the band mockingly shambled through a sloppy rendition of their big "hit single" with that "I know something you don't" grin plastered on their face, it was clear these guys were not going to give any clear-cut answers. That was what made Pavement's final performance in the Valley so interesting; for the first time the boys seemed like a proper rock band. Well, sort of.

Unlike last spring when the band brought their cryptic brand of pop to Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton and played a set (much to the dismay of a large part of the audience) largely made up of new, unheard songs, this time it was all known hits.

The show started off on an obscure note with "Heckler Spray," a minute–long instrumental from their Westing compilation, but then dived into a generous helping from their latest release Crooked Rain, Crooked Rain, much to the over–anxious crowd's delight. In fact the goofy instrumental "5–4 = Unity" was the only song from the album left off the set.

Poppy crowd–pleasers such as "Cut Your Hair" and "Gold Soundz" sent the audience into fits of moshing (hey, they do it on MTV), but still there was a feeling that they were playing more for themselves than for any particular member of the audience.

Songs sputtered and chugged along, threatening to derail at any given moment and lapse into utter chaos, at times only held intact by drummer Steve West's solid, but steady beat. Remarkably enough (and this may be their greatest asset) the band managed to successfully juggle their lackadaisical yet upbeat attitude with some rough around the edges musicianship and still come up a winner.

Whether it be an impromptu homage to a local musician, or stopping in the middle of a song in order for singer Steve Malkmus to teach the bass player the right fingerings, Pavement still proved (even at their most straight–forward) their unpredictability. Full–fledged rock stars? Close, but not yet. A–

Pavement

COURTESY CARL BUTENSKY

Shapiro and company to dance at FAC

By Jonathan Ratcliff
Collegian Staff

Diving, rolling, leaping, flinging themselves across the stage; one might think that the Shapiro and Smith Dance Company has little or no regard for their own safety.

This could be true; but the company dances with such supple fluidity that the inherent danger is masked and contradicted by beautifully choreographed works that effectively blend together elements of sarcastic humor, ingenuity, experimental daring, restless energy and incredible athleticism.

The result? Performances that have been awing audiences across the country (as well as in Europe) since the company's conception in 1985. Danial Smith and Joanie Shapiro (now husband and wife) struck out on their own after dancing for eight years with the Alwin Nikolais and Murray Louis companies.

Since then, the Shapiro and Smith company has received numerous arts fellowships and grants for its work, and works from the company's repertory can be found in the programs of several respected companies all over the world– from Vancouver and the United States to Europe and South Africa.

The Shapiro and Smith Company's unique brand of modern dance exhibits a commitment to uncovering the culture which shapes our behavior, and a desire to reveal the presence and importance of nonverbal communication in our lives. To that end, they choreograph works about real people; creating metaphors of trust, loss and cooperation balanced with physicality and sarcasm. The company addresses issues that range from safe sex and cross dressing, to domestic violence and family relationship.

Modern dance is perhaps one of the least appreciated of the performance arts (at least by the masses in this country). There appears to be an air of mystery surrounding any dance form outside that of the traditional ballet form.

One does not, however, need to be an authority on the subject to enjoy a modern dance performance, especially one the likes that the Shapiro and Smith Dance Company promises. Even if the symbolism and messages behind the dancing are ignored, one is still left with a lasting experience of unique and creative physical movement which will at the least entertain, at best provoke a new thinking about the ability to communicate powerfully through dance.

The Shapiro and Smith Dance Company hosts a lineup of dancers from a variety of backgrounds: Michael Bennet from Florida; Jeff Curtis, from Montana; Kelly Drummond– Cawthon from Australia; Gayle Gibbons of New York City; and Edward Winslow from California.

UMass and the Valley area have the opportunity to experience the art of the Shapiro and Smith Dance Company in intimate setting of the Bowker Auditorium, a show presented by the Fine Arts Center.

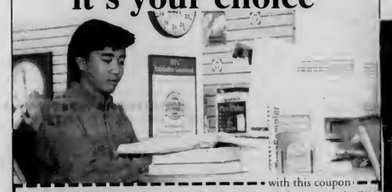
Shapiro and Smith Dance Company will perform at UMass's Bowker Auditorium on October 21 at 8 p.m. The show is sold out, contact the FAC box office at 545–2511 for more information.

BEE BOP

If you've got a good vibe you can snap your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum. Mass Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

"I can't believe Sidney, enjoying those innocent days. Also... those were the good old days, sheet sheets on the hoods of my boy bopper muffler. Staying off the shoulders of the state around to take my academic Summa Cum Laude. God bless those exciting years! I did see them on DAILY COLLEGIAN

Macintosh® or IBM® it's your choice



with this coupon!
$2 off per hour on computer rentals
kinko's the copy center
Bring this coupon into the Kinko's listed and save on in-store self-service Macintosh or IBM computer rental time. One coupon per customer. Not valid with other offers. Good only at the Kinko's listed. Expires November 30, 1994.
AMHERST: 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2543 Open 24 Hours
NORTHAMPTON: 34 Bridge St., 585-5000 (Across from the Post Office) Open 24 Hours

"What I really want to do is teach"
GRADUATE PROGRAM OPEN HOUSES
Master of Arts in Teaching English as a Second Language
November 1, 1994—5:00 p.m.
Master of Arts in Teaching Elementary, Middle, and High School Education
November 2, 1994—5:00 p.m.
Master of Science in Education Special and Intensive Special Needs
November 2, 1994—5:00 p.m.
Come to Simmons College in Boston and learn about our masters degree programs leading to teacher certification. Explore whether teaching is what you really want to do.
Call (617) 521-2910 for more information about the Open Houses, program brochures, or for directions.
SIMMONS COLLEGE GRADUATE SCHOOLS
Office of Graduate Studies Admissions - A 300 The Fenway, Boston, MA 02115-5898

The Textbook Annex is open year round but to make sure you get the books you need for this semester, buy them before
HALLOWEEN
We are beginning to return unsold books to the publisher on Monday, October 24
University Store's
TEXTBOOK ANNEX
Monday-Friday: 9 am to 4 pm
545-3570
WE ACCEPT VISA, MASTERCARD & DISCOVER

THIS SATURDAY MAKE PLANS FOR THE
THE TOC
SPORTS BAR & LOUNGE
FOR
UMASS HOCKEY EAST ACTION!
UMASS v. UMass Lowell
7:00 p.m.
SPECIAL LITE ICE PROMOTIONS
(Starting at 6:00)
Lite Ice Bottle $1.25
Munchies
Positive I.D. Required

DON'T PASS UP THESE WINNING VALUES AT...
LIQUORS 44
BEER WINE LIQUORS

LITE & LITE ICE CASE OF 24-12 OZ CANS	$12.99 +DEP	SANTA RITA CHARDONNAY & MERLOT FROM CHILE 750 MLS $3.99 (WINE OF THE MONTH)	CANADIAN CLUB WHISKEY 1.75 LITERS $16.49
MICHAEL SHEA'S BLACK & TAN CASE OF 24-12 OZ BOTTLES SALE $12.49 -$3.00 MAIL IN REBATE	$9.49 +DEP	CARLO ROSSI 4 LITERS ALL TYPES $6.99	SOUTHERN COMFORT WHISKEY 1.75 LITERS SALE $14.49 -$2.00 MAIL IN REBATE COST AFTER REBATE $12.49
FOSTER'S LAGER 12-PACK BOTTLES	$7.49 +DEP	R.H. PHILLIPS NIGHT HARVEST WINES WHITE ZINFANDEL, CUVEE RED & SAUVIGNON BLANC 1.5 LITERS $5.99	GILBEY'S GIN 1.75 LITERS $11.49
NEWCASTLE BROWN ALE 6 PACK BOTTLES	$5.99 +DEP	BERINGER WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 MLS $3.99	JUAREZ GOLD TEQUILA 1.0 LITERS $6.99
GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY CASE OF 24-16 OZ BOTTLES	$8.49 +DEP	MD 20/20 WINES ALL FLAVORS 750 MLS $1.99	LIQUORS 44 VODKA 1.75 LITERS SALE $8.99 -$1.00 MAIL IN REBATE $7.49
1/2 KEGS ICE HOUSE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LIGHT, BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE & LOWENBRAU	$39.99 +DEP

We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 10/20/94 THRU WEDS. 10/26/94
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

■ Fiction

continued from page 5

over his head. He can't possibly begin to work out, let alone defend the issues and the presentation.

Tarantino places Butch & Marsellus (don't ask how they got together) at the hands of Zed and his friend, two sick hicks who seemed to have wandered away from the set of Deliverance. It's no surprise that Zed (& Tarantino) pick Marsellus the one to rape. Imagine the movie if he chose Butch — Bruce Willis for chrissakes — and proceeded to rape and emasculate him.

But no, Tarantino's more interested in pushing limits within the genre only for them to bounce back. Butch gets away and has a moral moment: does he flee or help Marsellus? In his best Die Hard mode, Butch chooses his weapons (note that they become more and more explicitly phallic)... and it's matinee time all over again.

Tarantino deflates these controversial issues — from rape to masculinity to male power in general — by indulging in the same dopey and naive genre cliches he's been spending the whole movie trying to subvert. Ending it all with this tagline: "I'm gonna get medieval on his ass" is extremely telling. It shows how Tarantino plays to both spectrums of the audience — the eggheads and the boneheads — by trying to have it both ways, and then not being fair with either of them.

(This comes back in relation to Tarantino's continued use of the word "nigger." He's trying to be funny, to be un-P.C., to sensitize — but he's endorsing this racist shtick as entertainment and the audience is taking the bait.)

Pulp Fiction's biggest problem isn't this particularly poor plotting (the film does recover, with a clever bit with Harvey Keitel, only to draw out the final scene past the point of effectiveness). It's more a question of Tarantino's style, or rather the repetitive quality of it. More often than not, Fiction plays less like an evolvement of his style and more like an eerie case of deja vu.

In Fiction, Tarantino opts to repeat (not refine, just copy) techniques, shots, editing patterns and plot devices from Reservoir Dogs and True Romance. It's more than just Tarantino trying to create his own trademarks, it's a straight steal. More often than not, Pulp Fiction plays like an erratic version of Tarantino's Greatest Hits. The fact that this is only his second directorial effort suggests Tarantino is folding back instead of expanding his style.

Remember the end of Reservoir Dogs when all the characters, pointing their guns at each other, held a showstopper of a shootout? Tarantino echoed that in the ending of True Romance, where all the characters, pointing their guns at each other, held a humorous shootout. There's no shootout at the end of Fiction, but there is — you guessed it — a scene where characters point their guns at each other. And it's getting old.

It's more than plot retread that's a problem, you could easily attribute that to Tarantino's auteur style (i.e. he's trying to build up a few genre conventions of his own). But he's also replaying actual shots — the trunk point of view angle for one — as well as writing those famous nonsensical monologues that ring a little too familiar.

What seemed fresh, exciting and entertaining in Reservoir Dogs and True Romance now feels gimmicky. Tarantino seems to be pumping out what people want and expect from him rather than going out on a creative limb.

While Tarantino deserves some of the blame, so must the audience. Watching Pulp Fiction is a bit like viewing a pornographic movie in a crowded multiplex. There are long, drawn-out "boring parts" punctuated by wild, bloodthirsty exclamation points of violent excess...with the audience reacting in kind. And because Tarantino imposes no moral universe, both he and the audience can get away with murder.

Unlike the Tarantino-scripted Natural Born Killers (which was unjustly Stone-walled), Fiction isn't offering a moral message to the madness...the film plays like a no-strings-attached-Killers for those who thought it was too cerebral.

Pulp Fiction lives up to its name, to be sure, but nothing more. In shorthand, it's no Reservoir Dogs. There are glimpses of an improved Tarantino, and yet there's a lingering doubt within Pulp Fiction that Tarantino may not be able to fulfill the promise he himself helped to create. B

■ Pulp

continued from page 5

The trick of it all, that is, the rationalization behind the widespread success of Pulp Fiction isn't that we all just want to love it, but because Tarantino just gives us all what we really want. It is by no means the greatest movie to hit this decade, but it's at least a satisfying detour from the romanticized standards that have dominated the world of film since the 1980's. There are no drawn-out plot formulas that run from slow to interesting to climactic to end. There are no measures or models of film technique that you know will be achieved.

Pulp Fiction is a world, a scattered, jolting mixture of the lives of hit men, gangsters, drug dealers and one boxer — all of whom are presented as perfectly normal — all of whom are cast into the most lurid and hellish of all predicaments.

It's impossible to stop there. Unfortunately though, to tap into any of the film's intricacies would virtually be ruining it for you. To even suggest any of the movie's finer points would take its toll on the element of surprise, one of Pulp Fiction's most prominent features. See the movie, you'll get high off its electricity. An electricity that will jump at you from every angle, blinding your every sense and restoring the word "fun" back into a night at the movies.

One last thing. I didn't write this by popular demand, although it may seem that way. Like I said before, I was once a Tarantino pessimist. However I've lost it, been sucked in, and now, I suppose, reborn for the moment. This film does not outlive its title, so take it for what it is and you can't go wrong. Purely pulp. A

■ Colvin

continued from page 8

Willis Allan Ramsey and the rock oriented Steve Earl, Colvin incorporated these into the set without a misstep. A highlight of the evening was her version of The Police hit from Ghost In The Machine, with a slight change in the title, "Every Little Thing (He) Does Is Magic." Holding true to the form of Andy Sommer's mingling of straight rock chords and brilliant tonal arrangements, her guitar playing was a close second place to her thoughtful rendition of Sting's lyrics.

With the conclusion of the show, and the audience's refusal to let her leave the stage, I could not help but be taken aback. The skill and expertise she emitted with the evening's performance once again arose itself in her encores. Mixing one of her own compositions with a medley that consisted of bits from The Temptations ("My Girl") to the Eagles ("Best Of My Love"), the Red Hot Chili Peppers ("Under The Bridge") and the Rolling Stones ("Beast Of Burden"), Colvin could not help but amaze.

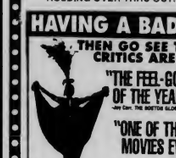
AMSTERDAM	$215
PARIS	$229
MILAN	$239
TEL AVIV	$369
CARACAS	$215
BANGKOK	$468

Fares are each way based on a round trip purchase from Boston. Student or Faculty ID may be required. Taxes and surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.

Council Travel
79 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-1261

PARAMOUNT THEATRE
SPRINGFIELD ● MASSACHUSETTS

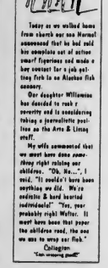
GORDON LIGHTFOOT
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 11TH



DANA CARVEY
SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 12TH

TICKETS AVAILABLE AT BOX OFFICE 413-734-5874
ALL STRAWBERRIES RECORD OUTLETS OR CALL PROTIX AT 1-800-955-5566

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
HOLDING OVER THRU OCT. 27 - DAILY 7:00 & 9:15
HAVING A BAD HAIR DAY?
THEN GO SEE THE MOVIE CRITICS ARE CALLING
"THE FEEL-GOOD MOVIE OF THE YEAR!" —Joe Corr, THE BOSTON GLOBE
"ONE OF THE WILDEST MOVIES EVER MADE!" —Rex Reed, NEW YORK OBSERVER
THE ADVENTURES OF Priscilla QUEEN OF THE DESERT
ACADEMY-MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Trade 584-8435



Today as we walked home from church our son Norval announced that he had told his associates (at elementary school) Experience and made a key covenant (or a pinky pact) they first felt to be Absolute Risk necessary.

Our daughter Willamina has decided to rush a sorority and is considering taking a pre-athletic position as the Arts & Living staff.

My wife announced that we must have done something right raising our children. "Oh, No...", I said, "It couldn't have been anything we did. We're scientists & hard learned individuals!" "Yes, you probably right Walter. It must have been that your the children read, the one we were to wrap our flesh."

Collegian
"Con-sensing youth"

GREEN DAY
BUCKNELL
WITH SPECIAL GUEST
Pansy Division
NOV 28
7:30
TIX: $15.50
IMAF
MULLINS CENTER
TICKETS ON SALE THIS FRIDAY AT 10AM
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT THE MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE FILENES • MOVIES & MORE VIDEO PARADISE • MAIN MUSIC SHOP • NATIONAL RECORD MART • RECORD TOWN CHARGE BY PHONE (413) 733-2500 (617) 931-2000 EVENT DATE AND TIME SUBJECT TO CHANGE
PRODUCED BY METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT & ODDEN PRESENTS

Melissa Etheridge LIVE
Saturday November 19 8pm
TICKETS ON SALE THIS SATURDAY AT 10AM
AT THE MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE FILENES • MOVIES & MORE VIDEO PARADISE • MAIN MUSIC SHOP NATIONAL RECORD MART • RECORD TOWN CHARGE BY PHONE (413) 733-2500 (617) 931-2000 EVENT DATE AND TIME SUBJECT TO CHANGE
MULLINS CENTER
PRODUCED BY METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT

SHOP SCOTTS AND $AVE!!
Prices good 10/17/94 - 10/22/94
Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m. Tel. 549-2692
BUSCH 24-12oz Bar Bottles $9.49 +dep
COORS EXTRA GOLD 24-12oz Bar Bottles $10.99 +dep
LITE ICE 24 - 12oz Cans $12.99 +dep
BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE 1/2 Kegs $39.99
CAPTAIN MORGAN SPICED RUM 1.75 Ltr. Sale Price $18.99 Mail in Rebate -$3.00 Final Cost $12.99
ZHENKA VODKA 1.75 Ltr. Sale Price $8.99 Mail in Rebate -$2.00 Final Cost $6.99
SOUTHERN COMFORT 750 ml $6.99
STROTTS & STROTTS LIGHT 15 pk cans $5.99 +dep
We Want To Be Your Favorite Liquor Store !
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Tele-Check for your personal check
We now have all Mass Lottery games

Attention Advertisers
Here are your Ad Reps of the Week...
Highest Average Percentage Over Quota...
JENNIFER GEAGAN
Top Sales This Week...
CRAIG BRODY.
Highest Percentage Over Quota This Week
KARA KILDUFF 250%

We Deliver to UMass
Kai Chi
Chinese - American Cuisine Restaurant & Bar
LATE NIGHT DINNER SPECIAL!
UP TO 30% OFF!
Friday, Saturday & Sunday • 9pm - Closing
No other promos apply / Not available for Take Out
Entrees Starting at $4.50
Kai Chi Restaurant
MT. FARMS MALL • RT 9 • HADLEY • 586-2774
Open Sun. - Thurs. 11:30am - 11:00pm
Fri. - Sat. 11:30am - midnight

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Jim's Journal By Jim

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Take a Study Break By Gleeson

For a finals study break, Morrison and Hayden went to THE CITY
We got our IRISH up and saw Black '47 at Paddy Reilly on 52nd. It was history, and '90s, it got better
We rounded Quinnesse with George Wendt and Black '47
NORM!
Bet you're glad you read this!
Yeah, Bet you're glad you read this!
Bet you're glad you read this!
Yeah, Bet you're glad you read this!
Bet you're glad you read this!
Yeah, Bet you're glad you read this

Sports

UM goalie job still up for grabs

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

A goaltender can be the great equalizer in hockey, carrying a team when needed.

For the University of Massachusetts hockey team, entering its first season in Hockey East, there will be nights when that type of goaltending performance will be needed. Two sophomores and a freshman have been vying to be that man in the UMass goal.

Dave Kilduff and Rich Moriarty return from last year's squad to compete with freshman Brian Regan for the starting job.

UMass HOCKEY Season Preview

"It's a three horse race, we still haven't sorted it out. Kilduff and Moriarty have returned in better condition and Regan is right there," Massachusetts Coach Joe Mallen said. "We need to have more than one goalie."

Kilduff played in 20 games last season, posting a 2.87 goals against average and a .865 save percentage. The Penticton, British Columbia native compiled a 14–4 record with two shutouts.

"It's been so competitive, we all get along and learn from each other, just a fun atmosphere and will be a constant battle," Kilduff said.

While Kilduff received the majority of work last season, Moriarty saw more of the action against Division I teams. The Deerfield Academy product appeared in 13 games last season with a 3.77 GAA and a .860 save percentage. He went 6–5 on the season, and was in net for UMass' only Division I victory over Army.

"We're all friends off the ice, on the ice we're all aiming for that starting spot. It all comes down to who plays well in practice," Moriarty said.

Regan comes in a highly regarded prospect. He was drafted by the NHL's Hartford Whalers in the 10th round of this year's draft. Regan, a New Milford, Conn. native, was listed in the "Rookies to watch" section in Drop the Puck 1994–95 College Hockey Yearbook.

"You have to give so much credit to Regan, coming in here as a freshmen and playing so well," Kilduff said.

With opening night approaching fast, Mallen will hold out on his goaltending decision up until Saturday night.

"I would like to pick the one goalie for that game and go with him. The challenge in practice has been fierce," Mallen said.

With the majority of UMass contests on back–to–back nights, the need for more than one capable goaltender is there. Most of the teams in Hockey East do have a situation where two netminders are used regularly.

"I'm sure if one guy is playing really well, we'll stick with him. If a guy is tired from facing a lot of shots, we may see a change," Kilduff said.

The defense in front of whoever is in goal will be inexperienced, with as many as three freshmen in the line–up on defense. The offenses in Hockey East will be high– powered, the intensity clearly higher compared with last season.

"The defense is coming together with a lot of work to do. It's definitely going to get better, we have a lot of size this year," Kilduff said. "They have been great to work with, and they're always willing to listen and work with us."

"Our defense has been great. They played so well (in a 10– 5 exhibition win over Seneca College) for me in one period, that was a real good sign," Moriarty said.

Mallen gave each goaltender a period in Sunday's exhibition win over Seneca.

Kilduff played the first period and yielded two goals on five shots. Regan played the second and also made three saves while giving up two goals. Moriarty had the most work, making nine saves on 10 shots in the third period.

"These guys have to rise to the occasion and play to the level of Hockey East," Mallen said.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

David Kilduff will need to finish his preseason impressively if he wants to earn the start for Saturday's season opener.

Duffy impresses in last year

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Throughout the history of field hockey at the University of Massachusetts, there have been some great players and great teams. According to current Coach Megan Donnelly, senior midfielder Colleen Duffy could have played with any of them.

"She could have played on any team. Her style and emotionalism is traditional," Donnelly said, who played her collegiate field hockey at UMass. "She is like the players I remember, that I played with, the players who wore their heart on their sleeve. They'd do anything to win and were very proud of it. Colleen transcends any era. She is a UMass field hockey player."

Duffy started with meager beginnings. She started playing her freshman year at a brand new program at the Manchester Township High School. The program was not successful in its early years, with Duffy as one of the team's few bright spots.

She knew that after playing through four losing seasons, that she wanted to play her college career with a winner. Her stick skills and strong passing ability caught the attention of the UMass Coach Pam Hixon.

"I knew that when I came to college that I wanted to play on a competitive Division I team," Duffy said. In addition to UMass, Duffy was recruited by Old Dominion and Maryland, but Duffy chose UMass because of Hixon.

"I wanted an opportunity to play under a coach who could teach me to be a better player," Duffy said, who also credits Hixon for helping her off the field.

"Pam helped me grow up," she said. "She helped me realize that field hockey wasn't everything."

Success came for Duffy even earlier than she expected, as she became a starter as a freshman. She thrived as a rookie, playing well enough to be named the Atlantic 10 Freshman of the Year. Starting all four years is point of great pride for the New Jersey native.

"I have a lot of pride in that," Duffy said. "To look back on my collegiate career, being a four year starter for a top five team, is an accomplishment."

"She could have played on any team. Her style and emotionalism is traditional. She is like the players I remember, that I played with... she is a UMass field hockey player."
—UMass Coach, Megan Donnelly

Going into her junior season, Duffy admittedly came in unprepared for the season, which temporarily cost her the starting spot. When she did return, she had returned to the level of play that earned her the spot as a freshman. In her first game back, she had an exceptional game in UMass' 2–0 upset of Old Dominion.

"It was upsetting, but it was my own fault," said Duffy. "I ended up working out twice a day and never took a day off. It made me remember discipline and hard work, which I had forgotten about for two years."

Playing well in big games has become commonplace for Duffy. Her defensive save against No. 2 James Madison forced the game into overtime, where UMass triumphed 2–1. The play helped earn Duffy the A–10 Defensive Player of the Week.

"Whenever we're playing the big games, she seems to play better," Donnelly said.

Before the game Duffy is unusually spirited on an other wise laid back team.

"She's a very intense player. If we have a cheerleader type, a noisy in–your–face type, its Colleen," Donnelly said. "The rest of the team is really laid back. She adds a whole different type of intensity. You need somebody who wears their emotions on their sleeve. She's really helped the energy level."

"I try to get people psyched up for the game, and get the adrenaline flowing," Duffy said. "I like to make sure they're ready."

Donnelly recognized early on what the camaraderie means to Duffy after showing her team an inspirational movie.

"A lot of the players, got fired up about it," Donnelly said. "Colleen was the one who most understood how special being on a team, and being with your friends is."

With that final season winding down, Duffy is nostalgic about her career.

"[Playing field hockey] means the world," she said. "It's something I love to do. It's rewarding to me now. I've dedicated myself and disciplined myself to playing on one of the top teams in the country. I would like to be remembered as someone who didn't give up."

Duffy is emphatic about how she wants her career to end.

"I definitely want a national championship," Duffy said. "I have all the confidence in the world that we are the best team in the nation."

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Senior midfielder Colleen Duffy (left) has been crucial in the field hockey team's quest for a national title.

Minutewomen head to Rhode Island looking to avenge earlier defeat

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

Two weeks ago, the Massachusetts volleyball team suffered its first loss of the season to the University of Rhode Island at the Curry Hicks Cage.

The defeat broke UMass' 14–game winning streak, and kept the Minutewomen from equalling the best start in Massachusetts volleyball history.

UMass, now 17–2, 5–2 in the Atlantic 10, will have it's chance for revenge tonight when they travel to Kingston, R.I. to tangle with the WRams one more time.

"Our team feels capable," UMass Coach Bonnie Kenny said. "But we know it is going to be a long, hard fight. We're willing to work as hard as we have to to win."

The Minutewomen are coming off a successful weekend where they defeated two A–10 foes on the road, including a 3–1 win over defending league champion George Washington.

"That win was humongous," Kenny said, whose squad handed the Lady Colonials their first league loss of the season. "It was a confidence builder, and really opened up some doors in our conference."

From where it stands now, anything can happen in the A– 10. One game separates four teams, and Massachusetts is right in the thick of things.

Rhode Island is currently in a tie atop the Atlantic 10 with George Washington, with a 6–1 league mark. UMass' 5–2 record is good for a second place tie with Temple.

"A win (against URI) would be huge," Kenny said. "It could put us in a great position to get a bye in the first round of the A–10 Tournament (earned by the first and second place teams), and that would be an unexpected pleasure."

"Every team is capable of putting two good matches together, but to play three in a row is hard."

During their last encounter, the WRams, now 11–6 overall, needed four games to defeat the Minutewomen, 15–11, 15– 13, 14–16, 15–9.

Outside hitters Sabrina Pozzi and Kris Normandin led the WRams with 25 and 21 kills respectively.

"It is going to be a battle of outside hitters," Kenny said. "They had a field day last time, and we cannot let that happen again."

Pozzi has hit for a .202 attack percentage on the season, and Normandin at a .129 clip. However, the two of them both played levels above that against the Minutewomen, as Pozzi hit for a .306 percentage, and Normandin tallied a .302.

"We can't let them look like All–Americans again," Kenny said.

In the first matchup against URI, sophomore outside hitter Giza Rivera, UMass' season leader in kills with 295, had 17 kills and an .095 attack percentage, far below her team leading average of .272.

Another bright spot for the Minutewomen has been the play of outside hitter Lesley Nolan.

The freshman from Mission Viejo, Calif. has stepped right in as a starter for the UMass squad, leading the team in digs with 233. She is also second on the UMass team in kills.

"Lesley is very steady," Kenny said. "She has excellent court sense and is extremely consistent."

Consistency, especially on defense, has been something the Minutewomen are still looking to achieve.

"We have to train and compete every day at the level we played at George Washington," Kenny said. "Defensively we have the potential and the ability (to play well). We can't get caught out of position."

UMass is currently in the middle of a six game road stretch which will wrap up next Tuesday at Harvard. The Minutewomen will then return home for a pair of A–10 contests, Oct. 28 against Rutgers and Oct. 29 vs. Temple.

"We miss being home, but we have two more matches to play," Kenny said. "We can't complain, the road has been pretty good to us."

The Minutewomen are 7–1 away from the Cage this season.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

The University of Massachusetts volleyball team will hope to avenge an earlier loss, when they face Rhode Island tonight on the road.

Paterno and Penn State do it once again

Hail to Joe Paterno, for he has done it yet again.

Coach Paterno and his Penn State team went into Michigan and came away with a thrilling 31–24 victory in a classic college football game. Steady quarterback Kerry Collins piloted the Nittany Lion offense using all the talent that make up the nation's best offensive machine.

On the other sidelines, Gary Moeller and his unimaginative offense were outcoached. One play in particular stands out.

Third down and two on the Penn St. 45, Moeller has a three wide receiver, one back set. Out of that awful formation, the run play by Tyrone Wheatley was dropped for a loss.

On fourth down a pass play had no chance, game over. All of this could have been academic, but receiver Amani Toomer dropped the tying touchdown pass on the two yard line.

It's amazing what one loss can do. All of a sudden turmoil is running rampant through the Swamp, complete with quarterback controversy. Last season, Steve Spurrier switched up his QBs and neither Terry Dean nor Danny Wuerffel got into a rhythm.

Dean, a Heisman candidate before the Auburn loss, now may be replaced. It's his team, his senior year, his shot at the championship. Wuerffel, a sophomore, may be better eventually, but Dean cannot lose his job after one loss.

Notre Dame was supposed to be on a down year. As ND's 4–3 record suggests, they are. However, Brigham Young (who?) comes in and beats ND in South Bend. A horrible loss, no excuses for the Irish, and no Top 25 poll either. Look out, after a bye week, powerful Navy comes to town.

With no shot at a major Bowl, maybe now Holtz can concentrate on fitting the offense around QB Ron Powlus, not vice versa.

For years Lou Holtz has been trying to tell everyone that his teams aren't good. Well Lou, be careful what you wish for.

Hope everyone saw those rumors about Division I–AA school Alcorn State playing in the Liberty Bowl. The game selection committee is thinking about allowing Alcorn State to play, even without any wins against a I–A school (six are required to go to a bowl). What a joke, they would be destroyed by any possible opponent.

All this because of Steve McNair and his Heisman hype. One man doesn't make a team, as the Liberty Bowl will see if they make the mistake and allow the Braves to play in the game.

Also on the subject of hype, Alcorn St. will appear on ESPN 2 on Saturday against Southern. Another strange move, this game should compete well with badminton for ratings.

Here's a game everyone would love to see: the Probation Bowl. Auburn vs. Texas A&M, for the rights to see who is the best football team on probation in the land.

Anthony Guido on College Football

Speaking of Auburn, the Tigers win against Florida, once again proving that the SEC is the best conference in the land. Experts argue for many other conferences, but none of it makes sense. The ACC or Big East are still one–team leagues. The Pac–10? Please, play some defense, no complete teams there.

The Big 8 and Big 10 are close, but the SEC has a championship game after the regular season. In a sport dominated by the lack of a final outcome, at least the SEC has a playoff.

Last week I lost two of three, the two losses coming by a combined seven points. That hurts, as does the season record (5–7). This week's games aren't exciting, but here's three from a slow week:

North Carolina 24, Virginia 17 — The upset of the week. The all–Johnson backfield runs over the weak Virginia defense. QB Jason Stanicek will have a big day leading the versatile UNC offense in the battle for second place in the ACC.

Oklahoma 23, Kansas 20 — A dead–even match–up in the Big 8. The Sooners have the superior defense and aren't half as bad as Colorado made them look.

South Carolina 26, Vanderbilt 13 — A contest between average SEC teams. Even though it's Homecoming, Vandy suffers a letdown after last week's upset of Georgia. Told you it was a very slow week.

Anthony Guido is a Collegian columnist.

Ben Albert leads UM defense

Senior co-captain Ben Albert of the UMass football team has excelled in his four years due to relentless hard work (See Sports, page 8).

Mudslinging by Kennedy, Romney

What do you think about the mud-slinging that has taken place before the Kennedy-Romney showdown? (See Campus Perspectives, page 3)

A "Deee-Lite"-ful time at Pearl Street

Deee-Lite will be at Pearl Street on Sunday to showcase their unusual style of feel-good hip-hop vibes (See Arts and Living, page 5).

Weekend Forecast

Today will be cloudy, with highs near 60. Tonight, cloudy with patchy fog, lows in the mid 40's. Watch for the sun breaking through the clouds on Saturday, with highs around 60.

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 45	HIGH: 60 LOW: 40	HIGH: 60 LOW: 45

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 28 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, October 21, 1994

Clinton lends hand to Kennedy

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

FRAMINGHAM — President Clinton used the signing of a federal education bill Thursday to sing the praises of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and to assert that Kennedy and other endangered Democrats are gaining in popularity as Election Day approaches. "The fog is beginning to clear in America," he proclaimed at a town-hall rally for Kennedy and other Massachusetts Democratic office-seekers.

Despite Kennedy's 32 years in the Senate, Clinton portrayed him as a man brimming with new ideas and one of Congress' ablest members at forging bipartisan efforts.

"You should vote for the agents of change, not for the agents of yesterday," Clinton said.

Earlier, the president stood on a wooden platform in the muggy gymnasium at Framingham High School and signed a bill to provide some $60 billion in federal education aid over five years. Lawmakers of both parties looked on as he signed the measure before an audience of about 1,000 students and parents.

The Boston-area events came as Clinton concluded two days of campaigning here and in New York for Kennedy and New York Gov. Mario Cuomo. Both Democratic giants are locked in difficult re-election campaigns.

Clinton generally has higher approval ratings in the Northeast than he has in the rest of the nation. Both days of campaign events drew enthusiastic audiences, a welcome change from some of the lukewarm responses Clinton has drawn on campaign trips elsewhere. An overflow of a few thousand people waited for Clinton outside the political rally, and they cheered loudly when he emerged. The president spent about 15 minutes shaking hands with the voters lining the street before climbing into his limousine.

Clinton's visit coincided with the publication of a new poll that appeared to show Kennedy doing better against his GOP rival, Massachusetts businessman Mitt Romney. The Boston Herald-WCVB-TV poll, conducted Monday and Tuesday, showed Kennedy with 50 percent and Romney with 40 percent, with a margin of error of 4.9 percent. In a Boston Globe poll published Sept. 25, Kennedy had 48 percent, Romney 46 percent, with a margin of error of 5 percent. Because of the margins of error, both reflect a tight race.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Senator Edward M. Kennedy

Lousy locks blamed for campus bike thefts

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

As the price tags of students' bicycles continue to increase, so have the number of bicycle thefts reported to the University of Massachusetts police.

Statistics from the University Division of Public Safety indicate over 350 bicycles have been reported stolen at the UMass campus over the past three years.

The number of reported cases of bicycles stolen to University police in 1993 increased by 33 thefts from 1992.

During the calendar year of 1992, 117 cases of thefts were reported, whereas 133 cases were reported in 1993.

To date, 75 cases have been reported from January of this year.

Deputy Chief of the Division of Public Safety, Larry Holmes, said statistics from 1994 may be an indication of heightened awareness of the public about the large number of bicycle thefts.

"It appears the public is now taking more protective measures," Holmes said.

Public Safety officer Neil Lunney said this week's on- campus bicycle registration is an effort by the Division of Public Safety to provide students with information about the use of appropriate locking devices as well as to give students an opportunity to register their bicycles with the Division of Public Safety and a national data-base located in Washington D.C.

Holmes said funds returned to the University from registration fees of the national bike registration program will be used to purchase bicycle racks for the campus.

At the present time, the Division of Public Safety is working in collaboration with the Physical Plant and University Safety Commission to assure newly installed bicycle racks will accommodate new locking devices.

University officials attribute the use of inappropriate locking devices to majority of bicycle thefts.

Lunney said the use of a Kryptonite U-lock is the most effective device.

Students are encouraged not to lock their bicycles to trees, chain link fences or wooden posts as these objects may be cut.

Lunney said unless a students registers his/her bicycle, the chances of returning a stolen bicycle to its rightful owner decreases significantly.

"Seventy-five percent of stolen bicycles end up being recovered, but can't be traced back to their owner because they don't have a registration decal and no engraving or distinguishing marks made known to the University police," Lunney said.

Lunney said a UMass decal found on a student's bicycle is detected immediately by University Police in the case of bicycle theft.

These decals are given to a students when registering a bicycle.

Turn to LOCKS, page 3

Alleged bike thief arraigned in district court

By Kelly Spang
Collegian Staff

A Russell man accused of stealing seven bicycles was arrested earlier this month when a bicycle was discovered in the back of his truck.

Timothy N. Hodges, 21, was arraigned in Hampshire County District Court on three counts of larceny of over $250 as well as four counts of property value of less than $250.

He was also charged with possession of burglary tools.

According to the University Registrar's Office, Hodges is not listed as an enrolled student.

The Collegian attempted to find more information on the arrest and the charges brought against Hodges but was denied access to the information.

Phil Cavanaugh, the UMass court officer, said according to the CORI law, he could not release any information.

CORI, which stands for Criminal Offender Record Information, restricts dissemination of criminal records by law.

Several parts of CORI have been found unconstitutional.

Cavanaugh told The Collegian information on Hodges' case could be found in The Daily Hampshire Gazette, a daily newspaper based in Northampton.

Cavanaugh did say the investigation is continuing.

According to the Gazette, Hodges denied all charges.

According to the Gazette, on Oct. 9, police said UMass officer Michael Ross noticed a bicycle in the back of an unattended truck, left with its engine running and parked next to Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Ross pulled along side the unattended truck and noticed six bicycles in nearby bushes. Hodges emerged from the bushes shortly after, according to the Gazette.

According to the Gazette, Hodges admitted to stealing the bicycle in the truck when questioned by Ross.

When arraigned on Oct. 11, Hodges pleaded innocent. A pre-trial hearing is set for Dec. 1.

According to the Gazette, among the recovered bicycles were a black Diamondback, a Univega, and a Redline mountain bike.

UMass police said almost all the bicycle owners have been contacted, according to the Gazette.

Collegian staff member Heather Redfern contributed to this article.

Hispanic culture celebrated in UM art exhibit

By Michelle Lugo
and Hernan Rozemberg
Collegian Staff

"Al Nuevo Mundo," a three-year celebration of Hispanic culture at the University of Massachusetts, was inaugurated yesterday with the retrospective exhibition by Leonel Gongora titled, "Memoria/Memory: Three Decades of Work, 1960s to 1990s."

Gongora, a native Colombian, has been a professor of painting in the UMass Arts Department for thirty years. His work is represented in many museums and private collections worldwide.

Using the figure and bold expressive color to depict a potent personal vision, Gongora explores the power and intimacy of relationships.

The painter has received many awards, including the Medal of Congress of Colombia, the highest decoration given to accomplished artists of Colombia.

"In 'Memoria/Memory' there is, of course, in most of it my culture as a Latin American as well as my personal vision: romantic, sensual, idealistic, nomadic, fragmented, and populated by many different countries and people I have known through my life," said Gongora.

The exhibition, which was sponsored in part by the Herter Gallery, the Latin American Cultural Center, and the Institute for the Advanced Studies in the Humanities, will be on display at the Gallery until Nov. 10.

Robert Paul Wolff, representative of the latter Institute, introduced the project "To the New World" as an on-going experiment reaching out to the Latino communities in Massachusetts through cultural and social events.

"It is fitting that a major public institution like the University of Massachusetts present and celebrate the rich cultural and intellectual accomplishments of this diverse community," said Javier Cevallos, faculty advisor to the provost and member of the Spanish and Portuguese departments.

According to Cevallos, in the long-run, this effort will also encourage young Latinos/as to enroll at the University, thereby strengthening both the Hispanic community and the institution.

Cevallos described the project as a way of rediscovering what Christopher Columbus initially saw. He described the Hispanics now as a mix of African, Native American, and European cultures.

The project revolves around the belief that these cultures have to continue rebuilding from a common base to create a new world, because it has not yet been formed, even though in history books, it is termed as such.

Another planned activity is to bring respected members of the Latino art community, such as writer Gabriel Garcia Marquez and Argentine-born pianist Estela Olevsky.

Organizers hope to present music, art, theatre and literary events drawn from the entire Spanish-speaking Americas.

From the NCAA director's chair to the University lecture hall

By Arthur Stapleton Jr.
Collegian Staff

Going back to school.

When he resigned as executive director of the NCAA in May, Dick Schultz left a position in which he had a direct effect on student-athletes at the collegiate level.

Schultz's departure allowed him to get even closer to the students and their concerns as a part-time professor in the University of Massachusetts Sports Management Program this fall.

PAUL BUCKLEY / COLLEGIAN

Former Executive Director of the NCAA Dick Schultz is here at the University, teaching students as a part-time faculty member in the Sports Management Department.

"I think it's really important for those of us who are in the business to be willing to take the time and share our experiences with people who are going to be part of the enterprise at some particular point in time," said Schultz. "I've made plenty of mistakes in my career and there isn't any reason why they have to do the same mistakes."

Prior to being the second-ever executive director of the NCAA, Schultz was the athletic director at the University of Virginia from 1981-87 and Cornell University from 1976-81.

He was the recipient of the 1994 James J. Corbett Award, given to the collegiate athletics administrator who "through the years has most typified Corbett's devotion to intercollegiate athletics and worked unceasingly for its betterment."

The award is considered the highest honor one can achieve for athletics administration.

Schultz said his trip to the University began with a blind letter which was sent to him by Glenn Wong, the chair of the Sports Management Department, asking him if he would be interested in a part-time professorship this fall.

After he left his position with the NCAA, Schultz said he bandied about the idea of writing letters to university presidents and athletic directors, offering his services, but didn't have time.

Wong said that he had planned on mailing letters to several other people, such as Fay Vincent, former commissioner of Major League Baseball, yet sent only one, that being the offer to Schultz.

"In terms of people in the sports industry, I rate Dick at the very highest level in terms of his background, knowledge and experiences," Wong said. "[Because of] his communication abilities, we thought he'd be able to communicate those things to our students in the classroom."

Offers for Schultz's employment ranged from various athletic director jobs across the country to positions with organizations in professional sports.

There were preliminary talks between Schultz and higher- ups from Major League Baseball, discussing the possibility of becoming commissioner of baseball.

Even though the seat in the commissioner's office was never offered to him, Schultz said he truly wasn't interested, due to the prospects of living in New York City.

Schultz's appearances in the classroom this week were limited to selected Sports Management classes, mainly due to restricted space in Marcus Hall.

According to Wong, Schultz's lectures were videotaped and will be available for students' viewing.

Balancing academics and athletics

In 1990, as executive director of the NCAA, Schultz was asked to give the state of the association address at the convention in Dallas.

According to Schultz, he used the opportunity as a "bully pulpit" in an effort to preach about a balance of academics and athletics and what had been lacking as far as the academic standing of athletes.

"You are what you are perceived to be, and whether you like it or not, this is what people think about college athletics. I said to change that perception we had to change the model," said Schultz.

The "reform movement," as Schultz called it, grew out

Turn to SCHULTZ, page 2

Students offer services to clean local region

By Gayle Dougherty
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts student volunteers will "make a difference" throughout the area this weekend through community services.

Student will be participating in Make-A-Difference Day tomorrow where community and student volunteers will wash windows, paint, pick up trash, among a variety of other tasks to assist local businesses and other organizations.

The event is co-sponsored by the Hampshire County United Way and the Daily Hampshire Gazette based in Northampton. There is a national Make-A-Difference Day which is sponsored by the USA Weekend magazine.

Through the campus group VIVA (Vitally Involved in Voluntary Action) about 120 volunteers from campus service groups such as the Boltwood Project, MASSPIRG, and individual students will participate in this community service effort, said Lori McKinney, community service program director.

Another 130 volunteers throughout Hampshire County are expected to attend Make-A-Difference Day.

"Part of the reason we recruit students is to wet their appetites," said McKinney, "My goal is to get across to students that [volunteering] is fun and rewarding so they'll volunteer again."

Volunteers will be bused to various volunteer sites after

Turn to VOLUNTEERS, page 3

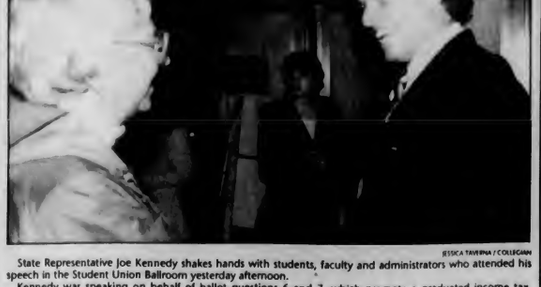
Rock the vote



JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

State Representative Joe Kennedy shakes hands with students, faculty and administrators who attended his speech in the Student Union Ballroom yesterday afternoon.

Kennedy was speaking on behalf of ballot questions 6 and 7, which promote a graduated income tax. Kennedy said that the tax would cut a break for 92 percent of Massachusetts tax payers.

Police Log

Compiled by Kelly Spang from University reports

Family Offenses, Domestic
Oct. 16
Police were called to resolve an argument between an individual and her boyfriend in John Adams Residence Hall.

Annoying Behavior
Oct. 16
An individual reported that while waiting for a bus, a male subject approached her and exposed himself and masturbated. She flagged down a cruiser and reported the incident.

Bike Theft
Oct. 15
An individual reported her bike stolen, which was locked to a pole by Boyden Gym.

Motor Vehicle Theft
Oct. 19
An individual reported his 1987 Honda stolen from Lot 11.

Disturbance
Oct. 14
Police responded to a fight in progress on the second floor of Butterfield Residence Hall. The participants left before the police arrived.
Oct. 16
Police are still investigating a fight which occurred on the ninth floor of Kennedy Residence Hall. One individual reported being kicked and punched when a dispute broke out between two groups.
Timothy Hanrahan, 20, of 21 Fort Point Road in Weymouth was arrested for indecent exposure.

Fire Alarm
Oct. 16
A bulletin board in the lobby of Coolidge Residence Hall was set on fire. An RA saw it ablaze and extinguished it.

Vandalism
Oct. 14
Student security reported subjects in Lot 32 possibly had broken a window on a vehicle. Police found a window broken on a vehicle, but cleared the individuals of any involvement of the damage.
Two windows were reported broken near the entrance hall of Mahar Auditorium.
Oct. 15
An individual reported a window on her vehicle was smashed on Orchard Hill Drive.
Staff reported vulgarities written on a poster in Kennedy Residence Hall.
Oct. 16
An individual reported a window smashed on his vehicle in Lot 50.

Suspicious Activity
Oct. 12
An individual found sleeping in the lounge, and who had no affiliation with UMass, was issued a trespass notice.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
Oct. 16
Staff reported that upon arrival to the Fine Arts Center they discovered two doors were open which had been secured the day before. Tools and theater equipment were reported stolen.

Larceny
Oct. 14
Staff reported two rugs were recovered and turned over to the Police for investigation. The rugs had previously been reported stolen from Housing Services.
Oct. 15
An individual reported a tire stolen from his vehicle in Lot 44.
An individual reported an end table stolen from her suite in Cashin Residence Hall.
Oct. 17
An individual reported a watch and some cassette tapes had been stolen from her room in Dickinson Residence Hall.

Motor Vehicle Stops
Oct. 15
Edwin Valez Laboy, 19, of 275 Main St. in Holyoke was arrested for operating a motor vehicle without a license, for being a minor transporting and carrying alcohol, and failing to stop at a red light.
Dorothea Herrzberg, 20, of Burlington, Vt. was stopped for a minor transporting alcoholic beverages, operating a motor vehicle with defective equipment, and operating under the influence of liquor.
Oct. 19
Vernon Edward Turner, 26, of Southpoints Apartments was stopped for operating after his licenses had been suspended, his fourth offense, operating after revocation of registration plate, operating a motor vehicle without a license, and failure by owner to have the motor vehicle inspected.

Intoxicated Person
Oct. 15
A 19-year-old individual was placed into custody by Mullins Center after being checked by ambulance personnel.
Police responded to a report of an 18-year-old individual passed out on the seventh floor of Kennedy Residence Hall who was later placed into protective custody.
Oct. 16
A 16-year-old individual was placed into protective custody on Campus Center Way.

Annoying Phone Calls
Oct. 15
An individual reported receiving a call from a male subject who offered her money to talk with him.
Oct. 16
An individual reported receiving a threatening message on his voice mail.
Oct. 17
An individual reported having received a number of annoying calls from a former acquaintance.
Oct. 18
An individual reported a male caller offered her money and a car if she would respond to his questions.
Oct. 19
An individual reported receiving a call from a male subject who offered her money.

Drug Offense
Oct. 15
David Karlin, 18, of 36 Craftsland Road in Brookline was arrested for illegal possession of a Class D substance.

Assault and Battery
Oct. 16
An individual reported a past assault and battery which had occurred earlier outside of the Bluewall.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Oct. 21

Lecture — Visiting Lecturer Series in Geology, Morrill Science Center room 131, UMass, 3:30 p.m.
Lecture — Gendered Social Knowledge: Domestic Discourse, Jane Addams, and the Possibilities of Social Science, Neilson Library Browsing room, Smith College, 4:15 p.m.
Film — Nazarin, Wright Hall auditorium, Smith College, free, 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.
Film — Treasure of the Sierra Madre, Campus Center Theater, Amherst College, $1.75, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.
Dance — Shapiro and Smith Dance Company, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m.
Film — The Rocky Horror Picture Show, UMass Campus Center Auditorium, show times: 7 p.m., 9 p.m., and 11 p.m.
Meeting — The Alliance Christian Fellowship sponsors its weekly TimeOut Fellowship meeting, Campus Center, UMass, 7 p.m.
Theater — The Swan, Fayerweather Studio, Amherst, free, 8 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 22

Music — A musical Celebration: John Duke on the Tenth Anniversary of His Death, Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, Smith College, free, 3 p.m.
Lecture — How We Fixed the Hubble Space Telescope, Mead, Stirn auditorium, Amherst College, free, 3 p.m.
Film — Brigadoon, Gamble auditorium, MHC, $2.50, show times: 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.
Music — Juilliard String Quartet, Bowker auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m.
Theater — Ladies on the Couch, Hampden Theater, UMass, 8 p.m.
Event — Benefit for Amherst's Open Pantry, Butterfield Basement, UMass, $3 and two cans of food, bands: Chisel, Radio To Saturn, Van Pelt, Showcase Showdown, The Gutters, information: 546-2089.

Sunday, Oct. 23

Music — HC Chorus performs Bach Catats 140 and 79, Grace Church, on Amherst Town Common, free, 3 p.m.
Music — Massachusetts Chamber Players and Sussman, Bezanson Recital Hall, UMass, 8 p.m., information: 545-2511.
Reading — Gallery of Readers, Neilson Library Browsing Room, Smith College, 4 p.m.
Music — Dave Alvin and the Guilty Men, Campus Center Frontroon, Amherst College, 8 p.m., information: 542-5773.

Monday, Oct. 24

Seminar — Mouse Nests, Nidicolous Ticks and Lyme Disease, Alexander Conference Room, Fernald Hall, UMass, 3:30 p.m.
Talk — Military Intervention as Family Violence: The Gendered Discourse of Paternalism in U.S. Occupied Haiti, Dickinson House, MHC, free, 4:30 p.m.
Music — Visiting Composer, Sage Recital Hall, Sage Hall, Smith College, free, 7:30 p.m.
Lecture — The Period of Revival: Modern Hebrew Classics, Wright Hall common room, Smith College, free, 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Schultz

continued from page 1

of this new model, tightening NCAA restrictions on practice time, reducing the length of the seasons, and raising the academic requirements of athletes.

According to Schultz, of the 275,000 college athletes who participate in the NCAA, two percent will have an opportunity to ever get a chance to play professionally.

"If [signing a million dollar professional contract] is your goal, you've got to do this year round. This has added to the complexity of this balance. There is never an off-season for an athlete anymore," said Schultz. "Administrators and members of the NCAA have to be aware of that.

"Our main responsibility is education. When you recruit a young man or a young woman to bring to your campus, your first responsibility is to make sure they are well- educated and they get a degree."

Athletes are unfairly discriminated against

"As long as you treat the athletes as you treat every other student, and you keep the same standards for all students, that's not a problem," said Schultz. "You get a problem when you start making special exceptions for athletes that you don't do for the rest of the student body."

According to Schultz, because the college athlete is visible as a public figure, they are always susceptible to some form of discrimination. Schultz said there are more restrictions placed on the athlete than any other student.

"Suppose I'm the athletic director of UMass. It's pouring rain outside and I'm driving across campus," said Schultz. "I see this young man and this young woman on crutches, out in the rain and they can't hold an umbrella.

"If that's an athlete and I know that's an athlete, I can't pick them up and give them a ride across campus. If that's a regular student, I can open my door and say, 'hey, come on, get in here out of the rain.' That's the difference."

Correction

In the Oct. 11 issue of the Collegian, it was reported that State Sen. Stan Rosenberg (D-Franklin/Hampshire counties) was opposed to Question 3 in the upcoming elections. Rosenberg supports Question 3.

In yesterday's Collegian, the front page story involving the men's basketball team said that Steven Satell was a former member of the Bridging Worlds program. Satell still works for Bridging Worlds.
The Collegian regrets the errors.

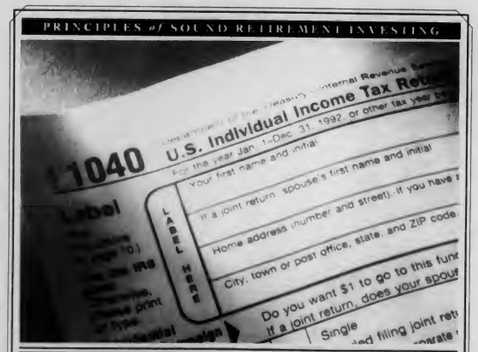
ATLANTIC 10 Atlantic Ten Conference

The source for Minuteman Basketball

No one covers UMass Basketball like the Daily Collegian. From the pre-season tipoff to the Atlantic 10 Championships to the NCAA Tournament, the Collegian has all the shots

Season Preview — November 21

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING



1040
U.S. Individual Income Tax Ret
For the year Jan. 1-Dec. 31, 1992, or other tax year be
Your first name and initial
If a joint return, spouse's first name and initial Home address (number and street). If you have City, town or post office, state, and ZIP code.
LABEL HERE
Do you want $1 to go to this fun
If a joint return, does your spou
Single

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax-bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.

CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016 for a prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

edge

EDGE SALUTES INTRAMURAL EXCELLENCE

INTRAMURAL TRACK TEAM STANDINGS

1. Delta Upsilon 60
2. Sigma Phi Epsilon 60
3. Alpha Delta Phi 16
4. Delta Chi 14

edge
NICKS. NICKS. NICKS. NIX.
NOW EDGE GEL ... TION FORMULA has more friction-reducing lubricants than ever to protect you from nicks and cuts better than foams. For a closer, smoother shave, it's just in the nick of time.
ULTIMATE CLOSENESS. ULTIMATE COMFORT. THAT'S THE EDGE.

Campus Perspectives

How do you feel about negative campaigning, like the mudslinging in the Kennedy/Romney campaigns for U.S Senator?

Compiled By Tim White • Photos By Damion Smith

"I think that if someone is pulling up dirt on someone else, then they must have dirt to cover themselves. So it just makes them look ugly."
–Michele Scott
junior, education studies
Cambridge

"I don't like it. I wish they would concentrate more on what they are doing instead of focusing on the negative. It makes me not trust the politicians even more."
–Michelle Nevil
junior, school of management
Weymouth

"I don't like that kind of campaign. I've given up on politics myself because of episodes like this. It just becomes an ego game."
–Anand Iyengar
graduate student, molecular and cellular biology
Madras, India.

"I think it's pretty sad that Kennedy has to stoop to that level. Kennedy started that campaign with malicious attacks that aren't really true. Romney is not ashamed of his record."
–Paul Ferro
freshman, political science
Marlborough

"I don't agree with mudslinging. I feel it represents what America got into and believes in. Basically they do it because it works. People may complain about it, but it works."
–Justin Dolci
freshman, communications
Jackson, N.J.

"I think that people resort to mudslinging when people are worried about where their campaign is headed. A lot more can get done if they would focus on their accomplishments."
–David Anderson
senior, psychology
Melrose

"Running against Kennedy in Massachusetts? You better use negative campaigning — Romney doesn't have much of a chance. It's all up hill for him, so he better do what he can."
–Glen Kunene
senior, journalism
Andover

Activist speaks of Communism's value

By Marnie Thamel
Collegian Correspondent

"Communism is starting to make sense," said Judith LeBlanc, a Native American activist and national leader of the communist party in the U.S.

LeBlanc is from the Coto Indian Nation in Oklahoma and attended the University of Massachusetts in the 1970s before getting involved in the Communist party.

She is also a national field organizer for the Communist Party and has been travelling to cities around the country, spreading Communist ideas to young people who are eager to find new solutions to America's problems.

LeBlanc spoke earlier this week at the University of Massachusetts.

A focus of LeBlanc, along with the Communist party, is to create "jobs and equality."

LeBlanc attacked the Clinton Administration saying, "Clinton promised to put people back to work, instead he created jails, not jobs. We can not have equality until we have jobs. It is time for radical change."

LeBlanc and the party are currently asking people to send postcards to President Clinton which read, "I pledge to march, organize and fight for the right of all to jobs and equality."

"Communist ideas, which were once considered radical, are now becoming part of the mainstream," according to LeBlanc.

According to LeBlanc, Communism originated the ideas of social security and unemployment benefits and also was for open trade with Vietnam right after the Vietnam Conflict.

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN
Judith LeBlanc, a Native American activist and national leader of the Communist party in the U.S.

Because LeBlanc is also a Native American activist, she spoke on the oppression of Native American.

"Tribes that have been historically bonded together are no longer considered tribes," she said. "And they have been cut from federal funding."

LeBlanc said she was pleased with the recent naming of the UMass library to the W.E.B. Du Bois Library in what she termed a "tremendous victory."

"The renaming was a turning point," she said, "And a fitting tribute to Dr. Du Bois."

LeBlanc encouraged her audience to join the Communist party, and said the organization is the key to changing the state of our country.

"The time is right and the people are ready to make change."

The Communist party will celebrate its 75th anniversary this Sunday through a teleconference to 75 cities. Gus Hall, national chairman of the party will give an address. The telecast can be heard at 4:30 p.m. the Campus Center, Room 919.

LeBlanc's lecture was sponsored by the Alliance for Student Power (ASP), Native American Student Association, Anti-Racism Coalition, the Graduate Student Senate, Office of Third World Affairs, the UMass/Amherst Young Communist League and the Women's Research Association for Graduate Students.

University student is local school principal

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

Most students work hard at school to learn everything they need for life, or to hold down a job. But Karena Kates is also working to ensure the education of other youngsters in addition to her schoolwork.

Kates is a second semester freshman at the University of Massachusetts, majoring in physics. She missed last semester due to health problems.

However, Kates is not only a student; she is also a principal of the Hebrew school at Temple Rodphui Sholom in Holyoke.

Kates has worked at the school since the beginning of the school year. She said that there has been no Judaic education in the congregation of 100 families for the last eight years.

Kates said she got the job through Rabbi Mitch Levine, the rabbi at Temple Rodphui Sholom, who had been looking for "someone to take this role."

Kates said that her responsibilities included being a teacher, curriculum builder, getting supplies, and making budgets.

Kates said she is in "charge of basically everything."

Kates teaches the nine kids, all between first and sixth grade, in a one room school house, where they meet every Sunday.

The school is a satellite of the United Hebrew School in Springfield, and that older students also take classes there on "Tuesdays and/or Thursdays," according to Kates.

Kates said she is "hoping for more [students,] 12 to 18 kids." She also mentioned that students do not have to be the children of members of the synagogue.

Kates said her goals are to "teach the basics of Judaism — holidays and prayer — and to makes the more active participants in services."

She said most of the students regularly attend Friday Shabbos (Sabbath) services.

"We have an emphasis," Kates said, "on integrating kids into the community and having practical Judaic skills."

"The kids love it, which is actually the most important thing," Kates said. "No matter what I teach them, if they don't enjoy it, they won't get anything out of it."

volunteers

continued from page 1

eating breakfast at the Northampton Elks Lodge tomorrow morning.

Some volunteer activities include raking and grading the Mount Pollack Conservation Area in Amherst, washing windows at the Amherst Community Child Care Center and the Amherst Survival Center, and raking leaves and wrapping presents at the Easthampton Community Center.

Other volunteer sites include the River Valley Counseling Center, the Arcadia Nature Center in Easthampton, and the YWCA of Western Massachusetts.

Students can register at the VIVA Community Service Council table on the Campus Center Concourse until today.

locks

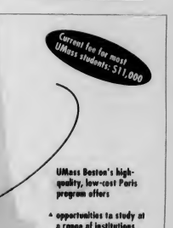
continued from page 1

Decals are available free of charge at the Division of Public Safety located in Dickinson Hall.

"If we get more kids to use UMass decals, it can help to return the bikes quickly to the owners," Lunney said.

A yearly auction held by the Division of Public Safety offers over 100 stolen bicycles which have not been returned to their rightful owners.

Anything like a fall day is a good old fashioned family barbeque. The ribs are on the grill, beer and brother, but like we like 'em! Since old Mr. Lewis, he should never have come down to the meat freezer with me. Still... these will be some great ribs.
DAILY COLLEGIAN
You are our friendly neighbor!



Dear Diary,
Last night when I was up in my favorite tree stargazing I began to ponder my life. I realized that some of my favorite things were no longer part of the new pop culture, and that many of my best loved activities were out of style. I enjoyed Pac Man and now there is Mortal Combat II. My one Barbie was nine for all seasons, but now there is a Barbie for every month and special event. I used to think rollerskating around my neighborhood in my neon, shiny jacket with my name on the sleeve was fun, but now everybody has rollerblades and they can go much faster. I used to enjoy trips to the grocery store with my mom until she told me it was wrong to eat candy from the big bins. The more I sat and thought about how my interests were different than most others I remembered that I had read The Daily Collegian that morning, and I knew that it was the hip thing to do because everybody was reading it. Wow! The Daily Collegian saved me from an identity crisis! I climbed happily down from the tree.

Current fee for most UMass students: $11,000
Study next year in Paris!
UMass Boston's high-quality, low-cost Paris program offers
- opportunities to study at a range of institutions
- 30 or more college credits
- numerous cultural activities
- personal attention from experienced and caring faculty directors
- companionship with a small group of serious, sociable students
- varied lodging choices
- and affordability.
étudier!
To be eligible for the program, you should have completed at least two years of college French (with a B average) before leaving for Paris. The program fee covers round-trip air fare, two semesters of instruction, tutorials, lodging, two meals a day, health insurance, excursions and cultural events, and theater tickets. Financial aid may be available—ask the financial aid people on your campus. February 1 is the application deadline, but space is limited. Apply early!
To learn more, call now! 617 287-7360
Spans purchased at no cost to the Commonwealth
UMass Boston

The Globe and Beyond Words are honored to present an afternoon with Howard Zinn and Jack Hoffman

You Can't Be Neutral on a Moving Train
by Howard Zinn is an inspiring personal book which works as memoir and as popular history of an era -- Zinn brings to life more than thirty years of American social history by telling the stories behind a politically engaged life. Professor Emeritus of political science at B.U. and author of A People's History of the United States

RUN RUN RUN: The Lives of Abbie Hoffman
by his brother, Jack Hoffman and Daniel Simon. The man who would dominate the media with the Yippies' in the 60's, who lived underground in the 70's and who helped enlighten Americans on our involvement in Central America and loss of the environment in the 80's. This is his younger brother's personal account of how Abbie was fighting for his life & the ideological life of his country.
Sunday, October 23, 2 pm
First Churches, 129 Main St., Northampton
Tickets $5 to benefit The National Priorities Project available at The Globe & Beyond Words
Beyond Words Bookshop 189 Main St. Northampton 586-6304 • Open nights & Sun
The Globe Bookshop 38 Pleasant St., Northampton 584-2574 • Open nights & Sun
Co-sponsored by WFCR, 88.5, Public Radio for Western New England

Book NOW for the holidays!
LONDON $173
AMSTERDAM $215
PARIS $229
MILAN $239
TEL AVIV $369
CARACAS $215
BANGKOK $468
Fares are each way based on a round trip purchase from Boston. Student or Faculty ID may be required. Taxes and surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.
79 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-1261

INCENSE • CANDLES • TAPESTRIES • POSTERS • BASKETS • RUGS
CHECK OUT THE NATURAL-FIBER CLOTHES AT THE MERCANTILE! GREAT PRICES!
AFFORDABLE DRESSES
SKIRTS
SOUTH AMERICAN SWEATERS $40 !!!
VESTS
T-SHIRTS
TOYS • BOXES • MASSAGE OILS • EARRINGS • BLANK BOOKS • CARDS • WORLD CRAFTS • SUNGLASSES • HATS • GLOVES • RUGS
NECKLACES • WALLETS • BOXERS • CHOPSTICKS • BERETS
The Mercantile
Northampton 18 Center St 584-1205
Amherst Carriage Shops 549-1106
Mon-Sat: 10-6 Sun: 12-5 Thurs & Fri til 9

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Danenne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Chris Taylor-Conner Black Affairs Editor Emily Marino Women's Issues Editor
Andrew Ferguson Business Editor Mario E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Ada Michelle Lugo Multicultural Affairs Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Kelly Spang News Editor Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Just one of the crowd at UMass

One of the things I always heard before coming to UMass was that I would be "treated like a number" if I attended my state university. "It's too big," they would say. "You won't be recognized as a person." Now, in my senior year, I've found that these people were right — to an extent. The interesting thing, however, is that I've brought the problem on myself.

I like to consider myself a rather unique individual. I suppose we all do. But what do I do on weekends? Do I take in a performance at the Fine Arts Center or head over to Smith for a poetry reading? Nope. I go UPTOWN, baby! Or I go to Puffton or Brandywine or Hobart and wedge myself into crowded apartments and wait in line to drink beer.

Why haven't I branched out more? I'm grateful and feel lucky that I've stayed close with a lot of friends throughout college, but why haven't we done more?

Caleb Cochran

At around one, I usually head over to Antonio's to see if anyone I know is hanging out. Inevitably I run into a friend or at least an acquaintance who is shamelessly throttling a slice of cheese down their throat. The best part is, I usually join them.

I'm about 5-foot-8-inches and I have an affinity for flannel shirts, baggy pants and a beat-to-hell barn jacket. I put my hair short and roam campus wearing a "UMass Swimming" hat with the brim yanked down over my eyes in a style similar to, oh, about 10,000 other UMass students. In the sea of beings that make up this University, I am an utterly generic specimen.

When my female friends tell me that all guys at UMass look the same, all I have to do is take a look in the mirror to see what they mean. I used to go to parties and laugh because everyone looked identical. The funny thing is, now I realize that I look the same as everyone else. If I'm unique, you wouldn't know it by looking at me or by following me around on weekends.

UMass is a big place. Giant. Why is it, then, that I invariably see the same faces everywhere I go? On the bus, at parties, in bars, I seem to always run into the same folks. And I'm not talking about 10 people, either. I'm talking hundreds.

I'm convinced that everyone on this campus knows each other, or at least knows of each other, in some way. I'm constantly running into people who know my roommate from freshman year, who knew my high school soccer coach, who had a class with my friend's girlfriend, etc. I mentioned recently to one of my colleagues that after four years, UMass has become a giant high school. She nodded heartily in agreement.

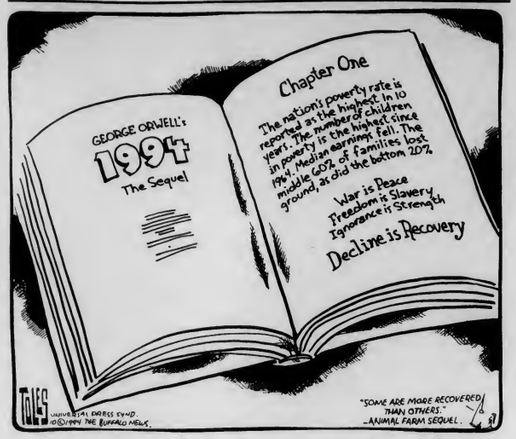
All of which leads me to some questions about myself. Why haven't I branched out more? I'm grateful and feel lucky that I've stayed close with a lot of friends throughout college, but why haven't we done more? Why don't we do anything different on weekends? How has this vast University community, with all it has to offer, become so mundane? I think the blame lies within myself.

In an effort to change things up a bit, three friends and I decided to venture away from North Pleasant Street for a night and drive to Northampton. I know, not exactly the biggest of changes, but a change nonetheless. In one bar, I actually did feel unique wearing my flannel shirt and UMass hat. That's because everyone was about five years older than me. And you know what? Standing there with my beer, looking for a place to sit, I felt uncomfortable.

I had come to Northampton looking for a change, for some new faces, for an evening away from my 10,000 identical twins. And when I found it, I longed to be back where I knew everyone, where I would blend into the background again.

Yes, I've become one of the numbers. But UMass hasn't done it to me. I've done it to myself.

Caleb Cochran is a Collegian columnist.



GEORGE ORWELL'S
1994
The Sequel
Chapter One
The nation's poverty rate is reported at the highest in 10 years. The number of children in poverty is the highest since 1964. Median earnings fell. The middle 60% of families lost ground, as did the bottom 20%.
War is Peace
Freedom is Slavery
Ignorance is Strength
Decline is Recovery
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND.
©1994 THE BUFFALO NEWS.
"SOME ARE MORE RECOVERED THAN OTHERS."
-ANIMAL FARM SEQUEL.

Larger issue looms in hoopla

By now, almost everyone has heard about the article on the front page of Wednesday's Boston Globe. The story, about the low grades of some UMass basketball players, and the issue of whether or not these individuals should be eligible to play this season did not stop with the Globe. Springfield's Channel 40 dedicated its top story to this issue. Channel 22 was also on campus Wednesday interviewing University officials and students. Thursday's Collegian ran this as the number one story on the front page.

The media, however, has focused on the issue of what constitutes good academic standing. The reports by television and newspapers alike have centered around whether or not these students will be allowed to play for the Minutemen. On a campus which has spent so much effort and money over the last several years to build a national reputation for its basketball program, these are important questions. The Minutemen's continued success in NCAA basketball may well hang in the balance.

There is another issue, however, which has not received as much attention. The original Globe article stated that the information they had regarding these players' grades had come from "sources and student transcripts." The question, then, becomes clear. How did the Globe come to possess student transcripts?

According to the Family Rights and Privacy Act, student academic records are confidential. Supposedly they cannot be released without written consent from the student. It would seem, however, that someone with access to the academic information kept by the registrar's office made that information available to the Globe reporter. It is unlikely that these basketball players released their records to the Globe. What is the source of the apparent leak?

We as students must not tolerate any further violations of our basic right to privacy. We have the right to be aware of the contents of the records the University keeps on us.

Jim Ganley

Publicly, the registrar's office stands by the confidentiality of the students. Repeatedly during the Channel 40 broadcast, the reporter stated that they were unable to verify the Globe's information because the registrar could not release the information.

This demonstrates a clear violation of the students' right to privacy. Not only did the Globe publish these players' GPAs, it also published the individual grades for specific classes during both the Fall 1993 and Spring 1994 semesters.

As students, we should be deeply concerned about this violation of our rights. If the Boston Globe can gain access to our academic records, seemingly at will, what other personal information about us is so readily accessible?

The Whitmore Administration Building is an archive of information about students. The registrar holds our academic records and transcripts. Financial Aid has private financial information on both students and parents, including bank accounts and credit facts. How much of this "confidential" information is distributed by the bureaucracy that is this University?

The University has a duty to the students of this institution. They must preserve our privacy, and the confidentiality of our personal records which they maintain. If in fact, the source of the Boston Globe's information was within the University bureaucracy, then steps must be taken.

We as students must not tolerate any further violations of our basic right to privacy. We have the right to be aware of the contents of the records the University keeps on us. We have the right to determine who sees those records. It is up to the University to ensure that these rights are not violated as they seem to have been in this case.

As the Channel 40 anchor put it, the University "must find this leak and plug it."

Jim Ganley is a Collegian staff member.

Globe's public humiliation is no laugher

It's so easy to poke fun at stereotypes. They've been around for a long time, we all know what they mean, and it's easy to get a laugh from talking about them. One such stereotype that most people are aware of is the dumb jock.

In the Oct. 19 issue of The Boston Globe, an article about the poor academic performance of some of the University of Massachusetts basketball players was published on the front page.

Many of us are wondering how the transcripts of the players were obtained by The Boston Globe. To tell you the truth, it's not difficult. As an employee in the Whitmore Administrative Building (I won't mention which department,) I can assure you that it's not very difficult. But I can also assure you that University policies limit the specific information that is allowed to be released to the public. Grade point averages and course grades are certainly not one of them.

Printing the GPAs and course grades of some of the players brought home the point of the article — some of the UMass basketball players are in poor academic standing.

Is this news to anybody? Did The Boston Globe expect people to pick up the paper, read the article, and be surprised? C'mon. Fifteen percent of UMass athletes are on academic probation, that's one out of every seven.

So what's the point of the article? We all know that some of the players are performing poorly. It's been mentioned before. Printing the actual semester GPAs and course grades was just a way to get a laugh. Ha, ha, I'm laughing. Michael Williams failed a couple of classes. Donta Bright couldn't even get over a 1.0 last semester.

If I obtained private information about some of the people from The Boston Globe, then I could write something about them and get a good laugh out of it too. Printing private information about an individual is embarrassing for that person. The individual is exposed without their individual consent. The public then knows about him/her. The public can laugh. Ha, ha.

The actual obtainment of the information was not illegal on The Boston Globe's part. The information was given to them. The question pertaining to this highly respected newspaper is whether it was ethical of them to print such information.

Was it? Was the article trying to say that the UMass basketball team is in poor academic standing or was it trying to say that Marcus Camby can't get over a 2.0?

I wonder if The Boston Globe would've written a story about the team if they all had 3.0s. Now that would be news to me. I wonder if any newspaper would even care about UMass if the team wasn't nationally ranked.

It's newspapers and media such as The Boston Globe that builds college teams up. No one cared about UMass when they were a scrappy team in a weak conference playing in a less than attractive cage. But the team made drastic improvements. UMass was then hyped up — by the media. Now The Boston Globe has to bring UMass back down again — a typical technique of the media. Why wasn't this article written while the team was being hyped up?

The article was not news to me or to most people. What was news to me was the actual information that was published. But I don't understand why anybody has to know that Michael Williams got an F in "Psychology of Sport and Physical Activity." Maybe everyone in that class got Fs too.

So what's next for front page news? Are the grades of the hockey players going to published too? How about the football players? It'd be pretty funny to look at their grades too.

Better yet, how about the grades of Collegian columnists?

Go for it, Boston Globe. It'd be real funny.

David K. Chan is a Collegian columnist.

Knowing the limits with alcohol

To drink or not to drink? That is the question. Whether 'tis nobler to tap from the keg or to request some other non-alcoholic beverage.

Friday is upon us again. So, what are you doing tonight? If you are like 80 percent of UMass students, you've probably already found, or are in the process of finding some form of alcohol to consume.

Drinking is one of life's pleasures. What better way is there to forget a stressful week of classes and exams, than to kick back a few and relax with some friends? When a moderate amount is had, alcohol can be the factor that turns an ordinary night into relaxing, replenishing one.

Mark McGrath

When someone has a few drinks, they tend to become more social and outgoing. This is a good thing for some people. Many will do things which they wouldn't ordinarily do, like make new friends and engage in deep philosophical discussions. When people become intoxicated, it doesn't matter who they are or what they do. They're all buddies. That's the thing about drinking. It transforms people into their anti-selves. It lets people who are trained not to have fun, open up and enjoy themselves.

This same thing which makes alcohol consumption so great is also the thing that makes alcohol consumption so disturbing. Ordinary, law abiding citizens can become what their sober selves are not, ranting, raving lunatics. Many of the problems on campus are caused by the very same thing that is supposed to make life more enjoyable. Ordinarily unthinkable occurrences happen all too frequently when alcohol is involved.

After a few choice beverages, drinkers tend to become more aggressive, more willing to show bravado. Perhaps that is why 80 percent of all instances of campus vandalism are in some way alcohol related. In most cases, these occurrences make our campus an uglier place. Nobody in their right mind would want to let this happen, or even worse to make it happen.

An astounding 90 percent of campus rapes happen when one or more of the involved parties is under the influence of alcohol. Rape is an unspeakable crime, and cannot be accepted, drunk or sober. Many accused will blame the alcohol for what happened. Alcohol is not to blame. They are. People who cannot handle drinking or are unable to show proper judgement when drunk simply should not be in that situation. The next morning is too late to realize the consequences of the events of the previous night.

The same is also true of sex between consenting persons. Alcohol can lower someone's guard, making sexual activity more casual. One of the facts of life is that casual sex goes hand in hand with sexually transmitted diseases. What seems like so much fun on one night all too often becomes all too stressful the next morning. This has never been truer than in our time, the time of AIDS. A few drinks can pave the way to a long and painful death.

The statistics could go on and on, but the results will always be the same. When too much alcohol is consumed, odds are that someone or someone will be hurt. It's the truth. Although alcohol is pictured as being glamorous and the thing to do, when not moderately consumed, it can easily turn into a wrecking ball, bashing repeatedly the building which at one point was a life.

Many people here on campus will try to convince you that drinking is the only way to have fun here at UMass. Here's another option. Not drinking. There are many people on this campus that it is always easy to find someone to hang out with or something to do. If you still feel you must drink, drink responsibly. Know your limits. If this doesn't appeal to you, go ahead and drink heavily. With any luck, you won't end up hung over, imprisoned or worse in the morning.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian staff member.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

PILLAR FOUR: CARING. THIS IS WHERE IT ALL COMES TOGETHER. CARING IS WHAT HOLDS FAMILIES AND COMMUNITIES TOGETHER
HELLO?
HI, MOM. IT'S ME, DUKE.
YES, EVEN THE MOST HARD BOILED AMONGST US VALUES CARING!
I KNOW I HAVEN'T CALLED YOU IN A FEW YEARS, BUT I JUST WANTED YOU AND DAD TO KNOW THAT YOU WERE IN MY THOUGHTS.
WHO IS THIS, REALLY?
SHE'S BLOWING ME OFF.
IT'S OKAY. YOU SHOWED YOU CARED

Arts & Living

Deee–Lite grooves at Pearl St. on Sunday

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

Is the groove still in the heart? You bet, and Deee-Lite are bringing it to the Valley this Sunday night when they perform their info-drenched dance tunes at Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton.

The trio, made up of Lady Kier, DJ Dimitry and Towa Tei, emerged in 1990 with their critically praised Elektra debut World Clique.

The album's clever combination of goofy psychadelica and groovy house beats, sent it straight up the charts thanks in part to the ultra-catchy single "Groove is in the Heart."

In 1992 Deee-Llte took a change of direction, both musically and commercially, with their follow up Infinity Within.

The record focused less on the good-feeling vibe of their previous release, and instead concentrated on more political and as well as global issues.

Songs entitled "I Had A Dream I Was Falling Through A Hole in the Ozone Layer," showed that the group had a little more on their mind than just trying to move your feet.

"During the Gulf War and Bush years we felt it was important to use the platform we had in the media responsibly," said Kier.

Now that the group has got that aspect of their career out of their system, they have returned to their club roots with their latest release Dewdrops in the Garden.

"We're going back to our original concept," Kier explains. "People have enough problems, they don't have to hear it in music. Just making uplifting music is a political statement in itself. We want to strengthen their spirit on the dance floor so they can diffuse the dissatisfaction from daily global destruction."

With all that in mind, Deee-Lite have managed to create an album that harnesses all their earlier style, but manages to create a looser, less calculated vibe.

"It was much more spontaneous, we'd go out to a club, come home and jam. We were able to keep it fresh by not booking studio time in advance."

With this new outlook, and a reborn desire to get your booty moving, Sunday night's show should prove to be a real boogie-down party.

How can they go wrong with their self-proclaimed, "trippy trippy trance hiphoppity funk on a dub trip, with a rub a dub soul sip, progressive jazz louse work it to the bone house flipped out freak beat global minded street beat deep jungle break beat as long as it makes you move your happy feet," music.

Couldn't have said it better myself. Deee-Lite will perform on Sunday, Oct. 23. at Pearl St. in Northampton. The show is 18+, and the doors open at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at For The Record, Tix Unlimited, and all Strawberries. For more information, please call 584-7771.

COURTESY JOSH JORDAN

Deee-Lite (from left) DJ ON-E, Lady Keir and Super Dj Dmitry

Hudsucker Proxy takes the devilish ride to video in homes over the nation

By Patricio Bibby
Associated Press

Oh those fabulous Coen brothers! The makers of Raising Arizona, Miller's Crossing and Barton Fink have simply outdone themselves with the deliciously stylish The Hudsucker Proxy.

The Coen sensibility — dark, moody, quirky and ominous — can be an acquired taste; some gripe that Ethan and Joel Coen give their films more style than substance. And certainly The Hudsucker Proxy doesn't overwhelm with its message — if there even is one — but the ride is so diabolically devilish that it's hard to complain.

The Hudsucker Proxy is first and foremost a stunning film to watch. Its thoroughly captivating visuals will leave you spellbound with grand sets that dominate its characters in a sea of art deco. It's also has a snappy screenplay by the Coens and Sam Raimi. Dialogue doesn't just flow, it races by like the A train.

The Hudsucker Proxy is the story of greed and one man's dumb luck that almost thwarts everything.

When the head of Hudsucker Industries leaps from a window in the 44th floor board room to "merge with the infinite," the board members scramble to keep the company intact.

Lead by the steely Sidney Mussburger (Paul Newman), the board decides to drive down the price of the company stock before it is offered to the public so they can snap it up themselves and retain control.

Mussburger decides the best way to ignite panic among the stockbrokers is to appoint an absolute imbecile as president. Enter the fumbling, bumbling but ever-earnest Norville Barnes (Tim Robbins,) a recent graduate from the Muncie College of Business Administration.

And right behind Barnes is the hard-nosed, fast-talking, cigarette-smoking Tough Broad girl reporter, Amy Archer (Jennifer Jason Leigh,) who will stake her Pulitzer on sniffing out Barnes as a fraud.

She hires on as his secretary and begins to discover that the man is indeed a patsy. Norville doesn't have a clue, much less an idea.

But it's not so simple, and it's in the unraveling of this tale that The Hudsucker Proxy has its fun. Part of the reason is that the Coens lavish the story with layer upon layer of delightfully outrageous detail. It's absurd and it works.

Robbins is a master at these kinds of roles, too. Ever since he turned in his perfectly dopey "Noke" Lalcosh in Bull Durham, he's cornered the market on sweet simpletons. In this role, he's affable enough but a there's a lack of complexity that tends to be dulling.

Leigh, on the other hand, gives a performance that seems like Katharine Hepburn on amphetaminces in "Woman of the Year." Obviously, her character is supposed to be overdrawn, but one somes Leigh trying just a little too hard.

Nonetheless, this is the Coens at their finest — sexy, stylish and completely entertaining.

New Roxette disc takes the fast food track to top

By David Bauder
Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. — Cheeseburger, french fries, chocolate shake. . . and a Roxette CD?

That strange order was heard in recent weeks at McDonald's, a curious development that has both intrigued and infuriated people who sell music for a living.

The ubiquitous restaurant chain, as part of a charity drive and new product test, offered special compact discs for sale in September from Garth Brooks, Elton John, Tina Turner and Roxette. They sold for $5.99, or less than half the price of CDs in most record stores.

Three of the artists offered abbreviated CDs filled with material that had long since been available at music stores. But Roxette, a Swedish pop band more popular in Europe than in the United States, instead offered a CD with most of the songs from an album that hadn't yet been released in this country.

This move has made them new enemies among record retailers, who are angry that a restaurant got the jump on them.

The National Record Mart chain, which has 126 stores, said it would ignore the new Roxette album. Another chain, Best Buy, is only begrudgingly selling it. A spokesman said the chain bought 500 discs for its 175 stores, when it would have bought 10,000 otherwise.

"We don't feel it's beneficial for the long-term success of the artist, because it essentially devalues their work," sniffed Carole McLeod, spokeswoman for the Albany, N.Y.-based Trans World Entertainment, which owns 700 music stores in 41 states. Trans World hasn't decided whether to stock the Roxette CD.

For Roxette, it was an attention-getting marketing ploy that has worked brilliantly: In three weeks, they sold more than 750,000 copies of a CD filled with music no one had ever heard before, according to EMI Records.

More than 10 million CDs by all the artists were sold by McDonald's, said Charles Koppelman, EMI's chief executive officer. One dollar from each sale is targeted for Ronald McDonald Children's Charities.

Digable Planets disappoint with new Blowout Comb

By Caleb Cochran
Collegian Staff

BLOWOUT COMB
Digable Planets
Pendulum

If you were looking for more of the same from rap trio Digable Planets on their second album, Blowout Comb, you're going to be disappointed.

Whether you think the album is better or worse than 1993's splendid debut Reachin' (a new refutation of time and space), there is no question that the album is, if nothing else, vastly different from the first album.

Reachin' had a definite jazz influence to it, and with Blowout Comb, the group has moved toward even more of a jazz-infused sound.

While this works at times, the dreamy jazz motif grows tired quickly and generally detracts from the quality of the album. Gone are the tight rhymes and smooth sounds that made Reachin' such a brilliant collection.

The songs are much less structured here than on the debut album. The Planets have turned to psychedelic choruses and overbearing beats which take the focus away from the voices of rappers Butterfly, Doodlebug and Ladybug.

On Reachin', the lyrics were clear, the beats were present but not gratuitous, and the songs, for the most part, had some sort of message or story.

On Blowout Comb, however, the songs are much longer and take too long to develop. "Black Ego," for example, one of the album's better songs, clocks in at just over seven minutes. The tune could be pared down to about four minutes and be better and sharper than the current version.

Indeed, quantity prevails over quality for much of Blowout Comb. Five songs are at least five minutes long, and three are close to, or over, seven minutes. For a rap song (or any pop song, for that matter,) seven minutes is just too long.

A quick glance at the time list for Reachin' shows that the songs average about four minutes, with none longer than 5:06. The result is a much tighter and more cohesive group of songs. After a while, Blowout Comb turns into one giant, amorphous groove which is better suited for napping than anything else.

As far as the rapping goes, Blowout Comb never manages to match the snappy wit and sharp lyrics of Reachin'. For one thing, the vocalists are too often muffled behind annoying backbeats and too-loud instruments to even be understood.

Ladybug, the female third of Digable Planets, is showcased throughout much of the album. Her performance is much stronger than those of Butterfly and Doodlebug, both of whom seem to rap substantially less on this album, even though both albums are of comparable length.

One wonders what has happened to the group that produced such concise and catchy tracks as "Where I'm From" and "Swoon Units" just a year and a half ago. The trio has apparently decided, for the moment, at least, to abandon the style that made them such a success in the first place, and that's too bad.

Let's hope that Blowout Comb represents nothing more than a sophomore slump. C+

COURTESY PENDULUM RECORDS

Digable Planets' new album: Blowout Comb

Gin Blossoms want to move ahead after loss of Hopkins

By Eileen Loh
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — After the suicide of guitarist Doug Hopkins, who composed the Gin Blossoms' two phenomenally successful hits, "Hey Jealousy" and "Found Out About You," most fans not only bade a sad farewell to Hopkins, but worried about the future of the band itself.

How could the Gin Blossoms hope to match the resounding popularity of their debut album, "New Miserable Experience," without Hopkins and his paradoxically poppy sound, morose lyrics and sardonic guitar style?

"I miss him, but I'm not one of those people who sit around and think of the past," lead singer Robin Wilson said in an interview. "Actually, the Gin Blossoms are really excited to make a record without any Doug Hopkins songs on it."

Fans weren't so optimistic about the Tempe, Ariz. band's future last December, when a friend of Hopkins' discovered the 32-year-old musician's body at home.

In truth, the Blossoms had authored their own fate. The guitarist and songwriter's devastating drinking problem had disrupted their work one time too many. So Hopkins was fired from the band in April 1992, long before he put a .38-caliber pistol in his mouth and squeezed the trigger.

The split came before the album was completed, before Hopkins' songs exploded onto the charts — before any of them, including Hopkins, realized just how significant his work would be.

Wilson said he worked with Hopkins after he and the band parted company.

"He finally admitted to me that nobody sang his songs the way I did," Wilson recalled.

Of the 12 songs on "New Miserable Experience," Hopkins wrote four (three of which were the album's first released singles), co-wrote two and played guitar throughout. He received credit for his work, but the album's cover photograph featured his replacement, Scott Johnson.

Hopkins had made no bones about his animosity toward his former friends, when the Gin Blossoms, playing his songs, were taking off without him — even though the group hadn't ruled out future collaborations with him.

"It's my song, but I don't enjoy it," Hopkins had said of "Hey Jealousy."

"When it comes on the radio, I turn it off, because I don't really want to hear that. It doesn't make me feel good or anything."

Wilson said that although he felt bad about Hopkins' decline, he and his bandmates couldn't allow the guitarist to drag down the rest of the group with him.

"When we found out that the label wanted to release 'Found Out About You' as a single," Wilson recalled, "I tried to find him. A friend of mine finally bumped into him. . . . I spent three hours with him that night. It's really important to me, because I was able to make my peace with him and that was really the last conversation we ever had.

"Sometimes, when I think I'm writing something really good, I think Doug would be really proud of me. I can't sing 'Found Out About You' without thinking about him. . . . I think about him every day.

"But you can't second-guess yourself; you can't blame yourself. It would be really stupid to say that we could have done something to prevent it.

"All I can do is miss him, and sing his songs the best I can." The Blossoms are writing new songs to add to the cache they already have, Wilson said, and plan to record their follow-up poum in April.

For now, they're cashing in on the strong sales of "New Miserable Experience," and touring intermittently with other booming quasi-alternative bands such as Cracker and the Spin Doctors. They also appeared at Willie Nelson's Farm Aid VII concert in New Orleans in September.

While the band is realistic about Hopkins' contributions to the first album, Wilson said, his absence won't necessarily relegate them to the dustbin. After all, Wilson and guitarist Jesse Valenzuela wrote two modest hits from the album, "Mrs. Rita" and "Until I Fall Away," among others.

"I know how volatile the music industry really is, and people could turn on us," Wilson said. "But I'm really excited about the future of the Gin Blossoms."

Accepting writing submissions

The Collegian is now accepting submissions for a new fiction and prose column, "A & L Fiction." We are looking for a thoughtful, intelligent, intriguing short fiction of 75 to 300 lines in length.

Those interested may send works c/o Dave Polanzak, Collegian Arts & Living, 113 Campus Center, UMass. For more information, please call Dave at 546-0082 or Jon at 545-1361.

BE A TEACHER.
BE A HERO.
Call 1-800-45-TEACH.

Crew to race in premier event

By Jody King
Collegian Staff

"This weekend will be the most prestigious of all our races. It is the premier race. It is comparable to the championship event in other fall sport, and we are hoping to be up there with some of the stronger women's crews," Massachusetts Coach Jim Dietz said of Sunday's race.

It is the Head of the Charles, and it is cited as the premier event of the fall rowing season.

This weekend the UMass women's crew team will be competing in what is the second largest athletic event in Massachusetts, second only to the Boston Marathon in number of competitors.

The governor annually declares the Head of the Charles a state day, closing both Sturrow Drive and Memorial Drive for the half of a million spectators who usually show up to watch the races, tailgate and barbecue, compete and socialize.

The races begin at 8 a.m. and continue through the championship eight races around 4 p.m.

The Head of the Charles will include 16 races, most with both a women's and men's competition. Each of the races have a limit of 40 boats, all of which are at capacity.

This year the Minutewomen have two boats entered. The varsity women's eight, which aside from injury has remained the same for the fall season, is entered under the UMass colors.

The second UMass boat, which has gone through some minor changes as some rowers have seat raced in, will be rowing under the colors of the Thames River Skulls [the crew that Dietz coaches in the off-season].

One added pressure for the women is the fact that both boats will be competing in the same race.

For the Charles, boats that are within 10 percent of the winning boat's time from last year are seeded. All others are placed in a lottery.

"The luck really fell in our favor. Not only were we picked, but we were lucky enough to have two boats entered," Dietz said.

It is not unusual for schools to enter more than one crew under different names. Schools with successful rowing reputations such as Harvard, Yale and Northeastern, enter two boats almost every year.

The course of the race begins at the Boston University Boathouse by the bridge at the bason of the Charles River.

The course then winds upstream for approximately three miles, passing through seven bridges along the river.

The Head of the Charles is scenic and easy to view from many angles along the bank because the river is so narrow.

"The women are very excited. Everything is coming together. Now we need to focus on being contenders with Dartmouth, BU, and UNH," Dietz said.

With their high finish in the Head of the Connecticut [25:53.29], the Minutewomen hope to leave behind the schools in their current division. The UMass Rowers will be leaving them behind for good in 1996 when they step up a level.

In their first season as a varsity team, the Minutewomen have put on quite a show so far, and the spring sprint races should prove to be exciting. But for now, their focus is in Cambridge for Sunday's race.

"This race will be good for us to find out how we are with some of the stronger women's crews. We've been training hard this fall to prepare for the spring.

Men's soccer to face URI

By Brian Gormley
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team will have to shake off Wednesday's 3–2 loss to Dartmouth to be ready to face Rhode Island Saturday, a game that could put them in position to win the Atlantic 10 championship.

The Minutemen are now 8–5–1 overall and 4–1 in the A– 10. If they win their remaining A–10 games at Rhode Island this weekend and against St. Bonaventure Thursday at home, they will be the Atlantic 10 regular season champions. If they lose to Rhode Island they will still make the A–10 tournament, but they would lose out on the chance to get the number one seed.

Standing in the way are the Rhode Island Rams, a team Massachusetts Coach Sam Koch said that is much better than their 7–8 record.

"Rhode Island has had a very tough schedule," Koch said. "They have beaten some very good teams and they have lost to some very good teams. They lost to San Francisco, which is a national powerhouse and they lost in overtime to Rutgers, but they beat Stanford on the road."

Koch said this is a particularly bad time to play the Rams because they need the win much more than Massachusetts does.

"Their backs are against the wall. They are 2–3 in the A– 10. If they beat us they are in the tournament, if they lose they are out. They have everything to gain and nothing to lose," he said. "This is also their homecoming weekend and they should draw a big crowd."

In Wednesday's loss to Dartmouth, Koch said their offensive attack was forced too much into the middle of the field. He said against Rhode Island, Massachusetts needs to attack the flanks more so that they can spread out the defense and put pressure on individual defenders. He said he does not expect to get any easy goals against the Rams, who are sound defensively and have a good goalkeeper.

The other areas Massachusetts needs to work on include switching fields and working off of the ball, Koch said. He said offensively, they have been getting "a little lazy" in getting open and making things as easy as possible for their teammates. Koch said if the Minutemen are able to put more pressure on the defense they will create more good scoring opportunities and more chances to use the corner kick, which has become one of their best offensive weapons.

"Our corner kick is much better now, and I feel we have a chance to score on it every time," he said. "[Forward] Dave Siljanovski has worked on the service from the corner and he has got it down to the point where we can put the ball exactly where we want it. It's very hard to defend against."

Koch said the game against the Rams is definitely the biggest one of the season. He said the way Massachusetts faces this challenge will be a good indicator of how good the Minutemen are.

"It will be a real good test for us," Koch said. "Are we a good team? If we are, we will win on Saturday. We have shown improvement. The last game against Dartmouth was a half a step back for us, but we would love to win this game because the kids really deserve a chance to win the A–10 Championship."

Men's water polo to compete in California

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Correspondent

This weekend, the University of Massachusetts men's water polo team [22–3 overall, 20–2 in the Eastern Water Polo Association] will compete in the Baldyview Tournament in Claremont, Calif.

The Minutemen will be matched up with nationally-ranked teams in the Top Ten. UMass is currently ranked 11th in the nation and has recently set a new school record for 22 consecutive victories.

"This weekend will be good experience for the NCAA Championships," Coach Russ Yarworth said. "It will give us a good idea of how we'll play and what to anticipate."

The first match of the tournament will be played on Friday against tenth ranked Air Force. This contest will set the tone for the rest of the weekend.

The last time they met, the Minutemen beat them 8–7. UMass was up 7–2 when they let Air Force back in it for the final score. Yarworth said he is most concerned with this match-up.

"I'm a little frustrated because we beat them head–to–head when we played them, yet they're ranked ahead of us in the polls," Yarworth said. "The guys are using this as a motivating factor. Obviously, we're not getting any respect."

Friday's match will be the first outdoor game for the Minutemen. They will also have to deal with travel stress and fatigue. Air Force also has the advantage of having played in California more frequently.

After last weekend's victorious sweeps over Brown University and Harvard University, the Minutemen are ready.

The strengths of this team are individual skills.

"Our players are individually talented," said Yarworth. "The way we blended the team this year, it accentuates these players."

High scorers Luis Limardo [0.574 shooting percentage] and senior co–captain Javier Gonzalez [0.511 shooting percentage] will be the key players on the offensive front.

